EIGHT-HOUR LAW AGAIN.

Whole Question to Go Before Supreme Court for Final Test of Validity.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RIVERSIDE, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After the decision of Judge Densmore of the Riverside county Superior Court today, setting aside the eight-hour law for women, so far as it applies to hotels (a test case having been brought by Frank A. Miller,) it was announced that another broader case will be made up for the Supreme Court. Mr. Miller will take the initiative. The ruling by Judge Densmore today [reported in another section of The Times] applied to only one phase of the law, and to one particular case. The Supreme Court will be asked to pass upon the general legal principles involved, as applicable to all kinds of business, particularly the hotel business. The law firm of Flint, Gray & Barker of Los Angeles, of which Ex-Senator Flint is a member, has been retained to take up the case.

CHICAGO, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Eleven deaths and fifty prostrations were reported today as the result of heat on the eve of a thunderstorm which is expected to bring relief to the city tomorrow. The mercury went upward with a rush, but did not reach yesterday's record mark by half a degree. The suffering, however, was quite as severe, owing to the murky conditions which precede a heavy storm.

THE DEAD.

MARGARET GALLIFRIEND, died suddenly at home.

WILLIAM SEYE, 62 years old, died after falling over a railing at his home, while dizzy as the result of heat.

MRS. MARY A. CASEY, 80 years old, died at her home from the heat.

MRS. N. KLINGBELL, 76 years old, fell downstairs while faint from heat and was instantly killed.

MRS. L. KIBBS, 65 years old, fell downstairs after being overcome by heat and died soon afterward.

JULIA LAUGHLIN, died suddenly after complaining of the heat.

MRS. CATHERINE QUARRY, 70 years old, died at home.

EVA CHILSE, died after being overcome by heat.

MRS. CELIA KRIETE, 53 years old, prostrated at Wilson and Evanston avenues, died at Ravenswood Hospital.

MRS. SUSAN MILLER, 35 years old.

NIGHT OF SUFFERING.

One of the most prominent persons who succumbed to the heat was Mrs. Mary A. Casey, who settled in Chicago when the Indians were here. She was 80 years old and was a sister of Gen. Robert W. Healy, U.S.A., and James T. Healy, former United States sub-treasurer here.

After a night that gave little relief, with the mercury standing at 83 deg. at midnight, Chicago was like an oven in the early hours today. Thousands of downtown workers, released by Saturday half-holiday precedent, flocked through the torrid, sticky canyons between the Loop office buildings at noon and hurried to the parks, the excursoin steamers and caravansaries where are dispensed temporarily cooling drinks.

Other thousands, laborers, teamsters and settlement workers in the congested district, got through the afternoon's work as best they could. Here and there a teamster dropped senseless from his eyrie seat; a pedestrian fell in his tracks. Police ambulances were kept busy caring for the prostrated.

STORY OF THE HEAT.

"There will be a decided change for the better tomorrow," declared Prof. Cox. "Thunder showers ought to break here early in the day and cool the city, even though there is no rain—but rain is probable—Chicago will be relieved by cool winds from the West."

Burlington, Iowa, was the hottest place in the country, according to dispatches. A temperature of 104 deg. broke every Burlington record for twenty years past. In Pittsburgh, with the mercury no higher than 93, two deaths and six prostrations were reported. St. Louis had a maximum temperature of 97.

But while the North and East sweltered, it was comparatively cool in the South. The hottest place east of the Mississippi River and south of the Tennessee, was New Orleans, with a temperature of 90. Charleston, S. C., was fanned by a ten-mile breeze, and the temperature at no time exceeded 84 deg.

The continued heat kept alive the mad-dog scare. Several persons were bitten by dogs on Chicago streets.

New Record at Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, June 10.—Rain fell in several sections of Missouri and Kansas today, and tonight the greater part of the Southwest is cloudy. After the mercury had reached 96 deg., setting a June mark for ten years past, rain began to fall at Joplin and the temperature fell to 71 deg. Heat records for this year were broken at Sedalia, Mo., and Muskogee, Okla., where the temperatures were 102 and 104 deg., respectively. Three persons were prostrated by heat here today. The maximum temperature was 94 deg.

One Death at Dallas.

DALLAS (Tex.) June 10.—There was one death from heat prostration here today. The maximum temperature was 103 deg.

Son and Heir Comes to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet, Now Spending Summer at Fashionable Watering Place of Atlantic Coast—Child Is Nephew to Duke and Duchess of Roxeburgh, Who Cable Congratulations.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEWPORT (R. I.) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Congratulations are the order of the day at Stoneacre, the handsome villa owned by Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Thomas, on Bellevue avenue, here.

The villa was taken recently for the summer by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet, and the occasion for the present rejoicing is the arrival of a son and heir to the young couple. The boy was born Thursday night and, to use the stereotyped, common or garden variety of language, mother and son are doing well.

Mrs. Goelet, before her marriage, was Miss Elsie Wheten, one of the famous Wheten triplets of Philadelphia. It was in this famous watering place that Robert Goelet, in the summer of 1904, met Miss Wheten. It was here that he pressed his suit for her hand throughout the summer social season.

It was only natural, therefore, that when the coming event became known that he should bring his charming wife to Newport.

The boy, for whom no name has yet been selected, but who will probably be called after his grandfather, Ogden Goelet, will be one of the richest babies of the world. In addition to inheriting an immense fortune from his grandfather, the younger Goelet is independently wealthy.

Among the first to tender congratulations were the Duke and Duchess of Roxeburgh, who cabled from England. The Duchess of Roxeburgh is a sister of Mrs. Goelet.

Parents of Girl Reported Opposed to Match, But Son of Recent Candidate for Senator from California Said to Be in Fair Way to Bring About Match.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Albert G. Spalding, Jr., the famous young American violin virtuoso, who is appearing here in a series of coronation concerts, is one of the central figures in a romance, according to reports in American music circles, the other figure being a beautiful young Hungarian countess.

The story goes that young Spalding and the countess, whose name is a closely guarded secret, met at a concert given by the young American on his last visit to Berlin. A mutual attraction sprang up which soon deepened into love.

The parents of the countess, it is said, were violently opposed to a match between their daughter and the artist and left Berlin with her rather abruptly. It is also said that Spalding's father, the sporting goods maker, who was a strong candidate for Senator from California, was not particularly enamored of his son marrying the foreign girl, but it is not said he forbade it.

Despite parental opposition the young people have found means to correspond and it would not surprise the London friends of young Mr. Spalding to hear at any time that there had been another international marriage, with the bride this time having the title.

New York Family in Mourning in the Belief That Their Daughter is Dead. Nuptials are Quietly Celebrated, Though Reception Follows Ceremony.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] D. Hickley Arnold, brother of Dorothy Arnold, whose strange disappearance on December 21, last, still remains a mystery, was married this afternoon to Mildred Culver, a chum of the missing girl.

Miss Culver is the daughter of Mrs. Isabel Clark Culver and lives with her mother at No. 863 Park avenue. She was an intimate friend of Miss Arnold, and during the search for her took an active part in it, going to Philadelphia several times when clews to the missing girl led there.

Owing to the fact that the Arnold family believe their daughter dead, and consequently are in mourning for her, the wedding this afternoon was a quiet one. There was a reception, however, at the home of the bride.

Mr. Arnold is a graduate of Williams College and is in business with his father.

CANAL TOLLS TO BE FIXED.

Costliness of Delay Is Recognized.

Conference Between Goethals and President to Bear Immediate Fruit.

Present Extra Session to Be Asked to Take Up Matter of Ship Charges.

Big Panama Waterway Must Be Placed on Commercial Footing Very Soon.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Before the present extra session of Congress is adjourned, unless present plans are changed, President Taft will ask for definite action in fixing the rate of toll to be charged for passage through the Panama Canal.

The President took up the subject following the arrival in Washington three weeks ago of Col. Goethals, chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission. It has been known for more than a year th[illegible] Col. Goethals is bent on getting a[illegible]n from Congress as to the operati[illegible] of the canal, so that there will be [illegible] delay when the waterway is comp[illegible]d.

He has final[illegible] und the ear of the President and [illegible] can be stated authoritatively t[illegible]he Goethal's plan has not only [illegible] approval of Mr. Taft, but he [illegible]enly alive to the need of imme[illegible] action on the subject.

One reason [illegible]ially, Col. Goethals has pointed [illegible] the Pr[illegible]dent, calls for the f[illegible] anno[illegible]ment of the [illegible] [illegible]une. In [illegible] an annual convent[illegible] [illegible]ping interests of the w[illegible] [illegible]rnational association of [illegible] [illegible]aled to the United States [illegible] information as to the tolls and other details governing the operation of the canal.

At that time no answer could be made. According to statements by Col. Goethals to the President, this inability on our part to announce the rates will eventually cost us in loss of business through the waterway not less than $10,000,000. It is to avoid an even greater loss that Col. Goethals came here to try and hasten action.

The President is also in harmony with Col. Goethals's contention that it makes no difference who has the operation of the finished waterway in charge, it must be necessarily a matter of one-man power and that to be a success, it must have a commercial government. Sooner or later, the American people will recall that the canal cost $375,000,000 and will want to get it back, with interest.

Preference, disguised or otherwise, it is insisted, must not be shown American shipping in the matter of toll rates. Against such a course is the treaty with Great Britain, by the terms of which even American coastwise shipping is to have no preferential rate.

Revolution's Head.

MONARCHISTS OF PORTUGAL NOW MENACE REPUBLIC NEWLY BORN.

Four Thousand Armed and Equipped Men Encamped on Frontier Ready to Back Deposed King Manuel in Effort to Regain His Throne—Hatred of Republicans Apparently Firmly Welds Factions of Royalists.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TUY (Spain, on the Portuguese frontier) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Preparations for the Monarchists' counter revolution against the republic are complete.

Action is certain about the middle of June. That King Manuel will return becomes increasingly probable. Whether he will remain is another question. At the moment the overwhelming majority of the people favor him.

It is amazing how firmly hatred of the Republicans has welded together all factions of the Royalists. The Manuelists, the Miguelists, the Frankists and the Nationalists will certainly act together and until the republic is overthrown there will be not the slightest disunion among them.

All the powers know the situation is so extremely delicate that to send warships might be to drop the spark in the magazine.

NOTHING CAN STOP IT.

In any case, nothing can prevent the explosion within the next fortnight. Whether it destroys the republic or the monarchy is another matter.

Four thousand armed and equipped men are encamped on the frontier. They are commanded by a Portuguese officer trained in Germany who served under Dom Miguel, the pretender, in the Austrian army.

This is only one of the nine armed bands ready to pour into Portugal at a given signal, and at that signal there will be a Royalist uprising throughout Portugal.

In these little armies are many university students from Lisbon. There also are to be found former Governors of prominence, former Deputies, lawyers, colonial officers and journalists who favor the monarchy—in fact, men of every class in the country who were driven out by the Republicans and who now intend to return with rifles in their hands.

SPAIN'S HANDS TIED.

The intense sympathy with the royalists in this violently Catholic corner of Spain, half Celtic, half Gallic, balks all the Spanish government's attempts to move on the armed plotters. Greater activity by the central Spanish government might lead to Carlist troubles here.

Although the Mayor of Tuy is a Liberal, he can do nothing to prevent the Portuguese royalists gathering in this vicinity.

At present he is completely occupied by the conduct of the Republicans in Valencia—the Portuguese town on the other side of the River Minho, whose behavior has been most insulting to King Alfonso and to Spain.

FINE FUTURE FOR MEXICO.

No Ground at All for Pessimism.

Southern Republic Bound to Succeed In All That It Undertakes.

Only Spoils For the Victors Are Those of Better Government.

American and Other Foreign Investments Will Be Well Enhanced.

BY STEPHEN BONSAL.

(Copyright, 1911, by the Los Angeles Times, the New York Times and the Chicago Record-Herald.)

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Since my return from Mexico I have been impressed by the pessimistic views taken here on the complicated situation south of the Rio Grande.

Almost every one seems to regard the provisional government, recently instituted as exceedingly precarious and the Madero regime that looms behind it, which would certainly be almost unanimously acclaimed were elections to be held tomorrow instead of next November, as giving hardly any greater promise of stability.

In a word, a great many people seem to believe that Mexico is about to be stricken from the progressive class of Latin—American States led by Argentina and Chile and fall to the low level of Honduras and Nicaragua.

There are certainly dark clouds on the Mexican horizon, but nothing as yet sufficiently sober to justify these predictions. Up to the present there is no sign of a reactionary spirit abroad, though that may come. In view of the great wealth of the score of gentlemen who recently have been dispossessed of [illegible] positions, it would be extraordinary, indeed, if we did not hear, at least in the papers, of a wave of reaction spreading over the country.

TRANSFER OF AUTHORITY.

Of course, the transfer of authority in certain localities has been marked by horrible scenes. The responsibility of the insurgents for these is no greater than that of the Federal forces. [illegible] and even the rural po[illegible] part [illegible] the sacking of Pachuca, to mention [illegible] place, in which the [illegible] disgraced their uniform.

The greatest blot so far upon the insurgent escutcheon has been the massacre of Chinese in Torreon. The facts that have as yet not been fully established and from the investigations I have made I do not believe they ever will be. Insurgent authorities state their attacking force found the Chinese fighting shoulder to shoulder with the Federals and that they were killed fighting because they would not surrender.

It doubtless was difficult to draw a separating line between the Chinese who sought to defend their homes and stores and the Federals who sought to defend the city instrusted to them. Casualties doubtless occurred at this time that were inevitable but when the Federal forces evacuated the town there is only too much reason to believe that anti-Chinese feeling got the upper hand and a house-to-house slaughter of a race peculiarly hated in this section of Mexico was carried out; nor were the children spared.

REGRETTABLE EXCEPTIONS.

But with these regrettable exceptions the other acts of violence reported by our papers are not remarkable, when you remember that the Mexican people have lived in a straight-jacket for the last thirty years and a certain exuberance should be permitted a people which for a generation has worn a false face and denied its real feeling.

It cannot be gainsaid that Madero's newdoctrine—new at least to Mexico and one that takes out much of the incentive to revolutionary activity—that to the victors do not belong the spoils—is being received with some mutterings of discontent. It must be hard for the ranchman of Chihuahua, who took up arms because the northern landlords had absorbed his patrimony, or for the Yucatan hemp grower, who went out because his fields had been merged by administrative decree into some 10,000,000 acre holdings like that of ex-Governor Molina.

It is hard for one like these to recognize that their personal grievances have not been redressed by the battle of Juarez and the resignation of the dictator, its logical sequence. They find that instead of being placed in possession of their property the new era only promises better courts, more upright officials and opportunities to come into their own by due process of law. This will all take time and the passing of time brings with it disappointment and breeds discontent.

STILL UNDER ARMS.

More than 5000 men are still under arms in Mexico, not including the bandits. Not more than one-third of these can be given employment in the army and the police. The question of what is to be done with the others during these cruel days is of the most vital importance.

Patriotic men are coming forward in offering employment on a large scale. The new government is committed to a policy of public works which will employ many more. While there will be disorders, perhaps of a very serious nature, during the coming months, there is much reason to believe the experiment in self-government which the best people in Mexico have achieved the right to attempt through much suffering and loss of life will not be an ignominious failure. On the contrary, there is much reason to believe as well as to hope that our neighbors on the south will become a peaceful republic and not remain a nominal satrapy of an octogenarian, who had outlived his greater days, and had become the tool of a group of financiers of varying schemes.

Such a Mexico, as events of the last few months have amply proved existed, was a menace to our peace and to our prosperity. When this transformation, which sooner or later is bound to come, has been achieved every American investment and every honest holding of foreigners in this land so long subject to the caprices of a tyrant and the double dealing of a form of share-holders, will be quadrupled, in value.

OTHER CHANGES.

Of course, there will be other changes to chronicle. Hitherto with wisdom born of unfailing experience Mexicans with capital and enterprise and ability have confined their activities to lands and plantations. The Mexican did not go into business enterprises because, unlike the foreigner who could and often did claim and secure the protection of his diplomatic representative, he, the Mexican, had only the protection of the law and there was no child in the land who did not know the ways in which the ignoble interpreters of this law received their inspiration, indeed, their orders.

Under the new regime the development of this country, which in reality is quite as rich as it was regarded to be in the fabulous days, will not be the exclusive privilege and perquisite of the foreigner. Of course the greatest danger of the present situation is that some one or more of the military chiefs of this civilian revolution, dissatisfied with his share of the spoils, which from the very nature of Madero's platform must be small, will raise the standard of revolt.

ENSIGN OF THE NAVY WEDS AN ACTRESS DURING ABSENCE OF MOTHER IN EUROPE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Winning his bride as a midshipman of the United States Navy and marrying her on the day he received his commission as ensign, Mr. and Mrs. John Borland are now enjoying their honeymoon. They were married on June 5 and the wedding had to wait on the ensign's commission, as midshipmen, under the rules and regulations of the navy, are not permitted to marry.

Borland is the son of Mrs. John Borland, a wealthy woman of New York and Newport, R. I. His wife was Miss Erminie Marie Clark, an actress with the "Pink Lady" company. The wedding was the climax of a courtship of but a few weeks.

The ensign is 23 years old and was graduated from the Annapolis Naval Academy in 1909 as an honor man. His mother, before her marriage, was Miss Constance E. Rives. She is in Europe at present.

The ensign's two sisters, the Misses Ella and Maud Borland, are well-known in eastern social circles and the latter is a member of the Colony Club.

Under the Governor's care are ten young women of prominent Sinaloa families in close guardianship of three nuns. Gov. Redo is also accompanied by his lawyer, Alejandro Buelna, and his private secretary, Fernando García.

The former executive denies that he had been made prisoner during the siege of Culiacan, but confirms the execution of his brother-in-law, Col. Morelos.

CAPT. PRYCE WANTS A JOB. THE SANTA FE NEEDS MEN.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—Capt. Pryce, erstwhile general of the "army of liberation" in Lower California, is in San Francisco looking for a job. Any job that will provide excitement and enough money to live on will be satisfactory, he says. Pryce declares the refusal of the Los Angeles junta to furnish food, clothing and ammunition for his army made it impossible to resist an attack successfully, so he resigned.

VILJOEN TO MEXICALI.

California affair, and appeal to us to take energetic steps. Fear Washington will withdraw its offer to allow us to take troops and ammunition through that country unless we act promptly."

"UP TO MADERO."

"More than a week ago," said Gen. Viljoen, "I was to have taken 600 insurrectos and Gen. Escudero was to have taken 1000 Federals from Chihuahua, we were to have gone to Calexico, Cal., unarmed, and, after detraining there, we were to arm and march across the border into Mexicali, Lower California. But the insurrectos have shown no disposition to move and the Federal troops are still being kept at Chihuahua. In answer to the complaints from California, I can only say that it is up to Madero."

Passengers, arriving from Chihuahua tonight, say conditions in that city are becoming unbearable. Five thousand Federal troops with thirteen generals, including Villar, Liz, Rabago and Luque, are patrolling the city night and day, and have notified the insurrectos that the peace agreement did not provide for the surrender of the city.

FEAR REBEL LOOTING.

Gen. Villar, commander of the zone, says under no circumstances will he allow the insurrectos to enter under arms. Artillery and trenches have been put in place, as if for a defense.

Outside the city, Gen. Orozco, with the forces of the insurrectos, says he is determined not to lay down arms, and he will soon enter the city by force, if necessary. The passengers from Chihuahua says a conflict of some kind is looked for, and Orozco is deferred from entering only by the fact that the Federals have superior numbers and defenses. Fear that Orozco might not be able to control his men if they entered the city, is said to be one of the positions taken by the Federals.

De la Barra Will Co-operate to Restore Order.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MEXICO City, June 10.—"If I should be elected President, Senor De la Barra will be Minister of Foreign Affairs and Gen. Reyes will be Minister of War in my Cabinet."

Thus spoke Francisco I. Madero to an Associated Press representative today at Chapultepec Castle, where he talked with President De la Barra and Gen. Reyes. Both men have consented to accept these portfolios. The meeting was accidental. Madero had been conferring with President De la Barra about the political situation when Gen. Reyes arrived. Madero was asked to remain. Frank discussion of the situation resulted.

REYES OUT OF IT.

Gen. Reyes said this afternoon: "It is true I am going to be Minister of War if Senor Madero is elected. I am not going to be a candidate for the Presidency, or participate in the elections.

"Just before you came," he said to the interviewers, "a committee called on me to ask me to be a candidate for the Presidency, but I told them I intended to be a member of Senor Madero's Cabinet if he is elected.

"To offer myself as a candidate might mean a confusion which would produce anarchy and, I can assure you, both President De la Barra, Senor Madero and myself will work earnestly and instantly to prevent such a contingency."

Madero's remark that President De la Barra would return to his recent post of Minister of Foreign relations is looked upon as an indication that the new government will contain representatives of all factions

DE LA BARRA WILL AID.

Today's conference is believed to have persuaded De la Barra to stand by the government and lend his influence in establishing tranquility. He is recognized as an important factor in soothing the wounds of the ousted parties, and Madero is believed to be anxious to keep him in the Cabinet, not only for that reason, but because of his familiarity with international affairs.

An indication of what Madero's policy will be was given in a speech he made to the cadets of the National Military Academy, whom he reviewed.

"In the reorganization of the army," he said, "there will be no interference with the officers of the line. The discipline and training of the military school is most valuable and preference should be given to those who have had the benefit of its training."

CAUSED MASSACRE. POISONED COGNAC

MEXICO CITY, June 10.—Poisoned cognac which the insurrectos secured from one of the government offices and which they drank in a Chinese restaurant is alleged to have been the immediate cause of the slaughter of Chinese in Torreon.

This incident doubtless will become an issue in the adjudication of the Chinese claim for indemnity.

The revolutionists carried it with them to a Chinese restaurant, where they demanded food. Several became ill from drinking the cognac, but the suspicion fell on the Chinese, who were accused of having poisoned the liquor. The leaders of the revolutionists thereupon gave orders for the extermination of the Chinese.

Months ago Dr. Villareal was a host at a dinner and dance at which many Americans as well as Mexicans were invited. Some one to whose interest it was to remove Dr. Villareal poisoned the liquor, it is said, resulting in the death of one of the guests.

The liquor was seized by the authorities and stored in one of the government offices.

The Chinese officials said today it was not impossible that the indemnity to be demanded might be as much as 100,000 pesos for each of the 316 lives sacrificed throughout the republic.

MODERATION WILL CHARACTERIZE CLAIMS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Although Chinese Minister Chang has been out of touch with the situation in Mexico regarding the killing of Chinese at Torreon recently, it is understood here that moderation will characterize the claims for indemnity. The Chinese are disposed to be reasonable, and will be satisfied, it is said, to have their claims placed on an equal footing with other foreign claims before the commission to be appointed to adjust damages caused by the revolution. The report that a Chinese cruiser is now on its way to Mexico to investigate the treatment of Chinese is declared untrue.

Still They Come.

SIX MORE INDICTMENTS ARE RETURNED IN THE OHIO LEGISLATIVE SCANDAL.

Detective Burns's Departure for Europe Is Said to Have Something to Do With the Presence Abroad of Political Leader Harvey Garber—Former Mayor Bond of Buckeye Capital City Pleads Not Guilty of Offering Bribe.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COLUMBUS (O.) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Six indictments are awaiting different members of the Ohio State Legislature and employees of that body and will probably be served on Monday when the men against whom they have been returned are found by representatives of either Prosecutor Edward L. Turner or Sheriff Sartain. It is known to but a very few men whom these indictments are against, and Prosecutor Turner says that all of these will be kept secret until he can secure services of the warrants on them. All of these indictments, it is said, were returned by the grand jury last Monday except one which was returned yesterday, together with those published.

DEPARTURE OF BURNS.

The departure of Detective William Burns for Europe from New York City today is thought to have some bearing on the Columbus situation.

Three weeks ago Harvey C. Garber, one of the Ohio Democratic leaders, went to Europe to be gone several months. In Columbus it is said that Burns's going to Europe is to secure the return of Garber to this country. However, his sleuths now in Columbus say that they don't think Burns would go away on such a mission, that he would send one of his trusted lieutenants, or await the return of Garber, if he is to be arrested.

The developments of today were the arraignment of three of those indicted yesterday and their pleadings of not guilty and the hearing before Judge Kinkead of motions to quash the indictments against legislators previously indicted.

PLEAD NOT GUILTY.

The three to plead not guilty were a former Columbus Mayor, Charles A. Bond, now of Cleveland, charged jointly with Senator Thomas A. Dean of Fremont, of offering bribes to former Senators Drake and Atwell to vote against the Rose county option bill; Representative Frank M. Calvey of Cleveland, charged under two indictments of soliciting bribes from W. R. Hopkins and M. H. Loundon for his vote of the Cleveland subway bill, and L. C. Miller of Akron, loan agent, from whom Evans confessed he received a bribe for his vote on the Haas loan-shark bill.

Bond arrived in Columbus from Cleveland this morning, and appeared at the Courthouse at 10 o'clock, accompanied by his attorney, George R. Hedges, of Columbus. He has also retained Attorneys James Mathews and John Ormill of Cleveland. Representative Calvey came with his attorney, C. J. Mattern, at noon, accompanied by former Senator N. O. Mather of Akron. These men were then arraigned and each answered "Not guilty."

INDICTED AGAIN.

Representative Nye, who was indicted yesterday on two additional counts; Senator Dean and Stanley Harrison of Cleveland will be arraigned Monday. J. C. Meader of Cleveland, alleged loan company lobbyist, did not show up, although also among those indicted.

Judge Kinkead ordered reduced to $5000 the bonds of Nye, Harrison, Calvey, Dean and Miller, whose bond was yesterday made $10,000 for the two indictments returned against each The three indictments against Miller were not made public until today. One alleges that he gave Representative Evans a bribe of $100 on the Haas bill, the other charges him with committing perjury before the grand jury for testifying that he had not paid any part of $150 delivered to him by Samuel Cowan of Cleveland to any members of the Legislature. The third charges that he offered Evans $400 on April 18, in connection with the Haas loan bill.

PROMINENT MASON FATALLY SCALDED BY FALL INTO VAT OF BOILING PEAS.

Terrible Accident at Milpitas Plant of Cannery Company Results in Tragedy—Workmen Hear Screams and Rush to Rescue, But Superintendent Dies Soon After Being Taken Out.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN JOSE, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Thomas J. Waistell, one of the superintendents of the Milpitas plant of the California Fruit Canners' Association, fell into one of the large cooking vats of the plant last night between 6 and 7 o'clock and was so badly burned by the boiling water before his fellow-workmen could rescue him that he died this morning from his injuries. Waistell was a prominent Mason.

The plant at Milpitas runs day and night and Waistell was the superintendent of the night work.

The vats of the company are huge caldrons set in rows down the big cooking rooms and in them the vegetables and fruit canned by the plant are cooked.

Waistell was going along one of the plank walk-ways which separates the row of tanks, examining the work, when, in some manner, he stumbled and fell. He went headlong into a vat which was empty of cans, but filled with water heated to boiling, ready for the cooking of peas.

Fellow-workmen heard him scream as he fell and rushed to the spot. They made every haste to rescue the man, but before they could get him out he had been badly burned.

GREAT AIRSHIP TO CROSS OCEAN.

Vaniman Describes the Craft He is Now Building.

Will Carry Wireless Operator, a Cook and Cat.

Is Confident That He Will Solve the Problem.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, June 11.—Vaniman, the engineer and builder of Walter Wellman's dirigible, America, which attempted a trans-Atlantic flight last fall, discussing his new airship, said today:

"The dirigible which I am building will be 268 feet long and have a capacity of 350,000 cubic feet of gas, with a lifting power of 25,000 pounds. The gas bag weighs 4000 pounds. The dirigible will have two 105-horsepower motors. The crew will include a wireless operator, a mechanic, cook and the same cat, 'Trent,' that was on the America. The ship will be completed August 1 and several trial trips will be made from Atlantic City. The real start across the Atlantic will be made in October. Crossing the Atlantic in a dirigible is no longer a question of winds or navigation. The difficulty is not to keep the balloon in the air, but to prevent its rising to an extreme height when the rays of the sun expand the gas. This problem I think I have solved."

KING BUCKLES GARTER.

First of the Great State Functions in London Associated With the Coronation of George V.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, June 10.—The first of the great state functions associated with the coronation of King George V was witnessed today at Windsor Castle, where the Prince of Wales was invested with the insignia of the Order of the Garter.

The elaborate ceremonial was conducted in the throne room. King George and Queen Mary, with the Knights of the order, attended in gorgeous robes. The King, himself, buckled the blue velvet garter on the left leg of the youthful Knight.

Following, a fifty religious service was held in St. George's chapel and the King and Queen and Knights then returned in procession to the castle. The ceremony was private, but the boys from Eton, the civic authorities of Windsor, and a few privileged ones were permitted to view the procession.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SOUTHAMPTON (Eng.) June 10.—The White Star line yielded today to seamen's demands and agreed to pay the crew of the Olympic the same rate of wages as received by crews of the Mauretania and Lusitania.

The trouble on the Olympic began yesterday when, in attempting to engage a crew, officials found the men united in a demand that their wages be increased to $50 a month.

The strike of coal porters became more serious today. A number of outside laborers quit work, but others are appealing to the coal porters at other points to join in a general strike.

The port is overcrowded with liners taking coal.

The traveling libraries will be withdrawn. The purchase of books will be kept down and only other supplies as are actually needed to keep the library running will be purchased. The printing and binding of books and pamphlets, newspapers and magazines and all such things will be discontinued, and the legislative reference and document departments will be merged.

The board gave State Librarian Gillis power to make such changes in the staff as are necessary.

FRENCH MAID IS HYSTERICAL.

DOESN'T KNOW WHY SHE SHOT MILLIONAIRE CLUBMAN.

San Francisco Victim of Her Aim is Reported to Be in Fair Condition Though X-Ray Fails to Locate Bullet in Breast—Wife At Bedside.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Although C. Frederick Kohl, the millionaire clubman who was shot Thursday afternoon by Miss Adele Verge, is still in an extremely dangerous condition, encouraging reports come from the Adler Sanatorium, where he was taken shortly after the shooting. Several X-ray examinations have failed to locate the bullet in Kohl's breast.

It was stated today at the sanatorium that although he was still suffering great pain, the patient's condition was better than had been expected. He passed a fairly good night.

Mrs. Frederick Kohl is still watching anxiously by the bedside of her wounded husband. From the time of the shooting until late yesterday afternoon she refused to take a moment's rest or to see any of the friends who have come by the score to inquire about Kohl's condition. She will remain at the sanatorium until her husband is out of danger.

In the meantime Adele Verge, the French maid who shot Kohl, following the loss of a suit which she had instituted against him and Frank A. Miller, proprietor of the Glenwood Inn at Riverside, is in a state of collapse at the City Prison. She has been hysterical in the extreme since the shooting, and last night it was found necessary to give her medicine to quiet her. She is still praying that her victim may recover, and declares repeatedly that she did not mean to shoot him, and does not know why she did it.

She will probably be formally charged with assault with intent to commit murder.

TO FORM NEW COUNTY.

Citizens of Coalinga Say Their Taxes Paid Are Out of Proportion to Improvements.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

FRESNO, June 10.—It was learned today on good authority that well-known citizens of Coalinga have started a movement to form a new county. It is planned to raise $60,000 to conduct the fight and a portion of this has already been pledged.

Several unsuccessful attempts have been made to divide the county and there has always been a large element in Coalinga opposed to remaining in this county.

Those behind the present movement declare that the taxes paid by Coalingans are out of proportion to improvements made by the county.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—Frank A. Parrot, volcano expert, whose home is on Mount Vesuvius, sailed today for Honolulu to watch Kilauea in action.

The expedition was organised by the volcano research society in connection with the United States weather bureau, the Carnegie Institute and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Mr. Parrot hopes the knowledge gained from study of the Hawaiian volcano will enable scientists to forecast earthquakes.

Increased activity is expected from Kilauea within the next few weeks.

Fullerton.

TAKING LEASES ON AVAILABLE LANDS.

Standard Grabbing Things Up in Fullerton District.

Two Big Purchases Made Within the Week.

Will Put Down Wells Near Amalgamated Hole.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

FULLERTON, June 10.—The Standard Oil Company is taking leases on everything in the Fullerton field that can be secured, and the company now has holdings on all sides of the city, and as close as three-quarters of a mile from the business section, while other leases have been taken in La Habra Valley and to the east and west.

Forty acres two miles west of Fullerton and the Crookston place, three miles west, are included in the latest acquirements. The Standard is also after the McComber ranch near Buena Park, but no lease has been recorded yet. The McDermott ranch in the city limits of Fullerton, and comprising the hills just north of Central addition, has been leased to the Standard. The full extent of the Standard holdings in the Fullerton field is not known, for they are going about it very quietly, and some of the holdings taken by agents for the company have not been transferred.

On the P. Yaite tract near the Amalgamated flowing well, the Standard is putting up a rig, and is evidently preparing for extension development and deep drilling. It has a duplicate plant, a rotary engine and ordinary drill. The Standard has ordered two phones in the field, and informed the telephone company that ten more will be wanted within a short time. This indicates that operations will be started on several tracts at about the same time.

Lumber has been unloaded at Northam, and two or three wells will be put down at once on the Toler ranch west of Fullerton. It seems that the entire country called the "flat," and some distance from the hills where oil has been found in vast quantities, is to be developed and several thousand acres brought into the producing field. The Standard is certain of plenty of oil, as shown by the preparations for building the pipe line system in this field.

Two carloads of tank steel have been unloaded at Northam which will be used in the construction of the tank farm, and a pumping and storage station on the Woods ranch, which has been leased by the Standard.

OTHER OPERATIVES.

Among the other operatives in the Fullerton district the La Habra Oil Company is down 780 feet on the old New England lease, with good indications of oil sand. The company will go deep, however, for lighter oils, which have been found in this section. This lease was operated ten years ago, but was plugged up.

The Fullerton Oil Company has one string of tools going and the rigging up on No. 2 preparatory to spudding in. This company is making good dividends.

The Colorado company has three strings of tools going and the Central is running nine strings. The latter has two rigs up and is using electric power on two wells.

The Murphy company will deepen No. 19, which is now down 2600 feet, and better flow of oil is expected. No. 26 is down 3500 feet, and No. 27 is down 1600 feet, No. 28, 1000 feet.

Some of the oil wells will be cleaned out and deepened to increase the oil flow. In fact, it is probable that many of the wells in this section will be put down deeper to reach the lighter oil.

The Scott well in Puente Hills may be abandoned. It is down 4300 feet and has cost upward of $75,000.

The Industrial Oil Company has completed the rigging of No. 48, and the well was spudded this week.

PLAN FIGHT ON STANDARD.

Foreign Oil Companies Establish Distributing Station for Coast Near City of Seattle.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SEATTLE, June 10.—Developing plans for invading the Pacific Coast and fighting the Standard Oil Company at home the Shell-Royal Dutch Companies have purchased a water front tract several acres in extent at Richmond Beach, just north of Seattle and plan to establish an oil distributing station there for the northwest, according to representatives of these companies.

The Shell-Royal companies organized with British and Dutch capital, are regarded as the most serious opposition to the Standard in the world's oil market.

The Standard Oil Company recently has been particularly aggressive in China. The foreign organizations had considered China its own territory and planned to carry the battle back to the American company on the Pacific Coast.

INSANE MAN AS STOWAWAY.

Officers and Crew of Lumber Schooner Have Desperate Time With Murderous Maniac.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When the steam schooner Gualala, with lumber for the Robert Dollar Company, arrived from Coquille River early this morning, Capt. Martinsen sent a boat ashore at the sea wall with the first mate to report to the police that he had a violently insane man aboard and that strenuous measures had to be resorted to in suppressing him and keeping him from injuring himself and members of the crew.

The alleged crazy man proved to be Charles Lane, who stowed away in the hold of the vessel and was not discovered until the vessel was well to sea. He was taken off the schooner by the harbor police and sent to the city prison.

When Lane was discovered in the hold and brought on deck by two seamen to face the captain, he became violent and attempted to kill the commander with a belaying pin. After a desperate struggle the man was overpowered. He refused to eat or drink and had to be strapped to a stanchion.

BANK OPENING INDEFINITE.

Kern Valley Bank at Bakersfield Will be Able to Open if Collateral Is Sold.

BAKERSFIELD, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Kern Valley Bank, closed by order of the State Superintendent of Banking, will pay its depositors dollar for dollar if the Sunset Road Oil Company's bonds, which the bank holds, to the amount of $352,973.43, bring 50 per cent. of their face value, according to the report of a committee appointed a week ago by a mass meeting of depositors.

The report says that the total loans of the bank aggregate $548,307, of which $89,100 is secured by mortgages, $149,022, by collateral and $309,585 by endorsed notes.

Other assets include municipal bonds, $51,000; bank premises, $29,000; warrants, $9000; overdrafts, $15,000; collections, $12,000; real estate, $17,000. The total assets are about $1,033,000, and the deposits aggregate a little less than $8000.

The report contains no information as to the grogress of negotiations for the sale of the Road oil bonds, and the opening of the bank is dependent on this sale. At present, the opening of the bank seems farther away than it did a week ago.

COMELY LASS IN FORGER ROLE.

Portland Police Land Passer of Petty Checks—String of Bad Paper for Paltry Amounts.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Helen W. Norton, alias Charlotte Wells Bush, a comely girl of 21, was arrested by Detectives West and Abbott in the Lumberman's National Bank today on a charge of forgery. Information was furnished by detectives who have been working on the case for several weeks.

The woman is said to have obtained $200 from the bank on forged checks since last February. The checks were all for small amounts, made out in the same handwriting, and the name of W. B. Mersereau, president of the Axe Logging Company, was signed to each.

The woman did not use the same name twice, but she was identified by C. C. L. Dickey, formerly paying teller of the bank, as the woman who presented the checks.

BARGE STEAMER SINKS.

Valuable Cargo of Supplies for Inland Alaska Lies at Bottom of Idatarod River.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DAWSON, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The barge steamer Tanana struck a stump in the shallow crooked Idatarod River and sank with her $60,000 cargo from Fairbanks, which was being rushed to Idatarod where the supply was becoming meager.

Part of the cargo consisted of machinery which was to be unloaded at Idatarod and transported overland to Flat and Otter creeks. The Tanana's passengers easily got ashore.

The owners of the cargo are greatly disheartened. The only cargo saved so far comprises bottled beer. The steamer will be raised and repaired.

GOLD COMING IN.

First of the Season's Output From Sluicing Operations Has Been Delivered in Fairbanks.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

FAIRBANKS, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Throughout the Tanana district, sluicing operations are under way and miners are beginning their weekly visits to Fairbanks with the golden harvest.

To the Walter Fisher operation on the Nigger Head group belongs the honor of being the first to begin sluicing, using the spring rush of the water. Others have sluiced by using the water in the steam headed boxes. Sluicing operations were delayed by the depth of snow that filled the ditches until the very last and then by the vast amount of water that flowed when the snows melted.

BEAUTIFY CAPITOL PARK.

All Sections of California Will Be Invited to Send Floral Specimens to Sacramento.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] All California will be asked to contribute trees, shrubs, plants and bulbs for the southeast three and one-third acres of the Capitol Park which is to be known as the California section, plans for which have been drawn up by Chief Gardener Robert Armstrong.

The request will be made next week at the annual convention of the grand parlors of both the Native Sons and Native Daughters at Santa Cruz by Superintendent Radcliff and Senator A. Caminetti, of Amador, who is the originator of the plan.

SKIDDED TO DEATH.

Amateur Athlete In Stockton Is Killed By Being Thrown From Motorcycle Against Wall.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

STOCKTON, June 10.—Due to the skidding of the rear wheel of his motorcycle as he attempted to make a turn in the road on the last stretch for his home in this city, Bert Barker, a skilled motorcyclist and athlete, was killed this afternoon by being dashed against a concrete bridge. A fractured jaw and skull, left leg and punctured lungs were the injuries received.

Barker was a carpenter prominent in this section as an amateur athlete.

BULL COTTON POOL IS UNDER INQUIRY.

District Attorney Denies He Played Favorites.

Says Squealers Come to Him for Protection.

No Promises of Immunity from Wickersham.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, June 10.—An attempt was made today before the House Committee on Expenditures for the Department of Justice to show that the indictment of certain cotton bulls for their alleged participation in the so-called bull cotton pool of 1909 was the result of an appeal to the government by the cotton "bears" for help. The investigators elicited little satisfactory testimony.

United States Dist.-Atty. Henry A. Wise denied that any favoritism was shown by his office to the brokers or spinners, who were interested in keeping down the price of cotton as compared with that shown to those who were endeavoring to keep up the price.

MORAL CONVICTION.

Attorney Ernest E. Baldwin, legal representative of cotton merchants in New York, told the committee he had a "moral conviction" that none of the government's information about the "pool" came from any of his clients.

"I will say," added Mr. Wise, "that half of the information that comes to the District Attorney's office is obtained from squealers. When they want protection they come to the government."

Mr. Wise added he would prosecute the "bears" just as soon as he was furnished with proof against those in his jurisdiction.

BALDWIN CONTRADICTS.

Mr. Baldwin contradicted several statements accredited to an affidavit made by S. P. Tanner of Charlotte, N. C., in regard to an attempt to secure Mr. Tanner as a government witness in the prosecution of the bulls.

Mr. Baldwin claimed he did not pretend to Mr. Tanner that he was able on behalf of Atty.-Gen. Wickersham to assure Mr. Tanner of immunity should he testify. He did say he acted as a messenger for Mr. Rhodestrum of the Department of Justice, in conveying to Mr. Tanner an offer on the part of the government to accept him as a witness.

ROSE CARNIVAL AT AN END.

Portland's Festival, Patterned on Los Angeles Fiesta, Proves Overwhelming Success.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With a repetition tonight of the electrical pageant, the idea for which was obtained from the Los Angeles Fiesta de las Flores, and which has proved vastly popular here for three seasons past, Portland's fourth annual rose festival has come to a end.

The attendance this year has broken all records. It is estimated that 100,000 out-of-town visitors have been in the city this week.

The railroads report that they have brought in over 60,000, some coming from as far as New York and Boston. The California cities also have sent large delegations.

Your Teeth Worth Money

Now, friends, you don't need to be told that when the teeth need attention they need it right away. They won't wait until you get ready. Every tooth in your head is worth money to you, for, try as you will, no dentist has yet found a substitute that equals nature's teeth. I believe I can come as close to it as any dentist living, with my Plateless Teeth, but I would not claim they were as good as those which grew in your jaws.

This is good, plain, sensible advice from a dentist who is interested in those who seek his advice and help.

I Am Sincere

There is one comfortable thought about my work that you must not lose sight of—viz.:

I Never Hurt a Bit

You can leave your nervousness and fear at home when you start for my office, for I have found a plan for renewing teeth that entirely does away with all pain.

All I beg is that you won't let it go so I can't do anything else but extract the decayed teeth. I don't hurt even then, but I hate to see good teeth lost through neglect.

Don't Delay—Come Today

Trusses Like These Are A Crime

Get Rid of Belts, Elastic Bands, Springs and Leg-Straps—They Are Simply Slow Suicide.

Trusses like those shown above—the belt and leg-strap, elastic and spring contraptions—sold by drug stores, surgical instrument houses and many self-styled "Hernia Specialists"—make life miserable for everybody who wears them—wearing them is simply slow suicide.

And—even when drawn so tight you can scarcely stand to keep them on—they do no good whatever.

Instead, they often do immense harm—they squeeze the rupture, often causing strangulation—dig into the pelvic bone in front—press against the sensitive spindl column at the back.

Greatest boon to the ruptured the world has ever known—no "medicine" or "treatment"—no operation—no loss of time from work—no springs, elastic belts, or leg-straps to wear. And won't cost you a cent if it doesn't result in immediate improvement.

The Plain Truth Is This.

Rupture—as explained in our free book—can't be relieved or cured—can't even be kept from growing worse—unless constantly held in place. Just as a broken bone can't "knit" unless the parts are held securely together.

And—just as a bandage or splint is the only way a broken bone can be held—the right kind of truss is the only thing in the world that can keep a rupture from coming out.

What a difference it will make when you get that kind of truss.

And you can get exactly that kind of truss—without risking a cent of your money.

It's the famous Cluthe Truss or Cluthe Automatic Massager.

Far more than a truss, far more than merely a device for holding the rupture in place.

Self-regulating, self-adjusting.

No belt, elastic band or springs around your waist, and no leg-straps—nothing to pinch, chafe, squeeze or bind. It is held in position by suction—can't shift or slip—the only truss in existence that is honestly guaranteed never to let the rupture come out.

Try It Without Risking a Penny.

We have so much faith in the Cluthe Truss—we have seen it work wonders for so many others—that we want to make one especially for your case and let you wear it at our risk.

We'll give you plenty of time to test it—if it doesn't keep your rupture from coming out, when you are working and at all other times—if it doesn't put an end to the trouble you've heretofore had with your rupture—if you don't get better rightaway—then the truss won't cost you a cent.

The Healing Massage.

In addition to holding the rupture, the Cluthe Truss or Cluthe Automatic Massager is constantly giving a soothing, strengthening massage to the weak ruptured parts.

All automatically—the massage goes on all day long, without any attention whatever from you.

This massage—which strengthens just as exercise strengthens a weak arm—is so remarkably beneficial, so remarkably curative—that in 199 cases out of every 200 rupture begins to get better from the day a Cluthe Truss is put on.

The World's Greatest Book On Rupture.

Don't go on letting your rupture get worse—don't spend a cent on account of your rupture until you get our book of advice—which two cents for a stamp—or a penny for a postal—will bring you.

This remarkable book—cloth-bound, 49 pages, 21 separate articles, and 19 photographic pictures—took us over 40 years to write—took us that long to find out all the facts we've put in it.

It explains the dangers of operations and why they don't always cure to stay cured. Tells why drugstores should not be allowed to sell trusses any more than a schoolboy would be allowed to perform an operation.

Explains why belt, spring and elastic trusses can do no good. Exposes the fake "free" offers, fradulent claims and humbug "methods," "appliances," etc.

And tells—absolutely without misrepresentation—all about the Cluthe Truss—just how it holds—how it gives the curing massage—how it is waterproof—how it ends all expense—how you can get it on trial—and gives names and addresses of over 4000 people who have tried it and want you to know about it.

White for it today—don't put it off—this book may be the means of adding many years to your life and of restoring you to full strength and usefulness.

Simply say in a letter or postal "Send me the book." In writing us, please give our box number.

Box 46—CLUTHE INSTITUTE.
125 East 23rd Street, New York City.

The minute it takes to write for this book may free you from suffering for the rest of your life.

If I Told You

That I could fill, crown, treat and extract teeth without pain and then failed to do so, the public might, with reason, doubt statements made by me in support of my claims. Moreover, such failure would reflect itself unmistakably in the volume of business done by my various offices. But the fact that I do an increasingly large amount of business—the largest enjoyed by any dentist in the world—is evidence that my statements are verified by demonstration, since it is patent that I should not receive patronage without the confidence of my patrons—and I could not have their confidence if I did not make good.

And I avoid the fallacy of endeavoring to make people believe that high-class dentistry and immoderately low prices are compatible with either good business or good logic, for I credit my prospective patrons with employing the same degree of intelligence with regard to the selection of a dentist, that they would exercise in any other transaction involving the application of judgment.

So, then, I say: teeth filled, crowned, treated, bridged, straightened, extracted without pain. Obey that Insistent Impulse! See Painless Parker first.

Yours without pain,

STUDENTS OF YALE ARE PUT TO ROUT.

Coney Island Huskies Show No Favors to Them.

Polo Players Are Outclassed In Pleasure Resort.

One of Them Sent to Hospital for Repairs.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A dozen or more Yale University students before dawn today wound up an international polo celebration with a "rough-house" party at Coney Island. The police were not invited, but they got there just the same, and in the midst of the excitement somebody banged the head of F. Bayard Rives, a son of former corporation counsel, George L. Rives. Young Rives had to get patched in the Reception Hospital. Several other students and their rainbow apparel were roughly handled. The police say they have since heard that Reggie Roome of No. 101 East Fifty-seventh street and James F. Williams, whose father has a summer place in Tarrytown, were in the students' party.

The students while in Luna Park had conducted themselves with such joyousness that waiters and park huskies expelled them bodily and with great force to Surf avenue where, subsequently, fracas No. 2 developed with the results stated.

The students, after being routed, went to the Coney Island Police Station to lodge a complaint. Lieut. Joseph Conroy said he could not order the arrest of their assailants and that they would have to apply for a warrant. Rives was apparently severely hurt, so Dr. Greenwald dressed Rives's injuries.

After their second unsuccessful sortie on Luna Park, the students returned to Manhattan breathing vengeance, but they did not return to Coney to get it. The waiters and police wore swallowed-the-canary smiles.

FINEST ORGAN IN CLARK HOME.

BUILT IN LOS ANGELES AND COST SMALL FORTUNE.

Arthur Scott Brook Formerly of the Memorial Church, Engaged by Millionaire Senator to Perform on An Instrument That is Said to Excel All Others.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, June 10.—A $125,000 pipe organ, the largest and finest chamber organ in the world, has just been installed in the $10,000,000 Fifth-avenue residence of ex-Senator W. A. Clarke of Montana. It occupies one end of the Senator's main picture gallery, one of the half dozen rooms which have been finished in the big mansion. The whole houes, which has been nine years in process of building, will be completed in five or six months.

The new organ is declared by musicians who tested it last night as the Senator's guests to be the most perfectly toned instrument in the country. Its equipment includes an outfit of chimes and an echo organ hidden in the stone grill under the ceiling at the opposite end of the gallery. It was built in Los Angeles, and contains 4600 pipes.

Its owner has engaged as his organist Arthur Scott Brook, formerly of the Memorial Church of Los Angeles, and organist of the giant organ at the Chicago World's Fair.

GAMBLER'S VISION.

DENVER, June 10.—Gus William Marshall, the gambler, who yesterday fired eight bullets into the body of his wife, killing her instantly, declares he was driven to desperation by spiritualistic revelations portraying his wife's alleged infidelity. After ten years of these communications he says he became convinced his wife was unfaithful. He stated to the police that yesterday before the tragedy, he had a vision showing the woman in another man's arms.

GEN. OTIS COMING HOME.

CHICAGO, June 10.—Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, who arrived from Washington on Friday, will shortly continue his journey to the Pacific Coast, and expects to be in Los Angeles by the end of the week.

REINCARNATION OF OUTLAW TRACY.

Dogs and Men on Trail While Farmers Feed Him.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SPOKANE (Wash.) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Bill Byrd, desperado, already with a double murder to answer for—and perhaps a third—bids fair to emulate the career of the notorious outlaw, Tracy.

A dead shot, armed with a high-power rifle, cool as an icicle in face of danger, he is today dodging the scores of armed searchers who are hounding his trail, and his operations bear strong resemblance to the spectacular flight of Tracy.

While dogs and posses this morning picked up the slayer's trail southeast of Spokane, a swarthy stranger, answering in detail the murderer's description, calmly entered a farmer's kitchen near the village of Mecca and demanded breakfast.

Though the stranger was seen to secret a rifle beneath a fallen log at the edge of an underbrush several rods from the house, the farmer and his wife complied with his demands, entertaining him as he ate, not daring to raise alarm, or take possession of the hidden gun.

The stranger thanked the farmer cordially for his hospitality, recovered the rifle and disappeared in the underbrush of the ravine. The Sheriff's office was notified and deputies hastened in the direction fourteen miles southeast of Spokane.

Other farmers in the same neighborhood have seen the stranger with his rifle today and the Sheriff believes he is close on the trail.

Justice of the Peace Meisner of Dishman, who was shot while following the slayer after the double murder, is very low tonight.

Discharged Italians Wreck Train and Cause Death of Two Men Who Cook Alive In Steam.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GRIFFITH (Ind.) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Train wreckers, believed to be discharged Italians, caused the death of two men in a wreck at Griffith today. They smashed the semaphore signs and a freight train on the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern Railroad struck an open switch and went into the ditch. The fireman, Harry Migren, and the head brakeman, George R. McKnight, were injured so severely they died a short time later in the hospital at Gary.

Both men were riding in the cab. When the engine struck the open switch and rolled down the embankment they were caught beneath the wreckage and literally cooked by steam from a broken valve. They were hurried to the hospital but nothing could be done save easing their pain.

In cots, side by side in the accident ward, the victims of the train wreckers joked with each other and declared they "would go out together."

Two Chicago Men Inflict Fatal Wounds in Pistol Fight on Street. Belong to Unions.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Two men, wounded in a pistol fight as the result of a feud that has existed for months, are dying at the Passavant Hospital. The duel occurred at Illinois and North Clark streets early this morning. Both men have been identified with labor unions.

The victims are John Costello, alias "Jack the Ripper," No. 152 West Indiana street; shot above the heart, will die; George Hudson, 30 years old, No. 51 West Indiana street; shot twice in the chest, will die.

The victims, although conscious, have refused to make any statements. The police are working on the theory that the trouble was due to a difference in politics, while they also declare that they had information that Costello was said to be a union-labor slugger.

Men Working at Sulphuring of Grape Vines When Powder Bursts Into Flames With Roar.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VINA, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One man was injured, several narrowly escaped injury and a wagon was almost destroyed by fire as a result of a peculiar explosion of sulphur that occurred in the Stanford vineyard, yesterday afternoon.

A large crew of men was at work sulphuring the grape vines. A load of sulphur on a wagon was being driven by Thomas Savage and suddenly, with no warning or apparent cause, the sulphur exploded with a dull roar and burst into flames. An assistant named Davis was burned, but not seriously, and several other members of the crew had a close call.

What caused the explosion is a mystery.

TO KEEP SOBER LEARN TO SING.

THAT'S THE PRESCRIPTION OF BOSTON CHARITY WORKER.

Demands That All Literature on Subject of Drunkenness in Harvard University Should Be Translated Into the Vernacular and Even Into Ballads.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BOSTON, June 10.—"Lots of outdoors" for adults and children was the prescription for healthy minds and bodies recommended tonight to the National Conference of Charities and Corrections.

A suggestion that the singing of songs drives the desire for drink out of men was made by Miss Alice L. Higgins, a Boston charity worker.

"All the literature regarding drunkenness which the committee of fifty has gathered," Miss Higgins said, "and which reposes on the library shelves for the exclusive use of Harvard students in their compulsory reading, should be brought before the public. It should be translated into the vernacular and even into the ballad."

"Families and Lawbreakers" was the subject at the morning session of the conference of charities. Addresses on family desertion and non-support and the present laws regulating the evil were delivered by Joseph C. Logan of Augusta, Ga., and by William H. Baldwin of Washington. The meeting closed with a discussion by J. Prentiss Murphy of Philadelphia and Miss Minnie F. Low of Chicago.

Three sectional meetings were held in the forenoon. Standards of living and labor were considered by A. J. McElway, secretary of the Southern States' Child Labor Committee, and by Miss Frances A. Keller of New York, in Kingsley Hall. A continued meeting of the training and social workers in Pilgrim Hall considered the professional school for social workers, papers being read by Mrs. John M. Glenn of New York and Miss Zilpha D. Smith of Boston.

Moving pictures were used to demonstrate the society's views on housing, health and recreation, the films illustrating the spread of disease by the house fly, the fight for pure milk, the work against tuberculosis and the attempts to have a "safe and sane Fourth of July."

Practical Home Helps

Indigestion, Bowel Trouble, Dysentery and Diarrhoea.

Put a nicely browned piece of toast in cold water and let it stand about an hour. To a glass of the strained toast water, add a tablespoonful of Duffy's pure malt whiskey. If desired a little fruit syrup may be added for flavoring.

This remedy has been used with excellent results and is very highly recommended by Dr. E. T. Hewson of Detroit, Mich., who says: "It saved me from a threatened collapse when nothing else had any effect."

MRS. P. SUTTLES.

ATLANTA, Ga. (Special.)—"It is with great pleasure that I acknowledge the merits of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I have taken it at many different times in my life as a tonic and stimulant, and have been greatly benefited by its use each time, regaining my strength in a very short while. I am 41 years of age and the mother of nine fine children. I hope all who wish health and strength will take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I know it will do them good."—Mrs. P. Suttles, 90 Ira st.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is an absolutely pure, gentle and invigorating stimulant and tonic. When taken at meal times it stimulates the mucous surfaces and little glands of the stomach to a healthy action, thereby improving the digestion and assimilation of the food and giving to the system its full proportion of nourishment. This action upon the digestive process is of great importance, as it brings to all the tissues and organs of the body the nutriment necessary to their sustenance and indirectly to the whole system strength and vigor. It is prescribed by doctors and recognized as a family medicine everywhere.

Thousands of letters of gratitude are received from men and women in all walks of life, both old and young, who have been cured and benefited by the use of this great medicine and who continue to enjoy good health.

Sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY by druggists, grocers and dealers, or direct $1.00 a large bottle.

The Grafonola "Mignon" is a musical instrument—unmistakably and at the first glance. Every line of it, simple, dignified and classic, suggests music; and every note it sings or plays is a corroboration of its first impression.

Wholly unmechanical in appearance, yet faultless in its mechanism, designed by a musical instrument artist, and built by artists in wood-work—it is everything that a musical instrument ought to be, and incomparable in its own class.

The Grafonola "Mignon" is built on straight, severe and classic lines, with just sufficient ornamentation to bring into proper relief the engaging symmetry and the fitness that characterize its general design. Its cabinet construction is joined in a craftsmanly manner, and finished like a thousand-dollar piano-case.

LONDON HOPEFUL OF GREAT CROWDS.

Fifty Thousand Americans are Expected in City.

Each Will Probably Spend Fifty Pounds Sterling.

William Waldorf Astor Will Entertain Colonials.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Whatever anxiety existed in London, a month ago, regarding the probable size of the contingent from the United States during the coronation, is giving way to a comfortable belief that Uncle Sam will be represented quite as liberally as originally was predicted.

The latest estimates say it is likely that "as many as 50,000 Americans, habitually passing half the year in Europe, will be here during coronation week, and quite as many more will have crossed the Atlantic for the express purpose." This may prove an ultra-optimistic prediction.

FIFTY POUNDS EACH.

According to the same authority, the outlay in London of the average American will be at least fifty pounds sterling. This prophesy is well within the mark.

Referring to the arrival of John Hays Hammond and the sailing of the Delaware, which will be the guest battleship at the naval review, a London paragrapher remarked that, judging from the descriptions of the latter and from the history of the former in South Africa, Washington is "bent on complimenting us by sending a couple of first-class fighting machines." Mr. Hammond was much amused as "this way of identifying my records."

Dorchester House, of course, is the rallying point for the Americans and a center of unprecedented activity. Hundreds of cards are left there daily, many of them bearing addresses in the far West and Southwest. The Embassy is overwhelmed with requests for social services of every conceivable nature, and yet, as the Ambassador smilingly observed, "not one of an absurd character has yet been received."

MRS. REID DELIGHTED.

Mrs. Reid declares herself delighted to find that "in our young country there is always a number of freemen anxious to witness the historic monuments and ceremonials of a system we have outgrown."

Sensitive as the Britisher will be to the presence and attitude of the American contingent, his principal efforts will be directed to entertaining the visitors from the 'oversea self-governing dominions," and the great dependencies of the crown.

It is noteworthy that in arranging for the junkets of the representatives of the Dominion Parliaments—eighteen from Australia, eighteen from Canada, fourteen from New Zealand and two from New Foundland—special stress is laid on the plans of William Waldorf Astor to receive the entire party at Cliveden, his magnificent residence on the Thames.

A society journal calls attention to the "significant fact," adding that "no one will fail to perceive how the much-discussed American dollar will play the leading role in displaying to the Canadians the beauties of the Thames at an interesting juncture of fiscal relations between Ottawa and Washington, but when did the American dollar fail to get in first?"

To impress those colonials with the "old home" is a leading wish of King George and British statesmen of all ways of thinking.

Another Aspirant.

AUSTRALIA WILL TRY POLAR GAME.

AEROPLANE TO BE USED IN SEARCH FOR POLE.

Party Making Up to Sail From Hobart on Quest for Center of Antarctic Regions—Veterans of Former Trips to Take Active Part in Expedition.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, June 3.—Australia is the latest aspirant for the honors of Antarctic discovery, and extensive preparations are being made for the expedition with Dr. Douglas Mawson will lead with the ship Aurora now sailing for London from Newfoundland. From Hobart, her last port of call, the Aurora will set sail toward the Antarctic regions in November. Some of the best known British explorers will be among the force of the landing party which will muster twenty-five men. The most advanced feature of the equipment will be a Vicker's monoplane in charge of Lieut. Watkins who has distinguished himself at the Brooklands aviation grounds on this type of machine.

"We hope the aeroplane will be very valuable to us," Dr. Mawson said in an interview. "An areoplane can fly over an ice crevasse or a ridge as easily as over anything else, whereas a party on foot might have to search a long time to find a pass. There are plenty of flat snow fields for rising or alighting and an aeroplane can do a journey of 150 miles in three hours."

Two members of the Shackleton party have prominent positions on the Australian explorer's staff. Capt. J. K. Davis who commanded the Nimrod on Sir Ernest Shackleton's farthest south expedition, will have charge of the Aurora, will outfit her, and select the crew. Dr. Wilde, who is a veteran of the Shackleton and Scott marches, also has an important post. Lieut. Ninnis of the Royal Fusiliers is the expert on surveying and sledging. For ice work a Swiss, Dr. Merz, who won the ski jumping championship in 1908, goes along. Australians and New Zealanders complete the complement.

Money for the purchase of the ship was raised by English papers in a few days after an appeal to the public by Sir Ernest Shackleton. Lord Strathcona headed the list with $5000 and a total of $60,000 was raised.

PARCELS POST SUCCESS.

Americans in Germany Marvel at Wonder of the System, But Natives Want Cheaper Rates.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BERLIN, June 3.—The great success of the parcels post system in Germany is beyond dispute, and Americans abroad constantly marvel at the low rates charged for the transportation of packages within the borders of the Empire. Nevertheless, there is a growing sentiment that the rates on the smaller sized packages should be even cheaper. At present, the charges are 12 cents a pound on all packages weighing not more than eleven pounds.

In the recent Reichstag debates on the postoffice appropriation, a member asked the Secretary of the Postoffice whether it would not be feasible to reduce the rate for packages not weighing more than one kilogram (2 1-5 pounds) to 7.5 cents. In this connection it is pointed out that some of the smaller countries have considerably cheaper rates than Germany on small packages. Thus, in Switzerland, packages weighing one kilogram pay only 5 cents, those of a half kilogram only 3 cents. In Denmark a kilogram package costs about 4½ cents, in Luxemburg about 5, and in Holland about 6 cents.

SEE TWO WITNESSES ARRESTED ON PERJURY CHARGES.

As Accused Are Led Away Caged Men Shout "Suppose the Others Will Have Same Fate" and in Din They Cause Judge Has to Adjourn Court.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

VITERBO, June 10.—This morning was occupied by the court of the assizes with an attempt of the prosecution to establish that the ring found in the possession of his alleged murderers was once worn by Gennaro Cuoccolo.

Several witnesses were examined, two of whom were subsequently charged with perjury. The barber, Cucci of Naples, who has sworn at times that he did, and at other times that he did not recognize the ring in evidence as one which he had seen on the hand of Cuoccolo, was recalled. Today he asserted that he had seen the ring in the possession of the murdered man, despite the fact that his own servant a moment before had testified that his master had never seen the exhibit until it was produced in court. Cucci was arrested.

Cipoletta, another barber, said he had seen the ring before the trial, it having been shown to him by Judge Romano, who conducted the original investigation into the murders of Cuoccolo and his wife. The witness was confronted by Romano, who said his story was untrue, but he refused to qualify his testimony, whereupon President Bianchi ordered him arrested for false swearing.

As the second witness to be arrested was led away by the carbineers, the Camorrists in the prisoners' cage shouted: "That's two arrested. Suppose the others will have the same fate."

Amid the turmoil the sitting was postponed.

BERLIN, June 4.—Two expeditions, one in Greenland and the other in Manchuria, are still engaged in the purchase of sledge dogs and Manchurian ponies for the German Antarctic expedition under Lieut. Filchner, whose ship, the Deutschland, sailed from Hamburg May 2. The dogs and ponies will be brought to Hamburg, whence Lieut. Filchner expects to sail with them for Buenos Ayres about August 1.

NEW OPERA BY STRAUSS.
COMPOSER AT WORK.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BERLIN, June 3.—Dissatisfied with the results of collaboration in the Rose Cavalier and his other previous operas, Richard Strauss, it is announced from Munich, will himself write the text to his next opera. Strauss is at present working on a new symphony, not on the composition of an opera to a theme by Gabriele d'Anunzio, as has been reported.

FRANCE MAY PROTEST.
IN RE-MOROCCO SITUATION.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PARIS, June 10.—Should Spain pursue her projected military action in Morocco there is a possibility that France will protest to the signatories of the Algeciras act, the international agreement concerning Morocco. Such a step would be taken by France only as a last resort. The situation was examined at length at today's session of the cabinet.

EDWARD'S FRIENDS SNUBBED IN LONDON.

Former Favorites Will Not Witness Coronation.

Queen Mary Now Holds Key to the Special Box.

Victims Show Indignation by Going Far Away.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There is more than usual unhappiness and heartburning over invitations to the royal enclosure at Ascot when racing begins next Tuesday. The King drives to Ascot in semi-state. Presence in the royal enclosure is enough to prove that the envied one is basking in His Majesty's favor.

Certain aristocratic or wealthy persons in the highest society have been bidden to the enclosure for years and thought they certainly would be invited this year. They have been left out.

DISPLAY OF INDIGNATION.

To display their indignation some have banded together and have engaged tables at Ranelagh for luncheon on coronation day. They will be sufficiently far from London to prove that they want not even a glimpse of the procession.

Others of the disappointed have announced ostentatiously in a newspaper that they are about to leave town until July—and these are not the only ones of King Edward's set whom the King and Queen have severely disappointed.

The most novel and conspicuous feature in Westminster Abbey at the last coronation was a special box on the right of the throne, in which King Edward assembled about thirty ladies of his acquaintance. Society wags christened the box, in sporting parlance, "the King's loose box."

INVITED BY QUEEN MARY.

Mrs. George Keppel, exquisitely gowned and one of the handsomest women in the gay and beautiful galaxy, was seated in the middle of the front row. At the coming coronation there will be a special box in the same place in the Abbey, but it will be smaller and its occupants will be invited, not by King George, but by Queen Mary.

Of course, many ladies whom King Edward invited to his special box will not be asked to come to the Abbey by Queen Mary. This change typifies the new conditions in Buckingham Palace and makes entirely intelligible the sour disposition with which the old King's set discuss conditions.

Mrs. Keppel, who left England last fall, will pass coronation day in Japan, about as far away from England as she can get.

ADMIRAL LI IS A WONDER.

PUTS DOWN CHINESE REBELLION IN EASY FASHION.

Gets One of His Trusted Lieutenants to Join Insurrectos, Spy on Their Doings and Sayings and on Information Thus Obtained Success is a Closed Incident.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

VICTORIA (B. C.) June 10.—The steamer Tan brought news from Canton last night that Admiral Li, who is in charge of the naval forces in South China frustrated the recent rising. He sent one of his lieutenants to profess himself a revolutionary and secure membership in the band. This officer obtained the papers of the rebels, having been elected an officer of the revolutionaries and had photographs made which were sent to Admiral Li.

The documents show it was the intention to establish a military government in South China. All arrangements were made for provisional government. No revenge upon the Manchus was contemplated, as intended by the early revolutionaries.

A plan was made for enforcing loans from rich Chinese for the revolutionary army. On the whole their programme seems to have been exceptionally modest and tolerant. The activity of the admiral, however, broke up their plans and it is unlikely they will be reorganized.

BERLIN DENIES.
NO SUCCESSOR TO HILL YET.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

BERLIN, June 10.—The Foreign Department denied absolutely today that the report that Washington's proposal for a successor to Dr. Hall, the American Ambassador, had been rejected at Berlin. "Neither the Emperor nor the government," it was stated, "could have expressed themselves unfavorably, as no name has been presented yet."

Cupid to Rule.

DAUGHTER OF KAISER FREE TO CHOOSE MAN OF HEART AT LOVE'S DICTATION.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] All the numerous rumors about an impending betrothal of Princess Victoria Louise have been denied this week, except the one which couples her name with that of the Prince of Wales.

Der Roland, a weekly magazine, reports that Emperor William actually made the remark credited to him: "I will not sacrifice my little one to politics."

It is coming to be generally accepted as a fact that both the Emperor and the Empress would be pleased to have their only daughter wed the Prince of Wales, not only because he is to be the next King of Great Britain and Emperor of India, but because his habits and training are such as they approve.

The Empress and the Queen of England are almost puritanical in their ideas and have brought up their children in the straight and narrow path. So the young people are well matched—in their mothers' eyes at least. Yet, so fondly does the Emperor love his favorite among his seven children, no effort will be made to oblige Princess Victoria Louise to marry the Prince of Wales or anybody else unless she loves him.

Every opportunity will be given her to meet him and find out whether she would like to be his wife, but nothing definite upon the subject is likely to be said or done, Der Roland asserts, for at least four years, as she is only 18.

Defeat That Summer Tired Feeling

There is no reason why you should not feel just as brisk and vigorous in the summer as at any other time. Yet most people do not and they believe that it is just the natural effect of warm weather. It is not. It is because the digestion is weak and the system has been allowed to run down and no effort made to keep it in good running order. When the hot weather comes be very careful what you eat so as not to upset your stomach and take Cinematographic Records of Coronation Events Will Be Rushed By Fastest Trains and Boats.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fuller and better cinematographic records will be made of the forthcoming coronation events than were ever before attempted in Great Britain. Moreover, extraordinary energy will be exerted to dispatch the records to the principal cities of the world. The swiftest steamers and railroad trains will be employed in sending the pictures to America.

It is expected that impressions of the early scenes of the coronation day will be given to half a dozen operators on the afternoon boat and train for Paris. The films will be developed on the train and the pictures will be exhibited in Paris theaters by 9 o'clock the same evening. Within less than three days the pictures will be shown in a majority of the centers of European life while London theatergoers on the evening of coronation day will see films covering the coronation itself and all related events.

Pictures will be taken by means of the direct color cinematograph in order that not only the present but future generations in all parts of the world may have an exact conception of the events of 1911, in London.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, June 10.—Johnny Kling, veteran catcher of the Chicago National League Club, and three other members of the team, were traded today to the Boston club of the National League in one of the biggest baseball deals of the year. Eight players are involved.

With Kling Chicago gave Linton; Griffin, a recruit pitcher secured from the Atlantic club of the Southern League; Alfred Kaiser, an outfielder purchased from the Louisville club; and Henry Weaver, a pitcher, who also came from Louisville.

In exchange Chicago received Ralph Good, an outfielder; Clifford Curtis, a pitcher, formerly with Milwaukee, in the American Association; "Peaches" Graham, a catcher, who will take Kling's place, and Outfielder Collins. Graham formerly played with Minneapolis in the American Association. The trade became effective immediately and Kling and Kaiser played their first game with Boston today.

JOE RIVERS SPENDS EVENING AT PARK.

Perhaps you will wonder how Joe Rivers spent last evening after the battle was over and the victory was won. Well, not at the Turkish baths, at any rate, but in the pleasant company of a certain little girl, who also felt like celebrating. The "two youngsters" went out to witness the opening of a local pleasure park, and Joe's parting remark was, "Gee, I hope they've got the menagery out there yet, I feel just like watching the big animals, and looking a lion right in the eye. That's how good I feel tonight."

CHICAGO, June 10.—Manager Frank Chance of the Cubs has other afflictions than the blinding headaches resultant from being struck on the head thirty-eight times by pitched balls. It is this trouble that forced him to quit work during the recent eastern campaign, but yesterday he underwent an examination for shooting pains in right foot. Dr. T. A. Davis, the club physician, pronounced Chance's ailment to be a repetition of the nerve trouble that laid him up two years ago. Chance has started treatment for the new disorder.

MINING PROSPECTOR IS LOST.

Inyo County Prospector Goes into Dry Region and Friends Fear He Has Lost His Life.

KEELER (Cal.) June 9.—The land of little rain, has claimed another victim. Alfred Williams, a well-known prospector of Southern Inyo county, left Coso Hot Springs ten days ago on his burro to examine a group of claims. He was to have returned in a few days and when he failed to put in appearance at the end of that time two friends, Fred Crocker and Domingo Etcharren, took up the trail in search of him. About twenty miles out they found the burro minus the saddle, and latter found the saddle in a deep malapi canyon, but failed to discover any trace of the missing man.

The country where Williams disappeared is dry and wild and it is believed that the unfortunate man must have lost his way and perished for lack of water. He left the springs with only enough supplies to last for a few days. He was 50 years of age and resided at Ballarat.

MARBLE QUARRY.

John Moran, a Los Angeles contractor, has taken a lease on the marble quarry at Swansea, near this place, and has started a gang of men to work taking out the stone. Moran has contracts which call for $400,000 worth of marble, and expects to get all of his material from this quarry.

New machinery equipment is being put in and later, if the quarry stands up to the proper tests, a larger equipment will be installed and a large force of men employed. The work of taking out the stone will take several years, and will undoubtedly result in the opening up of what is said to be one of the finest marble deposits in the country, and one of the most extensive.

The marble comes in a large variety of colors, among them being all the shades of the beautiful variegated stone for which builders seek the world over. The last important piece of marble taken out of these quarries was secured by the late E. H. Harriman for his beautiful home in New York, only a few months before his death. This was cut into pillars for the front entrance.

TERRIFYING STORMS IN NEW YORK AND ILLINOIS.

Wind of Almost Hurricane Velocity Smashes Plate Glass in Metropolis—Houses Damaged in Newark, N. J.—Lightning Strikes Many Times.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 10.—An electrical storm of unusual intensity swooped down upon this section tonight and for hours played havoc with wire communication in all directions. The storm broke with terrific force shortly after 10 o'clock. It was brought in on a wind of almost hurricane velocity and accompanied by a downpour that bore a strong resemblance to a cloudburst.

Plate glass windows were smashed, street signs blown down and other damage done.

In Newark, N. J., several houses were damaged, trees were blown down and there were panics among the crowds in several parks. Similar conditions prevailed on Staten Island, where the blow was gauged at eighty miles an hour. Lightning struck in several parts of the city proper.

A bolt hit a big electric sign on an upper Broadway roof and wreckage crashed through a skylight and 100 men in a billiard parlor narrowly escaped injury. Damage of $10,000 was caused.

In Jersey City a man was killed by falling wires. An oil tank was ignited by the lightning and its contents burned.

TERRIFIC STORM IN ILLINOIS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PEORIA (Ill.) June 10.—A heavy wind and electric storm tonight played havoc with wire communication. The storm broke with terrific force. A carnival company playing on the city levee was in full swing and several thousand people crowded the tents which were blown to the ground. Six persons were injured. The temperature reached 100 here today.

MILLIONAIRE IS MISSING.

FRIENDS SCOUR PLACER COUNTY FOR HAROLD T. POWER.

Leaves Auburn for Davenport Mine and No One Has Seen or Heard Anything of Former Californian Since Then—Fails to Keep an Engagement.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

AUBURN (Cal.) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Harold T. Power, millionaire, politician, former State Senator, several times mentioned as of Gubernatorial timber, mining man, stockman, fruit grower, and one of the most widely known men in Northern California, has been missing two days, following a trip to the Davenport Mine, one-half mile from Auburn.

Tonight searching parties are scouting Placer county in an effort to locate him, or if he has been foully dealt with, to find his body.

He left Auburn at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, presumably for the mine, which is but half a mile from the business section of the city, and has not been seen since leaving the principal street.

It was learned tonight that Power had an engagement yesterday with Gordon Cowan, a prominent mining man of San Francisco. Power failed to keep this engagement.

Idaho Bank Closed.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The First National Bank of Salmon, Idaho, has been closed by its directors. The institution has a capital of $50,000 and a surplus of $15,000.

TWO POLICE CHIEFS IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Each Holds Himself to be Legal Authority.

Seymour and White Both Have Offices.

Captains Will Have to Make Choice Tomorrow.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Following the issuance this afternoon of an order modifying the restraining order which prohibited D. A. White from acting as Chief of Police pending the trial of Chief John F. Seymour, White established his office in police headquarters, and thence issued orders as head of the police department.

Seymour continued to occupy the Chief's office on the ground floor of the same building, while White took possession of the room of the president of the Board of Police Commissioners, and the balance of the day witnessed the peculiar spectacle of the local police department with two heads, each, apparently recognized by the courts, and each insisting upon an obedience to his orders.

WHITE PUTS UP SIG[illegible]

Signs announcing that the [illegible] the Chief of Police would be fo[illegible] upon the second floor of police headquarters were tacked up by White adherents, and upon the door of the Police Commissioners' room was affixed a placard that therein was the office of the Chief.

Upon receiving a copy of the order modifying the injunction, Seymour issued a general order to all company commanders declaring that the document issued by Judge Seawell did not interfere in any way with his power as head of the police department.

As soon as White installed himself in office he issued an order in turn. This order stated that he had established an office and headquarters in the Police Commissioners' room; that Sergt. John J. O'Meara was reassigned to act as his clerk; that all captains and company commanders should report to him at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, and that he had in his office a certified copy of the order made by Judge Seawell, which was open to the inspection of any of the members of the department.

With two chiefs of police in office, the only ones in a quandary are the members of the police department. According to Seymour, he is still Chief of Police, and intends to act as such. According to White—and the latter's attorneys—he is the only genuine, dyed-in-the-wool, and hall-marked chief and it will go hard with any member of the department who refuses to obey his orders.

The show-down will probably not come until Monday morning when the company commanders must make their choice as to which of the chiefs they will take orders from.

Charles F. Hanlon, leading counsel for the Board of Police Commissioners, and White, when asked what the members of the department would likely do, said:

"The police department is under the command of the Board of Police Commissioners, and White was appointed chief by that body. The commissioners will, of course, recognize only White as Chief of Police pending the trial of Seymour, who is under suspension by the board, until his trial is over.

"White has been regularly appointed to act as Chief pro-tem., and he has been properly installed. The Superior Court has decided that he has every right to act as Chief, and if any member of the police department refuses to obey the orders of Chief White, that individual will be liable to face charges of insubordination. Should White issue an order to one of the captains, for instance, and that captain refuses to obey it, the Chief will at once serve him with a written copy of the order, together with a certified copy of the court's order. The officer will then be suspended and charges will be filed against him with the Board of Police Commissioners.

"The only thing which the restraining order now prohibits is the use of force or violence in ousting Seymour from the use of the Chief's office, or from using the same means to obtain the books and papers of the department. That matter will be taken care of in another way, for we have already set in motion the machinery of the law for the purpose of getting for our client the records of the police department."

Chief Seymour, beyond continuing to assert that he was still head of the police department of San Francisco, and that he was leaving all matters in the hands of his legal advisers, had little to say. He remained in his office all afternoon but took no official steps to assert his authority beyond the issuance of the general order to the company commanders, stating that his powers were still the same.

LUNA PARK GLOWS AS BULBS BLAZE.

Throng Attends Opening of Amusement Center.

Wondrous Changes Wrought Since Old Days.

Many Attractions Command Visitors' Attention.

In a blaze of a myriad of electric lights, Luna Park, the new amusement center of the city, was thrown open last night after months of preparation and the expenditure of more than $100,000. Fully 16,000 Los Angeles people crowded through the turnstiles.

The beautiful park which is located so convenient to the business district of the city was a fairyland last night. Almost an even hundred thousand electric bulbs blazed forth at 6:30 o'clock when the management threw on the switch lighting them. The wonderous changes that have been wrought since the old Chutes Park existed were soon appreciated by the thousands who thronged Main and Washington streets before the gates were open.

A few of the attractions were not quite completed, but they were very few. New wonders met the eye on all sides. The zoo has been completely remodeled. The denizens are wonderful to behold and come from every conceivable portion of the globe.

One of the principal attractions of the new park, the scenic railroad, is not quite complete and its gorgeous imitation granite walls tower hundreds of feet in the air. The failure of a small portion of the necessary machinery to operate the attraction to arrive on time was the cause of the delay, but it is stated that within a few days it will be open and one of the most stunning scenic railroads in American will be at hand.

Another attraction that commended much attention was Mme. Scheel's lions, located in a great iron cage in the center of the lagoon. There are two of the animals and they are superb specimens of their breed. Mme. Schell did stunts with them that caused wonder among the thousands of visitors.

Then there is the long line of side-show attractions with their untiring bally-hoo men in front who keep the air ringing with the good-natured chaff about the wonders concealed back of the doors. It is a liberal education in the slang of the country to listen while these keen fellows cry their wares and to overhear the badinage that passes between them. The attractions for which they shout are more than good. The crowds which passed through the doors came out enthusiastic over what they saw.

The big capitive balloon which goes up at frequent intervals was a point of attraction and drew hundreds of the curious. Then the many little theaters with their excellent vaudeville were well patronized. There are two of the vaudeville places which are free to the public and if the character of the shows of the first night are a criterion of what may be expected the crowds attending Luna Park will never be disappointed.

The shoot-the-chutes is being completed and will soon be in operation. There is a Japanese village which drew thousands last night, and, in fact, it is hard to pick out the most important spectacle in a show that was excellent all the way through.

DRAGS HIS WIFE IN STREET.

Prominent Oil Man of Coalinga Creates Excitement of Discovery of Alleged Infidelity.

COALINGA, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Much excitement prevailed on the streets here tonight when A. K. Pickering, a prominent oil well rig builder, dragged his almost naked wife through the business streets of the city while he was bleeding from a bullet wound in the side.

He cried to the people gathered on the street:

"Look at her. I found her in bed with another man."

Soon afterwards, O. S. Meyers, an employee of Pickering, appeared at the rear door of the Hefton & May drug store bleeding from five bullet wounds, and stark naked. He was wrapped in a blanket and rushed to the American Hospital, and, after officers had separated Pickering and his wife, the latter was taken to a store, and her husband rushed to the San Joaquin Hospital for medical attention.

Pickering came in from the oil fields about 8 o'clock, and, not finding his wife at home, started to look for her. He was told that she had been seen going into a lodging-house with Meyers. He immediately went to Meyers's room. On entering the room, he found his wife and Meyers both naked. It is not known who fired the first shot, but Meyers shot Pickering, and the latter opened fire on Meyers, shooting five times. During the fracas, the wife crawled under the bed, but the irate husband tore her out and dragged her through the streets.

The gun used by Meyers was later examined and found to contain four empty chambers, and one loaded. It is not known how many times he shot, but he only hit Pickering once.

Pickering had a 25-bore automatic Colt, and, on examination, it was found that the gun had jammed on the fifth shell. All five of the bullets entered Meyers's body. Meyers had been in the employ of Pickering for the past seven years, at a wage of $9 a day. Pickering is one of the most prominent rig builders in the State, and has a large business in the Coalinga fields.

It is not believed his wound will prove fatal, although the loss of blood may result seriously. Meyers will live but a few hours.

Rev. Father Mulvihill, Pastor St. John's Church, Des Moines, Iowa, in the Following Strong Public Letter

OPENLY ENDORSES THE NEAL THREE DAY DRINK HABIT TREATMENT

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, Rev. D. F. Mulvihill, Rector, 1915 University Ave.:

I am in a position to state that the Neal Institute does all that it claims for its patients. I am personally acquainted with three cases (two of whom I thought beyond treatment) that took the treatment and are today a different type of men. It is beyond doubt a saving grace for poor fellows that wish to get rid of the slavish habit, but have not the strength to do it themselves. I can safely recommend the Neal Institution and hope that all who have a desire to rid themselves of a vicious habit will give it a trial.

PECULIAR PLAY ON STAGE IN INDIANA.

Presidential Bee Buzzing in Governor's Bonnet.

Taggart Laying Wires to Hurt Marshall's Boom.

Late Boss Fears Elimination from State Game.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS (Ind.) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] One of the most peculiar political plays that has ever been staged in Indiana is now attracting the attention of both parties and those not directly interested are wondering whether the play will proceed to the end as comedy or terminate in tragedy.

The chief actors are Thomas Taggart, United States Senator Kern, Gov. Marshall and Sam Ralston, but Gov. Wilson of New Jersey and Gov. Harmon of Ohio may be seen in the shadows of the stage setting and are expected to advance to the footlights in the near future. It is then that the comedy may change to tragedy.

Certain facts have been brought prominently forward in the first act in order that the audience may understand what follows. Gov. Marshall is a candidate for the Presidential nomination and his friends are anxious to have a solid delegation for him. Mr. Taggart believes that it is the purpose of the Governor to eliminate Mr. Taggart from Indiana politics and he knows that a Presidential nomination would enable the Governor to accomplish this absolutely.

Mr. Taggart is therefore for Gov. Harmon of Ohio as a first choice, but would prefer Gov. Wilson of New Jersey to the Indiana man. His object is to muddle the situation as much as possible, knowing that Marshall only can suffer from a seeming division in Indiana. As Taggart's opposition is open and notorious, the Governor does not conceal his knowledge of it and at numerous conferences with his friends charges Taggart with being the head and front of the opposition and warns his friends against the machinations of the late political boss.

Triple Motive.

IS COMING BACK WITH A LAWYER.

DENVER BANKER'S WIFE ABANDONS TRIP ABROAD.

Alleged [illegible] of Murder of Aviator Von [illegible] Is Said to Be Anxious About [illegible] of Henwood, Charged With Manslaughter—May Seek Reconciliation.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DENVER, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Isabel Patterson Springer, against whom divorce proceedings were instituted Monday by John W. Springer, banker and property owner, will return to this city not later than Monday, accompanied by a nurse and a Chicago attorney whom she has engaged to represent her.

In returning to Denver instead of traveling abroad as was planned, Mrs. Springer is actuated by three motives. Chief among these is her desire to help Frank Henwood, who is to be placed on trial in the criminal court on June 19 for killing S. L. Von Phul and George E. Copeland on May 24. Reconciliation with Mr. Springer and the withdrawal of the divorce suit or a financial settlement and a non-contested trial are the other motives. For this purpose she has retained a prominent Chicago attorney to represent her in Denver, and he will accompany her here.

Mrs. Springer left Denver for Chicago shortly after the shooting in the Brown Palace Hotel bar, when Von Puhl and Copeland were killed by Henwood. The shock attendant upon the death of one friend and the imprisonment of another on the chareg of manslaughter, are said to have affected her greatly, and she was sent away in charge of a trained nurse.

The Frank Henwood killed Sylvester Louis (Tony) Von Puhl because Von Puhl would not surrender to Henwood letters from Mrs. John W. Springer to Von Puhl, which Mrs. Springer had asked Henwood to recover, is the basis of the charge made by Mrs. Marie Kimbrough, sister of Von Puhl, in an interview today.

"Mrs. Springer had determined to get the letters at any cost," Mrs. Kimbrough charges, and so firm is she in her belief that her brother was lured to death in Denver that she has employed former Judge Harvey, one of the best lawyers of Missouri, to assist in the prosecution of Henwood.

SLUGGERS JUMP BAIL BOND.

Chicago Police Hunt in Vain for Unionites Under Indictment for Crimes in Recent Troubles.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Coupled with the rumor that an indictment charging Maurice Enright, leader of the slugging crew, with the murder of Vincent Altman and William Gentleman, has been voted by the grand jury today, a sensation was caused in police circles when it was reported that five of the seven sluggers indicted Friday on the charge of assault with attempt to murder and making threats to kill, had disappeared.

Four of the five men that are missing are already out on heavy bonds on charges of conspiracy. When the indictments were voted Friday on new charges, Inspector Hunt immediately detailed Detectives Sergeants Savage, Berry, McMullen and Burns to rearrest them. An all-night search of the former haunts of the men as well as their homes failed to reveal their whereabouts and the police concluded they had fled the city.

This caused Inspector Hunt to detail all of his available detectives in the search for the men. Those who are said to have disappeared are Walter Stevens, John McCabe, "Red" Connors, Joseph Kane and Edward Storgaard. Stevens is now out on bonds of $18,000, while Connors, McCabe and Kane were released from the County Jail Wednesday on bonds of $8000 each.

BIG WEEK FOR THE BOYS.

More than 150 hustling and energetic boys have enrolled for The Times Catalina Camp since last Sunday, and are now working hard to secure the six new subscriptions to The Daily and Sunday Times, which will entitle them to go.

This swells the total number of boys now actively working for this great encampment trip to over 500.

Last week was the banner one, both in the amount of business secured, and the number of boys completing their scores.

There has been provision made for a thousand more, so there is plenty of room and time for others to begin work and enjoy their vacation at The Times camp.

A force of carpenters will begin construction on the camp tomorrow morning, laying floors for the tents, building the kitchen, dining-room and bathrooms, and getting everything in "ship-shape" for the grand opening, which will be on Saturday, June 24, at which time everything will be in readiness to serve dinner upon the arrival of the steamship Cabrillo, which will carry each of The Times' parties to the island.

Get busy; win this trip! Six subscriptions to The Times will do it. Open to every boy within sixty-five miles of Los Angeles.

AUTO THIEVES GROW BOLD.

Chicago Police Reports Show Over Hundred Cars Stolen by Joy Riders In Space of Three Months.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Police reports today showed that 136 automobiles have been stolen in Chicago within ninety days. This startling number of thefts has spurred owners and auto enthusiasts of the city to renewed activity to capture the auto thieves.

Prosecutions have been few, because of the fact that the owners have been lenient in the past, but they are now adopting more severe measures to stop the mania for stealing autos.

This class of thieves is growing bolder than ever. At one establishment along Automobile Row, a car was taken out during the night, fuel taken on, the door locked after the car was removed and all this time the place was under the vigilance of watchmen every hour.

Many cars are stolen from the curbs, in front of residences and clubs. Joy riding and the desire for it is one of the principal causes for the thefts, say the police.

OLD FEUD REOPENED.

Oklahoma Youth Shoots and Kills Man Who Nine Years Ago Murdered His Father.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MARIETTA (Okla.) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The second death from a feud dating from the days when Southern Oklahoma was a borderland came Saturday afternoon when Charles Liddell, about 20 years old, shot and killed George Hancock, 50 years old.

Nine years ago Hancock shot and killed Liddell's father, also named Charles, in Thackerville, this county. Liddell was standing in a livery stable on a side street with a rifle near him when Hancock appeared walking toward the stable. Liddell picked up his rifle and waited until Hancock was twenty-seven steps from him, then stepped into the street and, throwing up his rifle, started firing.

Aiding Nature.

ARTIFICIAL HAND AT MASS.

POPE GRANTS DISPENSATION TO AMERICAN PRIEST.

Losing Important Member In Corn Shredding Machine Father Kraszyasky Will Have Two Fingers of Solid Gold With Which to Officiate at Church Ceremony.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Unique dispensation granted by Pope Pius X has made the Rev. John Kraszynsky happy. Through a special favor of the Roman Pontiff he will be permitted to continue to celebrate the sacrifice of the mass. This performance on his part had been impossible because of the loss of his right hand in an accident. By a remarkable mechanical contrivance he will have an artificial right hand and the two fingers which he will use and which are necessary in the ceremony of the mass, will be of gold.

The kindness of Pope Pius X toward American priests and their work was thus brought to light. Through an accident while near a corn shredding machine on the farm of a religious order to which he belongs, Father Kraszynsky lost his right hand. This loss, great as it was to the priest in looking after temporal affairs, did not compare with the greater one which such an accident means to a Roman Catholic priest.

In reply to the petition of the maimed priest, an investigation of the facts under the direction of Archbishop Quigley was ordered by the authorities in Rome and the findings of that inquiry were sent to Pope Pius X who immediately issued the dispensation.

In order to celebrate mass under the laws of the church, a priest must have not only arms, but hands.

William C. Francis of Leland Stanford University was yesterday named by the Columbia University faculty in New York winner of the McKim fellowship. Under the terms, its recipient must spend two years at the American Academy in Rome and in visiting historic European cities.

Railroad Record.

COLORADO FORBIDS TICKET SCALPING.

New Law Now Ready for Signing by the Governor.

Drastic Steps Taken to Choke Off Common Evil.

Another Fruitful Field Closed to Sharp Practice.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DENVER (Colo.) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The recent enactment by the Colorado Legislature of a drastic anti-scalping law is regarded as a death blow to railroad ticket scalping in this State, and it is expected that Gov. John F. Shafroth will make the measure effective within a short time by attaching his signature to the bill.

Colorado, for years, has been a fruitful field for ticket scalpers, many of whom are charged with having resorted to frauds of all descriptions in carrying on their business. Investigators have reported that a number of them have criminal records, and the utmost vigilance has been necessary in order to combat their practice.

The bill that was passed provides in substance that railroad tickets shall be sold only by authorized agents of the carriers, and, further, that unused portions of such tickets must be redeemed by the railroad companies issuing the same.

The fight to put railroad ticket scalpers out of business in Colorado was led chiefly by the Railway Ticket Protective Bureau, of which F. C. Donald of Chicago is chairman and treasurer. This organization has fought scalpers of this kind in all sections of the country, and has succeeded in driving a very large majority of them into other fields of endeavor.

Railway ticket scalping is now prohibited by law in Tennessee, Georgia, Louisiana, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota, Montana, Pennsylvania, Oregon, Washington, Texas and other States.

Revelation.

LUMBER TRUST, AND AIR-TIGHT.

FEDERAL OFFICIALS SAY THEY FOUND ONE IN DETROIT.

Firms Are Alleged to Have Been Fined for Soliciting Business. Parties to Pool Identify One Another by Numbers—Bar to New Companies Entering Field.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DETROIT (Mich.) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The details of an air-tight lumber trust which has held Detroit in its grip several years have just been revealed by investigations of United States government agents. The agreement provides for a dividing and pooling of the lumber business, and a fixed scale of prices. All business must come to the companies. A fine of $25 was provided as a penalty for any firm which solicited business. To make it possible to enforce this penalty or any other that was provided, a large sum of money was deposited as a forfeit for failure to live up to the agreement.

Each firm was allotted a certain amount of business based upon the size of the firm and the total business of the year before. If any firm was guilty of doing more business than was allotted to it, it must pay 10 per cent. of the excess into the general treasury. If some firm fell short of its allotted business, it could draw from the treasury 10 per cent. of its shortage. The total that could be drawn was limited, however, in order to prevent a firm idling away its year and letting the others make its profit for it. There was a general office, which had full power to audit the books of every member of the combine. The combine is alleged to have included every lumber firm in the city. No firm had its name in its books. Instead they were numbered and only the members of the combine knew what each number stood for. It was impossible for an independent firm to begin business, for any manufacturer who dared to haul a car of lumber to a firm not in the trust was boycotted by all the trust firms.

SHOPS TO RUN FULL TIME.

Action of Northern Pacific at South Tacoma Accepted as Sign of Better Conditions.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] As indicating a bettering of railroad conditions, the Northern Pacific will restore full time at the South Tacoma car shops, beginning July 1. This will add several thousand dollars to the payroll each month.

A large amount of equipment will be overhauled and repaired and work that has for some time been needed, but deferred for various reasons, will be taken up.

The possibility of work starting soon on the Point Defiance cut-off of the Northern Pacific, is considered one of the causes for lengthening the hours of work in the car shops.

Fifth Street Store Banquets Man Who Looks After New York End of the Business.

In honor of his first visit to Los Angeles in five years, one of the most elaborate banquets of the season was tendered to Alfred Fantl, New York representative of the Fifth Street Store, by the proprietors, the Muse, Faris and Walker Company, last night. It took place at the Alexandria Hotel.

The hall was decorated with American Beauty roses and other costly blossoms. The menu cards were burned on thin slabs of yacca wood which by some process were rendered as flexible as paper. They were decorated with hand-painted mission scenes and contained the names of the guests, of whom there were seventy-five. Those present were the members of the firm, the heads of the various departments and others.

W. A. Faris presided as toastmaster. Those who responded to toasts were R. M. Walker, Mr. Fantl, F. I. Morris, F. L. Turle, T. C. Palmer, H. Sjostrum, A. McCroquodale, F. R. Campbell, E. C. Stickle, H. A. Heywood, Sam Caskey, L. P. Barrett, H. W. Clatworthy, W. H. Branch and Charles Bask.

LECTURE ON ALASKA.

A large audience greeted Dr. J. H. Johnson, who lectured in Blanchard Hall last night, under the auspices of the Academy of Sciences. The lecture was a profuse picture show of the great glaciers, passes and gold workings of Alaska, accompanied by valuable information gleaned by the lecturer during his trips through the far northern country. This was the last lecture of the Academy for the season, all of which have been pregnant with valuable information, and entirely free to the public.

Old Days Again.

SING HAWAIIAN FEAST CHANTS.

LEI ALOHA SOCIETY OBSERVES ANCIENT HOLIDAY.

Angelenos and Island Natives Participate in Enjoyable Picnic at Echo Park—Toothsome Dainties Are Speard on the Grass—Queer Dances Shown.

"Ha-a— heo ka u—a i—na pa—li,
Ke nihi a-e-la ka-na-he—le
E-ha-ha—i a-na i-ka li—ko.
Pu-a a—hi-hi le-hu-a-u—ka."

If Kamehameha I, declared the greatest of all Hawaiian heroes, could have returned to earth yesterday and witnessed the celebration of the anniversary of his birth, held at Echo Park by the Lei Aloha Society of Los Angeles, he could not have refrained from giving himself a hug. The old national chant was sung by over 200 persons to the tinkle of ukuleles.

Those who participated in the event, which was the first picnic of the society, formed a huge circle and went through many of the maneuvers so lovingly cherished by the Hawaiian natives, one of whose principal holidays Kamehameha Day is.

The party assembled at the park in the afternoon and at 5 o'clock luncheon was served. In true Hawaiian style the picnickers spread their delicacies out upon the lawn, which also served them for a seat. Among those present were not a few native Hawaiians and many Americans who have lived upon the islands a longer or shorter period. Prof. Edward Scoville, who has spent many years there painting the famous volcano crater, was the most enthusiastic of all in the sports. He was so carried away with the delights of the day that he presented several Hawaiian dances. They were burlesques, of course, but none the less enjoyable.

The lawn was decorated with a huge Hawaiian flag and a fish net strung between the trees. The picnickers all wore yellow and black garlands upon their heads, typical of the court decorations of the old regime.

The Lei Aloha Society is a comparatively new organization, and yesterday's affair was the first event of any importance it has enjoyed. St. Clair Bidgood is president, Thomas Southworth, vice-president, and Mrs. Frances K. Headlee, secretary and treasurer. The object of the society is to promote friendship among those of the city who have alike experienced the delights and the disagreeable features of living in Hawaii.

In the language of the natives the words "Lei Aloha," which are a form of greeting, are almost magic in their power. They bring strangers together and cement a bond of friendship. The Los Angeles Hawaiians and Angelenos who have visited Hawaii have chosen the most significent words for the name of their association, and that their potency is not lost, despite the fact that they cannot be literally translated into English, was evidenced by the large crowd which attended the picnic.

STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE.

Stepping From Street Car Directly in Front of Machine, Church Janitor Sustains Fractured Arm.

C. C. Spencer of No. 908 California street, Long Beach, employed as janitor at one of the local Methodist Churches, was knocked down and run over by an automobile at Sixth and Broadway yesterday evening, sustaining a fracture of the left forearm, close to the elbow.

Spencer, an elderly man of frail physique, was alighting from a street car when he stepped in front of an automobile driven by Mrs. J. W. Jacobs of No. 828 West Eightieth street, who was accompanied by her husband and daughter, Miss Grace. The wheels of the automobile passed directly over Spencer who was thought by spectators to have been killed, but when picked up the fractured arm was his most serious injury. He was taken to the Receiving Hospital.

When I was able to get up I was so weak and thin that I could hardly walk. What I ate disagreed with me. I had stomach and liver trouble, and my feet and limbs were swollen so I could scarcely drag around.

"I took Peruna and it has done wonders for me. My cure was a surprise to my friends, for they never expected to see me well again. I just took two bottles of Peruna after doctoring for five months and growing worse all the time."

Get TIZ for your bunions right off, quick. There is no more excuse for suffering the agonizing tortures of bunions. Every box of TIZ is guaranteed to give you complete satisfaction or your money is refunded.

Get TIZ for bunions at once, and get immediate relief. 25c a box at every drug store or sent direct on receipt of price by Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill. Remember the name, TIZ. It's the only remedy of its kind. Is it? Surely "TIZ."

"Sting" of Army Life Is Done Away With

Soldiers at the Presidio No Longer Dread Long Marches.

The feet of the soldier are presumed to be toughened to long drilling and extensive marches. Yet "sore feet" remain one of the bugbears of army life. Heretofore there has been nothing known which would cure this affliction quickly and effectively. Even heavy army shoes seem to offer no preventive for sore feet.

At the Presidio near San Francisco, as well as in many other army posts, the "boys" are using the only remedy which has ever produced immediate and satisfactory results in all foot troubles. This remedy is TIZ.

Roy Newberry, 70th, Co. C., A. R., stationed at the Presidio, writes:

"I am writing you in praise of your remedy for tired and tender feet known as TIZ. Being a soldier and having a great deal of marching to do I find a great deal of relief in using the tablets. All the boys are beginning to use it."

If TIZ is good for the soldier, who uses his feet a great deal, it is good for all who use their feet less—for you and for everybody else.

TIZ is for tender, sore, blistered, chafed, raw, tired, sweaty, smelly feet, and for corns, callouses and bunions. It is guaranteed. Sold at all druggists for 25c a box.

Policemen's Feet Now In Clover

Tiz Makes Sore Feet Well, no Matter What Ails Them.

Policemen all over the world use TIZ. Policemen stand on their feet all day and know what sore, tender, sweaty, swollen feet really mean. They use TIZ because TIZ cures their feet right up. It keeps feet in perfect condition. Read what this policeman has to say: "I was surprised and delighted with TIZ for tender feet. I hardly know how to thank you enough for it. It's superior to powders or plasters. I can keep my feet in perfection condition. Believe in my earnest gratitude for TIZ. I am a policeman and keep on my feet all day."—Emry Harrell, Austin, Texas.

You never tried anything like TIZ before for your feet. It is different from anything ever before sold.

TIZ is not a powder. Powders and other foot remedies clog up the pores. TIZ draws out all poisonous exudations which bring up soreness of the feet, and is the only remedy that does. TIZ cleans out every pore and glorifies the feet—your feet.

You'll never limp again or draw up your face in pain and you'll forget about your corns, bunions and callouses. You'll feel like a new person.

TIZ is sold at 25c a box at all druggists, or sent direct by the manufacturers, Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill., on receipt of price.

Stand On Your Feet All Day?

Follow Mrs. Carter's Example. Here It Is.

From Jamestown, N. Y., Mrs. Carter, a well-known hair-dresser of that place, says:

"I must write and tell you how perfectly wonderful my family and I think TIZ to be. I am a hair-dresser and stand on my feet continually. I suffered more than [illegible] can tell.

"I used one box of TIZ and found relief. Used another and I have found so much comfort. Thanks to you and TIZ. Thought it no more than my duty to tell you how very wonderful and soothing I have found TIZ."

If you stand on your feet much or little, TIZ will make your feet feel like a June morning all day long, every day. You'll never have sore feet. For any foot trouble use TIZ, 25c at all drug stores.

Powders Of No Avail

Powders merely make the feet slip easily into the shoe. In their very nature, they cannot cure. TIZ, being a tablet dissolved in water and used as a foot-bath, gets the poisons out of the pores—the poison of tiredness which makes the feet sick. This is what J. C. Hunter, of Mt. Lebanon, Pa., says:

"Having been troubled with corns and callouses, I used a powder supposed to be very good for such ailments, but to no avail. The druggist being a personal friend of mine, induced me to try "TIZ." I have not been troubled since. You are at liberty to use this letter if you wish."

Don't use what it ain't
If it ain't what it TIZ
Only one thing does the biz;
If it isn't what it am not
Den it am not what it TIZ!

O! My Poor Feet! Get Me A Box of TIZ, Quick!

My Feet Feel As Though They Were All "Shot Up."

Neighbors Say TIZ Acts Instantly.

"Talk about the seven wonders of the world," said the lady who had tried TIZ, "why, TIZ beats them all. It would put life into an Egyptian mummy, and make him feel like a flying dervish after walking miles barefooted on the hot sands. Nobody could have feet in worse condition than I had them. Bunions like big tree knots. Soft corns that pained me way up to my heart. Hard corns that felt as though some one was driving a gimlet into my feet. Blisters from the wrinkle in the lining of my shoe. Raw spots on the soles of my feet.

"I Really Believe They Have Feet Like These In Heaven. TIZ Is Foot-Heaven On Earth.

It's funny how people who are supposed to have sense will allow their feet to get into such a condition. Still, I've tried lots of things for my feet, but as I didn't believe anything could cure them I went at it in a half-hearted way.

"I finally tried TIZ. Everybody was talking about it, and every advertisement I read about it seemed to have the ring of truth in it. I can say now, TIZ does work which is really hard to realize until you have tried it.

"Now I feel as though I could just hug my feet from joy. All bunions, corns, sore spots and blisters gone! That's many weeks ago and my feet feel heavenly. It's magic, no question about it."

TIZ is the greatest foot-remedy known since folks began to wear shoes. It is guaranteed. It comes in tablets, and is used in a foot-bath. At all druggists, 25c a box. Remember the name, TIZ.

Needn't Wear Big Shoes to Ease Your Feet.

TIZ Stops Swelling and Tenderness.

There are thousands of people who are compelled to wear large shoes because of swelling and tenderness of their feet.

When the feet swell and become tender, it means that the skin is choked with poisonous secretions which must be eliminated before the normal condition of the feet is restored.

TIZ is the only foot remedy which operates upon the principle of bringing out all the poisonous exudations that cause the great majority of foot troubles.

Its result has been called magic by thousands of users. If you wear shoes larger than your regular size, because your feet are sore or swollen, just buy a box of TIZ today and start in.

You will find the swelling will disappear, all pain and tenderness will cease and you will be able to wear shoes that fit you. In fact, many users of TIZ state that they are able to wear smaller shoes than they ever wore before.

TIZ at all druggists at 25c a box. Use it for any foot trouble, and corns, callouses and bunions. You will marvel at its action. It's guaranteed.

Fettered To Fetid Feet For 20 Years

What Just One Box of TIZ Can Do.

The remarkable power of TIZ in ridding the feet of excessive perspiration, bad odor and corns, is illustrated in the experience of G. M. Griffin of Carrton, Miss., who writes:

"I would like to recommend to any sufferer of sore, tired, or bad-smelling feet, your TIZ. I was a sufferer for 20 years; tried everything imaginable or that anyone would tell me. Nothing did good except TIZ.

"Before using one box I found the difference. My feet were so bad I was honestly ashamed to take my shoes off. When I used one box, the sweating was stopped. I would not be without TIZ now for anything in this world. It was not only tired and sweaty feet, but they were full of corns. Give me TIZ all the time. Nothing one earth like it. May God bless the one who thought of TIZ."

TIZ operates under a scientific principle which has to do with all foot troubles. Civilization brought us shoes, and with shoes it brought a catalog of every kind of foot-misery imaginable. Pressure, friction, rubbing, pinching, chafing, jamming, squeezing and sealing-up of the feet are the damages we pay.

But civilization has also brought us TIZ. 25c can make two lovely feet luxuriate where two distorted, painful pegs stumped around before.

TIZ snuffs out all foot troubles. It comes in tablets which are used in a foot-bath. One trial will make you realize why the whole country is going wild over this discovery. Try it. 25c a box. Your money back, if not satisfied. Buy it of any druggist, or sent on receipt of price by Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Four Feet of Glory

And Yet The Glory They Feel Cannot Be Measured.

Look at these two contented people. A few minutes ago they had four feet of misery. He had been on his feet all day, and his feet were chafed and almost raw. She had been shopping for several hours and her corns and narrow shoes drove her almost wild with pain and misery. Their agony is now all over forever, because they are using TIZ, the most remarkable remedy for all foot troubles ever compounded. Everybody that tries it says it is.

Are your feet tired, sweaty, sore, chafed, aching, smelly or swollen. Have you blisters or raw spots; corns, callouses or bunions?

Don't wonder that TIZ cures all these troubles; it acts on a new principle. It is not a powder. It draws out all the poisonous exudations from the feet pores. Powders can't do it. So get TIZ.

TIZ comes in tablets. It takes but a few minutes to use. It acts instantly. You'll pity other people's feet when TIZ gives you a vigorous, glorious pair of your own. TIZ is sold at all druggists at 25c a box, or sent direct, on receipt of price by Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Illinois, Sole Manufacturers.

Lined Up By Police Officer

Can't Help Telling Others the Good News About TIZ for Tender Feet.

From Saugus, Mass., Frank W. Joy sends the following letter, showing what real merit does for TIZ.

"I write to tell you the benefit I have received from the use of TIZ. All through the long, hot, dry spell of weather my feet burned and ached something terrible. I was told of your tablets by a Boston Police Officer, who said they are the best thing made for sore feet.

"I got a box and used them and my feet are in very good shape now. After using the box, I recommended them to several Electric R. R. men and they say they are great. I consider they are a god-send to any one that has to be on their feet a great deal. I should not try to get along without them in my house. I use them once or twice a week now and have no trouble with my feet. I will gladly recommend them to any one having burning or aching feet."

Don't wait until some policeman tells you about TIZ. Try it yourself and experience the wonderful relief. TIZ at all druggists, 25c a box.

Corns As Big As a Dime

Plasters and Powders Fail. TIZ Will Rid You of All Corns.

Say good-bye to your corns the very first time you use TIZ. You will never know you have a corn, bunion or callous, or sweaty, tired, swollen, aching feet any more. It's just wonderful the way the pain vanishes. Rub the corn—hammer it with your fist if you wish—no more pain after TIZ than if there had never been any trouble with your feet. Doesn't that sound good to you? Doesn't it? Then read this:

"The corns on either of my toes were as large as the tablets you make to cure them. Today there is no sign of corns on either foot and no soreness. It's an up-to-date godsend."—Sam. A. Hoover, Progress, N. C.

TIZ is sold at all druggists at 25c a box.

A Good Samaritan

Treats His Friends to Boxes of TIZ.

"Enclosed please find postal order for one dollar, for which please send me five boxes of TIZ.

"I would freely pay $5.00 a box for your tablets rather than not have them. My corns had troubled me for fifteen years, tried every corn cure could hear of but got no relief until I got TIZ. Five days after I commenced using the tablets I could wear a shoe with ease. I cannot too highly recommend them. Those five boxes are for other parties."

The above is a letter from I. N. Parkinson of Lisbon, N. D. TIZ did him so much good, he bought some for his friends. He suffered fifteen years with corns, and in five days they were practically gone. You can do it, too. Get TIZ at any druggist, at 25c a box. For any foot trouble remember the name, TIZ.

Feet So Sore, Could Not Walk Down Stairs

The First Box of TIZ Will Mean the End of Your Foot Troubles.

If you have sore feet, tired feet, sweaty feet, lame feet, tender feet, smelly feet, corns, callouses or bunions, read what happened to Mrs. Crocket, of Jeffersonville. TIZ did it. Mr. Crocket says: "After the second treatment she walked downstairs one foot at a time. She has not been able to walk downstairs before in past five years, except by stepping down on each step with one foot at a time. This is remarkable. Send five more boxes."

Here is another victim of swollen feet: "I had a very bad case of tired and swollen feet and suffered a long time intense pains. I used soaps and oil in vain. After that I tried your TIZ and the first evening felt much relieved. I used it three weeks and now I am radically cured. I am thankful for your remedy and will recommend it to my friends."—H. P. Hop, 86 22nd Ave., Paterson, N. J.

No matter what ails your feet or what under heaven you have used without getting relief, just use TIZ. It's different. It acts right off. It cures sore feet to stay cured. It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all the poisonous exudations which cause sore feet. Powders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. TIZ cleans them out and keeps them clean. You will feel better the first time it's used.

TIZ is sold at all druggists at 25c a box, or sent on receipt of price by Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Forgot His Feet

The following is a story of gratitude from John Jeffers, 201 W. 40th St., Sanford, N. C. TIZ made good; and now he is doing TIZ good. Here is his own story:

"I am forced to write this to you to recommend your sure and perfect remedy, TIZ. I have suffered ever since I have been buying my own shoes, with corns, bunions and sore feet. So I asked for the best remedy and was given TIZ. After useing one box I have really forgotten my feet as though I never suffered with sore feet.

"When any one around me complains of sore feet I preach TIZ to him and today I can say I am a happy man.

"I wish you would use my name and at once recommended TIZ. It is the soul and heart of comfort and with everybody that has anything the matter with their feet I recommend the use of your wondrous remedy. I never was 2 hours without thinking of my feet before I used TIZ, but now I only think of my feet when I need a pair of shoes. I will preach it at home and abroad.

"I am a happy man today with my feet. I will write anyone concerning TIZ."

Do People Read Advertisements?

No man can make a big success in advertising his product unless it "makes good." It must have merit. Some things are advertised for a time and then fade from sight. The goods do not "make good" the claims made for it.

TIZ is now known from coast to coast, in every big city and in every town and hamlet in America. It has paid its own way, because it had the merit back of it. It pleases the people; it astonishes them.

As an instance, we quote the following letter from Mrs. J. F. Eberspacker, Smethport, Pa.

"A short time ago I saw in the Buffalo Evening News about "TIZ" for all troubles of the feet. I at once sent for a box to Faxon & Williams. And I can truthfully say I never received so much benefit from an article in so short a time."

"My feet are nearly cured. Our Post Mistress came to me a few mornings ago to see if I kept TIZ to sell, for she was nearly wild with her feet."

You can depend upon the results which TIZ will give you in all cases of foot trouble, whether your feet are tender, swollen, aching, chafed, blistered or tired, or whether you have corns, callouses or bunions.

TIZ is sold at all druggists at 25 cents a box, or sent direct on receipt of price by Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Sore Feet? Never After Using TIZ

Acts Instantly on Sore, Swollen, Sweaty, Aching, Smelly Feet, Corns, Callouses and Bunions.

Greatest Foot Remedy Ever Discovered. Nothing on earth can beat TIZ for sore, aching, tired, swollen, bad smelling, sweaty, all-in feet. It gives instant relief and is a permanent remedy for anything that's the matter with your feet.

When you shamble your feet along, and it seems as though all the misery you ever had has settled in your feet, think of the happy little girl in the picture. You can be happy-footed just the same.

"TIZ Is a Jewel, If There Ever Was One."

If you have corns and bunions that everybody seems to step on, just think of this little girl: she had corns and bunions too. Now she is skipping around lively in her bare feet. Her heart is light; so are her feet.

"TIZ" has captured the whole country. It is a scientific surprise, a marvel. You will say so yourself after you have used it just once, yes, just once, the first time. "TIZ" is not merely a foot-powder, not at all. "TIZ" is a permanent remedy, a cure, a blessed instantly instantaneous relief for whatever ails the feet.

If your feet are tired, sore, swollen, sweaty, or if they ache or are chafed anywhere, or your corns, bunions or callouses are crucifying you with pain, just use "TIZ." It turns the feet into poetry.

"TIZ" has no equal. It beats powders, salves or plasters.

Smaller shoes can be worn by using TIZ because it puts and keeps the feet in perfect condition.

TIZ is not a powder. Powders and other foot remedies clog up the pores. TIZ draws out all poisonous exudations which bring on soreness of the feet and is the only remedy that does.

It stops pain and aches at once, and will make you forget about your corns, bunions and callouses.

If you don't find all this true, after trying a box of TIZ, you can get your money right back.

TIZ is for sale at all druggists at 25 cents per box, or it will be sent you direct if you wish from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

How Long Have You Had Corns?

A User of TIZ, Who Had Corns All Her Life, Marvels At This Remedy.

Let Mrs. M. J. Borden of Meers, S. D., tell her own story:

"Enclosed find 25c for which send me one box of "TIZ" for tender feet. I used one box last summer and I never knew such comfort with my feet. I have had corns all my life, and they are all cured but one, and I will cure that one with TIZ if it works like the other box did. You can use this as a testimonial, for it is the truth."

How Long Do YOU Keep On YourFeet?

Blessed Relief From TIZ for Weary Workers.

Ten hours a day on sore feet, and ten houres of misery, was the daily routine of J. K. Eckert, 557 Warsaw St., Lancaster, Pa. He tried TIZ. Now it is ten hours a day on fine feet, and ten hours of comfort. Here is what he says:

"I have tried one box of your TIZ, and it has given me so much relief! I cannot help writing to you. I stand in a factory ten hours a day, and my feet have been so tired and sore I could hardly walk home. I have tried everything and all failed but TIZ!

The following is from a storekeeper, Mr. W. Abrams, 1638 S. 9th St., Philadelphia, Pa., who suffered for 3 years, and tried 75 different cures, all in vain. He writes:

"I thought I would write to you to let you know that I suffered with sore feet for about 3 years and I have tried about 75 different cures but did not get any relief. I was told to get a box of your TIZ.

"I tried your remedy once, and had great relief. About the second time I used it, I hadn't any pain in my feet. I keep a store and have to be on my feet a whole lot. The reason I write this is because I think when you use a remedy that gives you relief it is a duty to inform you. I have told everybody about TIZ when they complain about sore feet."

Don't wait 3 years, nor try 75 different cures before you try TIZ. It is the only one that extracts the poisonous exudations which cause sore and tender feet and foot afflictions. At all druggists, 25c a box.

Three Times, And Out

How Denver Man Cured Blistered Feet.

H. N. Camp, 1351 Fox St., Denver, Colo., could scarcely walk. One 25c box of TIZ cured him. Here is his own story:

"I had been troubled with my feet for years when at last they became so tender that I could scarcely walk. Upon examination, I found they were blistered on the bottoms.

"I tried everything I could think of but could obtain no relief. Finally I decided to try 'TIZ.' I bought a box and used it three times. Now my feet give me no trouble at all. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. It saved me from becoming a cripple and whenever I have an opportunity to recommend it, I shall be glad to do so."

There's no more excuse for any foot trouble, when TIZ is at your disposal. Try a box today, and see how perfectly "lovely" your feet will feel. TIZ at all drug stores; 25c a box.

Chiropodist Takes the Money; Corns Come Back.

Foolish To Spend Money To Have Your Corns Gouged Out.

Following the example of Mrs. Edward Searson, of St. Louis, Mo. She writes about TIZ as follows:

"In regard to your advertisement in the St. Louis Post Dispatch about TIZ for sore feet. Well, I certainly can recommend it better than anything I ever tried.

"I have spent many dollars at the chiropodist's to have the corns and callouses taken out. I only used one box of TIZ and my feet felt like new ones. My feet hurt me so bad that I could hardly walk a block with any kind of shoes. Now I can put my shoes on and keep them on all day and they never feel as though I have any shoes on. I can certainly recommend TIZ to anybody who suffers with sore feet."

TIZ is for sale at all druggists, 25c per box or direct, if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

TIZ Enthusiasm

From the flood city of Johnstown, Pa., comes a flood of enthusiasm from one of its citizens, Albert B. Petrikn, 208 Hickory St. He writes:

"Honor to whom honor is due. For 40 years I have been a great sufferer from twisted sore feet, the large toe joints being ossified.

"Saw an advertisement for TIZ. Twenty-five cents now goes where five hundred 25c pieces went before during 40 years of strenuous life. I am grateful that I ever saw the name of TIZ. Viva TIZ! Some day I will do TIZ as good a turn as it has done for me. Use this as you may see fit."

Dreutzer, Chicago.

A Scientific Marvel

Works Instantly On All Foot Troubles

"Don't Hesitate, TIZ Surely Does The Work"
TIZ

Acts On A New Principle

Money Back If Not Satisfactory

GOOD-BYE sore feet; tender, swollen, chafed, shoe-pinched, raw, tired feet; sweaty, bad smelling feet. TIZ ends it all forever.

GOOD-BYE hard and soft corns, callouses and bunions. TIZ rids the feet of all painful growths in a most wonderful manner without any trouble.

TIZ is not a powder or a plaster, both of which cover up the pores of the feet. In all cases of foot soreness, the pores must be opened and the poisonous accumulations which bring on all sorts of foot afflictions must be drawn out.

This is what TIZ does. It does it in a wonderful way. It gets the tiredness right out; it purifies the pores so that all tenderness, rawness, etc., is driven away completely and rapidly. Nothing in the world can do it but TIZ. If you have tried other things, and then try TIZ, you will say exactly the same thing.

Besides being a wonder in dispelling all foot-soreness, blisters and tenderness, TIZ is remarkably effective in ridding the feet of corns, callouses and bunions. It is simplicity itself. There are no bandages; no cutting, no gouging to do. Just dissolve TIZ in water and use it as a foot-bath. The results will more than bear out the most enthusiastic statements ever made about it.

If your feet sweat a great deal, or have a bad odor which nothing you have tried has ever destroyed, just begin using a box of TIZ and it will surprise you. Stop all foot-misery, and begin using TIZ at once.

TIZ gives the feet a relaxed freshness that is positively glorious. It makes them able to withstand hard work. You will be able to walk far, even in tight shoes, feeling sure that your feet will "hold out" indefinitely. We want you to be satisfied. If you are not, you are entitled to your money back.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

Pasadena.

REVERED WOMAN IS KISSED BY DEATH.

Life Ends As Result of An Operation.

Was An Authority on State's Early History.

Committee Coming Over to Talk Good Roads

(Office of The Times, 26 S. Raymond avenue.)

PASADENA, June 11.—Mrs. Arturo Bandini, an early pioneer, author and noble character, died, early yesterday morning, at her home, No. 1149 San Pasqual street, from the effects of an operation performed some time ago. She was 57 years old. Before her marriage, many years ago to Arturo Bandini, of an old and respected Spanish family, one of the first to occupy California, she was Miss Helen Elliott, daughter of Dr. Elliott, one of the early settlers in Pasadena, then called the "Indiana Colony." In fact, Dr. Elliott had the honor of naming the little village "Pasadena."

When she first came to Pasadena, Mrs. Bandini was a young girl. For several years, she attended the village schools and grew up a daughter of the city. From her girlhood, she ever took an active part in all civic matters, and, especially, with everything which tended to build up the city. She was a member of several culture clubs, and has been an active member of the Shapespeare Club since its inception.

Mrs. Bandini has been a contributor to magazines and local papers for many years. Her history of California is one of the best works extant on California lore. No better informed person on early history lived in Pasadena than Mrs. Bandini. She was always depended on for some contribution at all the annual celebrations of the Pioneers' Society, and she was the court of last appeal on everything connected with the early history of Southern California. For many years, she has been particularly interested in looking after and caring for the Indians of Southern California, and nearly every reform in that direction is accredited to her.

Her's was a familiar figure at every notable function, whether of state or society, and she was never reluctant in serving on any committee which was prompted by noble motives.

She was the mother of two sons, Ralph and Elliott Bandini, both of whom survive her. In addition she is survived by a widower, her mother, a sister, Mrs. Arthur Ayers, and a brother, Whittier Elliott. The funeral will be held from the family residence in San Pasqual street, at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon.

VAMOS POR PARLEY.

Tomorrow morning a delegation of prominent citizens picked from the Board of Trade, Realty Board, and various improvement associations will go to Los Angeles, where they will have a conference with notables of the Chamber of Commerce, members of the Automobile Club and Good Roads Committee with the hope that a joint effort may be brought about, whereby first-class boulevards may be built and maintained between Pasadena and Los Angeles.

While hundreds of thousands of dollars are being spent on county boulevards and like amounts of money are being spent by the two cities in question improving boulevards, within their own confines, nothing whatever has been done to improve the arteries from one city to the other, over which there is a heavier travel, than over any other road in Southern California.

This feature of Southern California's shortcomings was commented on more than all the others last winter during the heavy tourist season. "You have fixed up everything else and left the most important until the last," was a very common exclamation among the visitors who came here with automobiles to spend the winter. For a year mutterings have been heard on all sides deploring the frightful condition of the roads between Pasadena and Los Angeles. The Pasadena merchants were charged with having stood in the way in order to prevent trade going to the larger city, but such charges were without foundation. Many times threats have been made to go to Los Angeles and make a personal appeal to the large retail merchants of that city, and tell them of the additional trade they would get by having the roads improved.

The new directors of the Board of Trade have taken the matter up and state they will have the thoroughfares improved forthwith.

The committee will prod the Pasadena city officials and County Highway Commissioners in an effort to have the new Colorado street-Arroyo Seco bridge completed as soon as possible. This latter bridge will open two most excellent boulevards into the center of Los Angeles as well as to the beaches.

Tomorrow's parley is expected to bring about good results not only with respect to getting the roadways between the two cities put in order, but it is hoped that the committee may become a big inter-municipal civic good roads commission whose paramount object will be to watch over and protect good roads between municipalities in Southern California.

WHERE IS REWARD?

George Decker, a musician and member of the Crown City band, is wondering where his reward money is coming from for laying the trap and capturing Angelino Capello, the Italian wanted in Salida, Colo., last winter. Capello was a member of the Gregory band which furnished the municipal music last winter. He had been indicted by a Colorado grand jury of larceny in stealing some musical instruments. A warning notice was sent broadcast through a musical journal. Decker saw the notice and immediately recognized Capello as the man wanted. After capturing his man Decker notified the police, who arrested the Italian. Later Capello was taken back to Salida by an officer from that city. That happened away back last January. At the time of the arrest Decker told Chief of Police Wood that he would expect to get the $25 reward offered for the capture of Capello but the head of the police department said the best Decker could expect would be half the money; that it was customary in such cases to give the police making the arrest half the money. Decker protested and, it is said, Wood was firm. So far Decker has received nothing and is unable to find out whether any money has ever been received by the Pasadena police department.

HUBBY'S RIGHT IS DEFINED.

He May Look Through Window at His Wife if He Pays the Rent on House.

LONG BEACH, June 10.—A man has a perfect right to look through a window at his wife, was the ruling of Justice Underwood today, when C. W. Klett was before him on a peace disturbance charge. The evidence showed that Klett spied upon his wife through a window, and, being detected by her, asked the aid of the neighbors, and Klett was driven away and later arrested. Klett proved that he was paying the rent of the house, and had a right to be on the premises, and in this Justice Underwood concurred and dismissed the case.

THROOP TEACHERS.

It has been definitely announced that the Board of Education will retain practically the entire Throop Academy faculty as teachers for the new Polytechnic High School next year when the Board of Education will lease the old Throop Academy buildings and absorb the school. Prof. C. E. Durrell, who was dean of Throop during the past year, will be retained in the same capacity, only his title will be changed to that of "Principal of Poly High. There will be practically no change in the course of study.

START CLUB BUILDINGS.

Both the Elks' Home and the Altadena Country Club buildings were begun yesterday morning. The former building will be located on West Colorado street, on the brow of the hill, Matthew Slavin, contractor, and will cost $50,000, while the latter will be built at the corner of Mendosa street and Hill avenue, Altadena, McDowell & Loeach, contractors, and will cost $15,000. Unless the witch who invented the ill-omen signs seeks to interfere and impose her toll, Pasadena will have two beautiful clubs before the winter tourists come to bask in Southern California sunshine.

Week of Class Frivolity Ends With a Banquet, at Which Each Graduate Makes a Talk.

EL MONTE, June 10.—Commencement week at El Monte Union High School closed with the alumni banquet at Cave's Hall tonight, at which covers were laid for 100 guests. The hall was artistically decorated in the senior class colors by the committee of which Miss Beatrice Everett is chairman.

Misses E. Anderson, M. Harrington and Mrs. Annie McMichael compose the Refreshment Committee, and the programme is in charge of Miss Bertha Barron.

Commencement exercises included a class day programme Thursday, and commencement programme Friday evening, and passed off in a highly satisfactory manner. The graduating class was the largest in the history of the school, and comprises twenty girls and seven boys.

Each member contributed a short oration, limited to five minutes, or a vocal or piano number.

The music for both evenings was furnished entirely by the class, assisted by the boys' and girls' glee clubs of the school, which are largely composed of seniors.

Following are the names of the graduates: Helen Adams, Opal Everett, Charles Barton, Mary Clinton, Vivian Forst, Zerelda Freer, Bernice Lantz, Dale Cross, Olin Comstock, Hilda Haddox, Morgan Silver, Carl Throckmorten, Florence Willits, Walter Nelson, Lois Choate, Eva Cowan, Viola Fastenan, Matie Fowler, Belle Adams, Helen Rhoades, Ruth Freer, Stanley Hicks, Edward Hammil, Ada Mayes, Alice Reed, Olive Sander, Nora Willis.

VENICE.

VENICE, June 10.—Just as soon as the members of the newly-created Board of Education of the Ocean Park-Playa del Rey Union High School district receive their certificates of election they will meet for the purpose of discussing the project of calling a bond election. The purpose of this is to raise funds for acquiring a site and erecting a polytechnic building, unless it should be determined to convert the City Hall at Tokyo into a school and build a new City Hall on Windward avenue. Whatever the plans may be, the ambition of the new district is to have the proposed High School equipped and in operation by the opening of the next school year, if possible.

Long Beach.

NEW ANGLE TO THE SCHOOL ROW.

TENDENCY EVIDENT TO MAKE MATTERS WORSE.

Youngster Appears Before Board of Education and Demands a Statement of the Legal Rights of Himself and Class Members. Board Labors Long Over It.

LONG BEACH, June 10.—The question raised by Father Reardon, a Catholic priest, with the school board regarding the delivery of the baccalaureate sermon by a Protestant minister in a Protestant church, and which the board sought to compromise by changing the place of delivery to the Auditorium, took a new angle today when Harry McLean, representing the senior class, appeared at a special meeting of the board and asked just what action had been taken by the board, saying that the class appeared to dislike the interference of the board in what they considered was purely a class function.

He wished to know if the students could be compelled to attend the baccalaureate service if held at the Auditorium and whether the board would take it as contrary action if the class should go ahead with the exercises as they had decided.

The board debated long and earnestly over the matter as to whether the baccalaureate was a class function or part of the official programme of the high school. Member Buffum said he considered the action of the board only a recommendation and not an order. President Haskell not only favored insisting on holding the services in a public hall but wanted assurance in advance from the speaker secured that his address would be non-sectarian. Finally a resolution presented by Member Wallace was adopted which states that if the baccalaureate exercise is to be considered a part of the school programme it shall be held in the Auditorium and addressed by a speaker chosen by the class. This resolution leaves it with the graduating class to say whether or not the service shall be left as a class affair entirely. They will decide upon this Monday and it is forecast that they will vote to leave the baccalaureate off the official programme and will all attend the Methodist Church in a body on Sunday, June 18, and hear the sermon of Rev. Henry Rasmus.

GLENDALE BUILDING LIVELY.

GLENDALE, June 10.—There were twenty-eight building permits issued in this city during the month of May, the valuation of which amounted to $38,080. This is the second largest month in the history of the city and is considerably higher than the second largest month this year, which was April, permits issued during that month amounting to $27,960. The most expensive building erected was a $2500 home. There was nothing in the line of business structures. There were twelve permits of $2000 or better, and seven permits ranging from $1000 to $2000 each.

Several new homes are going up in the Richardson tract. Frank M. Newell, cashier of the Los Angeles branch of the Standard Oil Company, is putting up a $2500 home; J. S. Spence of Los Angeles, connected with the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A., is erecting a $2500 chalet; Frank B. McKinney is putting up a $3000 home. These homes will contain either six or seven rooms each. H. The home of C. B. Franklin at 1424 Ivt street, was sold recently at auction to George E. Adams for the sum of $2300.

An election will be called soon to vote $40,000 bonds for grammar school purposes. It is proposed to purchase two sites costing about $7000 each and to erect two school buildings with the remainder.

SANTA MONICA.

SANTA MONICA, June 10.—The annual oratorical contest held at the High School last night for the Hutton cup was won by William Harrison, whose oration was on "The Beckoning of the Furthest Beacon." Miss Mabel Dunsmore, who was the victor last year, took second honors. Her subject was "A Hope for the Criminal."

EAGLES GIVE A BRILLIANT BALL.

More Than One Thousand People Attend the Affair Given by the Redondo Beach Lodge.

REDONDO BEACH, June 10.—The spacious auditorium of the pavilion was the scene of the largest and most brilliant masquerade in its history last evening when the fifth annual ball of Redondo Aerie No. 935 Fraternal Order of Eagles was held. Weary Willies hobnobbed with stately princes, and charming Japanese ladies, Roman gladiators, Topsy, Sis Hopkins, Mary Jane and Buster Brown all mingled in the dance, regardless of caste or class.

More than 1000 attended the ball and in the grand march, composed of maskers, there were 108 ladies and gentlemen. Cleveland Hoansler, president of the Redondo Aerie, and his lovely wife in gorgeous royal costumes, representing, respectively, an Egyptian Prince and Princess, led the grand march.

About 500 visiting Eagles and ladies were in attendance from Venice, Del Rey, Los Angeles and San Pedro. Sixty people from Venice came in a special car for the event, all of whom were masked.

The committee in charge, who assisted President Hoansler in making the dance a success, were: F. Langer, Gen. F. Ferguson, E. S. Lane, J. T. Martin and George Hultz. The Reception Committee was A. L. Walton, Louis Fields and J. T. Martin.

Prizes amounting to $100 were awarded for the costumes. The winners were: Best-dressed lady, first, Mrs. Cleveland Hoansler; second, Mrs. Charles Maginnis, Los Angeles; best-sustained character, lady, Mrs. Louis Fields; best original character, lady, Miss Ada Gilbert; most comic costume, lady, Miss F. Among the visitors were these prominent Eagles: Judge G. Edwin Brown, C. N. Green, R. P. Hadley, E. S. Dearth of Ocean Park Aerie; Bert Mackley and J. Atchison of San Pedro; C. W. Smith, Del Rey.

Whittier.

HILL CLIMB WAS SPEEDY EVENT.

WHITTIER AUTO RACES A SPECTACULAR SUCCESS.

A Half Dozen Cars Won Honors in the Various Events but Fastest Time Was Made by American Roadster Driven by Frank Pipher. Fast Motorcycle Events.

WHITTIER, June 10.—Thousands of spectators gathered on Greenleaf avenue and the hills around the "hog's back" to witness the automobile race and hill climb held here today.

Twenty automobiles and ten motor cycles were entered in the eight events.

The fast American roadster entered and driven by W. Frank Pipher made the fastest time, covering the course from the foot of Greenleaf avenue to the top of the hill in 2:46. The course along Greenleaf avenue is a fraction less than two miles and that up the "hog's back" a little over half a mile with a grade varying from 6 to 28 per cent.

The cars used in all events except the free-for-all were stock cars; no stripping was allowed. Each car carried its respective weight.

The best time made by any local machine was made by the seven passenger Chalmers 40, entered by A. H. Dunlap and driven by Jim McDill. Time 3:17.

In the third event for 30 horse power touring cars, the Moline entered and driven by Sappington was overtaken and passed by the E. M. F. on the steepest part of the grade. The E.M.F. made two attempts to pass the Moline and was forced to leave the course to do so and finished second.

The race was run over and the E. M. F. finished first, making it in 3:52 2-5.

In the 40 horse power roadster event the Stoddard-Dayton entered and driven by Everet Isabell, made first place in 3:19.

The "free for all" was the most exciting event, some of the cars doing some fancy stunts on the course just before taking the grade. The little Ford driven by George Roe of Santa Ana, was making such fast time when he started up the grade that it left the ground twice and leaped several feet into the air, almost turning a summersault. A cool head is all that saved Roe from sending his car over the high bank into the ditch.

The Stanley steamer which proved up so well in the try-outs was a fizzle and failed to make the top of the hill.

In the motorcycle events Don Johns, who holds the world's record for twenty miles, made the run for motors, a distance of 2 2-5 miles in 2:04 4-5. He rode a seven horse power Indian entered by George Sawaya.

The first event for motorcycles was won by H. L. Triplett with a Harley Davidson belt-driven machine. Time 2:45 1-5. J. C. Wright finished second in 2:57 3-5 with a four horse power Indian.

The second motor event for five and six horse power machines was won by the Indian, entered and driven by Paul Brown. The time was 2:09 1-5.

The flying Merkel, entered by Orrin Gallup and driven by Charles Kirby, took second place, finishing in 2:14 1-5.

Advertising patrons of The Times living in Pasadena can telephone "Want" announcements to local agent or direct to the Los Angeles office. No extra charge will be made for telephone calls. Just ask telephone operator for Times Classified Department. The telephone charge will be paid by The Times and bill mailed for the ad at regular rates. One cent per word daily, 1 1-4 cents Sunday. The Times regularly prints more "Liner" advertisements than the aggregate number printed by all the other Los Angeles papers.

TRAIN TELEPHONING.

British Invention by Which One Moving Train Can Talk With Another One.

The first of a series of tests of a new invention called the "railophone" was recently made at Stratford-on-Avon. The invention is an apparatus to telephone from one moving train to another and from a moving train to stations along the railway.

The belief is expressed by the inventor that his system will accomplish for railways that wireless telegraphy has done for vessels. About eight months ago the first details of this new system of telephoning were published, but since then the scope of the invention has been very greatly increased.

The apparatus begins and ends with a telephone in the train and at certain stations and signal boxes along the line on which the train is traveling. The principle is that of electro-magnetic induction. A coil of wire starting from the telephone in the train is wound about the railway carriage on the outside. Laid under the ground or a few feet above it, parallel with the rails, is another wire connected with the telephones at the stations and signal boxes and from them with the whole telephone system of the country. The vibrations of the voice through the transmitter in the train produce currents in the wire frame round the railway carriage, and these impulses are "inducted" into the stationary ground wire.

If the experiments now being made prove successful the signal boxes and stations on railways can be connected with the general telegraph and telephone systems so that it will be possible to transmit and receive telegrams and telephone messages to and from a moving train. Everybody's Weekly, in speaking of this invention of wireless telephony, predicts:

"It will create a beneficial revolution in railway traffic by making the train the safest as well as the most comfortable means of traveling. As soon as the 'railophone' comes into general use a collision between two trains will practically be an impossibility. Moreover, the difficult art of the signalman will be transformed into a science."

FIRST FORM OF THE PEN.

The Chinese Hair Brush Was the First Known Instrument Used for Writing Purposes.

[Chicago Tribune:] In any large city of this country in the same block, possibly in the same building, can be found in use today the first type of pen and the latest. A fine hair brush was the first instrument used by man for writing purposes. The Chinese laundryman of today marks his tickets and keeps his accounts with a camel's hair pen dipped in ink. Next door probably is a white merchant who uses the latest make of steel pen.

Between the two in the long history of the pen came the reed, then the quill. Steel pens are almost in universal use now and are made by the ton and in increasing volume every year.

Confucius used a hair brush for a pen, and his ancestors for thousands of years before his time. The reed came into use for writing in the marshy countries of the orient. It was hollow and, cut in short lengths with sharpened ends, and was some improvement on the hair pen.

The value of the quill was discovered at an early date in the history of civilization, and its use spread from the east over Europe and then to the New World. Before the day of the metal pen England annually was importing more than 25,000,000 quills for pens. They were from the swans of Iceland, the Irish geese, the geese of the Hudson Bay country, etc.

Eearly in the nineteenth century the metal pen began to be used in England, the first one being one piece of metal for holder and point. The improvement for making the point detachable followed quickly, and to keep the point from being so stiff the sides were slit, as they are today. Steel pens in the early days cost twenty-five cents each; sometimes double that.

LACE COPIED IN STONE.

Queen Victoria's Priceless Gift to Hughenden Church Wrought Into a Stone Copy.

[The Queen:] Throughout his reign King Edward was most assiduous in carrying out any wishes of his mother that she did not live to fulfill. This was especially the case where her own personal belongings were concerned. Among these in the earlier part of his reign the King discovered some valuable lace done up with special care, and directions concerning it in Queen Victoria's own handwriting. He at once saw that the gift was dispatched with a few words of his own added to those of his mother.

It is of interest, with Lord Beaconsfield's name so much to the fore, to know that the priceless lace was a present to Hughenden Church. So great is its value that it led to a unique proceeding on the part of the Bowen quickly gave up his watch and $6.10 in money.

SAN BERNARDINO, June 10.—The clash of interests claiming the big lime deposits in Cajon Pass, which led to armed resistance on the part of Orlis Kennedy and his associates, was brought to a head today by the filing of a damage suit against Kennedy, Francisco B. Luna and Joseph W. Curtis, and for restitution of property. The plaintiff is William G. Henshaw of Los Angeles, acting for himself and E. H. Merrill, R. B. Phillips, E. I. Bartholomew and C. E. Dolbear, the latter of Oakland and San Francisco.

The complaint sets up the claim that the plaintiffs and their wives located the lime deposits February 22, finding them on vacant and unlocated ground, that 160 acres were located, the locators acting as an association, each to have twenty acres; furthermore, that Kennedy and his associates on May 22 entered the property, and with firearms drove the plaintiffs off, threatening to kill them should they return.

Henshaw also alleges that Kennedy and his companions are removing lime rock and other material from the property, and doing the plaintiffs great damage thereby. He asks $5000 damage for having the claims wrested from him by force of arms, and $10,000 because of threats to kill, and asks the court for an immediate injunction restraining the defendants from operating the property.

Kennedy and his interests assert ownership by right of long possession, and allege that Dolbear was given an option to purchase the claims for $4500, a deed to him having been placed in escrow with the San Bernardino National Bank, but that he has threatened to jump the property, declaring that backing him up in the venture is the Standard Oil Company. Dolbear's statement has not as yet been obtained.

GREENE'S PALACE.

Dismissal today of the suit brought against Col. W. C. Greene, former copper king of Cananea, Mex., by the C. J. Kubach Company of Los Angeles to recover $21,210.70, due on structural steel and other materials for the dream palace of the former millionaire, indicates a settlement of Greene's financial troubles growing out of the copper war of three years ago. It is expected that Greene will resume work on his palace, which was to adorn the heights overlooking Redlands.

FUND GROWS.

The Y.M.C.A. fund has passed the $50,000 mark, and still six more days in which to press the campaign to reach $75,000. The workers are elated, believing that the success so far attained leaves hardly a doubt but that the full amount will be obtained. Today was "tag day," women and girls joining in the sale of tags, which went at the price of 25 cents each. Long before the close of the day about every citizen in town was wearing a red tag. The tags admit to the Santa Fe-Urmita ball game to be played Wednesday on the Urbita diamond.

SELLS HIGH AT HOME.

Top Figure for F.O.B. Oranges for the Season Reported for Packing House at Anaheim.

ANAHEIM, June 10.—What is said to be the top figure of the present orange season for fruit f.o.b. in California was taken down by the Independent packing plant in Anaheim this week, when Manager Parrent sold a straight car at $2.75. The fruit came from the Wallace and Meiger grove between the city and Olive, and was of fine quality, although not the choicest of the season.

The top price received for California oranges in the East this season was paid last week for Valencias from the Chapman ranch. This fruit brought $4.40 in the New York auction. Deducting freight, the fruit would have brought about $2.90 f.o.b. California. In the Los Angeles market oranges have sold down as low as $1.75 in the last week, this fruit having been shipped by an orange packing-house.

WHAT WITHDRAWAL MEANS.

The withdrawal of Buena Park from the Fullerton High School district means that Buena Park will in due time establish its own high school district, which action has been in contemplation since the beginning of the effort to secure the separation from the Fullerton High School district.

San Diego.

FRANCHISE GIVEN FOR FIFTY YEARS.

Spreckels Gets the Fruits of Recent Victory.

Will Prove Money Maker for the City.

Sailor Rough is Given a Severe Penalty.

SAN DIEGO, June 10.—By a majority vote the City Council adopted a measure extending the franchises of the John D. Spreckels street railroad interests. The vote of three to two against the exaction of a $50,000 bonus indicates that at least a majority of the Council intends to be fair to public utilities corporations.

The measure adopted provides for 2 per cent. of the gross receipts to be paid the city. The railroad company makes a statement that this tax within the first five years will bring the city a revenue of from $50,000 to $75,000.

All of the franchises now operated in San Diego were granted for twenty-five years. The amendments to the charter adopted in February permit franchises to be granted for a period of fifty years, provided that 2 per cent. of the gross receipts be paid into the city treasury the moment the road is in operation. In order that the city shall receive an income from the street railways now, instead of waiting until some of the present franchises have expired, an application was filed by the Spreckels company to extend all the present franchises forty-one years.

When the present franchises are put up for sale Councilmen J. L. Sehon and P. E. Woods advocated that the successful bidder be required to pay the city a bonus of $50,000. John D. Spreckels, the only probable bidder, warned the Council that if this was exacted he would refrain from bidding, but would continue to operate his car lines under the present franchises. Taking this as a hint that the city would be deprived of the 2 per cent. tax Councilmen A. E. Dodson, D. K. Adams and H. R. Fay voted to eliminate the $50,000 bonus proposition.

SEVERE PENALTY.

Solitary confinement for thirty days on bread and water, with full rations every third day, and the forfeiture of full pay, $66.66, is the punishment meted to F. H. Johnson, a petty officer of the South Dakota, by a court-martial, which today made known its findings. Johnson was found guilty on one charge, that of engaging in a brawl in a saloon. He was acquitted of two other charges. Johnson was the aggressor in a saloon fight three weeks ago in which a body of soldiers assaulted two plain clothes men of the police department.

Because of charges made by the police, Admiral Thomas withheld for a period of nearly two weeks shore leave to all men of the fleet. On condition that the city authorities would dismiss charges against Johnson, Admiral Thomas promised an investigation. He therefore ordered a court-martial. Admiral Thomas states Johnson's punishment should be an example to sailors to refrain from engaging in saloon brawls.

GOODS RESHIPPED.

The steamer San Diego on its return to Ensenada this morning carried a cargo of goods valued at $25,000. This amount represents the value of stocks of the leading stores of Ensenada which were shipped here in bond while the excitement over a probable attack by the rebel forces was at its height in Ensenada. With the return of normal conditions and the resumption of business merchants have reopened their stores.

LOVES TO SMUGGLE.

The immigration authorities were furnished a report today that Capt. Hans Peterson, who was rescued from the ocean by fishermen and brought to San Diego, escaping detection, is now at Tia Juana, where he made an offer to the rebel leaders in power there to allow him to continue to bring Chinese to be smuggled into that territory.

JUSTICE DEFIES COUNTY.

Township Justice Solon Bryan finds that fees from performing marriage ceremonies are so remunerative that he refuses to turn the money into the county treasury. Bryan states he is entitled to them. District Attorney Utley informs the Board of Supervisors that since the justice was placed on a salary all fees must revert to the county. Justice Bryan disputes the attorney's authority. To settle the controversy the Supervisors instructed the District Attorney to institute suit to recover $150 claimed due from the marrying justice.

OIL BUSINESS IS QUITE BRISK.

New Company Formed at Anaheim, But no Stock Is on the Market—Oil Briefs.

ANAHEIM, June 10.—A new oil company has been formed and is known as the Anaheim-Whittier Oil Company. This new organization has holdings in leases between the Olinda and Whittier oil fields. The company has means to begin at once the sinking of a well, with which it is expected that a depth of about four thousand feet will be made before the richest of its oil sand is encountered. No stock in the new company will be offered until after it has brought in a producing well. Among Anaheim people interested in the proposition are W. L. Kreuscher and C. L. Scope.

WANT LIGHTER OIL.

Manager L. Teatsorth of the La Habra Oil Company reports that their well is down 780 feet and in very good sand. They do not intend to stop at that depth, but will go deeper and will try for the light oil, which there are every indications will be had at a greater depth. The La Habra property is a part of the old New England lease, which was operated some ten years ago and on which the old well was finally plugged, having produced a large quantity of oil.

KEEP THINGS MOVING.

The Fullerton Oil Company is proceeding with developments in the Whittier district. Already they have one string of tools going and are rigging up No. 2 preparatory to spudding in. Drilling on the Union No. 2, on the Wells tract, is progressing in good shape. The Murphy Company will deepen No. 19, which was down 2600 feet, expecting to get a better flow of oil further down. Drilling is progressing on No. 26, which is down 3500 feet. No. 27 is down 1600 feet, with a 11⅝-inch casing, and No. 28 is down 1000 with 12½-inch casing. The Murphy Company is keeping things moving all along the line and some of the old wells are being cleaned out to increase the flow.

OIL BRIEFS.

Drilling on the Anchor Petroleum well is progressing smoothly.

The rigging for No. 48, on the Industrial, is completed and the well will be spudded in this week.

No. 26, on the Brea Canyon lease, will be put back on the pump. This well is 4440 feet deep and still produces considerable oil.

After two years of drilling, Superintendent Ross Stewart has decided to abandon the Scott well in the Puente Hills. The hole has been drilled 4300 feet and has cost something over $75,000.

The Colorado Oil Company has three strings of tools going. It seems as though the Whittier field has plenty of new work from one end to the other. There are no idle men, and in fact the activities seem to be on the increase.

The Central Oil Company is running nine strings of tools. They have two new rigs up and are using electric power on two of the wells. It is a problem whether this will prove as satisfactory as the steam power. On the Canadian Pacific, wells Nos. 11 and 12 are being pushed ahead and the drilling is going on without interruption.

INQUIRY INTO WOMANS DEATH.

BODY FOUND FULLY DRESSED ON THE FLOOR.

Aged and Eccentric Resident Was Wealthy and Leaves Three Grown Children—Blind Pigger Will Have to Serve One Hundred Days in Jail and Pay Fine.

VENTURA, June 10.—An inquest over the remains of the late Nancy A. D. Taylor, who was found dead in her home in this city yesterday, showed that death came from old age and natural causes. She was alone when death came, and it is thought had been dead several hours when the body was found by Charles Taylor, the son, with whom she lived. The body was found lying on the floor of her bedroom, fully dressed. Mrs. Taylor was very rich and very eccentric. She leaves an estate valued at $250,000, some $30,000 being cash in bank. She owned a half interest in the First National Bank building, several houses in this city and a half interest in the large Taylor ranch, across the river west of this city. She leaves three grown children, these being Ed. and Charles Taylor and Mrs. Alice Grubb of Carpinteria. The funeral will be held Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock from the Gibson undertaking parlors, and will be private.

Miller is an old offender in this line, having served a jail sentence on a previous occasion. This time when caught he pleaded not guilty and a jury convicted him. He was sentenced to serve 100 days in the County Jail and to pay a fine of $300. He appealed and lost.

Work is progressing rapidly on the new Seaside Park, in this city, given to the county by E. P. Foster for a recreation ground. Surveyors are laying out a half-mile speed track for horses and automobiles, and a number of teams are at work grading the same. Tennis courts and baseball fields and golf links will also be made. Besides at the west end will be a pleasure lake, into which the grounds will be drained. Several thousand trees have already been set out on the ocean side to act as a windbrake, and these are growing rapidly. Besides a propagating plant for trees and flowering plants and shrubs has been established on the grounds.

ORANGE PEOPLE FORGET.

Will May Not Be Admitted to Probate on Account of Two Treacherous Memories.

ORANGE, June 10.—The will of Elizabeth Snyder may not be admitted to probate because it was written, signed and witnessed so long ago that the witnesses, D. C. and W. C. Pixley of Orange, have forgotten the occurrence, though both recognize their signatures to the document. The will was written in 1892.

Judge West refused to admit the will to probate unless Mrs. Frances Durfee of Orange signed a stipulation allowing it to go in uncontested. The will makes no change from the way the property would have been disposed of had Mrs. Snyder died without a will, except that Mrs. Durfee is not to have anything but the interest of her one-third until such time as her brother, L. D. Spaulding of Los Angeles, shall see fit to give her the principal.

PERRIS IRRIGATED FARMS

Where Diversified Farming Pays

You don't have to be expert to make your land mighty profitable, if you buy in the beautiful Perris Valley. Big money in alfalfa—producing up to $125 per acre per year. Potato-growing, also, is a winner—white potatoes producing two crops, bringing as much as $200 to $250 an acre—and sweet potatoes run up to $300 an acre, or more. These figures will bear closest investigation—and the products named are only a few of those which pay handsomely on these rich lands. They're located close to the city of Perris, where you can have city advantages and conveniences. Good train service to Los Angeles. Riverside only a short distance away. Improved alfalfa ranches here sell as high as $450 an acre. Values are stiffening throughout the Valley. Buy good land now while it is cheap, at opening prices, and it will certainly show you a profit, even if you let it lie idle. Fine land at $100 to $150 an acre, including a valauble water right. Pay $5 per acre cash and $5 per acre monthly—or one-fourth cash and the balance during four years' time. On these terms, your land will be worth double before you pay for it. Come in and let me verify these figures for you—they're facts.

GETTING RID OF FLIES.

City of San Antonio Entices Them Out of Town With Its Garbage Wagons.

Hauling flies out of town by the "wagon load" as a means of getting rid of them may be new in sanitary procedure, but San Antonio, Tex., has evolved this scheme as a solution of the fly problem and it seems to be working well, says the Indianapolis Star. For years it has been the custom in San Antonio for the city wagons to go from house to house daily and remove garbage. This garbage is hauled to a point outside the city, where it is burned, the fires for that purpose being kept going all the year around. The dumping ground is not a crematory in the common acceptance of the term, but just an open field, where burning is a regular part of sanitary methods.

It has been observed that as the garbage wagons pass through the city the refuse is almost black with flies. The insects are hauled so far out to the country that they could not find their way back if they wanted to. But it has also been observed that the larger number of them are soon destroyed in the burning of the garbage heaps. In addition to those killed in that way, the larvae deposited in the garbage are also burned. After a careful investigation, the sanitary authorities of San Antonio have come to the conclusion that the surest way of getting rid of the house fly is to give him a free trip to the country and incinerate him. San Antonio has the reputation of being freer of flies than any other town in Texas.

Herein may be a tip for the health officials of other cities. There is a good deal of complaint against the unsightliness and odoriferous character of municipal dumping grounds. The solution seems to be to locate such dumps so far out that they shall offend neither the eye nor the sense of smell. Then, if the burning feature is added, the dump also is made to serve a valuable sanitary function as a wholesale destroyer of the fly pest.

ASTHMA

Secrets of Marvelous Cures Exposed

After a quarter of a century's research and careful study Dr. Owens discovered that Asthma is curable only by treating each individual case with precise discrimination of the cause. You must not confound his method of treatment with that of the nostrum peddlers who distribute free trial bottles of liquid impossibilities guaranteed to cure all cases regardless of cause.

Your skilled family physician will tell you that Asthma may be caused by disease of the Heart, Liver, Lungs, Kidney, etc., and that the claim of the vendors of a one remedy cure all nostrum is as absurd and insincere as would be a one medicine cure for typhoid fever and all heart, liver, kidney and lung complaints. How simple if true. A sample bottle for each specific complaint, as a cure and protector, and an inducer to give your faithful old family doctor a long and much needed rest. These cure-all commodities are compounded primarily to deceive and secondarily to enrich the vendor. It is not for lack of skill that your family physician has not treated your Asthma with curative results. His time and energy have been devoted to other special lines more to his liking, hence his pre-eminent success. Dr. Owens' treatment is of the same discriminating care that your physician bestows upon you in dangerous acute ailments, his method is scientific and rational, he eliminates Asthma and "Asthma cure," individualizes every case and removes the cause and complications which produce and maintain the disease. If after a careful examination he discovers your case is incurable on account of organic complications, he tells you so, and if curable the beneficial effect of his treatment will be apparent almost immediately. Testimonials may be seen at the office.

An interview will cost you nothing. Office hours 10 to 4.

Cost of Speed.

STROKE NEARLY KILLS CYCLIST.

GOING FAST HE HITS WAGON IN THE REAR.

Accident Occurs on the Whittier Road Several Miles Out of Town. Teamster Employed by the Union Oil Company the Victim of Collision—Injuries Serious.

E. D. Miller, a young man employed as a teamster by the Union Oil Company, came frightfully near to being disemboweled last evening, when, riding at a speed of about fifty miles an hour, he ran his motorcycle against the rear end of a double wagon driven by a couple of Mexicans on the Whittier road, about ten miles out of town.

So great was the shock that Miller was hurled through the air more than twenty feet. When picked up, he was still clutching a piece of the handle bar of his motorcycle which had been smashed into rubbish in the collision. Miller was apparently lifeless, but Carl Clampitt of No. 1754 West Twenty-second street, who came upon him almost immediately after the accident, took him into his automobile and made a quick run to the Receiving Hospital, saving the young man's life, according to Police Surgeon Wright, for Miller reached the hospital none too soon.

As he was laid upon the operating table, he began sinking so fast that it was only by a prompt and vigorous treatment that he was brought back to life. He had sustained a deep gash in the left groin, a fracture of the left arm and severe concussion of the brain.

Miller said he lived with his young wife and mother, but could not give his address.

LICENSED NOT TO WORK.

Unionite Thought He Was Pensioned for Life, But Police Must Know Who's Who and Why.

There have been troubles in the Labor Temple, but the one that occurred yesterday afternoon greatly resembled a snake with his tail in his mouth—without beginning or end. A man calling himself Phillip Goldstein had just presented his union card for the purpose of collecting his weekly allowance of $7.

"You're not Phillip Goldstein," interupted one of the unionites.

"I certainly am," he replied, producing cards and letters from his pocket to corroborate the statement. But they didn't convince and a police officer was called.

When Patrolman Riggs took his prisoner into the Central Police Station, the man explained that he came from Detroit five months ago and hadn't done a stroke of work since, having been promised $7 a week if he would cease from all employment. It "looked good" to Goldstein and he agreed. But yesterday when he presented his card and asked for the money it was refused.

J. A. Gray, who appeared at the station declared that Goldstein's first name is Morris and that he had been collecting his brother's benefit money. But Goldstein denied that he has a brother named Morris, although admitting that he has a cousin named Phillip Goldstein.

He is now being held under suspicion by the police until they determine whether he is a fraud or whether the union has no money to pay.

ACADEMY PAYS HONORS.

Tribute of Scientific Body to the Memory of the Late John D. Hooker, One of Its Vice-Presidents.

At a meeting of the Southern California Academy of Sciences last evening, an address paying respect to the memory of the late John D. Hooker, was adopted as presented by William H. Knight, chairman of the astronomical section. Among other things the address said:

"For a considerable period the astronomical section held its monthly sessions in a hall specially fitted up for the purpose at his colonial residence on Adams street. His deep interest in that branch of science was shown by his donation to the Mt. Wilson Solar Observatory of a lens one hundred inches in diameter, to be used in producing the most powerful reflecting telescope on the globe, thus enabling astronomers to penetrate further into the profound depths of space than has ever been done before.

"On various occasions the academy has received from his abundant means valuable pecuniary aid in the furtherance of scientific research. Yet all his benefactions were given without ostentation, and his self-efacement was such that he did not care to have these services mentioned in the meetings of the academy, but it is due to his memory that they should now be fully acknowledged."

ACADEMY OF MEDICINE.

Will Meet in Los Angeles Two Days Before the American Medical Association.

The American Academy of Medicine will meet in Los Angeles two days before the meeting of the American Medical Association. The academy membership is largely, though not wholly, made up of physicians, and deals with questions of medical sociology, such as education, public health, etc.

The preliminary meeting, open to the public, will be held at the Arrow Theater (Hamburger's) on the evening of June 23. President Jordan is expected to give the address, and others will speak. An invitation is extended to the general public to be present at this meeting.

The papers read at the regular meetings have a popular interest, and it is hoped the public will attend. The meetings will be held daily at the Hotel Hayward.

FACES BANDIT AND PUTS HIM TO ROUT.

Woman Drives Highwayman Away from Coin.

Blocks Attempt to Rifle Candy Store Register.

Thief Leaves Place; Disappears Down the Street.

"I told him he could not have any more money because it was not mine," said Mrs. C. Parker last night, a few minutes after having routed a bandit who stole part of the money in the cash register of Brown's Candy store, No. 621 South Olive street.

Mrs. Parker spoke pleasantly enough, but in very much of a matter-of-fact way. When asked for a description of the robber, she seemed to place most importance on the fact that he had "big baby-blue eyes."

The robber stole between $10 and $15 in silver dollars and halves but was put to flight by the attitude of Mrs. Parker, before he had taken more than half the money in the cash register. He also left nearly $100, which was in a bag behind the register.

Mrs. Parker was behind the counter on the north side of the store, about half-way from the rear, when the highwayman entered.

"Don't you make a noise or you'll get hurt," he said to Mrs. Parker as she turned toward him. Pointed straight at her, he held a small nickeled revolver.

Beside being young and pretty, Mrs. Parker is more than usually brave, but even the bravest men prefer to keep quiet when guns are pointed at them.

"You bet I kept quiet so long as he behaved himself," said she afterward. But when the highwayman stepped further into the store to the cash register, reached over the counter and pressed one of the keys, proceeding to help himself to the money, which he stuffed into his coat pocket, it was too much for the young matron's patience.

Calmly, but quickly, she walked to the street door. The thief tried to stop her by pointing his revolver at her again, but she evaded him and hurriedly closed the door. This done, she coolly wheeled about and faced him.

"Now, don't you take any more of that money; it isn't mine," she called out, imperiously. Then she slammed the cash register drawer shut so quickly it nearly broke his fingers.

Being scolded by a woman would be too much for almost any criminal. It was too much for this one. Brushing his lecturer aside, he tore open the door and escaped, running south on Olive street. Mrs. Parker ran to a man she had seen across the street and asked him to call a patrolman. The man, whose name was not learned, found Patrolman Watson a few feet around the corner on Sixth street. Patrolman Luke was in the middle of the block on Sixth street, between Olive and Hill, neither of the two officers more than two hundred yards from the store when it was robbed.

The would-be robber is said to have been a boy, not more than 21 years of age, with large blue eyes, but sallow complexion. He wore a light cap, a large black or dark butterfly necktie and a dark blue suit, the coat of which he wore tightly buttoned about him.

FATALITY OCCURS ON THE PACIFIC ELECTRIC.

Coach of Santa Ana Line Strikes Employe of Company at Latin Station—Neither Motorman Nor Conductor See Him Start Across Tracks Till Too Late.

While returning to his work after conversing with a colleague, D. W. Clapphan, employed at the Pacific Electric Railway Company's yards at Latin station, was knocked down and instantly killed by car No. 383 of the Santa Ana line, southbound, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Clapphan was not seen to start across the tracks by either Motorman Anderson or Conductor Connors until too late to stop the car. He lived at No. 2618 Gleason street. He leaves a daughter. His body was removed to the Pierce Bros. morgue.

ANOTHER AUTO VICTIM.

Alighting From Street Car, Fails to See Oncoming Machine and Suffers Concussion of Brain.

J. S. Wilson of No. 602½ Gladys avenue, stepping off a street car into the path of an automobile at Seventh street and Ceres avenue yesterday evening, was knocked unconscious, and believed, by all who saw him, to be dead. But after being taken to the Receiving Hospital, Dr. C. A. Wright, the police surgeon, revived him and found that he had sustained no injury more serious than a laceration of the head and a slight concussion of the brain. Wilson was returning on a private street car from the prize fight at Vernon, and stepped off the front end at Ceres avenue. The automobile, which struck him, was driven by E. C. Anderson of No. 508 West Washington street, who took him to the Receiving Hospital.

Eyesight Sacrifices

Recently a lady wearing a dollar pair of glasses called and requested an eye examination. She informed us she wore that cheap pair of glasses for several years, and her eyes and head have been hurting her severely for some time. We found upon examination better glasses were required, which she bought and which cost her $4.00. Her eyes and her headache improved. The question arises, were her dollar glasses cheap or costly? She sacrificed and endangered her sight by buying cheaper glasses than she required, and finally had to admit that our properly fitted glasses were the cheapest, and best in the end. MY TROUBLES OF ONE DAY AT SEVENTH AND BROADWAY.

Busy Crossing Officer Tells of the Things That Keep Him on the Jump and the Thanks He Doesn't Get. Woman Who Wants Baby, Man Who Wants Car, and Others With Wants to Know.

BY WALTER KRUG,
Traffic Squad, Los Angeles Police Department.

I AM GOING to tell this from our point of view—my troubles of just one day. The public sees only one side of the crossing officer. The general opinion is that he has a snap. Now let me tell you this is a mistake.

When you pass along the sidewalk and see the crossing officer blowing his whistle or raising a hand to stop a vehicle, you think that's all he has to do. It's about the same sort of a snap the man from the old country had when he got his first job in America. He wrote a friend in Europe that all he had to do was to carry the hod up a ladder—the man at the top laid the bricks.

The crossing officer is a human guidepost; an animated breakwater. The human tide dashes against him, fumes, swirls and drifts off into safe channels.

Take this post at Seventh and Broadway. There is not a minute of the day I am not busy. An hourly average of 1400 trolley cars, automobiles, motorcycles, bicycles, vehicles of all kinds, come and go. Thousands of men, women and children cross at the intersections.

The vehicles keep on the jump, but it's the fool questions that get our goat. It is surprising what senseless questions men and women of average intelligence ask us.

Here is one by way of illustration. A woman, accompanied by a man, stepped up to me—now, mind you, all the time she is talking to me, I am keeping traffic moving.

WOMEN'S CONUNDRUMS.

"Officer," she says, "I want a baby about so long. "She held her hands about a foot and a half apart. "Tell me where I can get one."

"Well," I says, "you can get one at the Children's Home Society and there's a place in Boyle Heights."

"But, I was told there was a place right around here," she complained in a grieved tone. I told her if there was I didn't know it. Now, what do you suppose she said. You would never guess it. It was this, just like a slap in the face:

"You policemen never know anything."

Now, before I had recovered from that, along comes a woman, all flustered.

"Officer," she begins, "I was shopping in Bullock's."

She stops, and I reply:

"Yes, madam."

"I bought some articles there," she continued, "and I left them in a restaurant. Can you tell what restaurant I left them in?"

That comes pretty near the limit, don't it? A policeman is supposed to be a street directory, but there's nothing in the rules that calls on him to be the compendium of human knowledge. Job has nothing on him, for if patience was something you could sell, the crossing officer has it in wholesale lots, but Solomon is on a pedestal all his own.

And another thing. If Job was on this job (that's not a pun), he wouldn't mind the boils half as much as the discomfort on a hot day of your feet sloshing around in your shoes from the perspiration which has run down your back and your legs and flooded the leather.

Well, while your mouth is sore from blowing the whistle and your ear drums are ringing from the noise it makes, and you are thinking what you would have said if it had been a man instead of a lady who asked about the baby and the lost package, along comes another woman. She is an elderly person, one of the timid sort, who hesitates when she starts across a street, backs and fills, and starts off on a slant, and draws up with all sails flapping in the wind in front of a clanging car.

THE MAIL BOX.

"Officer," she says, "may I ask you a question?"

"Certainly, madam," I replied, taking her by the arm and drawing her away from the car track.

"Tell me," she goes on, "is that a postoffice box over there?"

"Yes, madam," I said.

"Do they collect mail from it?"

"They do."

"Can I put this letter in it?"

She had a letter in her hand and holds it out. Now I'll ask any fair-minded man what he would have answered. I know what I thought, but being a policeman the rules say you must be polite, so I told her she might.

Little things like these I have written sort of take your mind off the perspiration cascading down your physiue. You lift your headpiece and wipe the sweat from your brow and wonder, like Puck, "What fools these mortals be." About that time a citizen steps up and asks if the Grand-avenue cars run on Broadway. You tell him they do. Then he asks if it stops here, pointing at his feet, and you say no, over there. He wants to know if he has to go over there to get on it, and being a man, it is only natural if you tell him: "You can for all the hell I care."

When the sun shifts and you can stand in the shade, the humorous side of a crossing officer's life strikes us. Piloting on the Mississippi River made Mark Twain a philosopher. Three years as a crossing officer in Los Angeles will develop a man into a Plato, Solomon, Job and Dickens.

THE SIXTH SENSE.

Take it from me, it is a great education. It does for a man what all the reading in the world won't do. It puts rubber into his neck, gives him the eye of a hawk, and makes him as nimble on his feet as a dancing master. It develops the sixth sense. You move by intuition. The average man or woman who stops to ask him a question would be run over, because the danger is lost sight of in the eagerness to obtain information.

Here is a case in point. Officer Bunker tells it. A woman rushed up to him and complained that the policeman at Third and Main had taken her by the arm and led her across the street when she stopped to ask a question. She wanted the entire department to know that she didn't want any officer to grab her arm and haul her over the street. It was her opinion that because he wore a uniform it gave a policeman the right to take liberties with a woman.

Bunker, who has been reading up on woman suffrage and is imbued with the idea that some day there may be a woman Chief of Police, explained that the officer meant no offense. It is his duty to protect the public, and if he led her across the street it was done to protect her. Officers try to be gentlemen, and he had simply performed an official duty in escorting her.

Well, he didn't make any impression on that woman, you may believe, for she had made up her mind that the officer took advantage of his uniform to lay his hand on her arm.

It is little things like this, of course, that make us philosophers. The crossing officer gets a deep insight into the vagaries of the female mind.

FORTY THOUSAND GAIN IN A YEAR.

New City Directory Shows How We're Growing.

Three Hundred and Sixty Thousand Here Now.

Book the Most Complete Ever Compiled Here.

The 1911 Los Angeles City Directory, to be published next month, will show a gain in the city's population over last year of approximately 40,000, or, in round numbers, a total of 360,000, as compared with 319,198, the United States census for 1910. The canvassers found 5501 vacant houses when they began work in January, of which 80 per cent. were newly constructed. Forty-nine per cent. of these contained occupants when the final canvass was made last week. The new directory does not cover San Pedro, Gardena or the shoestring strip, but the above figures do. The directory takes in Hollywood, Watts and a large part of Vernon and the growing country sections on the east and northeast two miles beyond the city limits.

The suburban districts are covered in the directory for the reason that more residences than ever are being built in those sections, and there is a proportionate gain in the number of men doing business in the city. It has been found that many of these new houses have been bought by newcomers who engage in business in Los Angeles.

In estimating the probable increase in population of Los Angeles, R. C. Devereux, manager of the city directory work, eliminates those persons who do business here but sleep in the outlying districts. His estimate for 1910 exceeded the figures of the official census by only 1690. He expects to figure as closely this year and unofficially estimates the increase as from 35,000 to 40,000.

One gratifying result of the canvass is the large number of new houses which have been built since the first of the year, found to be 4400, of which more than 2000 have been occupied. There were found to be surprisingly few vacant houses, the number not exceeding 1000.

The work of compiling the directory this year has taken a larger force of canvassers than previously, owing to the tremendous spread of the municipal territory. The addition of Hollywood, Colegrove and the new sections opened in Rosehill and Herman on the northeast, and the rapidly populated section on the east, increased the labor of canvassing, all of which, however, has added to the importance of the directory. Although San Pedro and the shoestring strip are not included, the increase in population in those districts, now included in the city, has been carefully noted.

Although the work of compiling a directory has been done so often here that it would seem like an old story to the experienced canvassers, the development of certain parts of the city, like the Wilshire district, has been so great since the last canvass that extra time had to be allowed for the work, and extra pages provided in the directory.

To keep the directory within reasonable bulk, Devereux has economized space, thus saving many additional lines so that there will be an increase of only 232 pages, the total number being 2300.

"We feel particularly proud of the 1911 city directory," said Devereux yesterday, "for the reason that Los Angeles shows a steady increase in population and a really remarkable de-

HOLDER FOR DEADLY EXPLOSIVE PUT NEAR INDUSTRIAL PLANT.

A STARTLING sequel to the discovery of a cache of dynamite in a freight car a week ago came early yesterday morning when a large gas-pipe bomb was found in the heart of the East Side industrial district.

The discovery was made by Dr. W. S. Maharg, a city meat inspector working out of the Health Office. Dr. Maharg was on his way from his home, at No. 412 Bell street, to the packing plants on Santa Fe avenue. While waiting for a transfer car at the intersection of East Fourth street and Santa Fe avenue his attention was drawn to a peculiar object lying in the shadow of the loading platform of the new Santa Fe freight depot.

He called a number of the freight handlers to witness the find. All were agreed that nothing of the sort had been a part of anything ever handled thereabouts and were equally positive that it had not been there before dark on the preceding evening.

Dr. Maharg is himself certain that the bomb could not have been there more than a few hours, as it would almost certainly have been seen by passers-by. The corner is a transfer point from the East Eighth and Westlake Park line of the Pacific Electric and the Santa Fe-avenue line of the Los Angeles Railway, and thousands of persons pass there daily.

The bomb is a cylindrical shell of wrought iron about one-eighth inch in thickness. The cylinder is five inches long and two and one-half in diameter, with a capacity of about forty cubic inches, and was evidently made by sawing off a large gas pipe. The ends are carefully, though crudely, sealed with thick caps and solder.

Three holes are bored in the side of the device. One of these, larger than the others, is apparently to be used for loading the bomb, which is specially adapted to the use of nitroglycerine. This orifice is closed by means of a screw cap and packing in the heart of the industrial district by a city meat inspector. It is ingeniously constructed of iron, probably part of a gas pipe. It was not loaded when discovered, and had been there but a few hours, it is believed.

shown here and now to persons you esteem will mean much more to them than tears, lamentations and flowers after their departure from the world. Kind words and good thoughts of the dead avail nothing, but helpful deeds toward the living make for joy and gladness.

The withholding of praise from those who are entitled to it is despicable; and indifference as regards the welfare and happiness of others is indicative of a mean spirit and a base soul.

Kindness is a habit that grows by indulgence, and it is returned to you in exactly the same degree that you dispense it.

Be cheerful, unselfish and considerate in your relations with your fellows, and peace will flow into you as sunshine flows into flowers.

If business cares disturb your serenity and make you splenetic eliminate them by reading and using Times "Liners." These little messengers of prosperity bring together buyer and seller and landlord and tenant, and they point the way to profitable trades and exchanges.

Everything needed for the comfort of the human family is exploited from day to day in The Times "Liner" Section, and you will overlook many money-saving bargains and wealth-creating opportunities if you fail to read these classified advertisements.

Month after month, year in and year out, The Times prints more advertising than any other paper in the world. It regularly prints more "Liners" than the four other Los Angeles papers combined, and twice as many as its nearest local competitor.

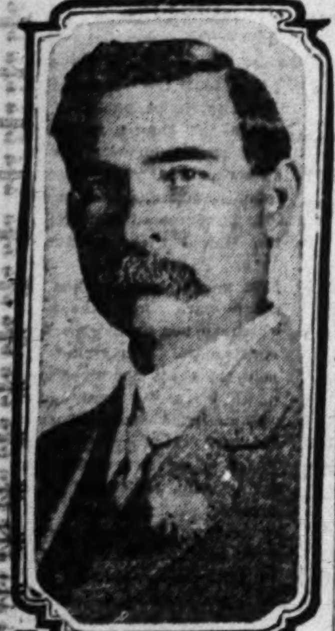
SUPERIOR COURT KNOCKS BIG HOLE IN NEW EIGHT-HOUR LAW FOR WOMEN.

Hotel-Man Miller Wins Great Victory—Judge Densmore Holds That Law Restricting Employment of Women in Hotels to Eight Hours a Day is Invalid. Only Point Involved in Case.

A BIG hole was knocked in the Griffin eight-hour law for women yesterday when Judge F. E. Densmore of Riverside held that its inclusion of hotels is unconstitutional.

The hotel question was the only one presented to the court so that his decision is solely on that point.

The decision came as a result of a test case by Frank A. Miller, proprietor of the Glenwood Mission Inn. He required his head waitress, Miss Emma Hunt, to work nine hours and was prosecuted by District Attorney Evans of Riverside county. He was fined in a justice court and appealed on the ground that the law, as it affects hotels, is invalid. In making the test he acted for a number of the larger hotels in Southern California.



Judge F. E. Densmore, of Riverside, who held yesterday that the Griffin eight-hour law for women, as it applies to hotels, is unconstitutional.

The decision of the court affects all the hotels in Los Angeles, which probably possesses more than any other city in the West, and which were all utilizing women in many capacities, some of them as waitresses. If the law had been sustained it might have meant the wholesale dismissal of these women. But the presentation of the question squarely to the court as Miller presented it gave the court full opportunity to see that the law made criminals of hotel keepers but did not affect the proprietors of lodging, rooming and boarding houses, although both the employers and the employees of all are in the same class. It was this showing that upset the law as it applies to hotels.

In deciding the case Judge Densmore rendered the following decision, which we print in full:

THE DECISION.

In the Superior Court of the United States of California, in and for the County of Riverside.

The People of the State of California, plaintiff, vs. F. A. Miller, defendant.

This is an appeal from a judgment of conviction rendered by the Justice's Court of Riverside Township, and an order of said court denying defendant's motion for a new trial.

The defendant was charged by a complaint filed in said court with a violation of the "Eight Hour Law" of this State, in that "on the 24th day of May, 1911, being then and there the proprietor of the Glenwood Hotel in the City of Riverside, and the employer of females to work therein, the defendant did then and there employ one Emma Hunt, a female person, to work therein as an employee in said hotel, and did then and there unlawfully employ, permit and require said Emma Hunt to work therein during said 24th day of May, 1911, for the period of nine hours."

The case was tried before the Hon. Holton Webb, Justice of the Peace, who entered a judgment finding the defendant guilty as charged, and imposed a fine of $50, with the alternative of imprisonment in the County Jail at the rate of one day for each dollar of the fine.

The only reason here urged for a reversal of the judgment of the lower court is that the Act under which the defendant was convicted is unconstitutional and void.

The Act under which this prosecution occurred, is one passed by our last Legislature and has not yet passed the scrutiny of our courts. This Act, among other things, provides as follows:

Section 1.—No female shall be employed in any manufacturing, mechanical or mercantile establishment, laundry, hotel or restaurant, or telegraph or telephone establishment or office, or by any express or transportation company in this State more than eight hours during any one day or more than forty eight hours in one week. The hours of work may be so arranged as to permit the employment of females at any time so that they shall not work more than eight hours during the twenty-four hours of one day, or forty-eight hours during one week; provided, however, that the provisions of this section in relation to the hours of employment shall not apply to nor effect the harvesting, curing, canning or drying of perishable fruit or vegetables."

Then follows a penal clause which provides a penal clause for the nonobservance of its terms.

Many criticisms of this law are being published in our daily journals, but whether it is a wise or an unwise law is a question which must of necessity be solved by experience and without the aid of a court. I will entertain no controversy as to the motives which actuated the law-making body of this great State in enacting this legislation, for it is none of my concern. If the effect of such a law be to shorten the labor hours of the women who toil for a living, it is most commendable legislation and deserves favorable consideration, but if the effect of such a law is to handicap toiling womanhood in her struggle for existence and to reserve from her encroachments certain avocations for the exclusive benefit of men, then such a law is damnable and no censure is too severe. But even so, and if the law be unwise, the remedy is to repeal it. My concern with this act, be it good or bad, is simply to determine whether or not it is violative of the organic law of our land, or in other words, whether, measured by the Constitution of this State and the Constitution of the United States, it is constitutional and unconstitutional. All other considerations were addressed to the Legislature that enacted it, and must be addressed to the future Legislatures, by whose grace only it can continue to exist.

Is this law class legislation because it denies to women the right of entering upon and pursuing a lawful business, untrammeled and on an equal basis with men?

The fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States provides that: "All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States, and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

Section 1 of Article I of the Constitution of California, declares that: "All men are by nature free and independent, and have certain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty, acquiring, possessing and protecting property and pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness."

Section 22 of Article I of the same Constitution provides that:

"No special privileges or immunities shall ever be granted which may not be altered, revoked or repealed by the Legislature, nor shall any citizen or class of citizens be granted privileges or immunities which upon the same terms shall not be granted to all citizens."

While Section 18 of Article XX provides that: "No person shall on account of sex be disqualified from entering upon or pursuing any lawful business, vocation or profession."

It is contended that a fair construction of these constitutional provisions makes it perfectly apparent that woman is a citizen of this land, who is not disqualified by reason of her sex from following any lawful business, vocation or profession, and that as such she is entitled to all the privileges and immunities accorded men (save at the present time that of suffrage,) and that she has the constitutional right to follow any lawful vocation that she may choose; to acquire and possess property, and pursue happiness in her own way.

California has never had an act limiting the hours of labor for females, and the effect of the constitutional provisions upon such a law is new here. The decisions of our sister States rendered on similar contentions have reached diametrically opposite conclusions, and as our own Supreme Court has not yet passed upon the question, it is my pleasure once more to break new ground in California.

In discussing man's constitutional right to labor, West Virginia lays down the following rule:

"The property which every man has in his own labor, as it is the foundation of all other property, so it is the most sacred and inviolable. The patrimony of the poor man lies in the strength and dexterity of his own hands; and to hinder him from employing these in what manner he may think proper, without injury to his neighbor, is a plain violation of this most sacred property. It is equally an encroachment both upon the just liberty and rights of the workman and his employer, or those who might be disposed to employ him, for the Legislature to interfere with the freedom of contract between them, and at the same time prevents the other from employing whom he chooses."

West Virginia vs. Goodwill, 6 L. R. A. 623.

In discussing woman's constitutional rights in Illinois the Supreme Court, construing a statute that no female shall be employed in any factory or workshop more than eight hours a day or forty-eight hours in any one week, makes the following declaration:

"The Act is not based upon the theory that the manufacture of clothing, wearing apparel and other articles is an improper occupation for woman to be engaged in. It does not inhibit their employment in factories or workshops. On the contrary it recognizes such places as proper for them to work in by permitting their labor therein during eight hours of each day. The question here is not whether a particular employment is a proper one for the use of female labor, but the question is whether, in an employment which is conceded to be lawful in itself and suitable for women to engage in, she shall be deprived of the right to determine for herself how many hours she can and may work during each day. But aside from its partial and discriminating character, this enactment is a purely aribtrary restriction upon the fundamental right of the citizen to control his or her own time and faculties. It substitutes the judgment of the Legislature for the judgment of the employer and employee in a matter about which they are competent to agree with each other. It assumes to dictate to what extent the capacity to labor may be exercised by the employee and takes away the right of private judgment. Where the Legislature thus undertakes to impose an unreasonable and unnecessary burden upon any citizen or class of citizens, it transcends the authority intrusted to it by the Constitution."

Ritchie vs. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L. R. A. 79.

While in discussing this phase of man's constitutional rights our own Supreme Court, in the case of Ex Parte Dickey, 144 Cal. 237, quotes approvingly from Judge Cooley on Constitutional Limitations, as follows:

"The general rule undoubtedly is that every person is at liberty to pursue any lawful calling and to do so in his own way, not encroaching on the rights of others. This general right cannot be done away with. The doubt might also arise whether a regulation made for one class of citizens, entirely arbitrary in its character, and restricting their rights, privileges or legal capacities in a manner before unknown to the law, could be sustained, notwithstanding its generality.

The City and the Taxpayer Interested

In addition to the regular City, County, State and United States taxes, the Home Telephone and Telegraph Company pays annually into the city treasury an amount equal to 2 per cent. on its gross receipts, and this tax is the largest of its kinds now paid and, in fact, such a tax is only paid by very few corporations in Los Angeles.

Up to the present time the city has received from this company the sum of $66,704.30.

According to the City Auditor's report for the year ending June 30th, 1910, this sum would have paid the expenses of the following departments for that year:

Mayor's Office
Civil Service Dept.
Boiler Inspector's Dept.
Oil Inspector's Dept.
Gas Inspector's Dept.
Sealer of Weights and Measures
Inspection of Repairs of Sewer Dept.
Public Utilities Commission
The City Council
The Housing Commission

It will therefore be seen that the city and the taxpayers are greatly benefited by this special 2 per cent. tax, and in a measure it might be said that a form of partnership exists between the three—City, Taxpayer and Home Telephone Company—because out of every dollar paid the company, 2 per cent. goes back to the city, over and above all other taxes, and the taxpayers are benefited.

If you have no Homephone, call F98, our Contract Department, and they will install the service.

Edith: No. I do not believe in "dry shampoos." If you were going to wash your face, would you even think of rubbing powder on it? When you need a shampoo ask your hairdresser for a canthrox shampoo or buy the canthrox at any drug store and prepare the shampoo at home by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. The cleansing lather of this shampoo will remove the excess oil and dirt and dandruff from the scalp pores. Your hair will rinse easily and dry quickly. This is the most beneficial shampoo I have ever used. It is very refreshing to an itching scalp and makes the hair very soft, silky and so fluffy there will seem to be twice as much of it. You will find nothing better than this shampoo for promoting a clean, healthy condition of the hair and scalp. It is not expensive and will not cause the hair to become dull and streaky like soap shampoos do.

W. M.: Your dull, weak, expressionless eyes can be made clear, beautiful and sparkling by putting in each eye twice daily a few drops of a simple tonic made by dissolving an ounce of crystos in a pint of cold water. This inexpensive tonic is very soothing and strengthening to weak, tired or inflamed eyes. Oculists find it excellent for treating granulated lids and eye troubles generally. Its strengthening properties make it a great aid to those who wear glasses.

Mrs. G. K.: You may be able to reduce your weight simply by exercising and dieting, but you can easily hasten the reduction with the following: Dissolve four ounces of parnotis in one and one-half pints hot water; when cold strain out the sediment; take a tablespoonful of the liquid before each meal and you will find it a splendid dissolver of fatty tissues that will not yield to other remedies. It is harmless, inexpensive and has restored many to their former slender figures and given sure relief from the burden of being too fat.

M. R. C.: A good, inexpensive lotion to take away that shiny, oily, sallow look to your complexion can be prepared at small cost as follows: Dissolve four ounces of spurmax in one-half pint hot water; when cool add two teaspoonfuls glycerine and apply to the skin, rubbing gently until dry. This will whiten and beautify your skin without leaving that powdered look. You will find this lotion far better than powder, as it not only gives your face a fresh, youthful tint, but does not rub off or show like powder. I find it excellent for preventing and removing freckles, skin pimples and as a protection to the skin from the sun and wind. Do not use powder on your face if right in. There's a fellow feeling between us.

Now it is impossible to cover every phase of our life at the crossings. There's too much to tell. We don't know ourselves how many hundred questions we are asked and answer every day. A man stepped up to me and started to ask a question when a woman butted in. Finally he got a chance and told me that while he had waited, ten men and women had applied to me for information.

Here is a point the public won't believe. Officers at this crossing read the advertisements. If there is a big bargain sale advertised we know there is going to be a rush of shoppers, and while it is not in the regulations, we post ourselves so we can talk silks and flounces and lingerie to women who want to know what store is having the bargain sale and where the counters are.

We are fast becoming a human encyclopedia. An officer is supposed to be a walking street directory, but a year on the crossing gives him a post-graduate course in a thousand things not covered by the city maps, ordinances or other ordinary sources of information.

And this leads me back to the beginning, that the public sees only one side of a crossing officer. It's an exciting life, full of action and annoyance; humorous, pathetic, exasperating, and if you don't believe, stand with me an hour of any day at Seventh and Broadway.

THIS LEPER GETS AWAY.

Officers of the County Hospital yesterday asked the sheriff for aid in capturing Jesus Cervantes, a Mexican, afflicted with leprosy, who escaped from the institution last Thursday. Cervantes was confined in the pest-house. It is believed he has gone to Lordsburg, from which place he was taken to the hospital.

such as is used for steam-tight gaskets.

The other two holes are set a short distance apart, and are of such size as to permit the easy insertion of electric wires. About one of them solder has been poured and then filed off to make a flat, smooth, bright surface, seemingly for the sake of good electrical connections. These file marks have apparently been made within a few days.

The place where the shell was found is within 200 feet of the plant of the California Industrial Company, and by a strange irony, of the yards where are piled the wreckage from the Times Building. A short distance farther up on Santa Fe avenue is the plant of the Union Iron Works and across the tracks are the Santa Fe roundhouses. On the freight platforms immediately above the bomb at the time of its discovery were dozens of fifty-gallon gasoline drums ready for shipment.

Experts to whom the infernal contrivance was shown yesterday express no doubt as to its sinister significance. Not only is it obviously home-made, but it is entirely unlike anything used for legitimate purposes, even in the handling of explosives. A report has been made to the authorities, and an investigation will be made.

GREAT CONCERT TUESDAY.

The Y.M.C.A. Glee Club will give its closing concert of the season in Temple Auditorium on Tuesday evening. The management considers itself most fortunate in being able to announce Bruce Gordon Kingsley as soloist on the great Auditorium organ for the occasion, who is considered one of the leading organists of America. Fred Ellis, the popular baritone soloist, will also assist. The principal box seats to this concert were auctioned off at fabulous prices last week for the benefit of the Y.M.C.A. extension fund.

velopment in the building line. It is a fine thing to know that there have been nearly 4500 new houses built and half of that number occupied largely with new settlers. Many streets have been opened, and on each of these new houses have sprung up.

"In the outlying districts, which we have covered this year, there has been tremendous development, and this growth demonstrates the desire of city business men to live in the country where they can acquire land cheaper and live the simple life, if they wish. It is the old suburban habit eastern men have, and the suburban life of Los Angeles has already become one of its chief features.

"In going outside of the city we have been actuated by the fact that many suburbanites are in business here and entitled to be enumerated for the convenience of inquirers. We consider that it is an important feature of the directory."

MARSH FAMILY RELIEF.

CLOSE FIGURING.

It has been figured out that the average man eats one-fourth of his salary. We suppose that the other three-fourths goes to buy picture hats and other finery for mother.

WORK OF THE WIZARD.

Luther Burbank, the plant wizard, has invented a flat pea that will not roll off the knife. This ought to be a prime favorite in fashionable society circles in San Francisco.

WOODS FULL OF THEM.

Every day that passes emphasizes the fact that there are numerous persons in the world in the same class with a man who was once employed by Marcus Daly. "That man of yours knows a lot," said a friend to Daly. "Yes, I believe he does," the copper king replied, "but he can't think of it."

OUT INTO THE WORLD.

The Hollywood High School will graduate nearly sixty young students of the two sexes the coming week. They have finished the curriculum of study and are ready to take up the burden of life. Let us hope that they will become representative men and women, and an honor to their alma mater.

WELCOME OUR GUESTS.

The rush of summer excursionists to the Pacific Coast and Los Angeles has begun, and during the month there will be thousands of eastern people in this city, eager to enjoy the beauties of existence in this sun-kissed land. Let the latchstring be out and every visitor given the glad-hand of welcome.

NO NEW THING.

Senator Pomerene, the Ohio man with the pink marmalade name, has introduced a bill making it a misdemeanor for any adult to refuse to support a parent when able to do so. California has had such a law on the statute books for some years and its use has been invoked in Los Angeles county on a number of occasions.

DIFFERENT NOW.

Thinking of Jim Jeffries and Jack Johnson, over there at the coronation, we can't help musing on changes that have taken place in the tone of the British throne. There was a time when our champions would have been welcomed by the King, but the particular monarch to whom we refer happens to be dead. This King who is now wearing the crown is not built that way.

COLORED FOLK.

Certainly it is time to quit calling the descendants of Ham "colored." They should be called negroes, to be correct. If they were simply colored, why should they be refused entertainment in the same hotels which freely admit Indians, Chinamen, Hindus and others who are most assuredly "colored." Anyway, if you come right down to it, the dictionary will tell you that black is not color.

INSURGENT PROGRAMME.

An inside tip indicates that the plan of the "insurgents" in national politics is to nominate Theodore Roosevelt for President and Hiram Johnson for Vice-President. Necessarily, this would include Senator Works for Secretary of State and Francis J. Heney for Attorney-General. Again we ask, where are E. Toopious Earl, Meyer Lissner and other patriots to come in?

THE EXPOSITIONS.

We hear little or nothing concerning the progress San Francisco is making with the arrangements for the Panama Canal Exposition. But we hear a great deal about busy San Diego with the plans for her Pan-American show in 1915. Maybe it is the difference between the entente cordiale that exists in the South and the same thing which does not exist in the North to the extent that is desired.

SEASICKNESS.

A certain person whose mind has not been trained or habituated to scientific thought exultantly declares that men who use neither whisky nor tobacco are most liable to seasickness. This person overlooks the fact that tobacco users and imbibers of malt and vinous liquors have accustomed their stomachs to nausea to such an extent that the rocking of a ship does not surprise their already poisoned "innards." It is a good sign of a landlubber that gets sick when he goes to sea.

CHINESE DOCTORS.

For the first time in history China has instituted a medical degree. Up till now anyone could be a doctor who could inspire any sort of confidence in his patients. Dr. Herbert Wenham, F.R.C.S., of the Medical College of Peking, reports that sixteen out of twenty-one candidates have succeeded in passing the examination, which is similar to that demanded of medical men in England, France and Germany. It remains to be seen whether the regeneration of China extends to the patronage of the bona-fide physician in future. The magician and the herbalists have held sway for so long. Still, the Chinaman has always been cute enough to pay his doctor only so long as he kept him well and abruptly stop payments in times of sickness. There is something so sweetly reasonable about this. During the recent plague, the European and American doctors who flocked to the scene of trouble so heroically were unanimous in their praise of the Chinese doctors' receptivity of the drastically new ideas that had to be sprung upon them.

CRYSTALLIZING CREEDS.

A well-intentioned but perhaps impractical project has been launched by the People's Pulpit Association of Brooklyn, N. Y., to combine all the different sects of Christianity into one comprehensive and harmonious whole. So that we shall no longer call ourselves Catholics or Episcopalians or Presbyterians or Methodists or Baptists, but all shall be simply Christians; so that we may all worship the same Messiah from the top of one big mountain instead of from the lesser eminences of innumerable foothills. "Smashing creeds" is the rather inelegant way in which they express their intention of accomplishing this desirable ascent.

Emerson complained fifty years ago: "Every Mahometan IS a Mahometan, but in Christianity where is the Christian?" Even in his time Christian churches diverged widely; since then the hair-splitting process has multiplied rapidly the number of Christian sects. Decentralization rather than consolidation seems to be the order of the day. We are getting farther away from the mountain top. But in every other respect Christianity is advancing to more perfect harmony. A Chinese philosopher, a century ago, when asked by a missionary why he refused to embrace Christianity, answered: "Well, the Catholics tell me I am surely lost if I become a Protestant, and the Protestants inform me I shall certainly be damned if I become a Catholic. I believe the Christians to be right and so remain a heathen."

We have traveled a long way in the last hundred years. We no longer foster such a spirit of intolerance. Today all Christians are working together to spread the gospel of love; every missionary abroad is willing to aid his brethren in the good work, independent of creed and dogma. But at home we are still unalterably bent on saving our own souls only after our own preconceived notions of salvation. Many set more store on the outward and visible sign than on the inward and spiritual grace. We believe that the Eternal may only be properly approached through a swinging censor or a surpliced choir or an adult immersion or a black gown or a gospel hymn.

The poet Praed expressed a modern thought in his belief—

"That when the worst has been set down
We all may be forgiven;
For there are fifty roads to town
And rather more to heaven."

Most men today concede the truth of this quatrain, but we prefer, all the same, our particular traditional rut to a broad and common highway. And when you consider how deep are the ruts of tradition you can hardly wonder that men find it a difficult task to "hitch their wagon to a star."

Yet in some ways the individualizing of beliefs is a hopeful sign for the ultimate triumph of what is best in religion and humanity, for these two must advance together. It shows that people are thinking for themselves, so that when at last—if ever—one central church dominates all Christian people, it will be compounded from the best thought of the majority of the race. The Mahometans are homogeneous and present an unbroken front because they accept blindly and are afraid or unable to exercise individual judgment. The many hillocks of Christianity, surrounded by green pastures and sparkling rivulets, are more beautiful than the big Mahometan mountain, confined by barren deserts and sterile wilderness.

Already there are signs that, despite the multiplication of creeds and sects, Christianity is beginning to crystallize its central ideas, and to pay more attention to the substance than to the shape of the jewel. Ministers now freely exchange pulpits, as well as opinions, in a manner that would have shocked our forefathers. If the followers of Christ are, in their thought, less compact than the children of the Prophet, they are more charitable in expressing it. Christianity encourages free will. And any thought that clothes an eternal truth must be absolutely free and unshackled.

If the federation of Christian churches is necessary for the salvation of the world, it will come about by the unerring law of evolution, by the elevation to a higher plane of each individual thought; and not by any process of "creed smashing." Too many men here spend their youth in destroying the faiths of their childhood, and then lament in old age their inability to build them up again.

WHAT IS A REPUBLICAN FORM OF GOVERNMENT?

The fate of the initiative and the referendum, in every State that has adopted it, or that may adopt it, depends upon the construction that will be given by the Supreme Court of the United States to the word "republican" as used in Article 4, Section 4, of the Constitution of the United States, wherein it is provided that "the United States shall guarantee to every State in the Union a republican form of government."

In a decision made in 1874 (Miner vs. Happersett, 21 Wallace 175,) the Supreme Court of the United States says: "No particular government is designated by the clause as republican. Neither is the exact form to be guaranteed in any manner especially designated. All the States had governments when the Constitution was adopted. In all the people participated to some extent, through their representatives elected in the manner specially provided. These governments the Constitution did not change. They were accepted precisely as they were, and it is therefore to be presumed that they were such as it was the duty of the States to provide. Thus we have unmistakable evidence of what was republican in form, within the meaning of that term as employed in the Constitution.

In a later case, decided in 1891, (In re Duncan 139 U. S. 461,) the Supreme Court says:

"By the Constitution a republican form of government is guaranteed to every State in the Union, and the distinguishing feature of that form is the right of the people to choose their own officers for governmental administration, and pass their own laws in virtue of the legislative power reposed in representative bodies, whose legitimate acts may be said to be those of the people themselves; but while the people are thus the source of political power, their governments, national and State, have been limited by written constitutions, and they have themselves thereby set bounds to their own power, as against the sudden impulses of mere majorities."

The Chief Justice in the decision above cited takes up the argument of Daniel Webster in the case of Luther vs. Borden, and says:

"Mr. Webster's argument in that case took a wider sweep and contained a masterly statement of the American system of government as recognizing that the people are the source of all political power, but that as the exercise of governmental powers immediately by the people themselves is impracticable they must be exercised by representatives."

The exact language of Mr. Webster in the Borden case was:

"The people must have representatives. In England the representative system originated not as a matter of right, but because it was called by the King. The people complained sometimes that they had to send up burgesses. At last there grew up a constitutional representation of the people. In our system it grew up differently. It was because the people could not act in mass, and the right to choose a representative is every man's portion of sovereign power."

Congressman Littleton was interrupted several times by Mr. Lafferty of Oregon to whom he replied as follows: "I have submitted the authority of the scholar, the student, the thinker, and the philosopher upon civil government. I prefer to accept that as a riper and a wiser opinion than any fugitive utterance made in the friction of politics—even though it was made in the great State of Oregon." [Prolonged applause on the Democratic side.]

It is to be hoped that the case from Oregon now pending before the United States Supreme Court, involving the question as to whether an initiative law is invalid under the fourth section of the fourth article of the Constitution of the United States, will be heard and determined before the vote shall be taken on its adoption into the California constitution.

A distinguished Democratic member of Congress, Mr. Martin W. Littleton of New York, in a speech made in Congress May 29, 1911, on the admission of Arizona, said:

"You say—those of you who are in favor of this programme—that you wish to put it in the power of the people to initiate legislation in your State. Where, in the final and full philosophy of your doctrine, will your Supreme Court be? What will be its status? You may write into the Arizona constitution that any law that conflicts with that constitution shall be unconstitutional and the courts may so declare it; but if you give to the people of that State the power, through the Legislature, or in conjunction with the Legislature, to make any day in the year by the initiative any law, or to have referred to them any law proposed by the Legislature, you are in fact providing for legislation, in the ordinary sense, whose source, whose power, and whose binding effect shall be as great and as final as the organic law expressed in your constitution.

"What will be the attitude of the courts of the State if they are called upon to review a legislative act which has been brought about by the initiative through the medium of the people? How will they approach the question of declaring that kind of a law to be in conflict with the constitution of the State, especially when they know that it and they spring from the same source?

"I say, my friends, you may protest that it is a distrust of the people, but it is really yourselves who are destroying trust in the people—that supreme and definite trust which was created in the inception and which has been maintained in the development of this government. You say to me that I do not trust the people, but I tell you that I trust them more than you do, for I trust them to choose their representatives and to compel their representatives to respond to their will, to do their final bidding, to represent them, and to achieve for them in a representative capacity what the people themselves in their multifarious occupations cannot achieve. You who favor these particular laws do not trust the people because you are not willing that they should choose their representatives, and you have not faith in them that they can compel their representatives to respond to their will.

"The referendum in all its essentials does not differ from the initiative. Our friends have said to us, and we have seen it published, but without foundation, that there has been a breakdown in representative government. Mr. Chairman, I challenge any man to find any era in American history in which the legislative and executive branches of the government have been so keenly sensible of the popular will as they are today. There may be occasions, there may be places, in which there has been a breakdown, but as a general proposition it is not true. The whole world today is governed by some system of representation—in science, in art, in commerce, in banking, in law, in scholarship—wherever the human race has made progress or advancement. If you will analyze the sources of that development you will find that it has resulted and depends upon the judgment of those who have the selection of the man, and the final fulfillment of that judgment by that man in his representative capacity."

EIGHT-HOUR LAW IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

All that Judge Densmore was called upon to decide, and all that he did decide with respect to the woman's eight-hour law, was that the provision regulating hours of labor in hotels is discriminatory and class legislation, and is therefore unconstitutional and invalid.

His opinion as to the constitutionality of other sections of the law which were not before him is mere "obiter dicta," and, as to them, it decides nothing. Doubtless every section of the law will be thrashed out before the Supreme Court. It occurs at first blush to the untrained legal mind that if it is unconstitutional to prohibit a woman from carrying dishes, or making beds, or washing windows for nine or ten hours in a hotel it must be equally unconstitutional to prohibit her from bending nine or ten hours over a wash tub or an ironing table in a laundry, or from manipulating a telegraph key or a typewriter, or from presiding at the desk in an express or transportation office, or from selling goods in a department store. Every one of these employments is less arduous than that of working in a hotel or restaurant. And if the law is unconstitutional with respect to woman waitresses and chambermaids in a hotel, it would seem that logically it must be unconstitutional as to the other employments.

UNCLE WALT.

The Poet Philosopher.

The king sits on his nobby throne, and knights and ladies of high degree will smile or blanch at his lightest tone and bow and grovel and bend the knee. There's glowing splendor on every hand, it is a stirring and dazzling scene; and peers and princes of every land have come to jolly the king and queen. But the face of the monarch is sad and worn—the face of a man who has seldom laughed; perhaps he thinks it a thing to mourn that he was called to the reigning graft. Perhaps he envies the man who digs, the man who dwells in a humble cot, with his muley cow and his bunch of pigs, and his apple tree and his garden plot. He may have dreams of a quiet life, afar from diamonds and thrones and silk, with his barefoot kids and his happy wife, who sings while skimming the morning milk. To ride to town on a load of hay and get two pun at the village scales may seem far better than holding sway o'er England, Scotland, and Cork and Wales. To live your life in the blinding glare that beats for aye on a throne and crown—ah, better to ride on an old roan mare, and carry three dozen of eggs to town! The faces of kings are always sad, their eyes are heavy, their whiskers gray; their souls are sick of the reigning fad—they'd like to ride on a load of hay.

The Right of Free Labor.

[Archbishop Ireland in Leslie's.]

While the right to enter upon a strike is and must be conceded as a right belonging to the personal freedom of workingmen, this much must ever be demanded, and in the name of the same principle of freedom under which the men act who refuse to work, that they who cease to work must in no way interfere with the liberty of others who may wish to work. The personal freedom of the individual citizen is the most sacred and precious inheritance of America. Labor unions must be on their guard against serious evils threatening them.

er a holding of hands or a kiss. In either case there is a strong implication of the altar.

As a nation, we do not hold hands or kiss for pleasure. Not at all. Merely by way of signifying our matrimonial intentions. As soon as a young man has kissed a young lady he says: "Then you are going to marry me?"

As though, in yielding, the kisses had compromised herself!

Even at this stage, marriage could be avoided if only the conversational powers of the lady were more greatly developed. When this leading question has been propounded she is naturally called upon to say something definite.

If she should answer "No," she would practically confess that she allowed men to kiss her when she did not love them. And no woman is going to admit that.

Were she versed in repartee, however, she would be evasive and subtle in her reply. She would know the young man spoke entirely through a combined sense of duty and embarrassment, and she would answer accordingly. But never having passed the kindergarten stage of conversational banter, she can think of no adequate response.

So, not caring to say "no," and being unable to respond evasively, she says "yes."

And then—zing-zing!

The First Reform.

One of the first really practical and direct results of the woman's movement in this country came out the other day, when the city fathers decided that it was unjust, unchivalrous and ungentlemanly to charge female dogs more for the privilege of existing than male dogs.

Heretofore, simply because a poor pup happened to be born a lady, her existence was discouraged by charging her $3 a year poll tax. On the other hand, a mere male dog could enjoy all the benefits of the lady canine for only $2 a year poll tax.

This, of course, was most unjust, and savored much of what one lady has called androcentric rule—namely, laws partial to men.

For years this obvious injustice to the weaker sex has been indulged in without protest. But now the influence of the woman's suffrage movement and of the Political Equality Leagues, has resulted in an equitable adjustment. No longer will this unfairness in the dog kingdom be continued.

It is a step in the right direction. Truly, the sun do move!

PUBLIC SERVICE: City Hall and Courts.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The City Planning Commission will start a campaign for a $25,000 fund for advancing its work.

The Board of Public Works has asked the police and City Prosecutor to prosecute persons who place garbage on the curb.

Mayor Alexander commits himself to the Vernon avenue cross-town line.

After having settled upon a division of all of their property of monetary value, a divorced couple were yesterday compelled to ask the aid of the court to decide the question as to who should have the picture of a dead baby.

Harry Knight, the "gentleman burglar," was yesterday found to have been a "pal" of a thief who made a remarkably clever escape from the police. He was sent to prison for eight years.

Argument on a motion to reopen the suit of Dr. W. LeMoyne Wills against his sister to declare that their mother held their father's estate in trust was begun yesterday.

At the City Hall.

RAISE FUND FOR NEW CITY PLAN.

COMMISSION CAN'T GET AID FROM THE COUNCIL.

Chairman Bartlett Announces That Public Spirit Will Be Invoked to Provide Beautification Plans. Polk Tells City Club Necessity of Immediate Beginning.

A campaign for a fund of $25,000 is to be started by the City Planning Commission, of which Rev. Dana W Bartlett is chairman, and the fund is to be raised by private subscription. Rev. Mr. Bartlett made this announcement at the City Club yesterday after Willis I. Polk, a San Francisco architect of some famous achievements, had urged on the city the necessity of adopting a municipal plan and working to its completion during the next few decades. Polk is prospective architect of the San Francisco Panama-Pacific Exposition in 1915.

Rev. Mr. Bartlett said the commission had no hope, under the present financial status of the city, of getting such a fund from the Council, and as it believed delay too dangerous, would make a pressing effort to acquire it by public spirit.

Polk discussed the need on a plan for the development of Los Angeles because he pledged his faith that it will, within 100 years, be a city of five millions and one of the greatest in the world. He did not deal with the problem from a practical standpoint, but from the necessity of an immediate beginning.

It is the devotion to civic beautification and ornamentation that has made Paris what it is, and he suggested that Los Angeles, the magic city of the desert and the Mecca of the sightseeing world, must realize the benefit of achievement in this respect.

"It should be begun without delay, under a comprehensive plan, such as Burnham or Olmstead would make, and followed through the years persistently. It is not something that may be done in a year or a decade, and it possesses ideals that your practical man will always reject. But by systematically working at it posterity will have an inheritance that will be invaluable. You will spend the money anyway. Why not adopt a plan of directing this expenditure to the realization of a great purpose."

Rev. Mr. Bartlett said the City Planning Commission would like to have influence in the new industrial region that is to be established on the Dominguez Rancho. Now is the time, he said, to have a city plan that contemplates the inclusion of this, and will have the influence of providing for its beautification and making the industrial district of Los Angeles just as attractive as the Westlake region or the Wilshire district.

So pressing is the need of a beginning that the commission has decided to attempt to raise the fund privately and employ competent architects, who are to spend at least a year studying the problem

At his suggestion also the club adopted a resolution urging the City Council to create the office of City Forester. This duty is now in the overfilled hands of W. M. Humphreys, Inspector of Public Work, and is necessarily neglected. Rev. Mr. Bartlett said there is a pressing need for attention to the street trees, and that the city should have a properly authorized and equipped official.

GARBAGE LINE.

ASK POLICE TO ENFORCE.

Inspector of Public Works Humphreys, commanding the city's garbage forces, obtained from that board of strategy, the Board of Public Works yesterday, a recommendation to the Chief of Police and City Prosecutor that they prosecute householders who violate the garbage ordinance by setting their cans at the curb, or outside their premises.

This action was caused by a letter of the V. D. Reduction Company to the board saying that it was not the only violator of the garbage law and intimating that the producers are at fault. This letter was in answer to the notification of Humphreys that the company will be fined for its failures to enter the premises and collect, as its contract requires.

The company has been asked to report the producers who do not comply with the garbage ordinance.

It is not probable the police or the City Prosecutor will enforce the ordinance until the householders are fully informed at least of their duty. The garbage contract requires such notice to be given by the contractor, together with the approximate time of collection. Until the contractor complies with this contract it will hardly be deemed an act of justice to hale householders into court for punishment.

Under the ordinance the householder must place his garbage in a proper receptacle, within seventy-five feet of the property line and the contractor is required to enter to collect it. Because the contractor during more than fourteen months that the contract has been in force would not enter the premises about the only way the householder was able to have his garbage taken was by carrying it to the curb. This is not information to the householder, the Board of Public Works nor the contractor. Most of the garbage has been collected in violation of this contract all of the time and Humphreys, in a report to the Council, says not more than 25 per cent. of it has been a premise collection.

Under the contract the contractor is required to serve a printed card on each householder informing him of the law, fixing the householders obligations and also the approximate time of collection. This has not been done.

It is the intention of the board to impose all just penalties on the contractor from now on where he fails to do his duty, and as his duty comes first it is not likely householders will be prosecuted until the contractor has served them with the proper notices. In the meantime, however, it is proper for them to comply with the seventy-five-foot rule and report failures to enter and collect promptly to the Board of Public Works.

FAVORS VERNON.

MAYOR IS OUTSPOKEN.

Further emphasizing the differences between the Mayor and Lissner's Board of Public Utilities was the expression of the Mayor yesterday that he favors the immediate offering for sale of a franchise for a cross-town line on Vernon avenue.

His statement seems to be a public intimation to the Council that this is the kind of action he will sustain. Inferentially he indicates that he will not sustain a repeal of the Alvarado street boulevard ordinance.

"I think the Vernon avenue line will solve the problem," said he yesterday. "I favor the sale of a franchise for a line on that street and I may do things that I don't want to do to get it."

When it was suggested that an independent line would not bring transfer privileges the Mayor said he had thought of all those things and provided for them.

"Mr. Huntington has done many handsome things," said the Mayor, "and I feel that he will not let any trivial question stand in the way of furnishing public service, such as a Vernon avenue line will. I believe he should have the opportunity of bidding on a franchise for this line."

The Mayor has also been urged to hold the situation in abeyance until the report of Bion J. Arnold, on the transportation problem of the city, is made known, as he might have different suggestions.

Pool Playing Age.

The Mayor has signed the ordinance fixing the age of persons who may visit pool and billiard rooms at 18 years, thus reducing the age from 21 years. The Mayor says he did this because, as chairman of the Police Commission, he found many proprietors in trouble because of boys who appeared to be 21 and who said they were. He believes that the proprietors will now be able to escape this menace to their business by refusing all who do not show that they are past 18 to enter their places. The ordinance will take effect early next month.

"Abbertross" Aeroplane.

A factory to make aeroplanes that sustain themselves in air without a motor, "like a gull or an abbertross," is offered to the Mayor in a letter from John J. Boatman of Ocean Falls, B. C. The "abbertross" machine acording to Boatman's "To-wit" in his letter, is able "to ascend in the spiral, to lock the wind, the stronger the wind the better." Boatman asks a site for his factory and says he is an American citizen. The Mayor referred his letter to the Chamber of Commerce.

At the Courthouse.

COURT'S JUDGMENT IS QUESTIONED.

NEW TRIAL IS ASKED FOR IN NOTED WILL CASE.

Lawyers Argue That Tenor of Late Capitalist's Will Has Been Misconstrued by Court Who Held Against Establishment of Trust and Son Had No Interest.

Arguments for a new trial in the suit of Dr. W. LeMoyne Wills against his sister, Madeline F. Wills, and her real estate partner, Mrs. Louise E. M. Brainerd, was begun before Judge Wilbur yesterday.

Dr. Wills and his sister are the only children of the late John A. Wills, who died November 26, 1891, leaving an estate valued at $550,000. He left a will giving his property in trust to his widow, Charlotte L. Wills, indicating that he desired to have his real estate kept intact in order that his heirs might get the benefit of the increase in value. He also expressed a wish that his children might share alike on the death of his widow.

Mrs. Wills died October 5, 1908. She left a will giving her property to her daughter and directing her to make provisions for the doctor as she saw fit, only stating that he must get not less than $100 a month. However, if he should contest the will, he was to be cut off with $5.

Dr. Wills did file a contest of the will and he also began proceedings to have an express trust declared of his father's estate. He took the stand that his father had left the property for his benefit, and that his mother had no right to will it away.

After a lengthy trial, Judge Wilbur held against the establishment of a trust and decreed that Wills had no interest whatsoever in the property. He also directed that Wills should receive the $100 a month, if he should dismiss his contest of the will within sixty days. If he did not do so, the jurist held that he should take his $5 and nothing more.

Mrs. Brainerd was made a party to the action because she and Miss Wills were partners in the real estate business. Efforts were made to show that some of their holdings were purchased with money from the estate.

The attorneys yesterday argued that the court has misconstrued the tenor of the will of the late capitalist. It will probably take several days before they have finished arguing on the question of a retrial.

DEAD BABY'S PICTURE.

COURT FINDS FOR MOTHER.

Although they had no difficulty in dividing all of their property which had any monetary value, Mr. and Mrs. Alten D. Chesebraugh yesterday appealed to Judge Monroe to decide who should have a certain picture of their dead child.

Mrs. Chesebraugh was granted a decree about a week ago. The judge urged them to make a property settlement among themselves. They reported that she was to take the house, he continuing the payments on the balance which is due. She is also to get $10 a month alimony.

The split came when it came to a small picture of their baby. There were many other pictures of the child, but each admired this particular one. The judge thought that the mother should be given the first consideration and ordered that she should take the photograph, but Chesebraugh is to have a larger picture.

EIGHT YEARS FOR HIM.

BURGLAR IS SENTENCED.

Harry Knight, the "gentleman burglar," was yesterday sentenced by Judge McCormick to serve eight years in the penitentiary for having entered the home of H. R. Kells and having carried away $4000 worth of jewelry and silverware.

It developed yesterday that the prisoner was a partner of J. C. Cloud, who made a clever escape from police detectives several months ago. Cloud complained to the officers that his wife was dangerously ill, and played on their sympathies until they took him to his home

The officers allowed him to go into the place alone. About five minutes later Mrs. Cloud appeared at the front door and announced to the police that their prisoner had escaped. They have been unable to locate him.

Going to prison will not be a new experience for Knight, as he has already served one term in the penitentiary for having committed forgery in San Francisco.

COURT STENOGRAPHERS.

NEW APPOINTING RULE.

Court reporters will hereafter be appointed by the concurrence of the majority of the judges of the Superior Court instead of each jurist selecting his own stenographer, according to a resolution which was adopted by the judges yesterday.

The magistrates decided that, in accordance with law, it was necessary to give the pothook slingers an examination, and then choose them. Men who qualified and were assigned to their work are as follows:

Department one, E. C. Thompson; department two, Leo Longley; department three, Monroe H. Conlee; department four, N. H. Peterson; department five, Henry Henderson; department six, W. H. Tiffany; department seven; J. A. Vaughn; department eight, J Benjamin; department nine, Edwin H. Williams; department ten and extra session No. 1, J. J. Petermichel; department eleven, B. N. Smith, Jr.; department twelve, John H. Chilcot; extra session No. 2, Charles Sexton, and extra session No. 3, J. P. Doyle.

IN THE INFERIOR COURTS.

Proprietor of Chinese Laundry Is Released on Bail in Case Involving Constitutionality of Ordinance.

Supported by the proprietors of the majority of the Chinese laundries located in the residence districts of the city, Quong-Wo, a laundryman at No. 721 South Flower street, was released on $500 bail yesterday. The case originated in the Police Courts where many similar cases are now pending, awaiting the outcome of Quong's case in the Appellate Court. Habeas corpus proceedings are now in process, the hope of Quong's attorneys being to have him released with the decision that the ordinance which prohibits the maintenance of laundries in the residence districts is unconstitutional.

City Prosecutor Eddie, who prosecuted Quong in the Police Court trial, was notified yesterday morning that the hearing on the habeas corpus action had been set for the 26th inst.

The Montgomery & Mullin Lumber Company recently took similar action when they were charged with having maintained a lumber yard in a prohibited district. The case was carried to the higher court and the ordinance upheld. The laundrymen, however, contend that their places of business are far removed from this class, and should be allowed the same latitude as groceries and drug stores.

Police Court Brevities.

Sing Wo and Kit Wong, charged with having conducted a lottery in Chinatown, were fined $50 each by Police Judge Chambers yesterday. The fine, until lately, has usually been $25, but the police were unable to find that the punishment had had the desired effect, and the amount was doubled.

Bert Daley was the only speeder to appear in Police Court yesterday. He was charged by Motorcyclemen Harlan and Hickok with having driven more than twenty miles an hour on South Figueroa street. He paid a fine of $25.

CHINESE BACK PRISONERS.

Colony Will Raise Money for Bail if Granted, to Three Smugglers Convicted of Conspiracy.

The transcripts in the cases of Wong Wing Hing and Ng Fun, convicted of conspiracy, is being prepared for appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. When this is done, an effort will be made to have the Mongolians released on bail, and the entire Chinese colony will see to it that the money is raised.

The cases against these men is most important from a government point of view, in that it was the first instance in local prosecution for infraction of the Chinese laborer's law, in which conviction was secured through the confession and evidence of a co-conspirator. Gin Wut Wah confessed, and it is upon his evidence that the appeal will be argued. It will be contended that it is necessary to have evidence as to a conspiracy proven by some other person other than the co-conspirators themselves.

TAKE DEPOSITIONS.

E. H. Owen, commissioner of the United States District Court, having been appointed special examiner by the United States Circuit Court of Colorado, in the case of the United States against the Yampa Anthracite Coal Company, yesterday took the deposition of Eben H. and Lida Keach of this city. Special Assistant United States District-Attorney Lacy of Denver assisted inn the work.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

Lucius E. and Myra B. Howe of Long Beach, where the husband is employed in the postoffice, filed petition to be adjudged bankrupts yesterday. Both appear to be trying to get from under a judgment for $350 secured by Lloyd E. Noble, before a justice of the peace in Long Beach. The assets of Howe are given as $217.50, and those of his wife, $167.

MANY APPLICANTS.

About 150 applicants have secured the necessary papers for the examination to be held by the local civil service commission June 29, for qualification for extra clerks and carriers of the Los Angeles postoffice.

BENCH STICKS FOR DIVISION.

CLASHES WITH PROSECUTOR ON THE ASSIGNMENTS.

Presiding Justice Claims That Gates Bill Gives Him Power to Apportion Cases Among the Departments According as They Are Suited for the Several Magistrates.

Despite a recommendation from Deputy District Attorney Keyes that attaches of his office be allowed to indicate in complaints the township justice court in which the case is to be tried, Presiding Justice Young is distributing the actions as he deems best, believing that the Gates bill, which recently consolidated the courts, gives him the power to do this.

Members of the District Attorney's staff say that some of the justices are better fitted for certain cases than others. Most of the criminal cases have heretofore been filed in one court, but this will stop now. Civil cases have been assigned in rotation, as they come in to the chief clerk, and criminal actions are taken care of in the same way.

The only exceptions are cases of speeding and failure to provide. The former are quickly disposed of, and to divide them among several courts would entail much lost time. A plan looked on with favor is to distribute them to one court throughout each month.

The case of every woman who gets out a complaint charging her husband with failure to provide for her must be investigated by probation or Juvenile Court officials. The probation officer has requested that all these cases be filed in Justice Forbes's court. The building is nearest to the County Courthouse, and the chambers where the examinations take place are near the door, where there is no disturbance when anyone enters.

Justice Summerfield is as near the Courthouse, but his chambers are in the rear of the building, and the courtroom must be traversed to reach them. Summerfield believes that one court should be given over entirely to criminal cases, because these are of uncertain duration, and their protraction frequently requires that civil suits be repeatedly set over. A case in point is the Bellomy-McGinnis arson examination, which required that seven other actions be continued yesterday.

Justice Young agrees with the District Attorney in his opinion that warrants of arrest should be signed by the justices, rather than by the chief clerk.

Keyes stated yesterday that his office will not seek to press the matter, since his message to Justice Young was simply a recommendation. Justice Reeve states that either method of apportioning cases will suit him. The bill is working as Young believes it should now, and the next move must be the District Attorney's.

SEEK MISSING BOY.

Friends and Members of Family Join in Search for Young Man Missing from Home Near Santa Monica.

Feeling that he had brought too much shame upon the members of his family to longer live with them, after having been accused by the police of theft because he took an old carbureter and sold it, Sam C. Ketchum, 14 years old, ran away from home several days ago.

His father, W. W. Ketchum, a wealthy and retired glove manufacturer, yesterday offered a reward of $25 for any information which might put him in touch with the boy.

Sam's parents reside at No. 153 San Vincente boulevard, Santa Monica, which is on the palisades. They have a beautiful home and everything which might amuse the youngster was provided. There was no reason for him to commit theft.

His friends say they are convinced that he did not intend to do anything wrong when he took the piece of machinery, but they think that he thought it was not wanted by anyone.

It is feared that he has gained the impression that he has done something so terrible that he should remain away to save his family's honor.

Judge Hutton, who is a friend of the family, yesterday instituted a search in this city. He is anxious that the boy should be told that it will not be difficult for him to make amends for what he has done.

The boy is described as being five feet two inches tall, weighing 132 pounds, being of a stocky build and having a light complexion, blue eyes and a frank countenance. He is a ready talker and makes friends easily. When he went away he was wearing a navy blue suit, with knee pantaloons, elk skin bicycle shoes and black soft felt hat. He took with him a pair of gray pants and a gray sweater.

ALAS, POOR YORICK.

Fine Ostrich, the Delight of Thousands, Dines on Barbed Wire, and Kicks the Bucket.

"Emperor William" is dead, and his body may be stuffed by this time. The news did not come by way of Berlin dispatches, but arrived from South Pasadena.

The emperor was one of the pioneers at the Cawston Ostrich Farm, and as one of the finest and largest birds in the Southwest, he was introduced to hundreds of the most distinguished citizens of the land. He carried his dignity well, and would still be carrying it had not his voracious appetite tempted him to devour about two feet of barbed wire.

He was sick for several weeks, and all remedies failed to relieve him of his ailment, which was thought to be gastritis.

The body was sent to a taxidermist yesterday morning, who discovered the real cause of William's death. The tines on the wire had penetrated the walls of the stomach. Ostriches have a sort of revolving stomach which grinds and grinds, breaking up stone, wood and other hard substances. But the wire was too much for him. The body will be displayed in the downtown store.

FACTS FEATURES AND FANCIES FOR WOMEN.
BY ~ Olin Gray.

DAILY BEAUTY HINT: When the feet are tender to the point of blistering, the following treatment is said to be efficacious: Change the shoes and stockings once or twice a day and bathe the feet in cold water night and morning, rubbing them dry with a rough towel. Then bathe with the following solution: Alcohol, 4 ounces; salicylic acid, ½ ounce. Apply with a soft cloth. This is said to give relief.

"Keep up your good work regarding the danger of long hatpins," writes a correspondent. "I am a victim of one of them, having received a ferocious jab in the arm while in the shopping throngs on Broadway. The blood from the wound saturated shirtwaist and coat sleeve, necessitating a hurried trip to a physician's office where I had to have the wound cleaned and dressed."

Have you ever realized that such things are possible? And for what cause? Simply thoughtlessness; for I am sure no woman would willingly injure another in this way. We are so prone to think that OUR hat pins, OUR parasols will not injure; just as mothers are apt to think that THEIR children can do no wrong.

Some States have legislated against the long hat pin. Isn't it too bad that such legislation should be necessary? Let us, in California, protect ourselves against such legislation, by doing the sensible thing of our own accord.

The Wedding Invitations.

"How long before the wedding should the invitations be issued"—is the question asked by the bride-to-be, when she is first confronted by all the details of preparing for her own wedding. She has not thought about many of these things, until they apply to her own case, has not observed very closely. Not later than fifteen days and not earlier than four weeks, is the general rule for sending out the wedding invitations. If you care at all about correct details in these matters, and of course you do, or you would not have a social wedding, it is best to go to a first-class stationer's for your invitations, as you will then be assured that all are correct.

Army Things.

Have you visited the army sale? It is interesting as all pertaining to the army is likely to be. Also there are some excellent bargains. For the summer camp, there are wool blankets, which are warm and heavy enough for that kind of usage. Then there are guns and pistols, sabres and caps—all of which make striking ornaments for above the fireplace or in the entrance hall. The guns are second-hand, but the wearables and the blankets are fresh.

Sales.

It seems as though there had been a conspiracy among the merchants to see how low they could place prices—a sort of "dare you" game; for certainly they are lower than ever before. This is especially true of ready-to-wear silk gowns. In the latest, cut, too, and stylishly trimmed and with the most modish of touches at neck and sleeve. I noticed some yesterday which seemed so cheap as to be almost a gift.

The Last Nap.

After all the preaching in favor of early rising, comes along a person who is said be "som-mat" of an authority and declares that early rising is not only bad for the nerves, but bad for the eyes and equally bad for the complexion! That last word will settle it with many, no matter what may be said in favor of "dawn's dewy imprint." It is just possible that the "worm may turn" and give up being early, after all these years.

That Golden Sale.

It looks as though many were taking advantage of that golden ticket sale at one of the large stores, to lay in a supply of everything needed for the house and for the person, for many moons. There are great price reductions in all departments and it is really worth while to investigate. You know, too, that anything bought there will be of first-class quality, no matter what the reduction in price.

"Trade Lasts."

I know two girls who are the most adroit of flatterers and yet they manage it in so clever a way that you scarcely realize that they are "cooking it up" between themselves. This is how they do it. When you meet them, one says: "I heard a glorious compliment for you, the other day." Of course you look receptive. Then she tells you what she heard a girl say about you—and it is so fine that you know she would never have had the face to say it to you herself. That reminds the other of something equally nice that she heard. So you are regaled until you really begin to feel foolish. I think I have fathomed the secret of it, too. They talk about you to each other, and then each tells what the other said!

For the Fourth.

A pleasant suggestion for the Fourth of July, to replace the usual fireworks and dangerous sports, is ye old colonial party. Guests are to assemble on the lawn, all attired in costumes of ye olden time and games such as our grandparents enjoyed are to be the order of the day. Children especially will enjoy such a party, as it is always a delight to them to "dress up." Any amount of originality may be displayed in the programme, however informal. "Charades" are always interesting when presented in costume. A few historical scenes may be composed to give a patriotic atmosphere to the occasion.

The Recipe.

"I once lived neighbor to a most improvident family," said the Good Housekeeper. "They spent plenty of money and were far from poor, but when I say improvident, I mean it in the full sense of the word—they were careless about providing. The family was large and the mother was indolent and everything went hap-hazard. One day the bishop came unexpectedly to visit them and as usual nothing was in readiness, and it was nearly dinner time. In a panic the improvident hostess sent over to my house to ask that I lend her some already prepared dish to meet the emergency. I helped her as best I could and among other things sent a ham salad which I made, thinking that it would come in handy for Sunday luncheon or tea. It happened to be rather tasty and, as I learned afterward, it caught the bishop's fancy to such an extent that he commented and then asked for the recipe. The hostess said she was never quite so nonplussed. She hemmed and hawed and then began to name the ingredients. "I believe I had something of everything I have ever heard of in that salad," she said—"and as I thought it over, afterwards, I hoped sincerely that his good wife would not try to make the dish, according to that recipe, if he chanced to remember it." She said that next time she would not start with a false premise, but woused just own up to begin with.

Fashions for Today.

Hats for young girls are crowded with flowers. When worn with the quaint fischus which are so popular with the summer gowns, these hats are especially charming.

The all-white hat of fine straw, trimmed with white wings and faced with blue or black velvet, is the new offering for afternoon wear.

Many of the hats are weighted with odd close-curling ostrich plumes, as unlike the "willow" plume as can be.

Some of the new blouses are made wholly of bands of shaped pieces of embroidery, joined together with lace.

Silk and satin roses are much in evidence for corsage decorations and finishing the girdle at the front or side.

English eyelet embroidery is having a continued favor and is tremendously popular for tunics worn over satin skirts.

Berthas of fine mull or batiste finished with three tiny ruffles of Valenciennes are extremely becoming to the slim figure.

Dots, stripes and odd figured designs are based on tussore and foulards. Most of these silks are combined with plain bands of silk.

One waist handsomely trimmed with Irish lace had discs of "Helen" pink scattered along the lace here and there with pleasing effect.

Some of the new parasols are edged with narrow ostrich feathers and have a big bow of ribbon on the handle, also edged with feathers.

For a satin slipper nothing is so effective as a small round buckle of rhinestone, through which is inserted a satin or velvet ribbon.

HE'S DONE WITH FIGHTING.

So Says Gen. Salinas, Just Out of County Jail—Thinks Mexico Will Become Great Country.

Reitering the famous saying of Gen. Sherman that "War is hell," Gen. Francisco Vasquez Salinas, who was released from the County Jail Friday night, after an incarceration of forty days, says he is done with fighting.

"Of course, if Madero needed my services I might return, but I will never again engage in war of my own volition," he stated.

"There is a mistaken idea regarding my attitude toward the recent insurrection. I am a liberalist in the main sense of the word, but I am not an anarchist. When I appealed to the junta here it was for the purpose of showing the members how the cause in Lower California was being injured by them. I was in favor of their methods only so far as they were practical in the carrying on of war.

"It was my idea of discipline that resulted in the action taken against me by Robert Pryce and other officers in the army like him. Fighting booze was what they glory in, and when I took steps to discipline them they made an effort to murder me. They would have succeeded, too, had they not been a pack of cowards. They thought I was unarmed, but I had been anticipating such trickery, and I had my gun concealed on me. I threw my gun in Pryce's face and he and the rest of his cowards sneaked away like a lot of whipped dogs.

"I began fighting under Diaz. I was close to the Federal government and held a high office in the army. Diaz and myself had a falling out, however.

"I believe that Mexico will grow to be a great country now. The fighting in Lower California should be checked immediately. When this is done there will be nothing to stop the progress of the country.

"I will be compelled to remain in Los Angeles until after I am called to testify before the United States grand jury in connection with the part taken by the junta here in the fighting in Lower California. I will then go to San Diego to visit my family."

Gen. Salinas was arrested April 29 as he was leaving the headquarters of the local junta, No. 531 1-2 East Fourth street, by a member of the Moore Detective Agency. His arrest was ordered by telegraph from the Mexican government. His case was taken by Attorney George F. Snyder. The Mexican government failed to forward the warrant or the disposition on which it had been based to the State Department at Washington.

NURSERY IMPROVEMENTS.

Work of Adding Playroom and Outdoor Sleeping-room to Begin at Once at St. Elizabeth's.

The returns from the sale of pencils for the benefit of the St. Elizabeth Day Nursery are still coming in, and orders for $200 worth of pencils are still in hand to be filled. It is thought that the estimated receipts of $5000 will be realized, and work will be begun at once on a large addition to the nursery, for a play-room and an outdoor sleeping-room.

The ladies at the various stands where pencils were sold on "Pencil Day" realized from $50 to $450 each, and at the entrance to the baseball park, where a stand was conducted by Miss Ward and assistants, $81 was realized. The managers of the nursery feel very grateful to the public for the generous support received, and wish to express their thanks to everybody who helped and everybody who bought a pencil.

SIMPLE CURE FOR "POISON OAK"

A Soothing Liquid Composed Mostly of Oil of Wintergreen Found to Give Instant Relief.

Residents of Los Angeles and the surrounding country need not fear Poison Oak as heretofore.

It has been found that a simple wash known as D. D. D. Prescription, the great Eczema Cure, made mostly of oil of wintergreen, combined with other healing ingredients, will instantly give relief to that burning itch.

And if the remedy is applied in time it stops the breaking out of the watery pustules, preventing their spread.

Picknickers should remember this oil of wintergreen compound (D. D. D. Prescription.) Take a bottle along—a 25c bottle, anyway, and always keep a bottle in the house. The Owl Drug Co.'s Stores.

another person in a Tuxedo and no white apron.

Of course no one will object to Elbert waiting on himself, oiling his own hair, and cooking his own beefsteak.

Yes, beefsteak—for, let it be known that Elbert is a vegetarian only in theory. When a juicy beefsteak, sizzling in butter, is placed before him, he devours it with the same avidity as that of any common and vulgar man who openly scorns the anaemic diet of vegetarianism.

I have sat across the table from the Fra many a time in his Roycroftie Inn, and seen him get around a beefsteak. And without Fletcherizing it, either. The Fra bolts his food like any other human being.

Furthermore, he has waitresses to bring his beefsteaks—waitresses in white aprons—paid so much per.

If these socialistic faddists would ever live up to their theories, one might at least respect them as martyrs to a wrong cause. But any socialist will become an individualist, in practice if not in theory, if he gets a few dollars.

The Fra can afford to hire flunkeys to make his bed, to broil his beefsteaks, and pass him the salt. So, like other socialists who have come into money, he keeps up his socialism only in theory.

The Socialist Dream.

There will always be two classes—the ruling and the serving. It can never be otherwise. Nature abhors equality. A menial is always a menial, even in this country, where we are trying to raise ignorance and mediocrity to a democratic virtue.

Fundamentally, our instincts do not change. The barrier between the classes is always there, whether apparent to the naked eye or not. The ultimate lesson of evolution is inequality, and inequality is the essence of culture. We will never be a cultured nation until we build the barrier—until we lend our efforts to developing a flunkey class.

The sweet and touching theory of socialism, that if we arrange it so that every one has an income of $10,000 a year, the nature of the serving class will change—is a vain and impossible dream.

When a flunkey has his $10,000, he will merely have a dozen crayon portraits instead of one. He will guzzle three times the amount of patent medicine that he does on a smaller wage. He will have a whole flock of dead painted ducks in his dining-room instead of two He will still prefer the music of Cohen to that of Brahms. And he will still wait until Saturday night to interview the bathtub.

Even if you educate him it does no good; it does not change the caste of his mind. He may learn to recite passages of Latin, and to compute problems in algebra, but his understanding of things will remain the same. Anything that requires original thinking will be as incomprehensible to him at the end of his schooling as at the beginning.

You may put a member of the flunkey class through a curriculum of college learning, invest him with a degree and force upon him a sheepskin. But what is the result? He will still believe in hell; he will always be wary of the numeral 13, and will carry amulets to ward off disease.

THE LANCER.

NEW ORPHEUM'S OPENING DATE.

Manager and Architect at Conference Last Monday Night in North. Auction Starts Next Wednesday.

At a conference yesterday between Clarence Drown, resident manager, and G. Albert Lansburgh of San Francisco, the architect, it was decided to open the new Orpheum, on South Broadway, Monday evening, the 26th inst. This will give a full week in which to put on the finishing touches.

It had been hoped to open the theater at an earlier date, but the 26th was finally named so that there would be no doubt that every detail of the fine building shall have been completed. There will be no smell of wet paint or varnish, no unfastened seats or incomplete stage.

Seats for the opening will be on sale at auction at the old Orpheum Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. The lower floor, the twenty-six boxes and the thirteen loges can only be obtained by bidding. The balcony and gallery seats will be put on sale in the regular way at the box office of the new theater, Monday morning, the 19th inst.

The installation of the seats at the new Orpheum and the hanging of the draperies will begin tomorrow. Much of the scenery, all new, is installed, and the immense drop curtain, the asbestos and the valance, will go into place without delay. Little is left to be done, and if occasion required, the house could be opened next week.

including the sloyd, manual arts, sewing and the general work of the grades and intermediate; and there will be a series of farces and plays. One of the most interesting to be presented will be a Spanish play, given by the students.

There will be a commencement, too, although there is but one graduate. Hudson Young has the honor of being the first to graduate from this new school. W. I. Travis, principal of Wilmington High School, is proud of his student body and they have accomplished much. This school is especially to be praised for its gardens, which are among the finest in the high schools of Greater Los Angeles. The exhibit and commencement will take place June 23. Nine girls and three boys will graduate from the grammar school at that time.

On the Same Night.

On the same evening San Pedro High School will hold its commencement. There will be thirteen graduates, eight girls and five boys.

Class night will be June 20, and two divisions of the class will each give a play.

Other festivities of commencement week at San Pedro include a boat ride given by the juniors to the seniors on Saturday evening. On Saturday evening, June 24, the alumni will be tendered a dinner at the High School luncheon quarters. Arrangements for the commencement exercises at San Pedro are not yet completed; but they will be in part as follows: Selection, violin solo, Ruth Nichols; selection, Girls' Glee Club; invocation; address; selection, Boys' Glee Club; presentation of class; presentation of diplomas; selection, Boys' and Girls' Glee Clubs; benediction.

Poly's Commencement.

The reason why Polytechnic commencement programme is not yet completed is that she has an embarrassment of riches. The subject of the occasion, "The Panama Canal," seemed to be particularly inspiring, for there were so many good orations that is has been difficult to choose among them. "We have now pinned it down to a choice between fifteen," said Miss Kate Smith, of the English department, who has charge of the selection of this part of the programme, "and within a day or two we shall have reached the final selection." The senior class is particularly strong in music, so there will be no need of going outside its ranks for all the music for the programme. Many members of the orchestra are seniors. The overture from "Semiramide" will be given, the string quartette will give two numbers, Helen Mack, who is a member of the graduating class, will render a vocal solo, and Pryor Moore, for three years concert master in the orchestra, will present a violin solo. The senior chorus of sixty voices will be a feature of the programme. President Blaisdell of Pomona will deliver the address.

Class night will be based upon the idea of Travels of the Class of Summer, '11. Different scenes will be presented—Holland, France, etc., and in each a little skit will be enacted, the idea being to present the various talents of the class. In London, Jarley's Wax Works will be visited—and, in fact, there will be an evening of fun and jollity. Miss Craig has charge of the dramatics, Miss Ohman of the dances, and Miss Dickson of the songs, while Mrs. Parsons is, of course, in charge of the orchestra and the general musical direction.

The senior banquet will take place at Hotel Mt. Washington on the evening of June 23. The class and the faculty guests will bring the number to about three hundred.

Dr. Walters of Frankfurt-on-the-Main gave an interesting talk to the students of Polytechnic Friday afternoon, on the subject of modern language methods. Dr. Walters is a distinguished educator of Germany, who has original ideas as to the best manner of imparting a foreign language. He is connected with the Model School of his native city. His idea is to use only the language which is under instruction and to accompany it by signs, when necessary, to utilize any other means of interpretation, rather than to employ the mother tongue to explain the new language. After his address the German Club gave a kaffe klatch, in order that some of the teachers might meet Dr. Walters. This was followed by a fine lecture in the auditorium, which was listened to by a great number of teachers.

A Rose Arbor.

At the Manual Arts High School the class in wood shop, under Mr. Nelson, will show practical results by the construction of a rose arbor sixty feet in length, eight feet in height and eight feet in width. Over it will be trained climbing roses, which will add materially to the beauty of the grounds. The lath house, under the supervision of Mr. Rae, has proven a great success.

Manual Arts is anticipating much benefit from the new bond issue, as it is hoped that a new central building will be added, thus completing the plant as originally planned.

Gardena's Course.

Many who had planned to go abroad to other schools for the study of agriculture are finding that Gardena has the facilities and a faculty which makes this unnecessary. This school compares favorably with those of San Luis Obispo, Berkeley and Davis, as has been testified to by those knowing all these. The course for the coming year includes general science and gardening, agricultural botany, poultry and dairying, agricultural chemistry, agricultural physics, farm crops and management, soils and fertilizers, rural law and economics, farm accounts, horticulture, landscape gardening, floriculture and special problems. A study of animals and of insect enemies will be included in the course. Mr. Lillard, principal, is most enthusiastic and hopes for even greater results next year than during the past at Gardena. The faculty there is most efficient.

Notes.

At a girls' meeting on Friday at Polytechnic, Miss Cooper talked on "School Courtesy," and Miss Kate Smith addressed the girls on "Vocations for Girls."

President Baer of Occidental addressed the students of Hollywood High School on Monday last, winning enthusiastic applause from his attentive audience.

An interesting programme was given by the expression class at Manual Arts at an assembly one day last week. At Tuesday's assembly the boys' gym class gave a fine exhibition of athletic prowess.

"Trelawney of the Wells" was presented on Thursday evening by the Mask and Sandal Club of Polytechnic. It was voted the best play ever given by this club.

Hazel Wilkinson and Josephine Beckand, representing Polytechnic, won in the debate with Hollywood last week.

At a meeting of superintendents on Saturday afternoon the list of teachers for the vacation schools was selected and will probably be presented to the Board of Education at its regular meeting on Monday evening.

Eat and Get Thin

This is turning an old phrase face about but modern methods of reducing fat have made this revision possible.

If you are overfat and also averse to physical exertion and likewise fond of the table and still want to reduce your excess flesh several pounds, do this: Go to your druggist (or write the Marmola Co., 235 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.) and give him (or send them) 75 cents. For this modest amount of money the druggist will put you in the way of satisfying your ambition for a nice, trim, slim figure. He will hand you a large case of Marmola Prescription Tablets (compounded in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription,) one of which you must take after each meal and at bedtime until you begin to lose your fat at the rate of 12 to 16 ounces a day. That is all. Just go on eating what you like, leave exercising to the athletes, but take your little tablet faithfully and without a doubt that flabby flesh will quickly take unto itself wings, leaving behind it your natural self, neatly clothed in firm flesh and trim muscles.

FORCED BY GRATITUDE OF HUNDREDS To Repeat His Offer IN THE TIMES

I have been so moved the past few weeks by the gratitude of readers that I have decided to make again the offer which I made. This is what I said: "I am going to Give Away a Free Treatment for Deafness to every sufferer who asks for it."

People by the hundred have come to my office, and letters of request have poured in; letters of grateful thanks have also poured in. From every part of the continent the people whom I have cured of that terrible affliction—Deafness are thanking me.

A letter from Los Angeles says: "Allow me to thank you a thousand times for the good hearing you have restored to me." A letter from Chicago says: "I bless the day I saw your offer, for you have cured me of Deafness."

DEAFNESS TREATMENT FREE.

These many letters of gratitude have touched my heart, and so I say again to the readers of The Times: "I will give away a free treatment for Deafness to every sufferer who calls at my office or who writes for it."

This offer can only be made for a very short time. If you are Deaf, or have any trouble with your ears, come or write for free treatment.

This treatment is entirely free. I want to help you. I know what you suffer in the approach of Deafness and the intolerable agony of complete Deafness. I know that I have cured many, many people who were Deaf. I want you to have the same opportunity to hear again. Send now a post card or letter request. Don't delay, or it may be too late. If you have even the slightest feeling that something is wrong with your ears, be on the safe side and send for treatment. It won't cost you anything. If you are growing Deaf, and have become discouraged and tired of experimenting, profit by the example of those who have been cured by my treatment. Many of these people thought they never could be cured, they tried so many different things which never did them any good. MY treatment restored their hearing.

Send to Dr. Edward Gardner, Suite 974, 38 West 33d st., New York City, and get the Free Treatment.

USES SHEET TO HANG HIMSELF.

COUNTY HOSPITAL PATIENT NOT THOUGHT DANGEROUS.

Placed in Cot in Ward Where Two Others Had Taken Their Lives. Latest Victim of Suicidal Mania is Laborer, Who Was a Recent Arrival.

G. C. Palmleaf, a laborer, of Graham Station, committed suicide in the insane ward of the County Hospital early yesterday morning by strangling himself with a bed sheet. He is the third person in the same ward, to take his life in the County Hospital in the last sixty days.

Palmleaf was taken to the hospital late Friday afternoon. His mental condition was bad, but it was not thought that he would attempt to injure himself, it was said at the hospital, as he was not considered dangerous. He was placed in a cot in the ward and, as he became comparatively quiet, he was not chained to the bed with ankle irons or handcuffed.

About 4 o'clock yesterday morning an attendant making the rounds discovered that Palmleaf was dead. The bed sheet had been tightly twisted and then wound about his neck.

The case was reported to the Coroner but no inquest will be held. The body was removed to the undertaking establishment of J. D. Button.

April 8, Miss Eva Bovee smuggled a revolver into the ward and handed it to S. L. Dania so that they could die together. Dania fired four shots into the young woman's body and one into his own. He hovered several days between life and death, finally succumbing to his injuries. Miss Bovee has almost recovered.

April 11 Mrs. Olive Delair left her cot and went into one of the rooms where medicines were kept and secured a cupful of carbolic acid. She returned to her bed, after telling a nurse she simply wanted a drink, and offered to divide the acid with another patient. The latter refused, and Mrs. Delair quaffed the poison and died a few minutes later.

The authorities of the hospital declared yesterday that the suicide yesterday morning was unavoidable.

MISSES DEATH.

Guadalupe Chaves, a mortar mixer of No. 213 1-2 Commercial street, is glad that he has a thick head. He was working on the first floor of the building under construction at No. 625 South Spring street yesterday morning when a mortar board slipped from the wall three stories above and fell on him. He was cut on the top of the head and his right arm and shoulder were badly bruised. Dr. Carter dressed the injuries inn the Receiving Hospital. He said Chaves had had a remarkably narrow escape

CHARM AND ELEGANCE OF TRUE BEAUTY

(Stillwell in Fashion.)

"Every woman delights in a velvety skin and fine complexion, but few realize the harm done the skin's delicate surface by smothering it with powders or cosmetics," writes Mme. Stillwell in Fashion.

"A mayatone lotion gives grand results and is quickly prepared by dissolving a small original package of mayatone in eight ounces of witch hazel. Massage this freely into the skin every day and you will be surprised how soon it is cleared and beautified, while the complexion takes on the charm and elegance of true beauty.

"Nothing equals mayatone to protect the skin from changeable weather, tan or freckles. It is easier to use and more satisfactory than powder, is greaseless and will not grow hairs."

Why Banning Is to Have a Jail.

When a prisoner was put in a burro's stall the animal nearly ate the town.

THE fame of Banning as a town without a jail is going to be punctured. The Supervisors of Riverside county have promised a real fireproof jail, and excitement is knee-deep in the town.

The women forced the Supervisors to promise the jail, and the burros were responsible for the women going into the fight.

It is just like this. The burros have borne the brunt of the neglect of the Supervisors to provide quarters for prisoners. Now ordinarily Banning goes to sleep when the sun sets, but occasionally some one does something which calls for the hand of the law to reach out and grab him by the neck.

Having his prisoner, the township constable resorts to strategy to find a place to confine him. The citizens, of course, won't take him in and sit up with him, engaging him in pleasant converse to while away the hours, and the officer isn't going to put him in his own bed and sit on the doorstep all night just because the town has no jail.

A bright thought bumped the constable. He slipped around one night when he had a prisoner and gently but firmly led a burro out of his comfortable stall, acted as bell boy and showed his prisoner his room and brought a pitcher of ice water.

Fine idea. The prisoner slept like a top; so did the constable, but not the houseless burro.

That burro grieved over it for a while and then decided on revenge. It was subconscious with the burro to irritate the women.

Now no one would guess what that burro did. He wantonly stripped clothes lines of the week's wash, chewed the sheets and other things into knots and laughed loudly and discordantly.

When there was no wash hanging out, the burro attacked woodpiles. The town was aroused. An investigation was started and the trail led direct to the burro and then backtracked to the constable.

That worthy admitted the corn. He had a prisoner and no jail; the burro had a stall and couldn't object. The women decided there must be a jail and bombarded the Supervisors just on the eve of election.

Now it was easy going when there was only one prisoner, but frequently there have been more and the constable has gone to the livery stable and turned horses and burros out to make room for them. Then the burros had the laugh on the constable, for he had to sit up all night watching lest the prisoners escape.

Once when the livery barn was full, and the burros were having a fine time with the week's washing, the constable captured two boys who had escaped from the Whittier Reform School.

He was at his wits' end, but finally an inspiration seized him. He took the boys to the hotel, put them to bed and stole their clothes. It was strategy on the Napoleon order, for the indirect result was that the story reached the ears of William E. Johnson, chief special officer of the Indian service, who appointed the constable a deputy in the service.

Thus doth virtue and wit have their reward. From acorns grow oak trees, and to the humble burro will Banning owe its new jail.

BIG MINING DEAL HAS BEEN CLOSED.

THREE FRIENDS PROPERTY IN ALASKA IS SOLD.

Rindge Estate of Los Angeles the Biggest Stockholder in the Mine. New Owners Will Make Many Improvements in the Property—Sale Made for Cash.

The Three Friends Mining Company, which was the pioneer dredging company of Alaska, has sold its large dredging property on the Solomon River, near Nome, Alaska, to a New York syndicate composed of men closely connected with the American Tobacco Company. This mine is one which is well known and is credited with having produced $500,000 in twenty-one months' operation of one five cubic foot dredge. The mine has a large acreage, covering a strip of six miles in length and one-half mile in width along the Solomon River.

The majority of the stock of the Three Friends Mining Company was held by Los Angeles people, the Rindge estate being the largest stockholder. The price that the property sold at has not been made public, but it is safe to say that it runs into the big figures.

This deal was made by A. J. Condee, acting as a broker. Condee spent most of the winter in New York City and was the general manager of the Three Friends Mining Company in Alaska. Condee also assisted in closing the deal for several hundred acres of adjoining property belonging to John A. Webb & Co., which was taken over by the same syndicate.

The new purchasers are having plans prepared for the installation of an electric power plant and two new dredges, which will make it the largest dredge mining company on the Seward peninsula. The sale was for cash.

MAKES GOOD STRIKE.

PHILBERT MINING COMPANY.

The Philbert Gold Mining Company, a close corporation, composed entirely of Los Angeles people, with offices in the I. W. Hellman building, has been quietly developing its property on the mother lode, in Tuolumne county, and has just opened up a large pay chute measuring ten feet in width, which promises to be a bonanza.

The company has been pushing the east drift at the 600-foot level and has been making preparations to run a tunnel by the Tuolumne River, which will give it 1200 feet of backs.

Since opening up this pay chute they have decided to start up the mill at the 600-foot level. This ore is mined and milled on a very economical basis, as all ores are carried to the mill by gravity. The company owns its water system for generating power.

The dam of the West Side Lumber Company, where its mill is situated, went out a few days ago, taking 3,000,000 feet of logs down the Turnback Creek, some of which reached the Tuolumne River. The rush of water cut out the headgate of the Philbert Gold Mining Company, also several hundred feet of ditch, which the lumber company is now repairing. The mining company's property is near the Eagle Shawmut, on the same ledge which has produced millions of dollars, and is still in active operation.

CITY ORDINANCE TEST.

Laundryman Gives Cash Bail in Court of Appeals—Case Hinges on Constitutionality of Restrictive Measure.

Quong Wo, who conducts a laundry at No. 721 South Flower street, gave $500 cash bail in the Court of Appeals yesterday. His trial will test the constitutionality of the city ordinance restricting manufacturing industries to certain zones.

It is alleged that while the ordinance might properly interfere to prevent the location of a dyeing establishment within the prescribed district, on account of the danger accompanying the use of a large amount of gasoline; and as against lumber yards, for the reason that great danger exists on account of fear of fire, no such reason can be urged against the location of a laundry, as it is in no sense a menace either to health or the safety of citizens.

The decision of Judge De Haven, of San Francisco, is being quoted to that effect. The fight will be a bitter one. It is said that Chinese laundrymen are watching it with great interest, expecting to establish a number of shops in the district affected, if the court affirms their view of the case.

UNCLE SAM PAYS WELL FOR TRIAL.

Goes to Large Expense in Thompson Case.

Many States Traversed to Get Evidence.

Inspectors Follow Far on High-Roller's Trail

An example of how Uncle Sam pursues relentlessly any man believed to have violated the law for the conduct of the public service, is shown in the trial of Fred H. Thompson, now before a jury and Judge Wellborn, in the United States District Court.

It is estimated by officials that by the time the trial now on is concluded, the government will have spent more than $15,000, the amount taken by Orlando F. Altorre in June, 1909. The original shipment by the First National Bank of this city to the postmaster at Bisbee, Ariz., was $30,000, and of this amount $15,000 was recovered. Altorre took $15,000, but the loss was adjusted by the company that had insured its safe transit. So financially, the government had nothing at stake. But it was necessary that the wrongdoers conected with the steal be caught and tried, and to this end every resource at the command of the authorities was utilized.

The trial of Orlando F. Altorre was not such an expensive proposition. The witnesses were few and, beyond a trip made by Postoffice Inspector Knox to hunt up the South Carolina antecedents of the prisoner, the cost did not reach a high figure.

But, with the conviction of Altorre and the arrest of Fred H. Thompson, charged with taking the $15,000 as an alleged attorney fee, knowing the money to have been stolen, the hunt for evidence commenced, and half the States of the Union were ransacked for incriminating instruments of various kinds.

MANY EXHIBITS FILED.

The system pursued by the Postoffice Department is shown by the manner in which the more than 100 exhibits of the government in the case are handled daily by Inspector Connell. He is in charge of the documentary evidence and it is all filed away in envelopes and marked for identification so that whether the attorneys want a check that Thompson received at Hot Springs, Ark., or an express money order that he purchased at Chicago or San Francisco, either can be furnished at a moment's notice.

The collection of evidence against Thompson compelled Inspectors Knox and Connell to travel all over the United States. According to evidence when Thompson got the large sum of money from his client he cut a wide swath and his journey is marked with numerous evidences of financial high-rolling. Hotels, banks, express offices and everywhere a man loaded down with currency would likely go, had to be visited. Among the cities visited in the quest were New Orleans, Hot Springs, Memphis, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, San Francisco, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and a score of other places where it was supposed Thompson could be found. These men by virtue of their official positions, had free transportation over the railways, but their expenses were not less than $20 a day, and they were months on the job. That is but one feature of the expense account.

When the trial was called on April 18, it was postponed until May 16, on account of Thompson's poor physical condition, and numerous witnesses covering every part of the country were in attendance. It would be cheaper to keep them here than to pay them an additional per diem of 10 cents a mile one way, so they were ordered to remain here until the last trial date. During all that time they were each paid $2 a day, for a period covering about a month.

ITEMS THAT COUNT.

Here are some sample figures of payments made to witnesses. Those from New Orleans were paid $277.70 each; Hot Springs, $363.90; San Francisco, $125.50, and the Mississippi list $321.40. The local witnesses who reported daily during the three weeks of the trial were paid $2 per diem, although in some cases their testimony did not make more than a few words and they drew as high as $30 for that much information.

On account of the expense it was necessary for United States Marshal Youngworth to make three telegraphic "touches" for money to pay the witnesses. Altoree and his mother, Mrs. White, have been drawing at the rate of $6 a day ever since May 16.

These figures indicate that the matter of expense is not counted by the government in endeavoring to secure a conviction for a violation of the Federal laws. If conviction fails it is not because every device has not been exhausted in the effort to secure the evidence.

HIS LUNGS LEATHERY.

"Megaphone Man," Known to Politicians, Comes to Town—Young Men Studying Civic Affairs.

The "Megaphone Man" is in the city. Wherever can be found men who are deeply interested in politics he need be called by no other name, for they are all acquainted, personally or by reputation, with J. Henry Smythe, Jr.

J. Henry, as he is frequently called, broke into the limelight when he appeared on the platform in the Republican convention of 1904 and let out some screeches through his megaphone which started things moving fast.

Smythe was then in the midst of his college course and had all the vim of a leather-lunged rooter who was cheering his classmates to victory on the gridiron or elsewhere.

Since then he has been right in the heart of the political uproar. Wherever he goes he gets into politics. He is the man who first organized the college men into political clubs as a national unit.

Smythe graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1909, and he is now traveling about dispensing books at wholesale to the dealers. His political enthusiasm has not been dimmed in the least by his entree into commercialism.

The "Megaphone Men" believes that college men should get into politics and the earlier they enter the game the better.

"Sons of Presidents and Governors have set the example of patriotic political service," he said yesterday. "Robert A. Taft, while at Yale, and Charles E. Hughes, Jr., at Brown University, are notable examples. The objects of our league are to arouse the college men to an interest in the practical administration of popular government; to promote discussion and investigation of politico-economic problems, and to inculcate the principles of government."

POLE CLIMBERS ONLY CLEW.

Skeleton of Man Found in Canyon Near Newhall Thought to be Trouble Man for 'Phone Company.

The skeleton of a man found in a canyon near Newhall, Friday, was declared yesterday to be the remains of Jeff Wells, a Pacific Telephone and Telegraph lineman who, several months ago, had been sent to search for trouble. Identification was made possible when a pair of broken pole climbers were found nearby.

Wells lived in Tulare and his relatives have been notified. They will be shown the climbers to make identification positive.

It is believed that he either met with an accident while at work and fell in the creek, or had been drowned by the freshet from a cloud-burst and to have been buried beneath the debris. Coyotes are believed to have dug the body up. Nothing but bones remained. Wells was 30 years old and unmarried.

OCCIDENTAL'S FESTIVITIES.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON TODAY BY DR. FREEMAN.

Monday Evening Class Play Will be Given, to be Followed by Class Day Exercises on Tuesday—Presidents Reception Tuesday Night. Graduation, Wednesday Morning.

Senior week at Occidental College will begin this afternoon at 4 o'clock, at which time Rev. Robert Freeman, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Pasadena, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class. Immediately following this service the Y.M.C.A. and the Y.W.C.A. of the college will meet in a joint service, and the Rev. William MacCormack, D.D., dean of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral, will address them. Following this service, the vesper communion, which is one of the regular services of commencement week, will be conducted by Rev. William Beal Gantz, pastor of the Highland Park Presbyterian Church.

Tomorrow evening at 8:15 the regular festivities of the week will be ushered in by the annual farce, which will be given in the college hall. The play this year will be Carlton's farce, entitled, "Liberty Hall." This will be the last appearance on the platform of many of the college's ablest exponents of the Thespian art.

Class day will come on Tuesday and the festivities will commence early and continue late into the night. At 8 a.m. the senior class will follow the precedent established, and breakfast together in the Arroyo Seco. At 10 o'clock the regular programme of the various classes will be held in College Hall. Here the seniors will have the floor for their farewell services. Miss Grace Herriott will follow the tradition of the school, and present the institution with a framed picture of the class, to be hung in the administration building. Miss Mary Reiner will present the class gift, the nature of which is kept a secret until the time of unveiling. The entire class will then appear in a "stunt," the nature of which is not given out. After the chapel exercises, the other features of the class day will be presented on the campus.

At 8 o'clock Tuesday evening the president's reception in honor of the seniors will be held in the old Academy building, which has been converted into a gymnasium, and it is Dr. Baer's wish that the social functions of the college shall hereafter be held in this hall. At this reception an invocation will be sprung in the form of the "Junior Prom," in charge of the junior class, and which will hereafter be a regular feature of commencement week.

Wednesday the graduation exercises will be held in the college chapel. At 9:30 o'clock the academic procession, consisting of the senior class and the faculty, robed in their caps and gowns, will start from the Stimson Library and march through the campus to the chapel. Dr. C. M. Carter, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Los Angeles, will offer the invocation. Miss Rowena Huscroft, salutatorian, will have for her subject "A Vision." Harold White will deliver an oration on "A Call to Service;" Lysle McKenney will render a solo, following which David Reed Faries will deliver an oration on "The World's Need." The valedictory address will be by Miss Eva Overton, whose scholastic record surpasses that of any former student in the college. The presentation of diplomas will be made by Dr. Hugh K. Walker, president of the board of trustees of the college, after which the benediction will be pronounced by Rev. C. C. Herriott, pastor of the High-street Presbyterian Church, Oakland. Wednesday evening the exercises of the week will end with the alumni banquet.

The following students will receive diplomas: George Baer, Louise Carter, Edna Chamberlin, Lou Crinkelaw, Clifford Douglass, David Faries, George Gobar, Ada Harvey, Grace Herriott, Rowena Huscroft, Grace McCoy, Willa McKee, Lysle McKenney, Eva Overton, Robert Patterson, Mary Reiner, Harold White, Howard Annin, Mary Edwards, Harold Hopkins, Boyd Krieder and James Nelson.

MISSION SOCIETIES UNITE.

The convention of the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the M. E. Value

We set a standard for tailoring VALUE—not prices.

Prices are practically identical everywhere. But Values—they're as varied as human nature.

Because value doesn't end with quality of woolens—at least not with us.

It means that we must hire cutters that are the very best to be had—we must employ a force of tailors—each doing one thing well—and we must keep these people keyed up to the top notch.

That's where Value lies—in good woolens, plus the best of workmanship.

And we know what you men want, so we do a big enough business to make it possible to put this Value into every garment, whether its price is $30, $35, $45, $60, or in between.

Give us a chance to "make good" on these statements.

The Chester building, at the northeast corner of Fifth and Spring streets, is owned by the Chester Fireproof Building Company, A. C. Bilicke, president, and J. F. Sartori, secretary. It is being constructed by the Baker Iron Works with a crew of 110 skilled non-union men. The building will be thirteen stories high, and will contain 3500 tons of structural material.

The steel skeleton will be completed in thirty days, and the work has progressed faster than any similar structure ever reared in this city. Four derricks operated by electricity have a lifting capacity of thirty tons each. There are forty-six large girders on the second floor, eaching weighing 86,000 pounds. The heaviest column weighs 26,000 pounds.

CUSTOMS COURT MEETS.

Convenes Tomorrow Morning In Federal Building to Hear Complaint of Ovrvaluation By the Collector.

The United States Customs Court, consisting of Byron S. Waite, general appraiser of New York, and Asst.-Atty. Gen. McNabb, of Atty.-Gen. Wickersham's office, will convene at the Federal building tomorrow morning and remain in session several days. The object of the session will be to hear any complaints of local importers as to overvaluation by Collector Pendleton of the local office.

Pendleton will leave tomorrow morning for Washington where he will take up a number of departmental matters with the Treasury Department. He expects to be away several weeks.

The receipts on account of import duties at the office of Collector Pendleton indicate that June will be a banner month in the history of the local service. The receipts from July 1, 1910, to the close of business last Friday evening, were $747,162.09. It is expected that by the close of the fiscal year the 30th inst., the total amount will be not less than $800,000, which will be an increase of about $250,000 over the corresponding period last year.

The receipts of the office for the year from July 1, 1908 to June 30, 1909 were $266,387.41; from July 1, 1909 to June 30, 1910, $5,703.22. The receipts so far this month, omitting Sunday, the 4th inst., were as follows: June 1, $2,342.35; June 2, $4,199.13; June 3, $1,924.37; June 5, $4,564.65; June 6, $6,950.98; June 7, $5,727.86; June 8, $2,090.91, and June 9, $1,395.31.

CHICKEN THIEVES ORGANIZED.

Many Pedigreed Fowl Slaughtered and Carried Away in Suitcases and Sold at Good Prices.

Wholesale thefts of pedigreed chickens are being reported to the Sheriff's department. Despite the fact that two alleged chicken thieves are in the County Jail awaiting trial, the raids continue with interims of two or three days. Deputy Sheriffs, who are working on the numerous cases reported, believe that an organized band is doing the work.

Mrs. E. F. Ganes of No. 524 Bishop street reported yesterday that during the previous night eight valuable fowls were taken from her yard. This is the second time within two months she has suffered a heavy loss. On the first occasion forty-eight chickens, comprising her choicest stock, were stolen.

The worst phase of the raids is that the fowls are ruthlessly slaughtered. The thieves wring their necks so that all hope of recovering them alive is lost.

The authorities have discovered that the method employed by the thieves is to kill the chickens at the place from which they are stolen and pack them in suitcases. In this way they avoid detection on the street.

It is estimated that hundreds of dollars' worth of choice hens and cocks have been stolen and sold.

TO REMOVE DUST FROM THE HAIR

(From the New York Examiner.)

"Don't drench your head with water every time your hair is dusty," says Claribel Montague, the beauty expert. "Too much moisture causes the hair to become dead and dull.

"When you want a perfect coiffure, just take a quick dry shampoo. Mix 4 ounces of therox with 4 ounces of orris root and you will have a supply of dry shampoo powder sufficient for all summer.

"Sift the powder lightly and evenly through the hair. Brush it out thoroughly—and it takes with it every particle of dust and dirt. Therox immediately gives the hair a rich and glossy luster. This mixture vitalizes the follicles, and (if used regularly) long and abundant hair will be the result."

POLITICAL TIPS.

Senator Stone of Missouri handed the insurgent Republicans a criticism that was far from agreeable. Announcing himself to be an organization Democrat he said if the insurgents desire to act with the Democrats they should join the Democratic party. That, he said, would be an evidence of good faith that would be worth while. "But instead," he said, "they do nothing but stand off and denounce somebody. I confess I am tired of their professions," he added. "I want them to fish or cut bait."

Representative Oscar Underwood of Alabama, by bearding Mr. Bryan on the wool question, jumped unconsciously into the Presidential race course. Representative Adamson of Georgia has already announced in an interview that if Champ Clark cannot be nominated for President he is for Underwood.

Senator Gorman will be a candidate for the Maryland governorship, but the organization leaders are said to doubt whether he will have sufficient strength to land the nomination. The State Democratic boss is said to favor Col. Buchanan Schley, who will enter the race if assured of the support of the "State boss."

The Hon. Jeff Davis of Arkansas defined the position of the insurgent Republicans when, in an address to the Democratic members of the Senate, he said: "You know the insurgents are our natural allies." With the Democratic claims it would seem to be up to the insurgents to define their position.

Gov. Foss of Massachusetts vetoed the bill to give the elementary teachers of Boston increased salaries, but the House of Representatives, by a vote of 167 to 47, notified him that it did not agree with such action. The bill compels the Boston school board to devote 10 cents out of the tax income received from each $1000 in 1912 for the sole purpose of raising the salaries of elementary teachers of Boston who now receive less than $1000 a year. After 1912 each year 20 cents is to be taken from the school tax income on each $1000 for the purpose of raising the salaries.

Hon. Richmond Pearson Hobson took off his coat when about to address a graduating class of young ladies at Anniston, Ala. Of the following events a dispatch says: "President Glass had brought his girl students to hear Hobson, but when the Congressman shed his coat he called to his girls and led them out of the auditorium. President Glass said he did not think that a gentleman would remove his coat at a public gathering where ladies were present."

Arthur Capper, publisher of the Topeka (Kan.) Capital, has announced his candidacy for governor on the Republican ticket next year. This early announcement is made in the hope that it will defer other candidates from getting into the race. Capper is a leading insurgent, but his announcement appeals to support from all factions and elements in the Republican party. Capper and his newspaper have been loyal supporters of Gov. Stubbs during the last four years. The stand-pat element of the party has been hammered unmercifully in the editorial columns of the Capital, former Senator Long and his followers being held up as enemies of Republican progress.

H. F. St. Clair of Independence, Kan., now in Washington tells the Washington Star that Kansas will give President Taft a larger vote than he had three years ago. "There has been a quickening of the political pulse in our western country, says St. Clair and it is no doubt due to a realization of Taft's sober, conservative methods which do not dazzle, but which gradually attract the people."

An Unsettler.

NEVADA DIVORCES MAY NOT DIVORCE.

Experts' Legal Opinions Will Cause Much Worry.

Professors Say Domicile is Too Short and Crooked.

Lots of Polygamy in the Land and More Tears.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

RENO (Nev.) June 10.—With four of the leading professors of international law in the country asserting that divorces obtained in Nevada on a mere physical residence of six months are null and void outside the State where they are granted, and that persons securing divorces of this kind do so in violation of the Constitution of the United States, and actually commit bigamy when they remarry, the question has arisen as to whether Nevada, since the passage of the so-called "time-lock" divorce bill, is not committing a national crime.

This bill was introduced in the last Legislature by Assemblyman W. D. Jones of Reno, and held that a mere physical residence of six months in the State of Nevada should be the necessary requisite for starting a divorce action. This bill was passed by both houses and was promptly signed by Gov. Tasker L. Oddie.

Up to this time judges of the district courts had been closely questioning applicants for divorces upon the question of residence, holding that a mere physical residence was hardly in conformity with the law, and that they had to show that Nevada was their permanent residence. A number of cases were dismissed or the decision granting a divorce held up when the six months "time-lock" divorce bill was passed.

SWEEPING AND WORRYING.

It is the passage of this bill, which was intended by its author to clear the atmosphere, that has precipitated the feeling of doubt as to whether any divorce granted in Nevada except to actual bona-fide, permanent residents, is actually good.

Hon. Dix W. Smith, former State Senator in New York, a man of wealth with large holdings in Nevada, undertook to solve the problem, and got into communication with the greatest exponents of international law in the country, and secured from them opinions which hold that Nevada divorces are not worth the paper they are written upon outside the jurisdiction of this State.

V. H. Lane, professor of international law in the University of Michigan, says that while a decree under a statute such as passed in Nevada, might be effective within the borders of the State, it has no force beyond.

E. H. Woodruff, professor of international law at Cornell University, states that Nevada evidently does not consider residence as domicile, and in consequence other States would not recognize the validity of Nevada divorces.

Similar views are expressed by Simeon E. Baldwin, Governor of Connecticut, and professor of private international law in Harvard University; Joseph H. Beale, professor of jurisdiction of Harvard University; Harry A. Bigelow, professor of international law at the University of Chicago, and others.

Following are abstracts from various professors of national prominence bearing on the problems which have been received by Senator Smith:

PROF. LANE.

V. H. Lane, professor of international law of the University of Michigan says: "Mere residence as distinguished from domicile will not give jurisdiction for divorce. Each state or country is entitled to control the state within whose jurisdiction no one afected within by its actions is at the state whose jurisdiction no one affected within by its actions is at the time domiciled, using the term 'one affected by' in the sense of our having a right to be heard in the proceeding.

"While a decree under a statute such as yours might be effective within the borders of your own State, it has no binding force beyond. No other State is under any obligations to give it 'full faith and credit' under the Federal Constitution. Andrews vs. Andrews 188 U. S. 14, will be found instructive on this point."

PROF. BIGLOW.

Harry A. Biglow, professor of international law, University of Chicago, says: "The doctrine is perfectly well established that no country or state has jurisdiction to grant a divorce unless at least one of the parties to the divorce has a bona-fide domicile in that country or state. Mere residence there is not sufficient. The Supreme Court of the United States has on several occasions held that a divorce of divorce that has been granted by a State not having a domiciliary jurisdiction over at least one of the parties to the divorce is not entitled to any recognition in any of the other States of the Union." Mr. Bigiow also quotes the decision of Andrews vs. Andrews.

CORNELL EXPERT.

E. H. Woodruff, professor of international law at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., quotes from Jacob's Treatise on the Law of Domicile as follows:

"In volume 39, page 67 he says: 'It is undoubtedly competent for the sovereign power of any State or country to confer upon its tribunals such jurisdiction in matters of divorce as it deems proper and a decree pronounced by a competent tribunal under authority so conferred would necessarily be held binding within the territorial limits of the State of country whose tribunal it was. But what egect, if any, would elsewhere be given to such a decree, depends mainly upon whether the jurisdiction of the court pronouncing it has been conferred and exercised in accordance with the generally received principles of international law. The test, therefore, of the validity as to jurisdiction of a domestic divorce is anything which the lawmaking power chooses to enact, while the test, as to jurisdiction, of the validity of a foreign divorce is, according to the generally received view, the domicile of the parties.'

"In Volume 75, page 123, he says: 'The word "domicile," although so often used and commented upon by our courts, is rarely to be met with in our Constitution or legislative enactment. 'Residence' is the favorite term employed by the American legislator to express the connection between person and place, its exact significance being left to construction to be determined from the context and the apparent object sought o be obtained by the enactment.

" 'It is to be regretted that these lights are often very feeble, and that no little confusion has been introduced into our jurisprudence by the different views held by different courts with regard to the exact force of this and similar words when applied to substantially the same subject matter. "Residence" when used in statutes is generally construed to mean "domicile." In fact, the great bulk of the cases of domicile reported in the American books are cases of statutory residence. This is especially true with regard to subjects of voting, eligibility to office, taxation, jurisdiction in divorce, probate and administration, etc. With respect to these subjects there is substantial unanimity in this country in holding statutory residence to mean domicile.'

"I haven't the text of the new Nevada statute before me, but as you state that the statute provides 'that mere physical presence for six months is sufficient residence to confer jurisdiction, and the courts inquire into the bona fide of such residence,' it would seem clear that in your State the statute does not regard residence and domicile as synonomous and as really meaning domicile, but intends to grant divorces upon some other basis than that of domicile. If this be true, your apprehension that other States would not be likely to recognize the validity of such divorces would seem to be well founded."

FROM HARVARD.

Simeon E. Baldwin, professor of private international law at Harvard University, and who is also Governor of Connecticut, says: "It is a misfortune that divorces can be so easily obtained in Nevada. As I understand it, the statutes of that State require only six months' residence upon the part of the petitioner for a divorce. I regard not only that term of residence as much too short, but the omission to require proof of a domicile within the State to be particularly unfortunate. By the rules of private international law as commonly recognized in civilized nations, divorces granted upon proof of mere residence upon the part of the petitioner, without proof that either party has a real home or a domicile in the jurisdiction, are void. It is a great discredit to the United States that it is possible under our dual system of government, that a man and woman may be considered married in one State and not married in another. No divorce ought to be granted by any State that will not be internationally valid."

Joseph H. Beale, professor of jurisprudence at Harvard University, says:

"So far as I know, there is no doubt or dispute in any civilized country that no court or State has jurisdiction to grant a divorce unless at least one party is legally domiciled in that State. For a few years Scotland attempted to claim validity for divorces granted under their laws to persons actually residents in Scotland who had not obtained a legal domicile there, but that attempt, after a few years, was abandoned. There is now no question that a divorce granted by any State to persons not legally domiciled in that State is absolutely invalid and that either party to it thereafter remarrying is guilty of bigamy. On that point I beg to cite the case of State v. Armington, 25 Minn. 29, and the cases in accord with it cited in my 'Cases on Conflict of Laws,' vol. 1, page 408, and the recent case in the Supreme Court of the United States, Haddock v. Haddock, 201 U. S. 562.

ZEPPELIN A FAILURE?

Germans Are Beginning to Doubt the Availability of the Count's Immense Air Ships.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BERLIN, June 3.—Doubts of the availability of the Zeppelin rigid balloon for military purposes have been revived by the destruction of the Deutschland, the biggest and latest of Zeppelin dirigibles on May 16 and the campaign in favor of dropping the system of Count Zeppelin for the army has been renewed in the military and a part of the daily press.

The destruction of six Zeppelins in rapid succession after existences varying from ten days to at most eleven months, usually from inability to control the monster balloons in even a moderate wind, is cited to prove their utter lack of reliability in war. Even the wreck of the military Parseval balloon, non-rigid type, two days after the destruction of the Deutschland, is used as an argument against the Zeppelin, her opponents pointing out that though wrecked in exactly the same way, by collision with the balloon hull, the Parseval can be restored inside of a fortnight by a simple mending of the cloth hull, while the rebuilding of the aluminum frame of the Deutschland cannot be completed before December.

At the aeronautical division of the War Office, however, it is stated that the army authorities have not lost confidence in Count Zeppelin and will take over the military Zeppelin, now building at Frederickshaven, when it is completed. Pointing out that none of the serious disasters had happened when Count Zeppelin was personally in charge, the aviation expert argued that the inventor had outdistanced his pupils and that less difficulty would be experienced as the technique of handling the dirigibles made more progress.

The latest disaster is more serious for Count Zeppelin financially than its predecessors, as the insurance companies, in the light of experience, had refused to insure the Deutschland. The airship destroyed last year in the Thuringian forest was fully insured.

NEW TURBINE LAUNCHED.

German Cruiser that Has Just Taken to the Ways Will be Speed Contender.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BERLIN, June 3.—The new turbine cruiser, Magdeburg, launched May 14 at Bremen, will, according to information just made public in naval circles, be another contender for international speed supremacy in its class. The four preceding vessels of the small cruiser class, with a displacement of 4350 tons, attained speeds of twenty-seven knots per hour, but the Magdeburg, which is about twenty feet longer, slightly narrower and equipped with much more powerful engines, is expected to develop close to thirty knots.

The Magdeburg and her three sister ships now building are designed primarily for accompanying the torpedo boat flotillas and running down and destroying hostile torpedo craft, as well as for scouting. They have an increased coal capacity and corresponding increased radius of action.

Although it is not generally known, a large engine of the internal combustion type is now being built at Nuremberg for the German navy, to develop 6000 horse power.

ht-Hour Law for Hotels Unconstitutional.

Court of this State in Daugherty vs. Austin, 94 Cal. 620, in discussing this all-important factor in legislation, says:

"If there is any one feature of the Constitution more marked, or any characteristic more pervasive than all others, it is this oft-reiterated, this general and specific inhibition of local and special laws." And in determining the manner in which classification may be made, in order to obviate local and special laws, in the later case of Darcy vs. Mayor of San Jose, the Supreme Court says:

"From necessity it has been held that the Legislature may classify in order that it may adapt its legislation to the needs of the people. This classification, however, must be founded upon differences which are either defined by the Constitution, or natural, and which will suggest a reason which might rationally be held to justify the diversity in the legislation. It must not be arbitrary. There must be a substantial distinction, having reference to the subject matter of the proposed legislation, between the objects or places embraced in such legislation, and the objects or places excluded. The marks of distinction on which the classification is founded must be such, in the nature of things, as will in some reasonable degree, at least, account for or justify the restriction of the Legislature.

"The rule is that in any classification for the purpose of a general law all must be included, and made subject to it, and none omitted that stand on the same footing regarding the subject of legislation. To omit one so circumstanced is as fatal a defect as to include but one of a number." (Darcey vs. Mayor of San Jose, 104 Cal. 646.)

And in a later case this doctrine is reiterated as follows:

"It has been uniformly held that a law is general which applies to all of a class—the classification being a proper one—and that the requirement of uniformity is satisfied, if it applies to all of the class alike. The word 'uniform' in the Constitution does not mean 'universal.' The section intends simply that the effect of general laws shall be the same to and upon all persons who stand in the same relation to the law—that is, all the facts of whose cases are substantially the same. The classification, however, is not a proper one for distinct legislation, if it is not founded upon some natural, intrinsic or constitutional distinction, a distinction which bears some relation to or furnishes cause for the particular legislation embraced in the act." (Hellman vs. Shoulters, 114 Cal. 147.)

This doctrine is reaffirmed in the later case of ex parte Sohncke, where the court quotes approvingly from the decision of the United States Supreme Court in Connolly vs. Union Sewer Pipe Company, declaring that the State cannot, in prescribing regulations for the conduct of trade, divide those engaged in trade into classes, and make criminals of one class if they do certain forbidden things, while allowing another and favored class, engaged in the same domestic trade, to do the same things with impunity. (Ex parte Sohncke, 148 Cal. 267.)

And this rule is carried down to our last printed report, where the court, speaking through Justice Sloss, reiterates the rule that "although a law is general and constitutional when it applies equally to all persons embraced in a class founded upon some natural or intrinsic or constitutional distinction, it is not general or constitutional if it confers particular privileges or imposes a peculiar disabilities or burdensome conditions in the exercise of a common right upon a class of persons arbitrarily selected from the general body of those who stand in precisely the same relation to the subject of the law." (Ex parte Martin, 157 Cal. 52.)

Tested by these rules, it is insisted that the portion of the act which forbids the employment of females for more than eight hours in any one day in hotels, is discriminatory and special legislation and operating upon a class arbitrarily selected from a general class, including lodging-houses and boarding-houses, and that these occupations stand in precisely the same relation to the law, and that there is no material or intrinsic distinction between them which bears any relation to, or furnishes any cause for, the particular legislation.

Does the word "hotel" include lodging-houses or boarding-houses? At an early date our Supreme Court defined an inn as "a public place of entertainment for all travelers who choose to visit it. It is distinguished from a private lodging-house or boarding-house in this; that the keeper of the latter is at liberty to choose his guests, while the inn-keeper is obliged to entertain and furnish all travelers of good conduct and means of payment, everything which they have occasion for as travelers on their way." (Pinkerton vs. Woodward, 33 Cal. 557.)

While the Supreme Court of Illinois, 190 Ill. 28, says of this question: "Lodging-house keepers are not in a legal sense, inn-keepers, hotel-keepers or boarding-house keepers." (Bailey vs. People, 83 Am. St. Rep. 116.)

It is therefore, apparent that when the Legislature used the word "hotel" in this act they did not include lodging-houses or boarding-houses. The boarding-house furnishes its patrons with meals. The lodging-house furnishes its patrons with rooms and beds, while the hotel furnishes to its patrons rooms, beds and meals.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the duties of a chambermaid are the same in both a lodging-house and a hotel, and that there is no difference between the duties of a waitress in a boarding-house and those of a waitress in a hotel, and yet it is a crime to employ either chambermaid or waitress over eight hours in one day in a hotel, while either may be employed with impunity, performing the same service, in a boarding-house or lodging-house for all the hours that the day contains, or as long as the will of the parties may direct.

That legislation productive of such results is discriminatory and special is expressly held in the Illinois case supra, where the Supreme Court of that State says:

"A statute providing that not more than a prescribed number of persons shall sleep in the same room in any lodging-house at the same time, is unconstitutional as a discrimination against such houser, and in favor of hotels, inns and boarding-houses, and cannot be upheld as a legal exercise of the police power." (Bailey vs. People, supra.)

This case has the unqualified support of our own Supreme Court and is cited approvingly in Ex parte Sohncke, 148 Cal. 267; and if this be the law, then the act under consideration "imposes peculiar disabilities and burdensome conditions in the exercise of a common right" upon hotel keepers, while it "confers particular privileges" upon boarding-house and lodging-house keepers in regard to a matter where all "stand in precisely the same relation to the subject of the law."

Besides this, the act seriously affects the rights of the employee. It confers a "privilege" on the waitress or chambermaid who works eight hours at the hotel for a stated compensation, while it imposes a "disability" on her sister who works ten hours or more at a boarding-house or lodging-house, in the same service, for the same compensation, a "privilege" accorded and a "disability" imposed where there is no material, intrinsic or constitutional distinction existing.

In my judgment there is no "material, intrinsic or constitutional distinction" existing between hotels, the hotel business, the proprietors and employees therein on the one hand, and boarding-houses and lodging-houses, their business, proprietors and employees, on the other hand, which furnishes any cause for the legislation directed toward the first class. In the language of the United States Supreme Court supra, the Legislature cannot "divide those engaged in trade into classes and make criminals of one class if they do forbidden things, while allowing another and favored class to engage in the same domestic trade, or do the same things with impunity.'

I am not unmindful of the fact that in Ex parte Martin, supra, Justice Sloss, speaking for the court, says:

"The selection of the businesses requiring regulation is confided to the legislative discretion, and this discretion is not subject to judicial review unless it clearly appears to have been exercised arbitrarily and without any show of good reason."

That is exactly the case here. All within the designation named follow portions of the same business, and the classification here made is "arbitrary and without any show of good reason."

This conclusion on my part does not operate to declare this law void in toto, because the unconstitutional portion is easily severable from the constitutional provisions, and in Ex parte Gerino, 143 Cal. 420, the Supreme Court held that "If the law is separable, so that the general object can be attained without aid from the part that is void, the other part of the law will be upheld." This is clearly the case here.

I am therefore of the opinion that the Legislature of this State, in the exercise of their police power, did have power to pass the so-called "Eight-Hour Law for Women."

I am further of opinion that the portion of the act which refers to hotels (and for the same reasons possibly restaurants) is unconstitutional and void.

I am further of opinion that in all other respects here considered the eight-hour law is a valid and constitutional enactment and does not fail by reason of the unconstitutionality of the void provision respecting hotels.

The appellant herein having been convicted under that portion which is here held to be unconstitutional, it follows that the complaint did not charge any public offense.

The appeal is therefore allowed; the judgment of the lower court reversed and the defendant is discharged.

Dated June 10, 1911.

F. E. DENSMORE.
Judge of Superior Court.

Clarence Drown, the genius of the new Orpheum. Mr. Drown, an unknown youth, arriving in Los Angeles on a raw February day in 1903, began immediately to work and plan for the almost-completed temple of vaudeville on South Broadway.

His Work.

DROWN. GENIUS OF NEW ORPHEUM.

BROADWAY THEATER CULMINATION OF AMBITION.

Vaudeville Palace, Than Which There is None Better, Will Be Opened Two Weeks from Tomorrow Night—Some Facts and a Bit of Reminiscence.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

One night in February, 1903, I ploughed through some wind and more rain to old Grand Operahouse, then known as the Orpheum, to meet the "new manager."

He was not in the front of the house, nor was he at the back, and presently, with a sort of intuition, the box-office slave led me into the restaurant annex which was conducted at that time, past the decorous tables of property sandwiches, past the cellar stairs and into a cabinet not much bigger than a cigar box, where a frail, pale young man, up to his ears in a large white napkin, was fighting a desperate but winning mill with a heavyweight porterhouse.

I spoke first.

"Are you the secretary—or something—of the new manager, Mr. Drown, and can you tell me where he is?"

The frail, pale young man ended a round by gulping a section of the steak to his solar plexus, and said, quietly, "I am Mr. Drown."

When I got over my surprise at seeing such an innocent-faced youth on such a sophisticated job, I remember that he said: "The Orpheum is going to be one of Los Angeles's most permanent institutions. I hope they will let me stay here, and if they do, I'm for the finest vaudeville house that architects can design or money can buy."

A few months after that the Orpheum moved to Spring street, and was very nicely fixed in quarters which only Mr. Drown seemed to feel were temporary.

He went right on studying theaters, figuring out his own ideas of auditoriums and stage conveniences, and planned and hoped, hoped and planned.

Monday evening, June 26, the new Orpheum on South Broadway will be opened.

This is not only one of the world's finest vaudeville theaters, but one of the most up-to-date playhouses of any description.

It represents Drown throughout. It is built upon his ideas, primarily because he had an idea that it ought to be built, and it is located according to his opinion of strategic situation.

G. Albert Landsburgh, the architect, has put the finish of professional art upon Mr. Drown's unprofessional but highly practical schemes.

Drown came to Los Angeles after having been traveling manager of one of the Orpheum road shows. Martin Beck established him in this, the circuit's house of second importance, with a keen business eye to the future.

Mr. Drown is one of the quietest of men—so quiet, in fact, that on calm days you can fairly hear yourself think in his vicinity, but the busy bee of the simile is far from industrious in comparison.

He is not just a house-manager.

He is vice-president and assistant general manager of the great circuit, and division superintendent of the Coast.

Martin Beck once told me that he had provided for any emergency, even fatality, and that if he were to die in a forenoon, the hand of an unknown "second in command," already in training, would grasp the helm not long after lunch.

I have often wondered if that second in command lived in Los Angeles.

The new Orpheum represents an outlay of about half a million dollars.

The theater proper is 130 feet wide, with a ten-foot passageway on each side. The stage is 35x140 feet, with a height of 75 feet to its gridiron. The house is distinctly of the "wide and shallow" type, the furthest seat from the stage being only sixty feet away. There are nearly 2000 seats all told, including twenty-four boxes and thirteen loges across the balcony front.

The decorative scheme is ivory and gold, with walls of old rose, and gendarme blue draperies. There is none of the glaring old-style theatrical gingerbread.

The mezzanine balcony, for women, is one of the daintiest effects. Waiting, they may look out over the lobby from a petit boudoir, French-windowed, set with Louis XVI furniture, and bordered with a bronze grill. There is also a marble drinking fountain, sculptured by an Italian artist.

The motion-picture box is solid concrete, with a steel door and a flue to the roof. The operator might go to Hades in a pyre of his own materials, and the audience would scarcely be the wiser.

Under the stage there are several shower baths for the actors, and a spacious green room.

The executive offices of the house are on the second floor, and from them run little private passages to main floor, balcony and gallery.

The orchestra will contain seventeen men, the biggest regular theater orchestra ever employed in this city. The faithful Frankenstein will ban that bane of the real orchestra, the piano, and will have in its stead an oboe, a bassoon, horns—a "regular" band.

So I might continue with a whole page of gold-plated detail, but what's the use.

The only thing not provided is a barber shop for the press agent.

Wild Oats Note.

Main-street passers-by have been hilarified during the past few days by a flambuoyant sign easled up in front of one of the two-by-four picture theaters: "Special this week, Oliver Morosco's great song, 'My Yankee Sailor Boy.' "

The Majestic.

The attaches of the Hamburger Majestic Theater will now buy motorboats, motor cars and yachts, as theater attaches and newspaper people always do the moment they are out of work, and Omar Khayam at their own sweet will.

The house is dark, but it may be reopened by Henry Miller in a season of repertoire. This may be classed as a possibility only.

Poverty in M'p'lis.

James Neill does not seem to find very good fodder in Minneapolis this summer.

He opened at the Metropolitan Theater there, and, after one look at the first box-office statement, resigned in favor of Arthur Byron and Adelaide Keim.

They done as noble as they could, and at the end of the first week had in profits and salaries just $12.30 apiece. So they also moved along.

Likely!

John H. Blackwood went to San Francisco last Wednesday night "to attend a wedding"—he says.

John's fondness for social functions has not been known to lead him 500 miles from home on any previous occasion.

Probably he is going to buy the Golden Gate, as a representative of the new trust, and move it to San Pedro, where an admission fee will be charged.

So Long!

"Dhe bes' dragoman in dhe worl' " will fade out of Los Angeles this week, after a very pleasant month in our midst.

So long, Mr. and Mrs. Selwyn. Come back again next year.

Mrs. Fiske Approaching.

Mrs. Fiske, intellectual leader of the American stage, to whom a cessation from activity seems incomprehensible, is making a third consecutive summer tour of the West, and the Pacific Coast, and will visit June 26.

She will bring this time her recent New York success, "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh," about which there has been a unanimity of approval not often bestowed in Gotham.

"Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh" is a rollicking American comedy, a "laughter play," to coin a phrase, by Harry James Smith, whose name has not hitherto appeared in the list of American playwrights.

The story of the play deals with the events of a day in the life of a resourceful young woman who has escaped from plebeian birth and surroundings to win decided social prominence in exclusive English and American circles. The foreground of the play covers the early family history of the Jim Sayles family, and of the social climb engineered by his elder daughter, after his demise, but the action immediately concerned with but one episode, in which Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh is threatened with the loss of all her hard-fought-for glory.

Egan Going East.

Frank C. Egan, director of the Egan Dramatic School, proposes to enlarge and increase his institution next year to a very considerable degree.

Mr. Egan will leave for New York City, about July 1, and will engage additional instructors for his faculty, and investigate the latest developments in dramatic instruction as they are to be found on Broadway. He avers that he is preeminently in search of practical methods, methods which will teach acting without the savor of pedogogy.

He has one or two individuals in mind for prominent positions in the school, and will probably close contracts early next month.

At the present time, the Egan school occupies the upper floor of the Hamburger Majestic Theater building, but to accommodate its work and classes next year, additional rooms, in the same structure, will be leased.

The Egan school is now the largest institution of its kind west of the Mississippi River, having more than 150 pupils, and is the second largest in the country.

Last Tuesday evening another of the school's interesting vaudevilles was given.

The programme included "Under the Tropical Moon," sung by Edward Neff and chorus; a travesty on the art of singing, Mrs. S. O. Collins; a scene from "Merely Mary Ann," given by Misses Leah Wooten and Clara Story, Mrs. Prichard and J. Weatherby; a life study, "The Paymaster," by Messrs. C. Martin and Patsy Calhoun; a Dutch song and dance, by Miss Marguerite Orr and chorus; a life study, "Low Life in San Francisco," and "The Dance of Death," by Miss Ruth Gartland, Mrs. S. O. Collins, and Messrs. C. Martin and Patsy Calhoun; a life study, "Tramping It," by G. J. Bartlett; a one-act play, "Riders to the Sea," by Misses Selma Larsen, Florence Sterling and Ruth Vernon, and Patsy Calhoun; a sketch, "The Other Woman," by Misses Ruth Gartland and Emma O'Roarke, and a life study, "Across the Border," by Mrs. Collins and Messrs. Martin and Calhoun.

Too Much for George.

Willie Ervast, the eternal juvenile of the box office, has cost George Baudrand two seeds.

George, who looks somewhat minor in his best hours, was planning to lie to the poll-tax man, when that individual approached the Burbank.

The lie was ready for utterance, when Willie, wearing the smile of childish innocence, which so becomes him, looked straight into the law's eyes, and said: "Isn't it too bad that I'm not of age? I did so want to vote for Mayor Alexander this fall!" The man stared hard at Willie, but Willie's gaze faltered not.

"Here!" cried George, rushing to the door; "Take my $2. Somebody's got to be honest around this place!"

Valuable Persian Manuscript.

A valuable manuscript of the "Diwan of Hafiz" has been acquired by the department of Oriental printed books and manuscripts of the British Museum, says a London dispatch to the Christian Science Monitor. The book contains 278 folios and eight full page miniature drawings. Seven of these pictures are in the finest style of the Indo-Persian school at its best under Akbar, while the eighth is in the classical Persian manner. The book was executed about A. D. 1600. The illustrations represent incidents that are described in the poems, such as polo, scenes at Durbar, at the court and in domestic life. In one of these pictures is a portrait of Akbar, the emperor being shown on horseback with a winged angel holding his stirrup. The drawings are not only delicate in treatment and rich in color, but are not in the least conventional, and have evidently been done from life. The paragraphs have also been adorned with paintings of many kinds of birds.

The Week.

PIERRE BACK AT THE BURBANK.

AND MARY ANN—MERELY—RETURNS TO BELASCO.

"The Girl Question" Will Occupy the Attention of the Company at the Grand—Orpheum, Los Angeles, Pantages and Hyman Vaudeville Divertisements.

Richard Bennett, one of the most popular actors ever seen on the local stage, will make the first appearance of his regular summer engagement at Morosco's Burbank Theater in "Pierre of the Plains" for the week beginning with the matinee today. Mr. Bennett is under a long-term contract with Liebler & Company to appear in their big eastern productions, so it is probable that this will be his last appearance in Los Angeles for some time. His most recent achievement was in the principal role in "The Deep Purple," the ultra successful play by Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizner.

"Pierre of the Plains" is a stirring drama of the Canadian West with which Mr. Bennett's name is inseparably connected in the minds of the playgoers of Los Angeles. It is a dramatization by Edgar Selwyn (author of the recent Burbank success, "The Arab") of the stories of Sir Gilbert Parker, "Pierre and His People." Selwyn has taken the one central, distinctive character, Pierre, and built a play around him. This lovable scamp is a gambler, adventurer and rover in general by profession. He makes his living by his wits, but it is his boast that he always pays fair. He is a fatalist, and his pack of cards for telling his own fortune is always with him. He helps the brother of a girl he loves out of a scrape and outwits the mounted police in doing so. He wins a desperate duel of cunning and strength with a trailer who has sworn to "get him." There is a pretty love story running all through the adventurous scenes, in which the chivalrous Pierre displays all the grace of his French ancestry in surroundings where it is least expected. This is the final touch that makes the character one of the most romantic ever written into a book or a play.

This will be the final opportunity to see Bennett as Pierre, as it will be followed by "Jimmy Junior," by James Montgomery.

"Merely Mary Ann," Israel Zangwill's delightful comedy, will be the offering at the Belasco Theater for the week beginning tomorrow night, by Lewis S. Stone and his associates in the Belasco company. This play will give Miss Marjorie Rambeau her best role, in which she made her first appearance in Los Angeles, scoring immediate success. Miss Rambeau has done other good things since then, but her Mary Ann is aways remembered as her greatest achievement, and countless requests have been received ever since then for a repetition of the play.

"Merely Mary Ann" is a strong drama regardless of its unique character creation from which it takes its name. It is the story of a poor, friendless "slavey" in a London lodging-house, who idealizes a penniless composer because he is the only person who has ever shown her the slightest kindness. The man is of a proud family, but finally he recognizes something below the grime of the girl's outward make-up, and gradually realizes that he loves her. To marry her, however, is unthinkable, to his aristocratic notions, but he gains her consent to go away with him. At this moment there comes news of a great legacy having been left to "Mary Ann," which throws her into the limelight and upsets their plans. She would sacrifice everything for her love, but the man wakens, and refuses to accept. They do not meet again for several years, during which time he has become famous and she educated, and Zangwill finishes the story with consummate art.

Miss Rambeau as Mary Ann, the part in which Eleanor Robson touched the pinnacle of her fame, is simply at home as few players can be in a part. Mr. Stone will play the part of the composer, Launcelot, and the entire Belasco company will be seen in the great variety of characterizations which go to make up the remainder of the cast.

Percy Bronson, popular young comedian, who won success in Los Angeles with Kolb and Dill, will make his first appearance with the Ferris Hartman Company at the Grand this afternoon, when this organization offers "The Girl Question."

"The Girl Question" is one of several musical plays brought forth at the La Salle Theater, Chicago, where after a long and successful run the piece made several equally successful tours of this country. It is the work of Hough and Adams, while the song numbers come from the pen of Joe Howard.

It is a musical comedy of runaway language and pretty girls. As far as the leading male role, Con Ryan, is concerned, it is more or less a humorous study in slang.

There is plenty of plot to "The Girl Question" and while perhaps the solution to this great question is an impossibility the conundrum furnishes the basis for a most entertaining three hours. Con Ryan, a head waiter, aspires to the love and hand of his cashier Elsie, who after a time unfortunately makes up her mind that she prefers the son of a millionaire. Later, Con decides to also change his mind and decides to marry his old pal, "Joe" Forster, a waitress.

Hardly a better vehicle could have been selected for the first appearance of Percy Bronson, who will play the genteel "hick," Con Ryan, with his rapid fire line of slang.

Myrtle Dingwall should find excellent opportunities in the part of "Joe" the waitress, while Francis White is cast in the role of the flighty cashier, Elsie. Robert Leonard will contribute the humorous character of Baron Max von Tesmar; Roscoe Arbuckle will play the millionaire's son, Harold Sears, and Marta Golden will be seen as Jessie Sears.

The Orpheum next week will seem like a "home coming," for two of the new acts are made up of prime friends, and a third brings back an old vaudeville favorite. The newcomers into vaudeville are Howard Hickman and Bessie Barriscale, stock players last seen here with Virginia Harned last summer, and Henry Stockbridge, the ex-Burbank funmaker, with Charlotte Buisseret, the lovely and skilled violiniste, who is a star in the concert field. Rarely indeed do the exigencies of vaude-during the coming week, in dramatic, musical and vaudeville undertakings.

ville booking fetch into one city so many local idols.

Mr. Hickman and Miss Barriscale, who have recently been playing in San Francisco, will appear in Mr. Hickman's own sketch, "Disqualified." It is a strong story with the passion for racing and its debauchery as a motif, and hidden in it are the elements of dramatic action. Mr. Hickman and Miss Barriscale first presented it at a benefit in the northern city.

Tom Waters, the old guard vaudeville favorite, with his outre plug hat and his mono-pianologues, will get the glad hand. He has a fine faculty for songs, strung through with wit, bright sayings and the other bits of persiflage that makes a vaudevillian a hit.

Robledillo hails from Cuba, where they hail him as a national institution. Robledillo walks a wire. So do others, but not the Robledillo way. He scorns balance pole, umbrella or any fictitious aid.

Then there are Henry Stockbridge and Charlotte Buisseret. He is too big a favorite here to need eulogium. He is established as a fun-maker of gifts. Miss Buisseret has beauty and musical skill that entitles her to place.

W. H. Murphy, Blanche Nichols and their company will proceed "From Zaza to Uncle Tom" for another week. M. Golden and his Russians will give color, warmth and sensation with their unusual act; Jones and Deely will continue to operate "Hotel St. Reckless" in merry fashion, and J. Francis Dooley, with that cascade of sunniness, Corinne Sayles, will add to the fun—and the beauty show—with their "Pavement Patter." New pictures will be shown.

Mack and Mackay were billed at the Hyman last week and Holman and Mexis substituted for them. However, they will top the bill at this playhouse for the coming week. They put on a singing and talking act in a way that is original. The material that they use is of the latest and most popular.

As a novelty feature the two Ortegas will present their comedy acrobatic stunt, that has made them friends in Europe as well as through the States. They, too, are originators and keep the audience keyed up to concert pitch with their laughable number.

Chic Lottie O'Malley will be here with a pleasing combination of singing, dancing, costume change, flashing eyes and a magnetic personality that will surely make her one of the big successes of the bill.

Rube Strickland will be seen in a novelty, comedy musical act that has much in it of the unexpected. Strickland has a reputation as one of the best in this line that has been seen on the Coast.

The pictures will be exclusively the property of Arthur S. Hyman and of a series that has been especially manufactured for him.

The Hyman Theater orchestra weekly lives up to its billing, and the leader, Miss Bessie Hardy, can be depended upon for some new and particularly interesting selections.

The programme for the week starting next Monday, at the College, looks a delightful one on paper. The head line is the decided novelty of Snook, hand cuff manipulator and straight-jacket expert. This man is seemingly invincible when it comes to escaping from all kinds of shackles that have been devised by the police throughout the world. Snook will make one day during his engagement "crazy day," and at each performance during that day he will give an exhibition of how he can escape from insane muffs, insane leg shackes, straight jackets and thumb irons.

Another pleasing feature of this strong bill is the engagement of Louise Cunning, who, owing to her long experience in musical comedy, presents one of the most entertaining singing acts that has been seen at this house. She has a splendid voice and a fine selection of songs, together with her ability as an actress.

A standard black-face act, by Harry de Barr, will add luster to the programme. De Barr is quite the cleverest of the younger vintage of mirth producers. His material is said to be all original and of the most amusing sort.

The first-run pictures will, as usual, be up to the standard make of this theater. The selections of subjects will range from comedy to pathos. Lillian May Lancaster's orchestra has arranged a programme in harmony with this bill.

The Regal Theater, at No. 323 South Main street, has another good bill on this week.

The Trans-Atlantic Four, a somewhat different quartette from the ordinary act, are leading the bill. Miss Nadine Allen, character change artist, and The Pons, a Roman ring and balancing act, furnish the vaudeville entertainment.

Frank Morton & Company are putting on "The Merry Millionaire," full of catchy songs and pretty costumes and said to be one of Morton's best productions.

With the new Sullivan and Considine bill opening tomorrow afternoon, the Los Angeles will become known as the Empress Theater, a name which is today being established in sixty-eight popular-priced vaudeville theaters in this country and which will signify Sullivan and Considine vaudeville throughout America.

With the change of name the proprietors are sending to Los Angeles an entirely new programme. Heading the list of new acts are the Eight Vassar Girls. From an artistic and musical standpoint, this attraction may be classed among the best now traveling the vaudeville stage. Their closing number, "The May Dance," is a particularly beautiful spectacle.

One of the most enjoyable little playlets is "Uncle Charles of Charleston," which will be presented by Mr. and Mrs. James R. McCann, supported by their company. This sketch is sentimental, unique in story and structure, but involving a problem that deals with one of the serious phases in social life.

An act that may justly be described as a genuine gymnastic novelty is the offering of Joe Fenton's awakening athletes. This clever troupe has a series of Roman ring exploits, staged in an elaborate manner.

With his satire on "Cleopatra," Harry Le Clair, one of the best-known impersonators, offers vaudeville patrons a merry leap from the sublime to the ridiculous. In this funny travesty Mr. Le Clair has scored a laughing success all over the Sullivan and Considine circuit.

Harry Knox and Mercedes Alvin are a mirthful musical pair, who, while they bring nothing new in the way of a vaudeville idea, have lots of quality when it comes to turning loose a line of patter talk and burlesque.

Completing the new bill are Carita Day in catchy melodies and clever dances, and the new comedy motion pictures.

The plaintive melodies of the Hawaiain Islands, sung by natives of that Paridise of the Pacific, will be the dominant attraction at Pantages vaudeville house for the week beginning with the matinee Monday. There are nine in this troupe, eight singers and a graceful young woman who dances a few of the famous native evolutions. This company of Hawaiians is different from any of the smaller ones that have toured this country at various times, in that it not only brings a dancer, but a comedian, and the transplanted fun of the South Pacific said to bring a new lot of laughs. The programme these people offer is of a popular character, but done with the finest artistry imaginable, in one of the handsomest stage settings of the season, in which the ripple of the waves on the beach can almost be heard, so realistic is the effect. An appropriate companion offering is a set of motion pictures showing scenes and events in the Hawaiian Islands. These are brought by Lloyd Childs, who was Hawaiian commissioner at the Seattle fair, and he accompanies the pictures with an interesting talk on the islands.

Among the other acts, more typically vaudeillian in character, will be that of Charles Kenna, "The Street Fakir," who injects a great deal of original comedy into a monologue which burlesques the vendors of patent medicines and other articles. Mr. and Mrs. William Morris will present a comedy skit entitled "The Lady Downstairs," which is founded on the complications attendant upon flat life in a big city. The Salaggi sisters, acrobatic dancers from Gay Paree, Sampsel and Riley who promise a new lot of popular songs, Martine brothers who indulge in bounding comedy acrobatics and new Pantagescope features complete one of the big bills of the house.

Excitement Vs. Emotion.

The arena breeds excitement which is physical and primitive rather than emotion which is spiritual and exalted, such as it is the function of drama to do. The one is but the refinement and the higher development of the other. Both must trace their origin to the same source. When the drama loses the fundamental principle of the games—namely, that of stern and relentless conflict, then the dramatist should make the arena his laboratory. He is losing sight of the primal nature of man, to which he must, at least in some degree, appeal for no matter how deep the veneer inlaid by habit and social environment, that elemental nature will endure, and from it powerful emotions will continue to spring as long as blood is blood and nerve is nerve.—[National Magazine.

MUCH ACTIVITY AT YEAR-END.

MANY PUPILS' RECITALS AND COMMENCEMENT DOINGS.

Local Singing Clubs Concluding Pleasant and Artistically Profitable Year—Several Interesting Concerts to Take Place During the Coming Week.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

The commencement season is at hand, and from studios and colleges come the challenging programmes which will hurl a galaxy of ambitious young artists forth upon the world.

Los Angeles has an enormous body of teachers—it is said that 300 hold forth in the Blanchard building alone—and, while not every teacher is a paragon of knowledge, nor every pupil a wunderkind, yet their work as a whole is fraught with magnificent possibilities, for, through them, imperceptibly though it may be, the artistic standard of the whole town is raised to a degree.

Several of our leading choral bodies are also concluding a pleasant and highly successful year.

—o—

Orpheus Club.

On Thursday evening the Orpheus Club will give its final concert, and a gala evening is promised by this body of singers.

Mme. Nellie Widmann-Blow of San Francisco, known throughout the East and Europe as a mezzo-soprano of ability, has been engaged to assist the club. The club has always encouraged local compositions, and at this concert they will introduce two local numbers never before sung.

Abbie Jamison, a Los Angeles woman, has dedicated to the Orpheus Club her "Persian Serenade," and from practice it bids fair to equal the best the club has ever sung. Another piece written by a local composer is "The Banshee," with incidental tenor solo to be sung by O. F. Tallman.

There will be about forty voices in this concert next Thursday evening. Will Garroway, the club accompanist, will offer two solo numbers in addition to his accompaniments.

The Orpheus Club has had a very successful season and finishes its second year at the Auditorium.

The numbers are: "Up, Sailor Boy" (Protheroe;) "Swords Out for Charlie" (Bullard;) incidental solo, Francis B. Chapman; "Persian Serenade" (Abbie Jamison;) "Hymn to Apollo" (Brewer;) "Rock-a-Bye, Lady" (Osgood;) "The Banshee" (B. McCray;) "A Tragic Story" (Metcalf.)

—o—

Miss Weimar's Recital.

Miss Jessie Weimar's concluding recital for the year will be given Wednesday evening in Symphony Hall, Blanchard building.

Six pupils will be presented—Miss Pearl Culbertson, Miss Honor Graham, Miss Mana Sentell, Miss Jessie Bissell, Mrs. Mary Point Reed and Miss Amy Swanson.

The young ladies will be assisted by Miss Hazel Peterson, pianist, and Miss Nellie Smith, accompanist.

—o—

L. A. Choral.

The Los Angeles Choral Society will give its second performance Monday evening, June 12, at St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral.

The oratorio selected is the first part of "The Elijah," the soloists being Miss E. M. Lacey, Mrs. Ana Elaine Fischer, sopranos; Master Eugene Storm of St. Paul's choir, contralto; William A. Benjamin, tenor; F. M. Saunders, baritone, and Percy Shaul Hallett, organist.

After this performance, the society will adjourn until September, when it will take up the work again, and extend a cordial invitation to all those who wish to study the great masterpieces to join its ranks. The society is fostered by the American Guild of Organists.

Frank Wright of Grace Church, Brooklyn, and Warden of the American Guild of Organists, will visit this city next week, for the purpose of holding an examination for degrees in the guild. There are eight candidates.

—o—

Pasadena Women.

The Woman's Choral Club of Pasadena will give the closing concert of the season at the Shakespeare Clubhouse on Tuesday evening next, the piece de resistance being Frederick Stevenson's "Viennese Serenade," with Mr. Chick in the baritone solo part, Messrs. Wylie and Simonsen of the Brahms quintet in the violin and 'cello obligati, and Mr. Armstrong and the composer at the two pianos. The programme also embraces a wide variety of solo and concerted numbers.

—o—

At U.S.C.

The College of Music, U.S.C., will give its annual commencement exercises next Tuesday evening in the college chapel. This dignified institution, promulgating its gospel of art with unfailing regularity, does much to raise the intellectual tone of the community.

The programme:

Two pianos, theme and variations in E flat (Hollaender,) Miss Thankful Carpenter and Miss Edwine Vignes; contralto aria from "Samson and Delilah" (St. Saens,) Miss Ruth Aver; piano serenade in A flat (Saambati,) Miss Rena Barnett; Soprano, "Elsa's Dream," from Lohengrin (Wagner,) Miss Lillian Backstrand; Piano, Nocturne in D flat (Chopin,) Miss Edith Palmer; organ, "Offertoire de St. Cecelia" in D (Batiste,) Miss Marguerite Insley; piano, "Fantasie Impromptu" (Chopin,) Miss Ruth West; soprano, "Without Thee" (D'Hardelot,) Miss Juanita Mennett; Piano "Etude Melodique" (Jeffery,) Miss Florence Knesel; violin, "Meditation" (Massenet,) Miss Eleanor Clemons; piano, "March Militaire" (Schubert-Tausig,) Miss Leila Ellis; tenor, "Good-bye" (Tosti,) Arthur Stinton; piano, Scherzo in B flat minor" (Chopin,) Miss Gladys Ogborn; Soprano (a) "Hark as the Twilight Pale" (Persian serenade) (Metcalf;) (b) "Obstination" (Fontenailles,) (c) "Philosophy" (Emmett,) Miss Grace Anna Whitesell; two pianos, "Les Aeolides" (Franck,) Miss Esther Davidson and Miss Ethel Smith.

—o—

Lyric Finale.

The Lyric Club will give the closing concert of its season at the Auditorium Friday evening next.

Fred G. Ellis, Herr Oskar Seiling, Mrs. Grace Widney Mabee, Mrs. J. George Sloan and Miss Maude Hazel Miller, of the club, will assist.

The programme will include Matthews's "Waken, Lords and Ladies Gay," Gaul's "Ashes of Roses," Ware's "Sir Oluf," Cadman's "Indian Mountain Song," the Dell' Acqua-Shelley "Chanson Provencale," Smith's "Cupid Made Love to the Moon," an excerpt from Verdi's "Don Carlos," the Schumann-Saar "The Walnut Tree," and "The Entrance of the Gods to Walhalla."

Mr. Seiling will play Wieniawski's "Russian Airs."

—o—

Miss Selby.

Ida M. Selby, piano pupil of Thilo Becker, will be heard in recital tomorrow evening at the Gamut Auditorium.

Miss Selby's programme will include the usual classics, and a diverse group of moderns.

—o—

Channing in Kilts.

Channing Ellery, who has not been heard from in many a musical moon, has bobbed up in Glasgow, where, at the Exposition, he is delighting the Scotch heart wi' a wee bit music frae auld Italy.

The sober Scotch critics opine that the Ellery Band is about the liveliest thing in music which ever came to the notice of the oatmeal folk.

—o—

Tomlins Not Coming.

The lectures that were to be given in Los Angeles by William L. Tomlins will not be delivered as it is now so late in the season. Superintendent of Schools Francis, who was interested in Mr. Tomlins coming to Los Angeles, states that it would be almost impossible to get a representative gathering of the school teachers just now, as the various schools are preparing to close for the year.

Mr. Tomlins is to visit the Coast in July, and will make his headquarters in San Francisco, or thereabouts.

—o—

Monday Musicale.

The Monday Musicale Club held a very interesting session last week at the home of Mrs. W. H. Perry and Mrs. Modini-Wood, No. 20 St. James Park.

Mrs. Carrie Jacobs-Bond was the guest of the club, and sang several of her compositions.

Friday Morning, ning and Country presented both in the n, and on the arrange- s appointed by Presi- nt in the affair, and without doubt the gathering for the auction next Wednesday morning will be a notable one. "Eddie" Nagel of the Jonathan Club will act as auctioneer, which augurs well for the enjoyability of the occasion.

Where frivolity and philanthropy join hands as in this instance, society may be relied upon for a generous support, for not only will the best seats for the opening of the city's latest and (it is promised,) most beautiful playhouse, be secured only through attendance of the auction, but the purchasers will be aiding in the work of the Associated Charities.

It is through the generosity of the Orpheum management that society receives this opportunity of aiding the Associated Charities, the demands upon that body having exhausted its exchequer of late, and beyond question the opening of the new playhouse will be rendered much more brilliant socially through this latest game for the replenishing of charity's coffers.

One of the most elaborate dancing parties enjoyed by members of the younger set was that presided over by the Misses Randoline Shaw and Helen Odell Simpson, who entertained members of the Phi Delta Psi at the Navarra Apartments recently. She carried a bouquet of delicately-tinted sweet peas and asparagus ferns.

The service was performed in the living-room under a canopy of sweet peas and ferns. "Oh, Promise Me" was sung before the ceremony. Mrs. Josephine Barney played the wedding march. "Janet's Choice," was sung by Lois Horton, a niece of the bride. Rev. Scott entertained the party with several recitations. A piano solo, "Fifth Nocture," by Miss Alice Slorton, was one of the enjoyable features of the occasion. Miss Victoria Juarez sang several selections. ciety of Western Artists, held in Chicago, is described by Elizabeth Kellogg. Of the four illustrations, two are from paintings by Los Angeles landscape painters, William Wendt and Gardner Symons. William Wendt's picture was "Fallen Leaves," a California subject, painted, I think, at Topanga Canyon; Gardner Symon's was "The Sun's Last Glow," an eastern winter scene. Miss Kellogg writes: "Mr. Wendt's able green and yellow hillsides, while splendidly decorative, retain to the full the painter's representation of the third dimension. Another instance of a happy blending of effective design with a sense of the realities is found in Gardner Symon's fine winter landscape."

ART NOTES.

Another private collection of pictures will be sold at auction from the Kanst gallery this week, beginning tomorrow. Some of the pictures are excellent. A "Penitent Magdalene," said to be by Guido Reni, is lovely in color and modeling; a "Venus," by Adrian Bloemart, painted on copper, is also of great interest; "The Love Letter," by Van der Bos, is well drawn and attractively gray-pink in color scheme; Frederick Remington's Indian stands in gorgeous habiliments on a mesa; there is fine, juicy color in Vincent St. Clair's study of apples and plums; A. Glendenning's "Landscape With Sheep" is good, and so are K. Hefner's "In the Gloaming;" F. F. English's water color, "New England Farm Scene," and M. Braun's rich "Autumn Pastures."

Oscar R. Coast, who is at present in Pasadena, will start almost immediately for the East. He will stop in Arizona and Mexico in order to make a few of his favorite desert sketches, returning to his studio in Santa Barbara in December. The summer months will be spent by Mr. Coast with artist friends on Long Island and at Kennebunkport, Me.

Herbert H. Hallett, the picture dealer, has just left for New York. He will return to Los Angeles in the fall.

An exhibition of the work of the art students in the Los Angeles High School was held last Thursday afternoon. The showing was of unusual interest.

An exhibition of the art work at the Normal School is now on. This work is under the management of Nellie Huntington Gere and Regina O'Kane, who have interesting plans for enlarging the department next year.

Joseph Greenbaum has just completed a large oil portrait of Mrs. Thomas Newton. It is one of the best things he has done in the portrait line.

The Palette Club of the Los Angeles School of Art and Design will hold a reception next Monday evening. Hector Alliot will address the club on the subject of "Mission Days."

The annual meeting of the members of the Fine Arts League will be held next Tuesday afternoon in Hotel Alexandria. In addition to the election of officers and directors for the ensuing year, reports of standing and special committees and other matters of importance will be submitted to the meeting for consideration.

William Swift Daniell is sketching at Balboa and Corona del Mar. On June 15 he will reopen his exhibition of water colors at the Steckel gallery. It was interrupted to give dates to another exhibitor. Many new pictures will be added.

The Hollywood Woman's Club has presented its retiring president, Miss E. C. McCullough, with one of Mrs. R. M. Pogson's flower studies. The art section of the club has always taken great interest in local art and artists, and is much pleased with this recognition of Mrs. Pogson's work.

The exhibition of water colors by Laura M. King, held on Hill street near Fourth, has been continued one week longer.

WONDER STORY OF GILBERT'S "PINAFORE."

Once upon a time there was in Dean street, Soho, a little theater called Miss Kelly's. It was a quaint playhouse, smuggled away in a garden which belonged to a dwelling famous in the days of an earlier George. In that theater once upon a time was acting, singing, dancing, grimacing and otherwise endeavoring to make herself captivating that once famous snake charmer, Selina Dolaro.

You, dear reader, do not remember either "The Snake Charmer," in which Lillian Russell was a delirious vision in pink tights, nor Selina Dolaro of whom Mapleson tried to make a successful Carmen but failed because she couldn't sing. All this was some years after that in which she was acting in the little theater in Soho, which you reached by climbing the front stairs of the old Georgian dwelling.

The "show" in which the famous Selina was acting did not seem to hold the public and it was determined to try an experiment. The experiment was described as "a new and original cantata entitled 'Trial by Jury.'" The text thereof was by W. S. Gilbert, who was already known as the author of some entertaining plays, and music by a young composer, just risen to notice, of the name of Arthur Sullivan. The "cantata" was produced on March 25, 1875, and that was the beginning of the history of the great series of Gilbert and Sullivan operettas.

For in all these operettas there is not a suggestive line, not a taint of unwholesomeness. The immediate success of "Trial by Jury," induced the creation of larger works by Gilbert and Sullivan.

Richard D'Oyly Carte formed an organization called the English Comic Opera Company in 1876. The name subsequently became Comedy-Opera Company, and its first offering to the public was "The Sorcerer."

Meanwhile the author and compoer were busy with a new creation. This saw the footlights on the evening of May 28, 1878, and was called "H. M. S. Pinafore, or the Lass That Loved a Sailor."

About this time James C. Duff was in London and he sat up and took notice. The more he saw that "Pinafore" the more he felt certain that America was yearning for it. There was no international copyright. There was nothing in the world to prevent anyone from performing the work outside of England. So Mr. Duff bought a copy of the piano arrangement and a steamship ticket and started for New York.

The managers could not make head or tail out of the thing that Duff showed them and they all sent him away, that is, all except one. Owing to the length of time needed by Mr. Duff to find a theater "Pinafore" was produced in Boston a little earlier than in New York. In the course of his travels Mr. Duff arrived at the Standard theater.

Like other managers Mr. Henderson was doubtful of the success of "Pinafore," but he finally entered into an arrangement with Mr. Duff whereby the work was to be put on, and if unsuccessful discontinued at the end of four weeks. "Pinafore" was accordingly produced at the Standard on Jan. 15, 1879.

The chief members of the cast were these: Sir Joseph Porter, Thomas Whiffen; Ralph Rackstraw, Henri Laurent; Captain Corcoran, Eugene Clark; Dick Deadeye, William Davidge; Josephine, Eva Mills; Hebe, Vernona Jarbeau; Little Buttercup, Mrs. Whiffen.

Immediately after the first performance of "Pinafore" it was the consensus among those interested in the production that it would barely last its four weeks. The audience did not appear to understand it at all, and it was equally evident the following morning the most of the newspaper writers did not. But by the close of the first week the demand for seats was such that it became certain that the operetta was in for a run.

Within a month "Pinafore" was running at five theaters in New York. None of the other productions, however, seemed to have any serious effect on the original, which continued to crowded houses until hot weather in July put an end to its career. But a fine revival of it was put forward the following autumn and had a prosperous run till the next attraction was ready.

Another interesting outcome of the immense popularity of the work was the assembling of special kinds of companies for its performance. An enterprising manager organized the "Church Choir Pinafore company," composed of prominent church soloists; who could sing, but who assuredly could not act.

Then came the "Children's Pinafore company," relying upon the unfailing public curiosity to see children do poorly something which adults can do much better.

But it was in Boston that the climax of specialization was reached. There was formed the "Boston Ideal Pinafore company," which had as its principal members such famous artists as Henry Clay Barnabee, Tom Karl, Mathilde Phillips, and to make the story short, the original members of what was a little later called the "Boston Ideal Opera company," and finally "The Bostonians."

The fame of all these doings penetrated even England in the course of time, and D'Oyly Carte looked into the conditions. On April 3, 1880, he produced at the Opera Comique, London, "The Pirates of Penzance" and he arranged for its production the following fall at the Fifth Avenue Theater in this city.

It was then that "Pinafore" was given under the supervision of Gilbert and Sullivan, both of whom visited this country for the first time. The old operetta was produced to hold the Fifth-avenue stage while the "Pirates" was in rehearsal. Sullivan conducted the orchestra, and Gilbert, in the make-up of a sailor, went on as a member of the chorus and led the action on the stage. The original orchestration of the operetta was heard for the first time, and so too were the correct tempi, which proved to be quite different in many cases from those used here. Especially was this noticeable in "Give three cheers and one cheer more for the well-bred captain of the Pinafore." This had always been sung very rapidly here and with a light orchestration. Sullivan's orchestration included a plenty of brass and the tempo was moderate, with heavily marked emphasis on "Give three cheers and one cheer more for the well-bred captain of the Pinafore." At each stress Gilbert and his sailors waved their caps in their right hands.

How far Mr. Gilbert was influenced in fashioning the libretto of "Pinafore" by the ludicrous tragedy of "Il Trovatore" he has never told us; but there is no question of the fitness of "Pinafore" as a travesty of the grandiloquent old opera of Verdi. Here we have the mixed up children and the foster mother, but in this instance, of course, the denouement is humorous instead of heart-rending.

The manner in which the two authors worked together in producing gaiety for all the nations is charmingly exemplified in "Pinafore" in such numbers as the solo and chorus, "He Is an Englishman." This burlesque of the pompous "Ego Romanus sum" of the swelling Briton is something which even the Englishmen themselves enjoyed.

Sullivan's music in all his operettas is good, but naturally it rises to higher levels in some than in others. "Pinafore" is well supplied with numbers of high merit, but it would be going too far to say that it equals the exquisite finish of "Patience," or the more elevated levels of "Iolanthe." Admirable as it is it has nothing quite so irresistible as "Oh Captain Shaw," and the gorgeous entrance of the peers in "Iolanthe" or the perfectly conceived and executed characterization of the three types of music in "Patience;" namely, that of the languishing esthetes, that of the soldiers and that of the everyday people, Patience herself and Archibald, the All right.

Sullivan's profound appreciation of the solemn attitude assumed by Britons toward oratorio and particularly the sacred works of Handel enabled him to produce that conquering address of the counsel for the plaintiff in "Trial by Jury;" "With a sense of deep emotion I approach this painful case;" and the side splitting recitative of Lady Jane (in "Patience") accompanying herself on the large viol. Such things cannot be perfectly appreciated by any but the music lover, and he alone gets all the fun out of the splendid entrance recitative of Little Buttercup, "Hail, men of war's men, safeguards of your nation!"

Times change and operettas change with them. Think how a young person, brought up on the American Broadway operetta of the last few years, would gasp and stare in the presence of "The Pirates of Penzance." No Vienna waltz; no reference to naughty places in Paris; no miraculous costumes; no exhibition of female forms; no high kicking; no dancing; no processions; no shady speeches; no mighty smiting of brass drum and cymbals; no music copied from imitations of thefts from the repertory of the vaudeville houses; no comedian falling over chairs or rolling down tairs; nothing but pungent literary wit and humor and music uniting grace and elegance of style with the nicest skill in characterization. How insufferably stupid it must seem!

KIND HEARTS — GOOD DEEDS.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

One of the most considerate things ever done is related by a contributor to the Baltimore American of the Walters who, for so many years controlled the London Times. "One of the most kindly things," says the correspondent, "was the generous consideration which it showed at the time of the death of its special correspondent, M. Bowlby, during the Tai-Ping rebellion in China. Bowlby was slowly tortured to death by the Chinese. The story of his horrible fate was printed in The Times. But after the regular edition was printed, the presses were stopped, and a single copy of another edition, containing a mild account of the case, was struck off and mailed to Bowlby's aged mother, so that she might never know the cruel sufferings that her son had endured before he died. Perhaps this incident illustrates better than anything else the feeling of mutual consideration and of esprit de corps that prevailed between the employees of The Times and the Walters.

A gift of $500,000 to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology by T. Coleman DuPont, of Delaware, has been announced. The gift follows closely the signing by the Governor of the bill which passed the Legislature appropriating $100,000 a year for ten years to the institute.

Joseph Henry met William Dillon in St. Louis last week and together they started West, bumming their way, says the Kansas City Star. They were put off of a Union Pacific freight train near Muncie, Kan., Friday night. They waited for the next freight by a bridge over Gonigle Creek.

"Swing on," said Henry to his companion as he caught the iron ladder. He looked back and saw his companion slip and disappear into the dark ravine through which the creek flowed thirty-five feet below. Henry "dropped off" and found his companion almost unconscious. He went with him to St. Margaret's Hospital, where Dillon was found to have suffered internal injuries.

"Can I stay with him awhile?" Henry asked.

The sisters agreed and he remained with his friend. Henry said that they were going to the harvest fields. Dillon said his home was in Boston.

Miss Eleanor Peregrin, a trained nurse, is a beneficiary to the extent of about $1,500,000, under the will of the late Walter E. Duryea of New York, the crippled athlete and broker. Duryea broke his back in diving in August, 1899, and spent the rest of his life in harness. Miss Peregrin became his housekeeper and remained with him until his death. Certain legacies were provided for by Duryea in his will, and after their payment, the balance of his estate is left to his faithful nurse and housekeeper.

On April 26 while the U.S.S. Pensacola was at San Francisco, Mrs. W. C. Cochran fell overboard from the lower platform of the gangway accommodation ladder while getting into a steam launch. Boatswain Frank Hindrelet immediately jumped overboard in full uniform, and saved her from drowning. For his bravery, he has just been commended by Acting Secretary Winthrop of the Navy Department.

Drew Dog Into Church.

The county seat laughed today over the experience of Harvey Tibbott in the Presbyterian Church there yesterday, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch. Mr. Tibbott was singing Dudley Buck's "Fear Not," as a solo when his dog, passing the church and hearing his master's voice, entered, trotted up the center aisle and mounting the rostrum reached his master and sprawled at his feet.

At the Kanst Art Gallery

This collection is one of the finest ever sold at auction in Los Angeles. It is superior in every way to the McDonald Collection, lately sold by me. In that collection ten pictures were sold so cheap that we have offers for them of over $2000 more than they were bought for at auction, but the lucky purchasers will not part with their bargains. Come to this sale, as there will be a to get good paintings at even greater bargains. Take my advice and be on hand or come in Monday morning and leave your bids with either myself or Mr. Kanst. If the picture goes for anything below your bid you will get that advantage. If sold for more someone else gets the picture.

GREAT OPPORTUNITY

FORCED SALE

Remember, this is a forced sale and every picture, bronze or other art goods that is offered will actually be sold at the highest bid. Some of the best artists in the world are represented here, artists who have won every honor the world has to offer worth winning. Such men as Prof. Karl Heffner, F. C. Freiseke, Edward Gay, Henry Mosler, Alonzo Perez, Louis Aikin, M. Braun, Thomas Moran, Eugene Mulertt, Louis K. Harlow, Guilo Rosati, W. S. Bucklin, D. Sherrin, H. Bongers, Reid Klingsbogl, S. Daniel, C. Brennir, I. Paulman, T. V. C. Valenkamph and many others, nearly one hundred artists being represented.

PEGS AND HOBBLES.

BY LILLIAN COLLINS.

During the past year we have heard a great deal of adverse criticism upon the subject of girls' clothes. The "hobbles" have been derided, the "harems" denounced as the last word in absurdity. Of course, no one but the bird-women have taken that harems at all seriously, and not all of us can fly, but the hobbles—.

Personally I don't care for hobbles in any form, and do not approve of harems of any brand, but in the matter of clothes, I can't see wherein the average styles affected by girls are more extreme than the exaggerated up-to-dateness assumed by the high school and college chaps. Does a psychological relation exist between the extreme scantness of the young women's tailored skirts, and the amazing voluminosity of the young men's trousers? Have the manufacturers of woolens entered into collusion with the pace-makers of fashion, whereby is it agreed upon that all the surplus materials which the girls refuse to have fashioned into their skirts, shall be put into the make-up of the boy's trousers? We know a law of equalization exists in the plan of nature—why not in the scheme of manufacturers? That's a perfectly new idea on the psychology of dress.

For the purpose of illustration I revert to my own experience. My young son has just been promoted to the dignity of long trousers and because of this new importance, his father accompanied him to the tailor this time, instead of myself, as was my custom in the knickerbocker days. I don't know how the boy accomplished it—his father is a man of at least normal taste and judgment—but some hypnotic influence upon the part of that boy produced a most astonishing and unexpected result. The youngster came home on the appointed day, and displayed to my bewildered gaze an outrageous sort of nether garment which he fondly and admiringly denominated, "pegs."

I had reluctantly looked forward, with a weepy sort of sentiment, to the time when my boy should graduate from the knickerbocker period into the responsibility of long trousered manhood. I had anticipated a quiet little time with reflections upon the passing of the boy, and perhaps a few retrospective tears as an accompaniment; but—ye gods of Mirth and Laughter—no sane person could weep over the seriousness of those "pants." Each leg looked for all the world like a question mark; literally, I mean—not just a sort of "what is it?" proposition. They bulged with the most affluent amplitude from waist to knee, from which point they tapered in sharply defined lines to the ankle which they clasped in a close, affectionate embrace. They were finished at the bottom with a cuff, of somewhat less circumference that the coat sleeve, and perhaps two and a half inches deep. The sure self-confidence of youth assumed approval. Beaming face and sparkling eyes attested to the joy of proud possession. It was a tragic moment, for—mark you—I was expected to admire my boy's first grown-up clothes. Mothers are equal to almost anything, however. I just looked into the boy's happy face and with perfect truth and conviction said: "It's perfectly beautiful."

I'm glad it's over though. I'm glad that boys change from knee pants to long trousers but once. I'm glad even for those ridiculous "pegs;" for they whisked away the setting of a little tragedy and substituted for the "tears" and "reflections" a smile of sympathetic understanding.

I am quite sure, too, that a pronounced attack of "hobbles" calls for precisely the same treatment as its brother complaint of "pegs." These passing phases of boy and girl life are things to be smiled at—not things to be frowned upon and censured. There is but one champagne period of life, when the joy and sparkle of more living, bubbles over into all sorts of foolish and innocent excess. Bless the dear kiddies! let them have their "pegs" and "hobbles," if the possession of these trivial vanities adds anything to the sum total of their joy and happiness.

OVER THE SEA.

Dr John Clifford, pastor of a London Baptist congregation for fifty-three years, honored by elections to the chairs of the Council of the Free Churches and the World's Baptist Conference, praised by David Lloyd George as the sturdiest militant Christian England has ever seen since Oliver Cromwell, says that he owes much of what he is and has achieved to Emerson's essays, and that he's indebted (in a lesser degree) to Dr. Lyman Abbott.

It is not every day that a Princess is engaged to a minister of the gospel, who is also a Count, but the Princess Barbara of Russ, of that famous semi-royal line, is that exception. She announces her engagement to Count Siegfried von Luettichau, the pastor of the German Embassy in Constantinople. He is 33 years old, while his intended is 23.

Viscount Dangan, eldest son and heir of Earl Cowley, is working twelve hours a day at a weekly wage of $10 in a scenic artist's studio just outside London. The young Viscount has dropped his title and works as Arthur Wellesley.

--Richard Croker, the ex-boss of Tammany Hall, has been commissioned by King Alfonso of Spain to supply all the horses required by the royal stables and for the officers of the Spanish army. This honor was conferred on the old Tammany chieftain, who maintains one of the finest horse breeding establishments in Ireland, as a result of his distinguished success in breeding, raising and training Irish racers and hunters. King Alfonso has used some of the Croker horses for several years and they have given him so much satisfaction that he has appointed him royal master of horse and purveyor of His Majesty's stud.

Prince Ludwig Ferdinand of Bavaria is a distinguished doctor of medicine. According to a cablegram a recent patient was a young woman whom he cured of tuberculosis. The Prince also is a skilled performer on the violin and organ. He is not the only physician in the royal house of Wittelbach, for Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, who came from Bavaria, knows medicine, and her father was famed as an oculist.

William George Hake, who recently celebrated his 100th birthday anniversary in London, is said to be the only English lawyer who ever lived to be 100 years old. He was admitted to the bar in 1835.

The Enigma.

Rainbow, balanced o'er the sea,
End to end in the placid main
Mirroring eternity
With thy circle in the rain.

Crescent, in black heaven's shell,
Yoking hill to darkling plain,
Rainbow, by what magic spell
Weav'st thou sunshine in the rain?

Rainbow, stay! Reveal to me
In thy mystery-laden chain
Will fair grace and purity
Weave me sunshine in the rain?

—[Charles Battell Loomis in the Independent.

WILD HORSES.

A Cry from Out the Heart.

Wild horses, O beloved, are my thoughts of you;
Wild horses with fetlocks burning the desert winds;
Swift they fly to you as an arrow finds the mark.
There is no hand of strength to stay them;
There is no barrier to impede their course,
Even as waves in a sea of storm may not be held.
They descend upon you in fury, yet they sustain you;
They consume and yet they nourish you—

A vintage of might to pour for you the strange, glad wine of life
Dreams, dreams, beloved!
Dreams of your fragrant breath,
More delicate than faint, elusive music in the night.
Dreams of your midnight hair and eyes of morning light;
Dreams for the words that may not lift themselves
To those fair heights my yearning spirit knows
In mad ascent to the high, white soul of you.

As a chamber flooded with light,
So is the thought of you;
As one stepping from darkness into courts of dawn,
So is the memory of you.
High are the ceilings here,
Chaste and stately the decorations,
Exquisite the tapestries and mouldings
Which make its perfect art.
Like stars of gold set in purple skies
Are the lights which lave its frescoes.
So, beloved, are the dream and hope of you.
A chapel of the High and Nameless, Love,
I enter, with your name my only prayer.

HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

BITS OF VERSE.

Afterward.

I do not ask for dreams come true
Nor ships to my Enchanted Isle;
My only wish the long day through
To see again his smile.

I hear them chanting o'er the dust.
His shining deeds, his star-strewn way;
Yet loveliest of all was just
His living day by day.

There falls, far-echoing through the night,
His perfect, singing otherwhere;
But, oh, the anguish in the sight
Of this, his empty chair.

Nor spires nor creeds have ever yet
Fashioned me for paradise;
But all my unfaith I forget,
Remembering his eyes.
—[H. C. B., in Century Magazine.

Child's Play.

In happy childhood's days I blew
Great, iridescent globes that flew
High in the air like swift balloons,
Or whirled like new-created moons
In strange, erratic orbs around
Some distant sun I never found

Now, older but not wiser grown,
A fairer bubble have I blown,
Of sun-kissed loveliness impearled.
It filled the limits of the world
And seemed as if 'twere meant to last;
It was so exquisite, so vast,
So visionlike, so heavenly bright,
I saw in it all life's delight.

Illusion! It was film so rare
That even when it seemed most fair
A hasty word its fabric jarred—
Strange that a breath should strike so hard!
It burst, and there was nothing left
To tell of what I was bereft,
Except a sprinkle of hot tears,
As when a bubble disappears!

The Seller o' Dreams.

I met her in a shaded place
'Twixt hedges white with blackthorn's snow,
The purple fringes of her gown
Made murmur where the violets blow,
She bore a burden soft as mist,
All rose and blue and opal gleams,
She sang a strange wild faery song,
And pray'd the sleepers buy her dreams.

"Oh, I have dreams to sell," she cried,
"Dreams of a golden morn in May,
Of cherry bloom like butterflies
Swept down by soft winds o'er the way;
Oh, I have dreams to sell," she sang,
"Of lilac bells that chime for dusk,
Of roses set like stars along
A garden sweet with balm and musk."

"Oh, I have dreams to sell," she breath'd,
"Of rainbows in a mist of flow'rs,
Of pale soft fingers like the moon
That stroke fair cheeks thro' sleeping hours;
Oh, I have dreams to sell," she sigh'd,
"Will no one come, will no one buy,
Oh, must I roam till morning-tide
Still with my burden pil'd up high?

"Oh, I have dreams to give away,"
She laugh'd and chang'd her plaintive air,
And down the sky like April rain
Her dreams fell softly everywhere;
Then ere she left the quiet earth
With steps like wreaths of foam that fall,
She laid her flow'rs against my lips
Her kiss, the sweetest dream of all.

A Lullaby.

Lady Moon, O Lady Moon,
Here's a little sleepy girlie that must go to slumber soon!
Won't you glide across the window on your shining silver wings,
Won't you spare 'twixt noon and noon
Just one tiny tender minute to this cot with baby in it,
Though I know you're oh, so busy with a hundred million things?

Lady Moon, O Lady Moon,
Let her see the polished buckles on your gleaming silver shoon,
Let her touch your diamond rings and the star dust on your wings;
And should you bend above her—ah! but that would be a boon!
And kiss her little rosy lips, how kind, O Lady Moon!

Lady Moon, O Lady Moon,
Tell her just one fairy story that you've gathered as you go
From the pine woods or the snow,
From the gayly lighted cities or the stars above them strewn;
There's a sleepy little girlie that would like so much to know,
Just one little fairy story, Lady Moon!

Lady Moon, O Lady Moon,
It is late; and you're so busy with so many trysts to keep,
And our little wide-eyed babba—it is time she went to sleep!
Kiss those cheeks that mock December
With their roses picked in June;
Though she's sleepy she'll remember,
She'll remember, Lady Moon!

FLORENCE IN SPRING MECCA OF AUTHORS.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

FLORENCE, May 22.—Spring in Florence is always marked by the presence of many writers, and by the completion of their books of winter composition. Many literary people always come, too, for a week or two and others rent villas for the flower blooming season only.

Maurice Hewlett, who, it is reported, is contemplating a permanent home here, is staying with his daughter at Settignano, a village on the slopes of the Apennines in full view of Florence. Its best-known resident has always been Gabriele d'Annunzio, who is now in Paris while his creditors have been attaching his possessions at Settignano.

Mr. Hewlett is a man of simple, kindly, sincere nature, always ready to help others, and to appreciate the merits of other writers. Just now he is busy making known to the world his discovery of a new English poet, but although I have no wish to disturb the cream on the milk of Mr. Hewlett's discovery I can confess exultantly to a prior claim. Some four years ago there was put into my hands by chance a collection of what I thought very remarkable poems. When the writer appeared to claim them, the friend to whom they had been intrusted, being absent, I saw him. He was a young Berlitz teacher of English, he confided to me, living alone and not at all in the romantic tower described in one of his poems, but amid the dreary surroundings of an Italian family of the class which receives foreign lodgers. Nothing more unpoetic than such a home can be imagined. Carpetless floors, dreadful wallpaper, the women in loose dressing jackets and skirts, no fires in winter and only macaroni and onions, not to say garlic in abundance. Yet the poems were full of joy in children, flowers and the sensuous delights of the emotions. He told me that his life had passed through the variations of bank clerk, actor and wandering teacher, everything cut short by illness. He left Florence and occasionally I came upon a stray poem of his in English periodicals.

It remained, however, for Mr. Hewlett to introduce him formally. Without even a personal acquaintance this kindly author brought his poems to the notice of Elkin Matthews and, this week, "Confessional and Other Poems," with a preface by Maurice Hewlett, has appeared in the Vigo Cabinet series as Wilfrid Thorley's initial appearance as a new English poet.

Cecilia Waern, whose "Mediaeval Sicily" published since Christmas by Duckworth and which has placed her at once among authorities on the art and history of that most fascinating of islands, is a Florentine by adoption. She is, however, equally well-known in America, having been art writer on Scribner's magazine, lecturer on art in leading schools and women's colleges, notably Wellesley, and a contributor to many of the magazines. A Swede of high birth, her family having always been associated with diplomacy and the Swedish Cabinet, she is English by adoption; that is, she prefers to write now in our language, her reputation in Sweden having been made years ago by volumes in her own tongue. Miss Waern's villa lies on the road to "Villa Montauto" at Bellosguardo, the home where Hawthorn lived in Florence and which is described in the "Marble Faun." It is called "Villa Maria" and from the door of Miss Waern's study there is an old-fashioned flower-grown path which leads to a stone terrace or rather platform which commands a superb view of the Arno, Florence and the far stretching valley. Here come many savants to talk with this art critic and writer.

Miss Waern herself is what we may call one of the brave spirits of the world of writers. Full of adventure she went first to see the world in America. Highly amusing are her stories of how Americans of that day thought all foreigners of the status of emigrants. A rich New York lady, meaning to be very kind, asked her how soon she hoped to save enough "to bring over" her mother, a lady at that moment enjoying the broad acres of one of the large estates of Sweden. Having a high sense of humor, Miss Waern took it as it was meant and to this day the good lady knows no better. Called to a chair in a large woman's college Miss Waern declined it because of certain restrictions. She was told that the glass of claret that she asked for at dinner as a matter of course would be dangerous to the morals of the girl students. She chose rather to write for "Scribner" and lecture in New York schools and colleges.

Another author associated with Florence is Mrs. Lee Hamilton, known in the writing world as "Annie Holdsworth." Her villa on the road to Fiesole is near that of her sister-in-law, Vernon Lee, in real life Miss Violet Paget. Mrs. Lee Hamilton's last book, "The Little Company of Ruth," has not yet appeared in America, but Methuen publishes it in London and Cosmo Hamilton has just dramatized it for Mr. Frohman. It is full of the sweet-scented sentiment of old English garden life among quaint humble people, and, as a play, it is likely to make the appeal of such plays as "Hazel Kirke" and "Esmeralda" of the early eighties.

An American writer who has wintered here and been busy on a new book is Kenneth Brown of Charlottesville, Va. While admitting the charm of Florence for some, Mr. Brown is all for America and longs to get back there, as he says, "into the midst of things," and where the future, not the past, is the subject of conversation. Mrs. Brown, author of "Haremlek," is with him.

Howard Pyle, the artist who while not a writer, is always associated with them as an illustrator, is also living here, and working in a Florentine studio, but on American subjects. The latest has been the historic picture showing the wagons bearing the Dupont gunpowder to the rescue of the American army in the War of 1812, a centenary soon to be celebrated.

Professor Arthur Norton of Harvard is another American located here while he works on a forthcoming volume.

An English resident is Miss Dorothy Neville Lees, whose "Tuscan Feasts and Tuscan Friends" is to be followed soon by a new volume, giving, in her charming way, accounts of old and new Florence. Miss Lees is employed regularly on "The Mask," the magazine owned by Gordon Craig, Ellen Terry's son, which is published in Florence. She has mastered, she says, every detail of magazine-making in her connection with this publication, a feat almost necessary with Italian printers, who insist upon Italian proof marks, who take holidays regardless of dates of publication, and who never rise to time unless the editor keeps near them in the printing-office. If the printing establishment is run by monks, a custom here, they are not permitted to labor on all the innumerable saints' days of special obligation. If, on the other hand, by Socialists, they stroll off on exactly opposite holidays. All English editors here grow nervous, thin and worried, as they must work double to counterbalance the merry-making of the printers.

A SUMMARY OF THE SUMMERY.

WHAT THE GLAD WARM WEATHER HAS DONE FOR LOS ANGELES BUSINESS

BY E. W. GALE AND J. D. MINSTER.

SUMMER is here. Its accessories are all pouring in. Many have arrived and others are following so fast it may cause an extra bead of prespiration to trickle down your brow when you attempt to figure out the number.

There are crops, and crops and then crops—crops of hammocks, engagements rings, green hose and pink brides, checked caps and scrambled suits, fresh beets, red cherries and white, new potatoes and last year's straw hats.

Every merchant in town is singing the song of something new, something for the summer. No matter what you may read, you'll find an advertisement for some line of summer supplies.

Down on the market red cherries are already on the wane, so far along is the fruit season. White cherries are looking reddish for the reason that they are becoming over-ripe.

Apricots are pushing to the front as the fresh fruit of the minute. Dried they are almost as valuable as jewels and like prunes, which are worth as much as 25 cents a pound retail, they are being put into some of the new Oriental jewelry which dangles from the ear or bobs from the throat.

Then there is the luscious morsel, the watermelon. Imperial Valley is too small to take care of the rapid expansion of that one fruit and fastest express trains are necessary to keep the watermelons from pushing all the other fruits off the earth.

THE CANTALOUPE.

The cantaloupe is playing little brother to the watermelon and only for its name would get away just as fast. You can hire a cantaloupe (known in prehistoric times as a muskmelon and in some isolated eastern districts still designated by that name) at an ice cream parlor as a container for some cold dainty, or you can have the same "cant" frapped at your own home for the mere trifling sum of a dime.

GRAPES HERE.

Even grapes are making their initial bow and peaches we can have in reality by the time this article is digested. Not to insinuate that "peaches" are not always with us. In winter they are dressed in furs, but right at this time they form the chief fruit for appreciation at all of the beaches, in the mountain resorts and on the downtown streets.

For them the summery crop is probably most essential. Were it not for the ear of sweet corn, that humiliatingly smears butter above their beautiful blushes, they might rise from the ranks of mere peaches to be angels, and become as unobtainable as the aforesaid corn is at the present cost of 50 cents per dozen ears or more.

Cabbage is always with us as are most vegetables, save perhaps asparagus, which has completed the first round of summer evidence, there being little of that vegetable still on hand. Its succulency is a thing for fond summer memories if not reality. There are some new kolorabi to be had, but only the old German lady in the middle of your block could tell you what they are and how to cook them. Water cress can still take the place of parsley in the decoration of the always-on-hand cold ham of the summer luncheon.

But getting back to that peachy summer question. The crop of fair girls is perhaps the finest Los Angeles has ever produced.

Any afternoon on Broadway, any Sunday at Venice will prove conclusively that the best summer crop of Southern California is its girls.

THREE CARLOADS OF PANAMAS.

We believe our summer girls wear better clothes than they do elsewhere. You may know if you must pay for half a dozen summer frocks for half that many daughters, or twice that many for a single daughter. For that reason the dry goods storekeepers are all laughing up their sleeves. Summer, which was formerly a losing season, has become a harvest for the man who furnishes the lingerie, the millinery, the hosiery and all the other "ry" things.

So heavy has the demand been for Panama hats among the girls this year that two or three revolutions have been held in abeyance in order to allow the natives of the Central American republics an opportunity of getting rich quick. One wholesale milliner of this city declares that there are three carloads of Panamas crowning the beauty of our fair sex.

Hemp straws have also made their hit and Milans are still popular. The really startling summer bud in the straw hat world has been the appearance of the latest from New York and Paris, the tiny black sailor, so popular in the days when the mothers of present day debutantes were in the height of fashion with their clothes.

A few Banocks have slipped into the men's stores. They are lighter than the Panama and show no dirt, in other words, they mean a cigar revenue, because they need never be cleaned, like their predecessor, the Panama. There are all sorts of other straws for men, rumpled ones, crumpled ones, and just plain old-fashioned straw hats, the kind that father wore before the war. A rope straw, with special ventilatory features, and sold chiefly to fishermen, farmers and gentlemen of leisure, are German importations displayed in department stores.

Then there are crops of summer dresses. They are advertised as half off, quarter off, and from appearances of some, they are nearly all off, at least as far as modesty of wearer is concerned. Most of them are cut with sailor effect at the neck, sails trimmed as low down and snuggly as possible.

They are made in all colors, but a brilliant, dazzling white is preferable and this demand has created a good harvest for the occulists. They report big summer sales of smoked glasses and many sweet young beach heroes are wearing them.

According to some of the old maids, the mashers are not to be blamed for the season that the marquisette is so sheer that it might be a cobweb film; the charmeuse satin is suggestively sensuous; peau de soie and voile are also too alluring, and all are worse than the old embroidered peek-a-boo effects. Despite these facts, the stores report sales of 47,861 marquisette waists, signifying that individual beach beauties may have a supply of two or three of them.

As for the sales of lingerie, the dry goods men say this line has dwindled. Hobbles and harems have discounted lingerie. Fluffy-ruffle girls are "passe," and to wear skirts is to uselessly incumber. Therefore lingerie is not the best seller on the market.

MUST HAVE CHECKED SUIT.

The men are not far behind in style. They have the "bug" as badly as the ladies and any young blood who hasn't a checked suit, one in startling or quiet shepard plaids, is out of the running. He may have a check book, or even a checkered career, but these cannot fill in the void that comes with the non ownership of a checked suit. Tailors have imported bales and bales of this suiting and still there is a call for it. Whalebone striped blues and mauve browns are also fashionable, particularly when built into one of those tied-in Norfolk suits.

As accessories every man must have silk hose and soisette, pongee or straight silk shirts. Those who can't get the real things have them in near silks and are just as happy. The man with the figure, can wear these almost correct shirts and create an effect.

Speaking of effects, one furnisher stated that all men were striving for the athletic build, the demand for that kind of underwear having exceeded records of all previous years this summer. No matter how thin and how cold a man appears, he must have athletic union suits. This demand is said to have arisen by virtue of the fact that some men, having been caught out at sea in an open boat, have been able to cast aside their outer garments and stand garbed in swimming trunks ready

FOR NEW SITE FOR THE STATE NORMAL

Trustees of Great Institution Are on the Hunt.

Investigations Made by the Principal of School.

Hotel or Hospital Perhaps on the Old Location.

Believing that the great and growing usefulness of the Los Angeles State Normal School is curtailed through delay in perfecting the State's plans for a larger and more adequate institution, the students, faculty and alumni are eagerly awaiting the result of the Normal Board's deliberations over the question of a new site. Separate propositions from thirty-four different owners of property in and near this city were opened may 18 and these are now being considered. It is understood that the decision has been narrowed by the process of elimination to four or five prospective locations.

The places offered are in widely separated sections and the propositions range from free sites proffered by men who expect to profit from the enhancement of real estate values through the location of the school to tracts held at good stiff prices. The State has agreed to allow $100,000 for the purchase of a desirable site and no place of under twenty acres in area will be considered. In the event of a free site being accepted the money appropriated will go into the improvement of the

The present members of the board are, the Governor of the State, the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Richard Melrose of Anaheim, and George I. Cochrane, William Oliver, E. T. Earl and Arthur Letts of Los Angeles. With these men rests the decision as to where the school is in the future to stand.

The eagerness of the Normal School authorities to get the new institution launched is accounted for by the fact that the school work has completely outgrown its present facilities and by the added circumstance that fully two years will be required to make the change of quarters even under the most frictionless and expeditious kind of management. There is a world of preliminary to be attended to before the larger school can ever be started, even after the site had been settled upon.

In the first place the present grounds of the Normal School looking down Fifth street on Grand avenue and comprising about four and nine-tenths acres in the very heart of the city must be disposed of. On this property the State has placed a minimum price of $500,000, and under the law the holding must be offered at public auction after a due process of advertising. The site has twice been offered for sale in this way. The first time the deal fell through bcause a suitable new site was not decided upon within the life of the selling agreement with the would-be purchasers. Just before the slump of 1907 a deal had been practically concluded, but this too failed of fulfillment. The State's minimum is considered far under value by realty men in general.

SO CROWDED.

So crowded is the school for proper facilities that $10,000 has been appropriated by the State for repairs and temporary additions to the present buildings. The city schools have also come to the rescue by accepting a large number of the practice school students of the Normal as assistants and "apprentices" to the regular grade teachers. In many ways, too, the student body and faculty of the Normal are co-operating to make the best of the situation and to maintain the work of the school at its present high standard, biding the time when adequate quarters will be available.

For the assistance of the board in determining a new site, President Millspaugh has made some instructive tabulations showing the areas from which the greatest attendance is derived. With Twelfth and Main, a site obviously impossible, for a center, Dr. Millspaugh has ascertained that 160 of the Normal students room or have their homes within the radius of a mile of that spot, 255 come from between two and three miles, 141 live between three to four miles out, seventy-two from four to five miles, twenty-three from five to six miles, twenty-one from six to seven miles, twenty-three from seven to eight miles, seven from eight to nine miles, and 233 come from outside the city. The total attendance is 935.

Those reaching the school by the Los Angeles Pacific Railway, the Venice short line and the Colegrove lines number 232. Along the Glendale line 194 are living. The Covina line and the Pasadena short line together bring in 186. The Southern Pacific to San Diego provides transportation for 218. Sixty-six come over the Santa Ana, Downey and Whittier lines, and 105 over the San Pedro and Long Beach lines. Within easy walking distance of the school are living 120 students.

It will be seen that the location of the school in the northwest would most nearly suit the students at present in attendance at the Normal. The decision is not, however, one easy to make when everything is taken into consideration.

As provided by the legislative act, the school must be in Los Angeles county. To obtain the best results, it must be in Los Angeles and preferably not very far out, for a small city cannot furnish enough children for its training school. It must be reasonably near the center of the city, also, for the reason that students using the interurban car systems must come to the center of Los Angeles before taking local cars for any special locality.

CAR LINES DEMANDED.

The Normal authorities insist that the new school must have at least two different car lines near by and that it should have access to the best of sewer and water connections. It must be in a built-up neighborhood in order that there may be sufficient boarding accommodations for non-resident students. It is insisted upon, too, that the grounds shall be ample and adapted to a comprehensive landscape scheme and with space for play

Busy Mechanics.

MIGHTIER STRIDES IN LOCAL BUILDING.

Construction Work Climbs Up Without Cessation.

Architects and Builders See a Busy Season Ahead.

Large and Small Structures Keeping Men Busy.

There seems to be no let-up in building activities. Already this month permits carrying a valuation of $500,000 have been issued by the department of buildings. Permits for the first five months of this year have been in excess of $1,500,000, monthly. Of this amount nearly $1,000,000 goes into new residences each month. The demand for apartment houses also continues brisk.

The month of June will, undoubtedly, be the greatest building month in the history of Los Angeles. With $500,000 worth of new building construction already started, with applications on file with the inspector of buildings totaling over $1,350,000, the usual run of business will bring the grand total for June to considerably over $2,000,000.

Alfred F. Priest is completing plans and will be ready next week to take bids for the erection of a three-story and basement frame apartment house on Westlake avenue, near Seventh street for George McAnany. It will contain sixty-five rooms divided into thirty suites with private baths, wall and disappearing beds and built-in buffets and bookcases. There will be a large lobby and card-room with fireplace on the main floor. In the basement will be a billiard-room for two tables, two rooms and bath for servants, private storage rooms, separate rooms for gas and electric meters, and boiler-room. On each floor in the rear will be a screened porch with laundry trays and lockers for each apartment. The building will be mission design.

Train & Williams have completed plans for a three-story brick apartment house to be erected on the south east corner of Eighth and Hoover streets for R. B. Wilson, 420 H. W. Hellman building. It will contain seventy-six rooms, divided into thirty-three suites, with private baths and disappearing beds.

Fernand Parmentier is making working plans for a three-story and basement, seventy-two-room brick apartment house to be erected at No. 520 South Flower street for Mrs. G. Pellissier. It will be divided into two and three-room suites, with buffet kitchens and private baths.

Fred Biren is preparing plans for a two-story frame apartment building for J. R. Roth. There will be four apartments of three rooms and bath each.

Garrett & Bixby have prepared plans for a two-story frame store and apartment building to be erected at Normandie avenue and Forty-eighth street for Natt A. Piper of No. 1433 West Forty-eighth street. There will be two storerooms and five apartments with private baths and wall and disappearing beds.

R. M. Taylor, F. R. Greenleaf, associate, have completed plans, and are taking bids for, the erection of a three-story and basement brick apartment-house at No. 1420 South Flower street for J. H. Roberts. It will contain seventy-six rooms divided into two and three-room suites, with private baths, buffet kitchens and wall beds.

C. D. Fry has the contract at $6000 to erect a two-story, thirty-two-room frame apartment building at No. 1146 San Julian street, for Dr. Abner Fry. The building will be subdivided into suites of one, two and three rooms, with one apartment of five rooms.

A. W. Angel is drawing plans for a five-story and basement reinforced concrete apartment building, 35x100 feet, on Seaside boulevard, Long Beach, for E. A. Weston. There will be seventy rooms in the building, divided into two-room suites.

The Southwest Contractor and Manufacturer also reports the following residential work in the offices of local architects:

A. L. Acker is preparing plans for a two-story, eight-room frame residence to be built at Huntington drive and San Marino street, Pasadena, for Walter Drew of that city. Also plans for a two-story, nine-room residence of the Swiss type to be built at Alhambra for J. A. Reid.

R. D. Farquhar is preparing plans for a large residence to be erected on a four-acre site at Oak Knoll for Dr. Phillip S. Chancellor, Auditorium building.

John N. Gillies has started the erection of a frame residence to cost about $3000 for Ida B. Gillies at Garfield avenue and Pine street, Alhambra. Mr. Gillies is also building a house to cost $1700 on Thirty-ninth street, near Western avenue, for Ida N. Gillies and Fannie E. Clarke.

F. L. Spaulding has the contract at $6250 for the construction of a two-story, ten-room frame residence at No. 1805 Gramercy place for E. B. Ordway.

A. E. Holmes has the contract to build two six-room residences to cost $2500 each, and one eight-room residence to cost $3000, on Sunset boulevard, near Hudson avenue, Hollywood, for Amelia V. Jewett.

Fred Biren is preparing plans for a one-and-a-half-story, nine-room frame residence to be built at Rampart boulevard and Council streets for F. G. Johannsen, No. 500 West Temple. C. C. Oct will be contractor.

Butler Bros. have prepared plans for a two-story, eleven-room frame residence to be built on Avenue 53 west of Monte Vista street, for James R. Boal.

C. J. Nordquist, has the contract at $5356, with the exception of painting, finish hardware and furnace work, for the erection of a two-story, ten-room frame residence, on San Rafael Heights, Pasadena, for C. D. Willard. Plans by Hunt and Burns.

Frank M. Tyler, is preparing plans for a two-story, eight-room frame residence to be erected on Fifth avenue, near Pico street, for Mrs. M. C. Brady.

The same architects have been selected to prepare plans for a Masonic Temple at Santa Monica. It will be a two-story and basement brick structure of Moorish design.

19 CHOICE WILSHIRE DISTR LOTS — MUST BE CONVERTE INTO CASH BY JULY FIRST

----will be sold at 10% off for c

Here's the biggest real estate offering in Los Angeles today--19 choice lots--the very cream of the fashionable Wilshire District, must be turned into cash by the first of July. These lots will be sold at a straight 10% discount from the regular listed prices if cash is paid. The only reason for making this extraordinary sacrifice of prices is the fact that we want ready cash for the development of improvements in beautiful Angeles Mesa, our 450-acre plateau subdivision on the Inglewood-Redondo car line, just north of Slauson Avenue. This beautiful residence district is the highest subdivision in the city. It slopes towards the east and overlooks the whole city, valley and mountains. We have subdivided this majestic plateau into about 2000 lots with wide streets and high class improvements. We desire to devote our entire attention to the development of this splendid tract and that is the only reason why we make this exceptional discount on what we have left in the fashionable Wilshire Harvard Heights.

Here is a "never-again" opportunity to obtain a homesite in the most desirable part of Los Angeles at under-the-market prices. A Wonder Trip.

ELEPHANT SEAL IS PROPERLY TERMED.

Monsters of Deep Captured on California Coast.

Successful Expedition of the Steamer Albatross.

Treasures and Curios of the Sea Brought in.

The United States steamer Albatross, with a corps of scientific men on board, has just completed an unusually interesting expedition down the Southern California coast, around the peninsula and back to San Francisco.

The results of this voyage of discovery and research were satisfactory. The party in addition to the chief, Dr. C. H. Townsend, acting director of the American Museum of Natural History in New York, included Dr. J. N. Rose of the National Museum in Washington, botanist; Dr. Paul Bartsch, also of the National Museum, zoologist; Waldo Schmidt, assistant naturalist of the Albatross, and Messrs. Anthony and Osborn, well known West Coast collectors.

The party cruised along the coast of Lower California, stops being made at Guadalupe Island, San Benita, San Bartolome Bay, Bay San Cristobal, San Roque Island, Point Abrojos and many other places, and then passed into the Gulf of California, going as far as Tiburon and Angel de la Guarda Islands.

Several of the adult elephant seals were killed at Guadalupe Island, brought aboard the ship and put in brine, while six of the younger animals, four males and two females, were captured alive. The adult elephant seal is about twenty-two feet long, and has a snout, or nose, closely resembling the trunk of the elephant, from which it derives its name.

Guadalupe Island offers excellent opportunities for exploration and zoological research. Here also was obtained a collection of fine specimens of many rare birds, mollusks and plants. The island has peculiarities of its own, and the party found animal and marine life not closely related to that on the mainland.

In the Bay of San Cristobal, formerly a home of the elephant seal, another effort was made to locate more specimens, but none of the animals was seen.

IN THE DEPTHS.

Following along the coast, landing frequently, and making in the course of the trip twenty-five deep-sea hauls, ranging from 400 to 1071 fathoms, many interesting kinds of fish, crustaceans, mollusks and sponges were brought to the surface. Brought up with the deepest haul, that of 6426 feet, were seven species of deep-sea fish, five kinds of crimson prawn, several with blue eggs, one large pycnognid, many worms living in soft tubes, one great star fish, several brittle stars and numerous other specimens.

In Magdalena Bay were found many interesting species of marine invertebrates. Here the scientists collected a quantity of shallow water specimens. At Angel de la Guarda, Tiburon, and St. Esteban Islands, they found many lizards of the genera Sauromalus and Ctenosaura.

On Carmen Island they encountered a wonderful salt pond, on which was a coating between four and five inches thick. This crust is removed in large cakes, which are ground to the fineness of ordinary commercial salt. The salt is shipped from the island in large quantities.

What is believed to be a new species of mountain sheep was discovered on the west side of Conception Bay. The scientists, however, were unable to get close enough to capture any of the sheep, but three sets of horns were obtained from local hunters.

Near Angel de la Guarda Island a stick of dynamite was exploded in the water, killing or stunning a large number of fish which floated to the surface. So many came to the top of the water that it proved a big task to gather in the different specimens.

ON TIBURON.

Tiburon Island also proved a fertile ground for investigation. Many things of unusual interest were found there, the island never having been explored since Admiral Dewey years ago made the original survey. He was then a captain in command of the U.S.S. "Narragansett." Important investigations were also made at La Paz, the great gathering ground and shipping place for pearls.

On the way back to San Francisco the ship touched Los Angeles and at San Jose and other points along the coast.

The "Albatross," which belongs to the United States Bureau of Fisheries, is furnished with every facility for an expedition of this kind. Large specimens were easily brought aboard the boat, crated and shipped for packing. Almost no trouble was experienced in taking care of the young elephant seals. It was found necessary to keep them in a tank or other receptacle.

The botanical collections obtained on the voyage are to be divided between the National Museum and the New York Botanical Gardens. Altogether more than 900 herbarium specimens were gathered, chief among these being the cacti, many of which were of considerable size and unusually interest.

BERKELEY SQUARE HOME.

Easterner's Residence in Attractive Locality Recently Completed—Will Make Abode Here.

The fine house of Francis E. Bacon of Syracuse, N. Y., just finished in exclusive Berkeley Square, is pictured on this page. It is of the Spanish mission design and was planned by Frank M. Tyler. There are ten large rooms in the dwelling, besides the customary baths, pass pantry, porches and veranda.

The first story is faced with Chatsworth Park sandstone and the second story is cement-plastered. The roof is covered with cement tile. The principal downstairs rooms are finished in hardwoods, the living-room being in Peruvian mahogany, the spacious reception hall in Juana Costa mahogany and the dining-room in quarter-sawed white oak. The billiard-room, which is dropped below the level of the floor of the other rooms on the first floor, is done in Oregon pine stained, as is also the den. The doors are all of hardwood. The sleeping chambers are all finished in white enameled woodwork. There is also a two-story garage on the property. The house cost upward of $20,000 to build.

SUMMARY OF SUMMER.

for daring rescue of their fair companions with the demanding occasion.

SWIMMING SUITS.

And swimming suits! Twenty carloads would put the number of swimming suits small, according to a haberdasher who makes a specialty of them. Men can wear any color. Women must match the shade of their hair. The cuts are universally the same for the male sex, but the ladies have the benefit of the "jupe collet."

The clothiers are not the only men benefited by this summer summary. There are countless others following mercantile lines who claim additions to their trade. The trunk men are having special call for rattan suit cases, something light to carry light and sparkling luncheons, wet or dry, as you please. Wardrobe trunks to the number of several thousand have been turned out for this particular month. The call for these is from the possessors of a trousseau usually, and sometimes from prospective owners.

This subject calls for the rich harvest of the jeweler at this season. Diamonds are his chief profit bringers at this time. Engagement rings have been imported by the basket measure, and from the record of marriages, they have been fast in their sale. Then there is the run on silverware, sterling, plated, dipped and other kinds that the distant friends are called on to contribute as a side issue to the ring.

FOR BUNGALOWS.

A heavy demand arises from this same source for bungalows. Real estate dealers say that this summer's demand for little things in houses is very active. Flats for those sharper in the method of living are also called for. The furniture dealers speak proudly of the carloads of bedroom suites, parlor furniture, kitchenette equipments and other minor furnishings thta they have closed out long ere this.

Even the hardware dealer is smiling. Hot weather has necessitated lemon squeezers, camping outfits and ice boxes. These latter things have made millionaires of some men in this city, and since the ice men have again come to agreeable terms, it is possible that the ice men will make a few more millions, just trying to keep the boxes filled with something that refuses to stay.

The pawnshops are not closing on account of a lack of business. Last year's brides are hocking their diamonds for summer shirtwaists, camping outfits and the like, while their husbands are pawning watches and winter overcoats for the price of a book of tickets to a beach resort. Only the doctors are feeling blue, for summer is the healthiest season of the year here.

Santa Barbara.

WILL CONSTRUCT GREAT BRIDGE.

SANTA BARBARA COUNTY WILL IMPROVE ITS ROADWAYS.

Structure Across the Santa Ynez Will Be Six Hundred Feet Long With Five Spans—Montecito District Will Vote on Proposition to Raise Forty Thousand Dollars.

SANTA BARBARA, June 9.—Important road work for Santa Barbara county, including the ordering of construction of several bridges and calling a bond election for an improved highway in Montecito, was accomplished Monday by the Supervisors. An improvement that will keep the San Marcos route open the year around will be a new $50,000 bridge over the Santa Ynez river at the San Lucas crossing.

The spans of the bridge will be 126 feet long and five in number, the total length of the bridge to be more than 600 feet. The spring of the arch will be one foot above maximum highwater mark, and the top of the arch will be twenty-three feet above highwater mark. The piers will be thirty feet long, sixteen feet wide and will be sunk twelve feet below the river bed, with thirty-foot piles below that, thirty-two piles in each pier, embedded in concrete.

The board called an election for the Montecito road district, which is to vote on the question of issuing $40,000 worth of bonds to improve five and one-half miles of Montecito highway. The election is to be held on July 1. At a cost of $5700 the Sisquoc bridge approaches were ordered repaired.

H. Hutchins, five acres on Diaz avenue, near Ninth street.

A Wonderful Watch.

There is in the possession of the Czar a very remarkable watch. It was made by a Polish mechanic named Jules Curron. The Czar had heard some wonderful tales about the inventive ability of this man, and, wishing personally to test his skill, he sent him a parcel containing a few copper nails, some wood chippings, a piece of broken glass, an old cracked china cup, some wire and a few cribbage board pegs. Accompanying this was a command to make them into a timepiece. Within a remarkably short time the Czar received them back in the shape of a watch. The case was made of china, and the works of the other odds and ends. So pleased and astonished was the Czar that he sent for the man and conferred several distinctions upon him.—[Tit-Bits.

WILL PAVE MILE OF STREET.

Ontario Trustees Plan to Put Famous Euclid Avenue in Better Condition for Travel.

ONTARIO, June 9.—A proposition to pave about a mile of streets in the business center of the city was launched Monday night at the meeting of the City Council by Councilman Ripley F. Spencer.

The proposition is to pave both driveways of Euclid avenue from Main street to C street and A street from Lemon to Vine avenue. It was looked upon with favor by the other members of the Council and property owners are to be interviewed on the matter. If there is a sentiment in favor of paving among the property owners, the work is likely to be rushed.

Councilman Spencer stated that he has already talked to a number of owners and found them enthusiastic. Ontario already has a reputation for splendid roads and it is the intention of the Council to keep this up. They can order the work under the Vrooman act whether the property owners favor it or not.

TO IMPROVE DEPARTMENT.

Ontario voters are likely to be asked, in the near future, to indorse a proposition to levy a special tax for the purpose of raising money for the improvement of the city fire department.

Fire Chief Bert Cleveland Monday night appeared before the Council and clearly set forth the needs of the department, making most apparent the urgent need for better equipment.

The improvements contemplated by the fire department include a new automobile chemical engine, a man to remain permanently at fire hall No. 1, an improved fire-alarm system, and many other things. Fire Chief Cleveland is to visit Long Beach in the near future and inspect the new engine recently purchased by that city. He will report to the Council later. With the new equipment, the fire-insurance rates of the city will be materially reduced.

The Guy M. Rush Company, owners of Lawndale, report sales as follows: Miss Margaret Littlefield, $350; Mr. King, $1000; Hattie P. Hyde, $550; Paul A. Brose and M. M. Brose, $850; Michael McIntyre, $450; John Fuhring, $900; Mr. Houghan, $600; Dr. W. M. Dunn, $2700; Mrs. Josie Campbell, $1250.

MIGHTIER BUILDING STRIDES.

for the erection of a two-story, twelve-room frame flat building on Moneta avenue, near Forty-first street, for Mrs. M. Smith.

N. Caneps, contemplates the erection of a three-story brick store and apartment building on the site of his present residence. It will be about 80x90 feet.

Excavating has been started for a one-story brick garage to be built at Sixth and Lake streets, for Alonzo L. Hill. All work will be done by subcontracts. J. W. Chalmers, who prepared the plans, will have supervision of the work.

The Milwaukee Building Company is preparing working plans for the new Jewish Orphans Home to be built at Newmark Station. The orphanage will consist of about five buildings, all of one story with the exception of the administration building, which will be two stories high. tI is probable work will be started on the erection of these buildings within the next thirty days.

The department of public service has decided to proceed with the construction of the proposed office building for the city water department, at the southwest corner of Olive and Fifth streets. The foundation was constructed last year, but work was discontinued when it became necessary to use funds set aside for the project on the aqueduct. Plans were made for a four-story building with provision for six additional stories. The architects, Parkinson & Bergstrom, are now revising the plans under the direction of the Building Committee with a view to reducing the cost.

NEW SUBDIVISIONS.

Demand for Residental Lots Continues—New Tracts to be Placed Upon the Market in Fall.

George J. Cote has sold to L. L. Bowen and George A. Cortelyou, for $1750 per acre, fifteen acres located about five hundred feet west of First street, The Palms, fronting on the short line to the beach and the new St. Mark's boulevard. The land will be subdivided.

Eighty more acres have been incorporated into Ramona Acres by the Janss Investment Company, in order to meet the continued demand for property in this part of the San Gabriel Valley. The original Ramona Acres have been entirely sold out. The new acreage is similar in every respect to the original tract. Forty acres of the annexed land are being graded for immediate allotment.

The Southwest Land Company, owners of the Dryden ranch of 160 acres at the corner of Santa Barbara and Western avenues, contemplate the expenditure of several hundred thousand dollars in improving the property. Streets will be laid out, ten miles of new cement curbs and sidewalks will be constructed and sewers laid in all the streets.

NEW SITE FOR NORMAL.

grounds, tennis courts and lawns.

AT THE BEGINNING.

The Los Angeles State Normal School had its inception in 1881, following a serious agitation for State division which resulted from the continued opposition of the northern counties to the expenditure of State moneys in Southland institutions. The bill for the school received the signature of Gov. Perkins on March 14 of that year, the appropriation being $50,000 for a building and $2500 for furnishings. The site was described by a newspaper of the time as being "situated three-quarters of a mile from the business section on an eminence about 200 feet above the general level of the city." One of the charms of the site according to this early account, was that it overlooked "miles of beautiful orange groves."

The first class, numbering twenty-two, was graduated in 1884. In 1887 the school was divorced from the management of the Board of Directors of the San Jose school, of which it had hitherto been a subsidiary institution, and entered upon an independent career. From that date to this the growth of the school has been steady and consistent.

Jesse F. Millspaugh was called to the presidency in 1904 and one of the first acts of this Minnesota educator was to raise the standard of the entrance requirements to the end that only accredited graduates of High Schools should be admitted to full standing in the Normal. Material equipment, organization and methods have all come in for improvement under President Millspaugh's administration.

In the last five years the enrollment has increased from 420 to 925, or 120 per cent. The percentage of increase has also grown from year to year. In the same period the size of the graduation classes has also grown over 100 per cent.

In no other State Normal School in the United States is the ratio of the number of graduates to the number of students enrolled as high as in the Los Angeles State Normal School. No other school of the kind in the country is turning out so many graduate teachers. This is most interesting from the fact that the cost to the State of California of the professional training of teachers, as represented by the number of those who complete full courses and graduate, is much less here than elsewhere in the country. The local school is also noted for the number of graduate students who come back after a term of teaching to improve their professional equipment.

Today classes are overcrowded to the limit and the teaching force is taxed to the utmost. The Training School, the most important single department of the Normal, is the department which is most crowded. With the space limited as it is today, many desiring this class of instruction must be denied.

At all times the enrollment of children in the practice school is over 500 and often as many as 300 embryo teachers are in attendance upon this course alone. To handle the latter there are ten critic teachers. This condition means that the average class which the Normal student is called upon to teach is necessarily too small. The only remedy is a greatly enlarged training school where more children can be accommodated.

It is also the desire of the school management to enlarge the scope of instruction offered by the Normal, something which, with the present restricted quarters is impossible. The conversion of a play pavilion on the grounds into a schoolhouse of four rooms has given but little of the extra space needed. More commodious buildings are imperative.

An interesting problem in connection with the moving of the Normal School from its ancient site is the disposition of the grounds once they are abandoned. The plans of Charles Mulford Robinson for a city beautiful contemplated the use of this sightly elevation for a public library site, a project which would of course have to presuppose the purchase of the property by the city.

HOTEL OR HOSPITAL?

Prospective buyers have talked of the site as one ideal for a magnificent hotel, while others would improve it with a number of substantial apartment houses. It has also been urged as a hospital site.

Again there are those who believe that Fifth street ought to be cut straight through the grounds regardless of the amount of steep terracing that would have to be done. It has been proposed both to cross Grand avenue at that thoroughfare's present level and to go westward from Olive street to the grade of the downtown section, passing under Grand avenue.

The State long ago offered the city seventeen feet for the widening of Fifth street between Grand and Hope, this being on the understanding that this present one-block jog of Fifth street should be maintained where it is north of the present buildings and near the brow of the hill. Such a plan of course would necessitate giving up all idea of Fifth street's ever being continued as a through highway to the western part of the city.

That the eventual abandonment of the latter scheme is taken as a foregone conclusion by many is indicated by the fact that at least two or three big buildings are contemplated for the north side of the present uphill jog of Fifth street. One fireproof apartment hotel is now under way on this abridged streetway at a spot where it would be stranded high and dry in the event the plan of cutting Fifth street through to the west part of Los Angeles should ever prevail.

In the meantime the State, and especially the Normal School authorities, will taken a keen interest in the bidding for the only acreage that is for sale in the heart of Los Angeles.

Justice John M. Harlan is in his thirty-fourth year as a member of the United States Supreme Court, and he will not have to live many more months to exceed the record made by Chief Justice Marshall and Justices Story and Field, each of whom served thirty-four years in the court. It is said of Harlan that in all this time he has been absent from the sittings of the court less than twenty days.

PEOPLE'S GREAT RECREATION GROUNDS SUPERVISED BY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.

EVERY YEAR the great resorts of Europe are visited by thousands of tourists who apparently have no knowledge of the great national parks which have been created by Congress for the benefit of the people, and in which there are natural features and views that cannot be surpassed. If the traveler seeks Alpine glaciers, he has only to go to the Glacier National Park, where there are more glaciers in the same area than in Switzerland; if he desires to travel in comfort over finely built roads that rival those of France, Switzerland and Germany, the Yellowstone Park extends its invitation to him; if he is attracted to Europe by the mystery of the black forest he can find more majestic and impressive forests on the slopes of the Sierra Nevada in the Yosemite, Sequoia and Gen. Grant parks; if his thoughts turn to the clear, blue lakes of Switzerland he can find their counterpart in the Glacier and Crater Lake National Parks; if he is anxious to risk his life in scaling snow-clad peaks he has only to repair to Mt. Rainier in Washington, whose steep slopes and ice-covered top will furnish sport exciting enough for the most daring of mountaineers; if he is interested in the ruins of prehistoric people, the Casa Grande ruin in Arizona, and the Mesa Verde National Park in Colorado, will show him how the aboriginal inhabitants of America lived hundreds of years before its discovery by Europeans.

The Yellowstone National Park in Northwestern Wyoming is the oldest and the best known of all the parks and reservations. It was created by an act of Congress in 1872, and ever since that time the government has been constructing roads and cutting trails, until now the park is in a high state of development, and all parts of it are accessible to the traveler. Well built roads traverse the major portion of the park, impressive and substantial bridges cross the streams, and commodious hotels and camps have been provided for the accommodation of visitors. In this park may be seen natural phenomena the like of which is found nowhere else in the world. Here are geysers that throw jets of steam and hot water into the air, great terraces formed from the deposits of mineral matter in the water thrown up by the geysers, and the great falls of Yellowstone River which traverses a beautiful multi-colored canyon that is second only to the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. In this park may be seen the deer, the bear, the antelope and the bison on their native range, because hunting is prohibited and the bands of deer and antelope roam through the valleys and over the slopes as they did years before they were practically exterminated in the greater part of the West. Comfortable coaches take the tourist over a regular route to the principal points of interest, but if he desires to make a more extended stay or to get far from the beaten track, he can readily hire an outfit of his own and make excursions into the less frequented portions of the park or climb the many peaks, which may be seen from the main roads.

The Glacier National Park in Northern Montana on the Canadian border is the newest of the parks controlled by the Federal government. This park has an area of approximately 915,000 acres and has a maximum length of sixty miles. It has been well called the top of the continent, for within its boundaries is situated the great continental divide. At one point in the park a tourist may take a cup of water and cast the contents to one side, whence it will find its way to the Gulf of Mexico, to another side, whence it will find its way to the Pacific Ocean, or in a third direction, whence it will find its way to Hudson Bay. The park obtains its name from the numerous glaciers which glisten in dazzling white in the saddles between the high peaks. It is well supplied with streams and lakes that have been formed by the damming of the valleys by the great mass of debris left by the Continental glacier. The lakes are all long and narrow and in places wooded slopes which are covered with a thick growth of pine and fir lay close to the water's edge, while at other points precipitous cliffs form the border of the lake, and foaming rivulets pour their crystal waters over the steep sides. As less than two years have elapsed since Glacier Park was created, little progress has been made in the construction of roads and trails. The traveler visiting this park must be prepared to travel on horseback. Those looking for comfort only, had better go elsewhere, but these who desire to see nature in its wildest mood or to travel through the resinous forests of pine and fir or to escape the common luxuries of travel, will find no place in two continents that will be the equal of this park.

When one speaks of California, the Yosemite Park naturally comes to mind. As long ago as 1864 an act of Congress granted the Yosemite Valley and the Mariposa big tree grove to the State of California for public use and recreation. The Legislature of California, by the act approved March 3, 1905, receded the jurisdiction and ownership of this tract to the United States and only since June 11, 1906, has the management of the Yosemite National Park been under the control of the Federal government. The entire park has an area of about thirty-six by forty miles. The Yosemite Valley, which is the most frequently visited place, is about seven miles long and three-fourths of a mile wide. In the center of this valley is a level park-like meadow through which runs Merced River, while on either side, the mountains rise steep and precipitous to a height of 4000 feet above the floor of the valley. Numerous streams drop from the edge of the cliff to the valley below. The first of these as the tourist enters the valley, is the Bridal Veil Falls. A stream fully thirty feet wide falls a distance of 600 feet, then rushes over a sloping pile of debris, and then drops perpendicularly 300 feet more. From the points where it is generally viewed, it seems to make but one plunge, and the general effect is that of a fall 900 feet high. The great waterfall in this park, however, is the Yosemite Falls. This is a stream thirty-five feet wide and in the spring and early summer, when the snow is melting upon the high Sierras, its roar can be heard all over the valley and the shock of the descent rattles the windows a mile away. This fall is conceded by all critics to be one of the most wonderful and beautiful cascades in the world. Its first fall is about 1600 feet sheer drop, then come a series of cascades partly hidden, in which the fall is over 600 feet, and finally a vertical drop of 400 feet.

In the Yosemite, the Sequoia and the General Grant National Parks are found the groves of big trees the like of which are seen nowhere else in the world. These trees grow to a height of 340 feet and have a circumference of over 100 feet at the base, the bark sometimes exceeding forty inches in thickness. In the Mariposa Grove the road extends through the base of one of these trees, and a coach and four is regularly driven through this tunnel in the tree without danger or discomfort to the traveler. The rings in the trunks of these trees show that many of them are over 2000 years old. Cathedrals and castles have been built and fallen into decay, empires have come and gone, but these grizzly giants of the western slopes still raise their hoary heads and spread their grateful shade as they did in the days of the Caesars.

CRATER LAKE.

The Crater Lake National Park in Oregon has within its borders a lake that is unique among the natural wonders of the world. This lake, into which no streams flow and which has no visible outlet, lies in what is left of the caldera of a great mountain that rose to an elevation of over 14,000 feet above the sea. He who cares nothing for the wonderful history of this lake may well be enchanted by its remarkable and striking beauty. Around the lake are twenty miles of unbroken cliffs ranging from 500 to 2000 feet in height, whose brilliant colors are reflected in the clear placid waters of the lake. Near the western edge of the lake is Wizard Island in the top of which is an extinct crater 100 feet deep and 500 feet in diameter, and near the southern shore is a jagged rock which from a distance resembles a ship, but which apparently disappears when the shadow of a cloud strikes it. This lake is not the only attraction of the national park in which it is situated. The surrounding peaks afford opportunity for climbing and the extended views from their summits offer an adequate recompense for the effort necessary to reach them.

PREHISTORIC.

In southwestern Colorado and northwestern New Mexico at one time dwelt one of the most remarkable races of the new world. High up in the cliffs which border the canyons that have been cut in the Mesa Verde are over 400 prehistoric ruins. Three of the most important ruins—Cliff Palace, Spruce Tree House, and Balcony House—have been excavated and repaired and give the visitor an idea of how these prehistoric people lived. This park is twenty-five miles from the nearest railroad station and can be reached only on horseback or on foot.

The Casa Grande ruin near Florence, Ariz., is an Indian ruin of undetermined antiquity, which was discovered in 1694 by Padre Kino, a Jesuit missionary. This great house is said to be the most important ruin of its type in the Southwest and for this reason it has strong claims to archeology study, repair and permanent preservation. The main building was originally five or six stories high and covered a space fifty-nine by forty-three feet. Some of the rooms have been excavated or restored and over 100 rooms on the ground floor are open to the public.

MR. BOWSER'S CANCER.

He Looks. Over His Will and Prepares for the Worst.

BY M. QUAD.

After dinner Mr. Bowser lighted a cigar and took a stroll in his garden. That is, he called it his garden. He had planted five hills of sunflowers, and three burdocks were already showing their green heads above the soil, and so he had a right to call it a garden.

The sun was sinking away to rest, having been on the move all day. Now and then some weary woman threw a tomato can from a second or third-story window, and now and then a boy pegged at a cat licking herself on the fence.

It was a peaceful scene—fit ending for a peaceful day.

There might have been more robins and bluebirds and orioles and bobolinks and nightingales to sing the sun to rest, but even Mr. Bowser realibed to rest, but even Mr. Bowser realized have all the good things of this world at once. A feeling of balminess was stealing over him, and he was about to speak to the cat in tones of kindliness and courtesy, when——

Well, the stroller in the garden suddenly uttered a wild yell and jumped two feet high. Mrs. Bowser, who was standing in the back door, rushed out to him, but he pawed and pranced and pushed past her into the house.

"Will you tell me what on earth's the matter all of a sudden?" she asked as she followed him up to the sitting-room. He held a hand on the back of his neck and glared at her.

"Have you been stung?" was the further question.

No answer.

"I saw bees about his afternoon, and there was a mosquito buzzing around last night. Let me see the spot. If it's a sting or bite I'll put some camphor on it."

"Woman, it's too late," said Mr. Bowser, in a hoarse voice.

"Too late for what? I'm sure it's a trifle."

"Too late. It's what I've been expecting for a week past. It's what Dr. Slinger told me must inevitably happen. It's what I've been hiding from you, so as not to worry you. I will lie down on the lounge."

"Now, then," said Mrs. Bowser, as she drew nearer and bristled up, "what's all this talk about? Who is Dr. Slinger? What did he tell you? What is it you've been concealing from me? Speak right up."

"Can-cancer," he gasped.

"Cancer nothing. Did the idiot tell you you had cancer?"

"Y—yes."

"Fiddlesticks!"

"He said I had it in my blood, and it would break out all of a sudden, just as it has."

"Then he ought to be put where he can't break out all of a sudden. Hold still now, while I look. You have simply been bitten by a fly or stung by a mosquito."

"But—but why should he have told me so?"

"How do I know or care why? It's sufficient to know that he's a fraud. There—isn't the pain about all gone?"

She was answered with a long-drawn groan.

"The redness has almost disappeared."

The same sort of a groan, but a trifle more hopeless and dismal.

"You ought to know that a cancer don't come like a bullet. It is months or years coming. The doctor must have taken you for an ass. You certainly feel better now."

He struggled part way up to fall back in despair, and then he reached for her hand and whispered:

"Don't leave me to die alone!"

"Bosh! What's got into you? Are you a man or a baby?"

"I'm a man, Mrs. Bowser, and a dying one at that. It's kind of you to make me think I've been bitten by a fly, but I know I'm doomed. Please bring out my will from the safe. I want to see that everything's left to you."

"Well, there it is," she said, as she brought him the document, "but you needn't look it over on my account. Get up and walk around and forget it. Why, a boy 4 years old wouldn't booby around about a fly-bite!"

"Mrs. Bowser, I've been a hard husband to get along with."

"On the contrary, you have been as easy as grease."

"I have kicked and bluffed and blowed around."

"Yes, and you've always got as good as you gave!"

"I have charged you with selling the coal and the gas."

"And I've gone through your pockets when you were asleep to get even!"

"Mrs. Bowser," he continued, as his lip trembled, "if I haven't always been the best husband in the world, I want you now in my dying hour to forgive me."

"But there is nothing to forgive. Mother and I have managed to keep you pretty straight."

"Yes, your mother—your dear old mother! I've been mean to her. Tell her that I begged her forgiveness."

"Oh, you don't owe her anything!"

"I should have liked to see her once more, but it was not to be—not to be. The cancer suddenly broke out, and—"

"You mean a fly suddenly bit you. The red has all gone, and I'll bet you don't feel the least bit of pain."

Mr. Bowser didn't answer in words. He wiped a tear from his eye with his last will and testament, and then unfolded the document and read:

"Being at this date sound in mind and body, but having the fear of death before my eyes, and wishing to make suitable provision for my wife—"

Here Mr. Bowser broke down, and after struggling with his emotions for a couple of minutes he handed over the will and was about to say something when the doorbell rang and Mrs. Bowser answered it. It was the family doctor.

"I was paying a professional call next door," he said, "and I thought I'd drop in here for a minute. Both well, I hope?"

"Alas, no!" she answered as he followed her back to the sitting-room. "I am sorry to say that Mr. Bowser is dying!"

"Bowser dying!"

"Of cancer," explained Mr. Bowser, as he looked up.

"Where is it? Oh, on the neck, eh? Humph! When do you depart for the shining shore?"

"He was walking in the garden and a fly bit him or a mosquito stung him," said Mrs. Bowser.

"And you've taken the poison out with camphor? Right-o. Come Bowser, the game is played."

"You—you think I'll live?"

"Why, man, the fall of ten brick houses couldn't do you up!"

Mr. Bowser was very quiet and humble for the rest of the evening, but the next morning he was ready to say:

"It didn't turn out to be cancer, but if it had you'd have seen me die like a hero fighting to the last. That's one of the differences between us."

And Mrs. Bowser didn't talk back!

Literary Ministers.

ENGLISH AUTHORS TAKING A PART IN PUBLIC WORK.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June, 1.—In these days the author who confines his activities to writing books is a rarity. There seems to be some irresistible force which drags all the writing men into public affairs of some sort and those who don't actully take part in government or propaganda of one kind or another can't keep out of the newspapers in connection with subjects which are absorbing public attention. Of course unkind people will say that they do it for advertisement's sake, but I am sure this is not always the case.

In the Cabinet we have authors like Augustin Birrell, the Irish Secretary, who is a charming essayist, Winston Churchill, the Home Secretary, who is both novelist and historian, Lord Holdane, War Minister, and writer on German philosophy, and Lord Morley, Secretary for India and historian. Outside politics there are Rider Haggard, who is keenly interested in and a hard worker for the back-to-the-land movement, Hall Caine, who runs a rescue home for London outcasts, Conan Doyle, who works hard to get every boy in England to learn rifle shooting and of course, Shaw and Wells, who are enthusiastic and active socialists. The latest recruit to the ranks of the literary publicists is John Galsworthy the novelist and playwright, who has jumped into the ring with a remarkable letter to the London Times, protesting against the use of aeroplanes in war. Galsworthy's letter is worth quoting, both on account of its subject and for its literary quality. Here it is:

"Sir—Of all the varying symptoms of madness in the life of modern nations the most dreadful in this prostitution of the conquest of the air to the ends of warfare.

"If ever men presented a spectacle of sheer insanity it is now—when, having at long last triumphed in their struggle to subordinate to their welfare the unconquered element, they have straightway commenced to defile that element, so heroically mastered, by filling it with engines of destruction. If ever the gods were justified of their ironic smile—by the gods, it is now! Is there any thinker alive watching this still utterly preventable calamity without horror and despair? Horror at what must come of it, if not promptly stopped; despair that men can be so blind, so hopelessly and childishly the slaves of their own marvelous inventive powers. Was there ever so patent a case for scotching at birth a hideous development of the black arts of warfare; ever such an occasion for the powers in conference to ban once and for all a new and ghastly menace?

"A little reason, a grain of commonsense, a gleam of sanity before it is too late—before vested interests and the chains of a new habit have enslaved us too hopelessly. If this fresh deviltry be not quenched within the next few years it will be too late. Water and earth are wide enough for men to kill each other on. For the love of the sun and stars, and the blue sky, that have given us all our aspirations since the beginning of time, let us leave the air to innocence! Will not those who have eyes to see, good will towards men, and the power to put that good will into practice, bestir themselves while there is yet time, and save mankind from this last and worst of all its follies?"

Another instance of a writer with a second occupation is "Morice Gerad," a popular English novelist who writes stories of the swashbuckling type. In private life he is the Rev. John Jessop Teague, and he has just been elected vicar of the old church of St. Stephen, Coleman street, in the city of London. Mr. Teague was chosen from among 200 applicants, and the living is worth $4000 a year. His clerical duties will not interfere much with his literary activities, for his church is one of those left high and dry in the old city by the movement of population. His average Sunday congregation is about a dozen, and as the resident population of the parish consists of a few caretakers of business buildings, there is little parochial work to do. In fact, there is nothing to prevent Morice Gerard from following the example of other city vicars and employing a curate to do all the work, while he devotes himself to more congenial occupation.

One doesn't look generally to a government report for literary information. These dry-as-dust documents as a rule steel clear of anything so frivolous, but we have just had one from the Department Committee on the Supply of Books to His Majesty's Prisons—a good mouth filling title by the way—which is full of interest to all who are interested in books and their makers. This committee has kindly reduced the popularity of authors among King George's involuntary guests to tabular form and the result seems to show that criminals aren't so very different in their literary tastes from other people as some of the "unco guid" would have us believe. In the following table the figure opposite the author's name shows the number of prisons at which he or she is one of the six favorites:

Mrs Henry Wood	58
Charles Dickens	46
G. A. Henty	20
Rider Haggard	20
Sir Walter Scott	19
Wilkie Collins	17
Capt. Marryat	13
Alexander Dumas	12
Silas Hocking	11
Miss Braddon	9
Charles Reade	9
Lord Lytton	8
Clark Russell	8

The more illiterate prisoners, say the committee, are specially keen on the illustrated monthly magazines and a story is told of a Roman Catholic chaplain at one of the b penal establishments who was puzzled for a long time, to account for the number of conversions to the Church of England, among his flock. Finally he discovered that it was because the

This, in a nutshell, is the history of union labor in Los Angeles since the Frisco bosses came here to take charge. It is the knowledge of their betrayal by the bosses that has opened the eyes of the rank and file of organized labor, and aroused them to realize the necessity of deposing the grafting, murderous bosses.

THE PRESENT DANGER.

[EDITORIAL.]

THE TIMES is not an alarmist, but in sober earnestness it urges the business men, the home owners and the honest and law-abiding people of Los Angeles not to dwell in a fool's paradise of fancied security, but to keep their eyes open and vigilantly guard against the possibilities of disaster which the revengeful labor-union leaders of San Francisco may seek to visit upon Los Angeles, which has defied their protracted efforts to reduce it to a condition of industrial slavery, such as prevails in the Bay City, and because of which the owners of woolen and cotton factories there have torn out their plants, while foundries and furnaces have been closed and building operations have practically been discontinued, and the streets filled with idle workmen.

Here the labor-union leaders have failed in their plans to establish closed-shop tyranny. The iron and steel works are running full blast. Of the 500 house carpenters in Los Angeles who demanded $4 per day, and who, at the command of the San Francisco labor leaders, quit work because they could get but $3.50 per day, only 100 remain on strike; 400 have either returned to work or left the city. The places of those who left the city and of the 100 who are still out were promptly filled by non-union men. Union and non-union carpenters are now at work alongside each other, and Tveitmoe, Gallagher and McCarthy are not now taking joy rides in autos or drinking champagne at the expense of Angeleno workers.

All manufacturing establishments in Los Angeles are running full time with full complements of workers—union and non-union, and industrial freedom holds undisputed sway here.

There is no danger of disaster to our city from any open effort of the labor unions to establish industrial despotism here. There is danger from the firebugs, the pyromaniacs, the tramps, the I-Won't-Workers, the union laborites who have become morose and desperate, and who are secretly incited by the revengeful San Francisco labor leaders to deeds of violence and rapine. Each union-labor organization has many zealous but unthinking workers who are honestly but mistakenly endeavoring to promote a cause which is dear to them. But it has also a circumference of scoundrels who care little or nothing for the cause, but everything for the opportunities of loot which the cause affords. These outlaws are restrained by no moral considerations whatever. There is not one of them but will take a purse on the highway at the point of a pistol, or climb a porch and pry open a window in order to burglarize a bedroom, or set fire to a stable or dwelling house, or place a dynamite bomb against a shop or store, if he can do so secretly with a chance of escaping detection.

Against any public acts of disorder, against boycotting and picketing, and rioting and mob assaults upon non-union workmen, the police are able to efficiently guard the people of Los Angeles. Back of the police is the Sheriff with power to swear in an armed posse comitatus to preserve the public peace and arrest offenders. There is no reputable citizen of Los Angeles who would decline membership of such a posse, and in an hour if necessary, a brigade could be organized and armed with pick handles that would drive the lawless union laborite, closed-shop, murderous vermin into the sea. The labor-union leaders of San Francisco and their organ of assassination in Los Angeles may take notice that Angelenos will not tolerate for an hour the reign of terror and riot that these blackguards have established in the Bay City, and that the motto of our merchants and manufacturers and home owners is "millions for defense, not one cent for tribute."

It is not against public and concerted assault of the cohorts of industrial despotism that Angelenos need to guard. It is against isolated individual depredations of those who have been debauched by the teachings of the Tveitmoe-Gallagher-McCarthy gang that we warn honest and law-abiding citizens.

RECOGNITION OF THE UNION.

TWO SHREWD REQUESTS MADE BY UNIONITES.

Asked Episcopal Diocesan Convention to Stand for a Principle That Enslaves Not Only the Manufacturer, But Also the Workingmen. Voting Machines Also Involved.

The one thing demanded by unionites in the settlement of every labor disturbance promoted by themselves is a recognition of the union label. The significance of this is that this constitutes a recognition of the union with its closed shop conditions. It means the enslavement of the manufacturer or employer to conditions that are usually contrary to those under which he has been able to do a prosperous business and keep his employees continually at work at good wages. It means an ultimate increase of the cost of production, because of increased wages, thereby lessening a manufacturer's competitive power.

Every possible opportunity is taken to bring forward the union label question. Only last week the Central New York Episcopal Diocesan Convention in session at Utica, N. Y., was asked to order the union label placed on all printed documents issued by the Diocesan authorities. To grant this request would have been really for the convention to have demanded that the printing establishments under control of the Episcopal Church should be unionized, as no open shop office is permitted to use a union label. The convention refused the request by a vote of forty to fourteen, Bishop Olmsted himself pointing out that the church is in sympathy with the laboring classes, and that it could not be arrayed on either side of a labor question. Any other decision would have been for the Episcopal Church to have insulted the majority body of workmen who have not been convinced or terrorized into joining the unions.

Another impudent demand was made last week by the Chicago Federation of Labor and the International Association of Machinists who asked the election commissioners that the voting machines to be purchased by the city of Chicago should all bear the union label. It was stated that if voting machines were introduced which did not bear that label objections would be sounded by 400,000 union men in Chicago, and that the matter might even go so far that the men would refuse to vote. This was a remarkable boycott threat, and lead the Chicago Inter-Ocean to remark: "Think of the humiliation to the town if Mr. Gompers should proceed to print the Chicago elections on his unfair list and advise labor union men not to patronize them until a satisfactory change in the arrangements was made! Whew!"

The shrewdness of both of these requests will be apparent to any one, as it meant a decided addition of industrial establishments to Gomperism which says to American workingmen:

"You cannot earn a living for yourself, nor for your family without you pay tithes to us, and carry in your pocket our union badge of servitude.

"You cannot work when we say strike.

"You cannot buy of this or that man when we say boycott.

"Your son, and your daughter cannot equip themselves for the future when we deny the privilege. And, furthermore, you must not think well of the man who employs you, for he is our enemy, and, therefore, yours."

Manufacturers themselves would not object to unionism if it gave them a fair deal. To make their business a success they must buy raw material at the lowest possible price and sell their finished product at the highest price permitted by conditions and competition. That is business pure and simple. The rule, however, does not apply to labor. It is not good business to use labor because it can be obtained at a low price. There is no economy in paying a dollar-and-a-half man a dollar and a half. Two and a half or three dollars, or even four, when earned by the workingman by energy and efficiency, is a real economic policy. And so with the day's work. Few manufacturers object to the eight-hour day when their employees work eight hours. The objection is made to the acknowledged union principle which commands the workman in a shop to limit his output to an amount equal to that turned out by the most inefficient man. An example of the restriction of the output rule of the American Federation of Labor is found in the Buck's Stove and Range case testimony (Justice Wright's decision, No. 27, 305 Equity, District of Columbia, December 23, 1908;) Mr. Van Cleave testified under oath as follows:

"I also called attention to the fact that it had been reported to me that the Polishers' Union had put on a wage limit; that is to say, the amount per day that each man should earn and then quit work. I told them that if that was true, and that the men were submitting to that, that was robbing their own wives and children, and that we would not submit to it; that God had never made any two men with the same ability, and, therefore, each man must earn all he could in the shop, doing all the work he could, and, it being piece work, he would thereby earn more or less according to his ability."

Why do you suppose this unjust rule was established by the labor organization? The men worked by the piece and their weekly pay was limited only by their skill and energy. They had opportunity to earn more for their families if they chose to do so. Yet their union leaders denied them the right.

It is more pleasant to dwell upon happier subjects, but the so-called labor question is one we cannot avoid, says the American Industries. Various well-meaning persons speak and write with evident sincerity of "industrial peace" and suggest certain methods to bring it about, but the majority of these persons belong to the theoretical, sociological class and have little practical knowledge of conditions. There is not an employer of labor in the United States who would not prefer to live on amicable terms with his employees if he could. Strikes and lockouts mean financial loss and annoying disturbance. The employer suffers not only as an employer, but also as a tax-paying citizen. He does not court trouble and will go far to avoid it, but as an American with a full appreciation of his rights and dues, he insists on keeping that which he lawfully owns and also insists on running his own business. In that is found the crux of the situation. The general public may not know it, but the fact is that the great majority of strikes are not called because of wage differences, or ill treatment, but for what labor leaders term "recognition of the union."

UNIONITE VIOLENCE.

Eight Men Have Already Been Murdered in the Factional Quarrel in Chicago.

Vicious assaults and murder are a certain part of every labor disturbance. In the factional warfare waged by the labor unions in Chicago, eight men have been murdered, and no one yet found guilty of the crimes. The prevailing sentiment among the union men, so the police say, is that "We'll fight this thing out among ourselves. What we do is no concern of the police or anyone else."

From Cardiff, Wales, comes almost a similar story of viciousness. A strike in the coal mines there originated by the employment of a non-unionist in one of the collieries, and 12,000 men became idle. A few days ago this single man was attacked by a body of strikers, and the police were rushed to the spot to quell the disturbance. When it was finally suppressed, it was found that sixteen officers were wounded and required surgical treatment for face, neck and hand cuts, while a still larger number suffered from bruises caused by blows from stones.

Unionism seems to breed violence.

HAS QUIT THE UNIONS.

CORONADO BEACH, June 5.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Being a constant reader of your valuable paper, I was very much interested in that letter written by a union cook, which was published in Sunday's Times. I wish to say I was a good union man for eighteen years, until five years ago, when I had a celebrated case with the unions fighting for my rights. They kept me out of work more than a year, but I can assure you I have always made more than a living since I have been out of the union, and am proud of the fact that I can get along without them, and as we are living in a free country, I work for whom and when I please.

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins from All Parts of the World.

Ask the average man-on-the-"street" and he will tell you that the United States Steel Corporation is a "grinding monopoly," but is it? Certainly not in regard to the treatment of its work people. Just at this junction there is a movement on the part of the independent steel companies to reduce wages, but E. H. Gary, chairman of the corporation, is publicly and firmly standing out against any such reduction, claiming to his confereres that labor has relatively equal rights with capital. That is true—labor has relatively equal rights as to compensation for work done, but not equal rights in seeking to dictate to employers whom they shall hire or whom they shall not hire. Equality in that direction would mean also that individual labor must work, whether it desires to or not, for any designated employer—that is Brown must work for Smith or Jones must work for Robinson, as the case may be.

Losses by the just settled coal strike in South Wales, Great Britain, exceed $11,000,000. The strike was not settled till the Miners Federation of Great Britain was forced to threaten to withdraw its strike aid of $15,000 a week, if the strikers' futilely held out longer. Judging by reports appearing in various English newspapers practically nothing has been gained by the strikers, but, on the contrary, there has been a fearful loss of wages, comfort and savings.

This is a bad time for workers in Brooklyn and New York to strike, as more than 1000 employees in the Brooklyn navy yard are being laid off this week owing to lack of work. The three dry docks are now empty and no work in sight for some time.

This strike business is getting to be a feverish mania. The nurses in the Brooklyn Eye and Ear Hospital have "gone on strike" because it was sought to restrict the use of the telephones in the matter of "frivolous and flirtatious" conversations.

The long-expected seamen's strike is still pending. Owners evince a willingness to meet committees of the Atlantic Coast Seamen's Union, at the request of the latter. This covers seamen, stewards, cooks, and other employees.

Preparatory to striking the socialist section of the union new subway workers in New York city, have demanded eight hours as the absolute maximum for a day's work, but at the prevailing rate of wages, and several other things.

Workers in 300 east side, (New York) laundries, (and they are many) threaten to strike unless employers again consent to the closed-shop. Most of the employers have decided to cut loose from the union and resist the closed-shops demand. They have formed an association to ensure this industrial liberty, as is their right.

Serious disturbances are attending the strike of the tramway men in Johannesburg, British South Africa. The strikers tried to destroy the power station and thus plunge the streets, shops and houses into darkness as well as depriving the town of tramcars.

The Printers' Union of Cape Town, South Africa, whose members are on strike, has abandoned its rigid demand for the closed shop and substituted one for less work and more pay for the less work.

Eleven thousand shirtmakers in New York want higher wages and a union closed-shop agreement. They may get the former but certainly not the latter, though, possibly, the demand for both may kill both.

WAGES IN SCOTLAND.

Wages in the Troon, Scotland, district are:

Trade.	per week
Bakers	$ 7.50
Blacksmiths	9.00
Iron founders	9.00
Ship carpenters	9.00
Engineers	9.00
Farm laborers	5.00
Lace weavers	6.75
Joiners	8.25
Masons	9.00
Miners	8.25
Plasterers	8.50
Plumbers	8.50
Slaters	8.50
House painters	8.25
Ship's plasters and riveters (piecework)	10.00

The Troon district is one of the busiest manufacturing districts of Scotland.

When the Democrats (and Senator Works,) begin to agitate for a removal of the duty on imported lemons (which ex-Senator Flint got increased to California's benefit,) bear in mind that the men in Sicily who do the field work get only 48 cents per day of nine hours, and the women only 29 cents per day of nine hours. Yet, says Nicolo Marassa, an expert Italian pomologist: "Manual labor has been steadily increasing in cost, principally attributed to the persistent efforts of the Department of Labor (Camera del Lavora) in attempting to better labor conditions, so that during the past five years, by reducing the working hours and increasing the wages, the cost of manual labor has almost doubled." And yet, after all, this "persistent effort" it is now only 48 cents per day in the field for men and 29 cents for women. In the packing houses the women earn 23 to 29 cents per day of nine hours and the men 70 cents, and 5 men, 10 women, and 2 boys can prepare 80 boxes a day for export. Voters, particularly California voters, should remember these facts when they go to the polls in November, 1912.

STRIKE LOSSES IN CONNECTICUT.

The 1909-10 report of William H. Scoville, Commissioner of Labor, for Connecticut, gives the following losses by strikes in that fiscal year:

Number of strikes	51
Towns affected	21
Workers involved	3,367
Day's work lost	65,395
Wages lost	$103,324
Average loss per employee	$ 30.69

And for eleven and one-third years:

Number of strikes	680
Workers involved	68,380
Wages lost	$2,951,513.00
Average loss per worker.	43.16
Ditto in 1909 only	157.31

In vetoing the peaceful persuasion bill in connection with strikes and lockouts, Gov. Foss of Massachusetts says:

"Every citizen is at present in full enjoyment of his fundamental right to debate peacefully whatever subject he pleases with any one who will listen to him as man to man and under conditions to which both agree. We need no new statute to guarantee that right.

"But it often happens that in matters relating to industrial problems persuasion passes into threats and menacing demands and thus ceases to be peaceful and becomes in fact a species of intimidation and compulsion.

"It is my earnest belief that such compulsion is wrong in principle, that it injures the cause which it seeks to help, that it fosters enmity and conduces not merely to words but to acts of violence and we must have no statute which can be used to legalize in the guise of peaceful persuasion such means of intimidation

Raising Cotton In California.

REDLANDS, June 6.—[To the Editor of The Times.] Those who believe in California's future and are interested in her prosperity, will watch with growing interest the new cotton industry, which is springing up in several of the Southern counties. It has been demonstrated on a commercial basis that we can grow a splendid article of cotton in the Imperial Valley, the whole Colorado Delta country, including the Salt River Valley and the Gila Valley of Arizona. In the Coachella Valley of Riverside county some splendid yields of cotton were produced last season—in some instances as much as two bales and better per acre, while Kern county has demonstrated that a fine grade of cotton and good yields can be produced in that territory. There is no question that large portions of the San Joaquin Valley and the great Sacramento Valley will produce cotton on a profitable basis.

California, in the great variety of her soil and climate, in her varied industries, in the extent and diversity of her crops, is easily the greatest State in the Union. It is the opinion of the writer that this new crop will within the next five years equal, and possibly surpass any of our present established industries. And why should we not raise cotton? Our soil and climate are perfectly adapted to its production; the yields are large and prices high; the cost of labor is somewhat higher than in the South; but look at the great natural advantages we have over the South. When we read of the terrible destruction to the Southern cotton crop by the ravages of the Texas boll weavil, the bug which eats gold, and multiplies itself 15,000,000 times in one season, when we read of the tremendous loss to the cotton crop by drouth, mildew, heavy rains and other destructive elements, when we sum it all up in the government reports that the cotton crop of the South only averages 200 pounds of lint cotton per acre, when we take into consideration the present high prices and the further fact that the world's cotton supply is 3,000,000 bales short of the market demands, we can begin to realize the tremendous opportunities which lie within our reach. We will wake up some of these fine California mornings to find that the Golden State has added a new and great industry to her already varied resources.

And in this connection, the writer wishes to say that it is his opinion, based on established facts, that the Imperial Valley and the whole Colorado Delta country, will within the next two or three years be devoted largely to the production of Egyptian cotton. W. A. Peterson, superintendent of the government experiment station at Yuma, Ariz., has bred up the Egyptian cotton within the last eight years to the extent that it can now be successfully grown on a commercial basis of 500 or 600 pounds per acre. This would mean a gross income of from $140 to $168 per acre at present prices, and the price is some times above 30 cents per pound. You can charge the liberal allowance of $60 per acre to cover all possible expense, and still have a net revenue of from $80 to $100 per acre.

Egyptian cotton is the crop which gives the world-wide fame to the Nile Valley, we have the same soil and climatic conditions, and it is entirely within the bounds of reason to expect that California will become equally famous.

The Latest Female Freak.

While the crowd was slowly pushing along the 168th street subway station the other day on its way to a big game, says the New York Sun, a man suddenly began excitedly feeling his coat-front, the coats of those near him and looking at as much of the ground as was visible, murmuring, "That's very strange! I had them on my nose a minute ago—very strange!"

A while later when progress had been gradually made to the elevator a girl was punctuating her conversation with emphatic nods and thereby tickling the face of a man in the back of her with her gracefully angled plumes when he touched her upon the shoulder. "Pardon me," said he, "but do you know that you have a pair of eyeglasses in your feathers?" It took about a minute to notify the eyeless man of the discovery.

AWAITING ACTION OF GOVERNMENT.

Great Mass of Data Secured by Investigators.

Government May Seek to Restrain Oil Removal.

Position of Southern Pacific Matter of Interest.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BAKERSFIELD, June 9.—The subject of chief interest in oil circles this week has been the reports of probable early action by the government to oust claimants to withdrawn oil lands and to restrain the Southern Pacific from removing oil from lands held by it under grant from the government. These reports, the substance of which have been given in this correspondence, still lack official confirmation, but they are given general credence by oil men.

The fact is generally known that all the preliminary gathering of data necessary to these steps has been done by a force of agents who have been searching records and interviewing operators and others in the different fields of the valley for months past. So long ago as last winter one of the government agents stated that enough information concerning claims on withdrawn land had been secured to make volumes of typewritten pages when it was transcribed and tabulated, and at that time only a portion of the valley fields had been covered. By this time it is certain that the government is in possession of a complete history of all the disputed claims in the whole west side oil belt. Semi-official explanation of the extent and detail with which this inquiry has been conducted is that the validity of each claim is to be determined on its own intrinsic merits, or, in other words, a certain standard of validity will be established, either by order of the Interior Department or by court decision, and each claim will be measured according to that standard in the light of the data which the government agents have gathered regarding it. It has been the policy of the government, apparently, to gather all the facts regarding the several claims before establishing the rule or standard by which they are to be measured.

The enormous amount of work involved in the investigations of these special agents may be imagined when it is remembered that most of the land involved had been located many times over, and in a very great proportion of cases there were two or more sets of locators, each pretending to a valid claim upon the land. The history of the different locations, proofs of labor, etc., was taken from the records in the County Recorder's office and elsewhere. The more laborious work of getting dates and details concerning actual development was done by agents who personally visited the leases and locations in the different fields. With all this information transcribed and tabulated for use, it is believed that the appointment of B. D. Townsend and Francis J. Heney as special assistant attorneys general marks the second stage in the efforts of the government to straighten out the tangle into which the oil land claims have fallen and to remove any claimants who may be occupying lands to which they have no right in law or equity.

This action has long been anticipated in a general way by all oil men. The reported decision of the government to bring action to enjoin the railroad from removing oil from the land it received under grant from the government, is a little more of a surprise. The only action really begun against the railroad by the government is that instituted last December and involving several sections in the Elk Hills. Present reports, however, are that the government will seek to include all the railroad lands in its action to restrain the removal of oil. The title to the railroad sections in the Elk Hills is considered more vulnerable, and it was for this reason, probably, that they were made the first object of attack. However, the result of the Standard Oil and tobacco trust cases may have encouraged the Department of Justice to attempt recovery of all railroad lands which have been proven to contain oil.

What the effect of restraining the railroad from producing oil on its lands in the west-side fields would mean is the subject of much interested speculation. The amount of the Southern Pacific's oil production is a carefully-guarded secret, but it is estimated at 15,000 to 20,000 barrels per day. The surplus production of the State for May is estimated at 60,000 barrels per day, so that the stopping of the Southern Pacific's wells would at once decrease by a quarter or more the quantity of oil that is going into storage.

Such a result would be felt immediately in the marketing situation, and the moral effect of a determined attack on the railroad's titles would do even more to clear away the clouds that now darken the producer's horizon and incidentally to stimulate the values of stocks in producing companies.

An important side light on all these speculations is furnished by the statement of President Taft to oil men who visited Washington last winter in the interest of the Smith remedial oil land bill, that the government is much more concerned in the recovery of oil lands which have wrongfully passed into the hands of the railroads and other large corporations than in pursuing small companies or prospectors who have taken up lands in good faith for the purpose of discovering and producing oil thereon. These statements, which, it is stated, were several times repeated, lend color to the belief that a general movement against the railroad titles is quite as probable as the ouster suits against the smaller claimants which nearly everyone seems to believe will be instituted.

What the attorneys of the Standard Oil Company believe will be the lines on which the validity of claims on withdrawn land is indicated by the orders which that corporation has issued respecting the purchase of oil. Drawing the obvious deductions from these orders, already reported, it is evident that the Standard believes that a producing well will entitle locators to patent a full claim of 160 acres where operations were actually begun prior to the first withdrawal in September, 1909; that where actual operations were begun on withdrawn land after the September order, but prior to the order that followed the passage of the Pickett bill, a producing well will entitle the locators to patent twenty acres only; that claims on which drilling was not commenced until after the second withdrawal order are valueless, and that no subsequent operations can secure any rights to the claimants.

Orders issued to the Standard's purchasing department are that no oil is to be bought which is produced from land that does not come within the above specifications of validity. That the order is based on the advice of the best attorneys in the Standard's employ is accepted as a matter of course, and proportionate faith is placed in the order as a forecast of the final outcome of any ouster suits which the government may begin. How many claims fall outside the limits thus prescribed can be determined only by the gathering of data similar to that which the government agents have compiled, but it is well known that they aggregate many thousands of acres.

THE FINAL DISPOSAL.

Another question of very general interest is what will be the final disposition of whatever lands the government may recover from the railroads or from locators now in possession. This question not even the President or the officials of the Interior Department can answer, for it depends on the action of Congress, and Congress is not likely to take any action earlier than late next winter. Probably it will not take action then, for the Republican party was divided in the last session of Congress on the question of conservation and the disposal of public lands, and the policy of the Democrats is an even more uncertain quantity.

That all withdrawn oil lands and all oil lands that may be returned to the possession of the government will remain in statu quo for a number of years is the generally expressed opinion of oil men. It is evident, moreover, that the interest of producing oil companies—in view of the present surplus production of oil—would be conserved by withholding from development the great areas of government and railroad land which are known to be oil bearing. This fact will range all the powerful factors in the oil industry on the side of delay in the settlement of the oil-land policy.

How active these factors are likely to be may be judged by the fact that at the present time a strong effort is being made to effect an agreement between the Union Oil Company, the Associated Agency, the Doheny companies, the Santa Fe, the Southern Pacific and the Standard to curtail production generally until the present accumulation of oil stocks begins to decrease. Good authority has it that all these concerns, with the possible exception of the Standard, appear to be favorable to the plan. The Standard has been exceedingly shy of anything that bears a resemblance to a combination in restraint of trade since the Department of Justice began the recently ended suit against it, and it is not to be supposed that the ending of the suit has left it in a more favorable frame of mind toward agreements of this character.

It is by no means certain, moreover, that the Standard would consider a curtailment of production a movement in its best interests. The Standard, despite its known and reported purchase of oil lands and its activities of late years as a producer of oil on this Coast, is essentially a buyer and not a seller of oil, and all evidence, as well as all theories, indicate that low prices for crude oil are the condition most to its liking.

The railroads, of course, are buyers also, but statements of high officials of both the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific are accepted as evidence that at prices now prevailing the railroads would rather buy than produce their fuel. In a general way it is assumed that the railroads and the Standard would be benefited by the further exploitation of undeveloped public oil lands, but neither the Standard nor the railroads are likely to lead an open campaign to swing the government's policy in that direction.

OIL ON NAVAL VESSELS.
UNOFFICIAL INFORMATION.

L. E. Aubury, State Mineralogist, now in Los Angeles, has received from Washington unofficial information to the effect that the navy department has decided to use oil for fuel instead of coal on all naval vessels in Pacific waters.

It is understood that the navy department will shortly appoint a board of naval officers to inspect various localities on the Pacific Coast for the purpose of determining sites for fuel oil depots. At the present time there are none on this coast, although a number have been established on the Atlantic Coast. It is probable that one of the oil supply depots will be established either at San Pedro or San Diego, also one at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, as well as San Francisco. After these depots have been established it will mean the purchase by the government of millions of barrels of oil, and as all the new battleships are being equipped with oil burners, a large amount of the supply necessary to furnish the navy will come from California.

MAKING GOOD PROGRESS.
GUARANTY PIPE LINE.

Thomas O. Turner, superintendent of the Guaranty Pipe Line Company, accompanied by Chief Engineer A. T. Parsons and surveying crew, reported by telephone yesterday from Ventura. They have spent the past week surveying, confirming routes and setting stakes from the Midway to the coast. All of this route is easily accessible, and no special difficulties will be encountered except over about fifteen miles of the route, which is rough and brushy, and will require some road building, but not especially difficult. Superintendent Turner forwarded to the home office a large package of photographs, all of which are very interesting and instructive.

The vigor and enterprise evidenced in the Guaranty operations is not only attracting to their ranks valuable aid in the West, but is securing the co-operation of the pipe and machinery people and bankers in the East. One large block of bonds has been placed with a strong French banking concern, and Mr. Brooks of the Guaranty company, will probably leave within a few days to deliver them.

Has Some Advantages.

Companies in the Kramer-Barstow field that are drilling for paraffine base oil claim that after striking it their expense will be far less than those of producers of heavy oil. There is never any sand in the former product, consequently sump holes and settling tanks are not needed. All that is required is two tanks at each well, one to pump into while the contents of the other is being run into the pipe lines. Another advantage is that at anything less than water level the oil will carry itself to market by gravity. This grade of oil will make 20 per cent. gasoline, 8 per cent. paraffine and other byproducts.

Mexico.

STANDARD ENTERS MEXICAN OIL FIELD.

Will Export Petroleum from Southern Republic.

Huasteco and Texas Companies' Big Contracts.

Ten Million Barrels Coming In Twelve Months.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

TAMPICO (Mex.) June 8.—More than 10,000,000 barrels of crude oil will be shipped from Mexico to the United States during the next twelve months. This startling announcement has just been made here by representatives of the Huasteca Petroleum Company and the Texas Company. It means that the oil interests of the United States are to have strong competitors on the part of the oil producers of this country. Already contracts have been entered into calling for the delivery in the United States of more than 8,000,000 barrels of Mexican oil during the next twelve months. The Southern Pacific Company has purchased from the Huasteca Petroleum Company 6,000,000 barrels of crude oil, which is to be delivered to its line in Texas for use as fuel in its locomotives. The delivery is to be made at the rate of 8000 barrels per day.

One of the most significant features of the oil situation in the Tampico region, however, is the entry of the Standard Oil Company as an exporter of oil from this port. One of that company's tank steamers, the Captain Lucas, recently cleared from here for Sabine Pass, Tex., with 32,000 barrels of oil. This oil will be refined by the Magnolia Refining Company at Beaumont. The Standard Oil Company will continue to export Mexican oil to Texas at the rate of about 200,000 barrels per month, it is stated.

Another important factor in the exportation of oil from the Tampico region to Texas is the Texas Company, which is controlled by John W. Gates. This company recently added $13,000,000 to its capital stock, and it is said that much of this money will be used for establishing itself in Mexico as a large producer and refiner of oil. This company has already begun the exploitation of a large tract of land near Panuco for oil and is laying an eight-inch pipe line from the prospective field to Tampico. It bought a tract of 800 acres of land fronting on the harbor here, and upon which it will erect a refinery and many large steel storage tanks. The company will export large quantities of oil in addition to the supply that it will use in its proposed Mexico trade.

The remarkable record of production which a few of the oil fields of this country is now making is attracting large American oil interests and heavy investments in lands have been recently made by these concerns. The two principal fields are Potrero del Llano and Juan Casiano. Although but comparatively few wells have as yet been bored in these fields they already have a daily production of more than 100,000 barrels. It is stated that the present output can be increased several times when the demand for the oil justifies such action.

The Texas Company is reported to be making a survey for an oil pipe line that it will construct from its Tampico terminals to Brownsville, Tex., about 300 miles.

The Mexican Eagle Petroleum Company, which is controlled by Lord Cowdray, better known as the Pearson interests, is also preparing to enter the export field. It will soon place a fleet of tank vessels in operation between its pipe line terminal and European points. At present it is handling about 20,000 barrels of oil per day from its storage tanks in the Potrero del Llano field. This is more than sufficient to supply its refinery at Minatitlan, on the isthmus of Tehuantepec. The Mexican Eagle Petroleum Company recently placed an order with a Sharon (Pa.) concern for fifty steel storage tanks, each to be of 55,000-barrel capacity. These tanks will be erected at points on its pipe line between Tuxpam and Tampico.

As another evidence of the wonderful development of the oil industry in this region, the Waters-Pierce Oil Company has let the contract for enlarging its paraffine plant to five times its present capacity. Extensive improvements will also be made by the company to its refinery here. The plant is at present handling 5000 barrels of oil per day.

OIL LAND LEGISLATION.
WILL DISCUSS LEASING.

The Chamber of Mines and Oil has just issued a call for a luncheon of all past and present directors of the chamber, to be held at the Hollenbeck Hotel, Thursday, June 15, at noon. This luncheon has been called by the Executive Committee of the chamber for the purpose of "discussing existing laws and proposed legislation as it affects the disposition of our petroleum lands, with a view to determining the future policies of the organization."

This luncheon will probably be the first of a series, and it is now anticipated that preliminary plans and details as to the operation of the chamber will be discussed, and necessary committees will be appointed, their reports being heard and discussed at subsequent meetings. Final report and action by the organization will doubtless be taken as a result of these meetings, and details of the chamber's plan of action announced at the annual banquet to be held some time during the summer months. The directors of the chamber are of the opinion that, inasmuch as the present administration is unqualifiedly in favor of a leasing system as applied to the disposition of oil lands, it is imperative that concerted action be taken by all organizations interested, in order that a satisfactory bill may be presented for consideration at the next regular session.

The Chamber of Mines and Oil will co-operate with all other organizations interested in the various questions to be discussed; prominent oil men will be invited to participate in the discussions, and an endeavor will be made to reach safe and sound conclusions. Ralph Arnold is chairman of the Petroleum Committee of the chamber, having as his associates on the committee, W. W. Orcutt, who acts as vice-chairman, T. A. O'Donnell, C. J. Berry, and M. V. McQuigg. At [illegible] for able advocates of the existing laws, and of the proposed leasing system, to address them, an informal discussion following. At the luncheons to follow it is anticipated that the Petroleum Committee of the chamber will have an opportunity to become fully posted as to legislative needs, and it may be possible that the chamber can "father" a bill, which will prove satisfactory.

The chamber will also invite all other organizations interested in the subject of oil-land legislation to send representatives to these meetings, in order that these delegates can present the views of the organizations which thy represent. If there is any legislation at all at the next regular session of Congress, concerted action alone will prevent the passage of some bill, which may contain features obnoxious to the general good of the entire community of California. It is believed that a bill, embodying the interests of the whole State, satisfactory to the majority of the oil men, and acceptable to the legislative leaders of the House, and Senate, can be prepared in California, forwarded to Washington, and introduced there in both houses, with the combined backing of all civic and business organizations of the State.

NEAR GUSHER SAND.
PALMER UNION EXPECTANT.

The Palmer Union Oil Company expects to have a gusher within ten days in well No. 1. It is down 2947 feet, and has thicker oil sand and greater gas pressure than the big Palmer gushers which are about 1000 feet south of it. The gas is forcing large quantities of sand up in the casing, and this is being removed as fast as possible with the bailer. Superintendent Frank Fether, who has had long experience with the Cat Canyon gushers, is expecting the gas to relieve the bailer at any moment and itself clear out the sand.

Palmer Union No. 2 has been successfully cemented at 2412 feet, and will be finished within sixty days. No. 3, which is 2003 feet deep, will be completed within ninety days. It can be safely asserted that, barring accidents, the company will have three big wells flowing on its Cat Canyon property in September.

On its Tapo lease in the light oil belt of Ventura county, the Palmer Union has well No. 1 down 500 feet, and is making steady progress. On its Midway property the four wells that are into the oil sand have been cleaned and the pumps speeded up, a large increase in production resulting. No. 5 is 800 feet deep and will be finished in a couple of weeks, when the drilling of No. 6 will be commenced.

VALLECITOS DISTRICT.
SEVERAL COMPANIES ACTIVE.

The Range 16 Oil Company, Vallecitos field, is down nearly 1400 feet with twelve and one-half-inch casing and from a further depth of sixty feet, ten-inch casing will be used for finishing the well. The hardness of the blue shale is increasing, also the showing of light oil it contains.

Near the Range 16 is the Sussex company. It is drilling with a rotary and has a hole down 1450 feet. Adjoining the Range 16 on the other side, the Vallecitos Development outfit, now the Coalinga Oilfields Company, Ltd., is down about 1200 feet, according to rumor. The company is now British, and will give out no information of any kind. Geologist Anderson of the United States Survey states in bulletin 431A that at this point the oil sand will be found at from 1200 to 1500 feet. The Range 16 will find it at a few hundred feet greater depth, as its derrick has that much more elevation about the sea level.

CRUDE OIL STATISTICS.
SAVING OF RAILROADS.

Some interesting oil statistics were contained in an article recently published in the New York Curb, telling of the great saving made by railroads of the United States that use oil as a fuel on locomotives. Some of the facts stated were:

Oil in the United States is measured in barrels of forty-two gallons each.

The price of oil in America varies from 30 cents per barrel in the Oklahoma field to $1.50 per barrel in the Pennsylvania field.

California oil is of an asphaltum base or from 14 to 28 deg. specific gravity and sells for from 50 cents to $1.25 per barrel, depending on gravity and location of wells.

The Southern Pacific, the Santa Fe and the Salt Lake railroads burn oil as fuel on their locomotives. The present consumption of the Southern Pacific alone is over 42,000 barrels per day.

As a fuel, ninety gallons of oil is equal to one ton of coal.

Forty-two thousand barrels equal 1,764,000 gallons.

One million, seven hundred and sixty-four thousand divided by ninety equals 19,600 tons of coal.

The oil costs the railroads about 65 cents per barrel. Coal was costing about $7 a ton.

Nineteen thousand six hundred tons at $7 equals $137,200 per day.

Forty-two thousand barrels at 65 cents equals $27,300 per day.

A balance in favor of oil of $109,900 per day, or over 80 per cent.; 365 days at $109,900 equals $40,113,500 per annum.

Harriman once stated that the difference in cost to the Southern Pacific between oil and coal would pay the interest of their entire bonded debt and go far toward paying for the rolling stock. The Southern Pacific Railroad never paid a dividend on its common stock until it began using oil as a fuel.

As the result of a long series of carefully-made tests it has been demonstrated that a ton of coal will run a train 26.7 miles and that a ton of oil will run the same train 38.46 miles, leaving a balance in favor of oil of 12.39 miles, or practically 50 per cent.

An engine tender will carry eight tons of coal, which, at the rate of 26.77 miles per ton, will run a train 213.6 miles; the same tender will carry sixteen tons of oil, which, at the rate of 38.46 miles per ton, will run the same train 615.36 miles, leaving a balance in favor of oil of 401.76 miles, or practically 200 per cent.

Oil is much more economically handled than coal. It is pumped or permitted to flow by gravity into the receiving tanks or tenders, and fed by automatic burners, regulated by a thermostat; hence the fire is steadier and there is a minimum of expansion and contraction.

Will Drill Several Wells.

The stockholders of the Venice and Kern Realty and Oil Company are all pleased with its recent purchase of sixty acres of proven territory in section 19, 32-23, Midway field. The property will have one well after another put down, on it as fast as the work can be done, and at the same time, the company's large Ventura holding is to be developed. On the San Luis Obispo property a deep well is nearly finished, and is expected to become a large producer. It is said that the company is negotiating for still more property. Several very wealthy men of the sea shore town are largely interested in the corporation.

Proven and Producing Properties in Maricopa, Sunset and Fullerton Oil Fields

During the past eight months, this corporation has pursued an active campaign of development on its forty acre property located in the Maricopa-Sunset Oil Fields. Two good producing oil wells have been brought in, and water for power and drilling purposes developed. Iron tankage, pipe-line to railroad, and our own railroad switches have been constructed. We own one of the best equipments of drilling tools and machinery in the field. Our present production on this property, and the drilling of additional wells should put this company on a dividend basis in the near future.

FULLERTON FIELD

It being the policy of this company to add additional proven territory to its holdings as advantageous bargains may appear, we have purchased outright a small tract of first-class oil territory lying about twelve hundreds yards southwest of the big well of the Amalgamated Oil Company, in Section 13, as shown on the small map in this announcement.

Since our purchase of this property, the Standard Oil Company have commenced the drilling of a well within two hundred and fifty yards of our northeast corner. Our property is surrounded by the holdings of the Standard, Amalgamated and Graham-Loftus Oil Companies. Judging from the deep oil sands encountered by the Amalgamated Oil Company, and from the production now being obtained from their first well, we estimate that our Fullerton property will produce wells that should average from six hundred to one thousand barrels per day each.

The Fullerton and Whittier oil fields have paid dividends to their stockholders for many years, and have produced longer lived wells than any territory in California, and by reason of being close to a big market and Ocean transportation, have always obtained top prices for their oil.

Investors who have drawn dividends for years on Fullerton and Whittier oil investments, and have had their stocks advance in value hundreds per cent. should lose no time in subscribing for a part of this offering.

STOCKHOLDERS' LETTER TO DIRECTORS. ON TRIP OF INSPECTION, MAY 27, 1911.

Maricopa, Cal., May 28, 1911.

Midway View Oil Company, Los Angeles, Cal.—Gentlemen: We, the undersigned stockholders and visitors this day inspected the property of the Midway View Oil Company, in the Maricopa Oil Field, and were greatly pleased with the future outlook of this company. The management has done well in development work, demonstrating by its present wells that the entire property is capable of a great production. We desire to state that present developments are also a proof of the conservative and progressive management.

We wish to thank the directors for the opportunity of seeing the property in its productive state. Thirty stockholders and guests measured the production from Wells Nos. 1 and 3, and found it to be in excess of the company's claims for the property. Our visit demonstrated that every statement made by the company has been more than verified.

Very truly yours,

Los Angeles, Cal., June 9, 1911.

To the Stockholders of the Midway View Oil Company:—We, the undersigned officers and directors of the Midway View Oil Company have made a personal examination of the property recently purchased by the company in Section 14, in the Fullerton Field, and it is our judgment that the land is highly productive oil property, and will contain the same great depth of oil sands as those that underlie the lands of the Amalgamated Oil Company, lying to the east and north of our property.

the idea is neither very novel nor very surprising. Few people have to be told that only a short time ago a knighthood could be had for $125,000, provided the amount were bestowed in the right political quarter. A peerage costing something over five times that figure certainly seems cheap. In addition, there is all the eclat which the donor is bound to receive for his munificence. Please understand that this is not a joke; on the contrary, I am recounting to you what has been seriously and gravely proposed and what, moreover, there are fairly good reasons to believe may yet become an accomplished fact. When one considers, on the other hand, how much beating of the big drum there has been and how confidently it was predicted that the requisite funds for the erection of a national theater would be at once forthcoming, this seems rather a mean way of getting out of the difficulty.

George Edwardes has given us another of his magnificent productions at Daly's and "The Count of Luxembourg" will probably run there for two years. Nevertheless, neither the book nor the music is in any way remarkable. The former takes off badly, the second act being rather feeble, while, although Franz Lehar has contributed some melodious numbers, there are also some of a rather tedious character. But at the present moment Edwardes's lucky star is in the ascendant and the public will flock to see anything he gives them. Further, there is Lily Elsie, who probably is the most popular musical comedy artist of the day.

Even Gertie Millar, I should fancy, would have to take second place were a poll demanded. The wonderful "staircase" waltz did not strike me as particularly wonderful: as a matter of fact Lalie Elsie and Bertram Wallis on the first night nearly came to grief over it. But the sympathetic spectators called them back again and again and would not rest content until an encore had been accorded.

Two days later there was a reception on the stage at Daly's to Lehar prior to his departure for Paris where they are going to perform a couple of his operas in German next month. Naturally there was a tremendous gathering of all sorts of people, actors and actresses, composers, journalists and such like, all eager to congratulate the Viennese composer upon his latest success. A more modest man than Lehar does not exist. He is one of those whom prosperity leaves unspoiled and is just as genial, as accessible and as unassuming today as he was twenty years ago when a struggling Kapellmeister. At the reception Edwardes told me that he was only waiting to see the last of Lehar in order to undergo an operation for a cyst in the back which had been troubling him for some time past. Fortunately, everything has passed off most successfully, but Edwardes will not be able to leave his room until the end of next week.

Fred Whitney has gone off to Dresden in order to discuss the subject of the Covent Garden cast of "Rosenkavalier" with Richard Strauss. Just before leaving he put up the orthodox fortnight's notice at the Whitney Theater terminating the run of "Baron Trenck." The intimation has come as a blow to all the members of the company, for there could not be a less favorable time than this for obtaining new engagements. Believing that half a loaf is better than no bread they have, consequently, offered to continue on half salaries. Whether Whitney will agree to the proposal will not be known until after his return from Dresden, but I rather fancy he is most inclined to cut his loss. I do not imagine, further, that he is making a fortune at the Criterion with "Arms and the Man," which he has revived to give Arnold Daly a chance. Next month Whitney will present him at a series of matinees in a triple bill composed of Bernard Shaw's "How He Lied to Her Husband" and "The Man of Destiny" and C. M. S. McLellan's "The Shirkers."

Russian dancers are crowding in upon us. In a month from now we are to have the famous Imperial troupe from St. Petersburg at Covent Garden, where they will divide honors with grand opera, appearing twice or thrice every week. I am told that they are to receive $3000 for each performance, and that the remuneration of the daring impresario who has brought them over only amounts to $2000. However, he has made the contract with his eyes open, being confident that he will more than recoup himself for any loss sustained in London by the rich harvest awaiting him in America and elsewhere. Next Monday evening we are to see the celebrated Mlle. Geltzer in the new coronation ballet at the Alhambra. I dropped in there the other day for a quarter of an hour just to obtain an idea of her quality, and I am bound to say I think she will create a sensation equal to that made by Pavlowa. Here is a curious little incident connected with her appearance. Some years ago Geltzer became the wife of a popular dancer called Tichomeroff. After the manner of their kind, they quarreled and eventually esparated. Without knowing any of the circumstances, Alfred Moul, manager of the Alhambra, also engaged Tichomeroff for his ballet, and behold! the estranged husband and wife met, for the first time after a lengthy interval, on the stage of that variety theater. If they did not precisely fall into each other's arms, they at any rate showed no hostility toward each other, and are now good friends. By the by, despite all the reports of a reconciliation between Pavlowa and Mordkin, the two are still at daggers drawn. Probably the close of their season at the Palace will witness the end of their present association. Pavlowa, who in St. Petersburg earned a comparatively trifling salary, will this year net $125,000 by her efforts. I understand that her contracts for England and America will prevent her reappearance in St. Petersburg before 1913.

On the steps of the Savoy Hotel, to my astonishment, I ran against Marc Klaw yesterday. "I thought you were in America," I exclaimed. "So I was a week ago," he rejoined. "The fact is, I only ran over there to verify the difference in clocks, and now I am back in London for a holiday." "Nothing in the way of business?" I asked. "No," he answered, "we have settled for the London production of 'The Pink Lady' next fall, and for the moment I have nothing to do but to enjoy myself a sbest I can."

Suburban Property Gained Unexpectedly by Patrolman Will be Made Beauty Spot of Rich Valley. He Hits Upon the Number of Kernels.

For making the best guess as to the number of wheat kernels in a sealed jar, F. M. Van Norman, member of the Los Angeles police force, was, last week, presented with a deed to five acres of the Van Nuys-Lankershim ranch by the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company and the Janss Investment Company.

At the recent Land and Products Exposition the Janss Investment Company installed a sealed jar in which were placed wheat kernels and to the person making the closest guess of the number of grains contained in the jar title to a five-acre ranch would be given free of cost. Officer Van Norman, the lucky man, guessed within one of the exact number of grains in the bottle.

Van Norman intends to divide his time between his police guardianship duties and tilling his gardens. He is destined to become the farmer-patrolman, and has already planned to build a cottage upon his newly-acquired possession. As soon as the electric car line is completed through the San Fernando Valley he will move to his new domain. "I am going to be a policeman part of the day and a farmer the rest of the time," Van Norman said. "I've got it figured out that I can live on my ranch and not have to quit my work in the department. I'm strong for this chicken-raising stuff. I'll start on that and then go into fruit and berries and a home garden. Ought to be the finest kind of a way to keep a policeman in the physical trim that is needed. No more gymnasium for me—the plough and the hoe will do the business."

GLIMPSES OF SAN FRANCISCO.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—It is a case now of root hog or die with the directors of the fair. Daily sessions are held to decide on a site. The Executive Committee, being unable to select one, passed the troublesome problem up to the full board. The need of an early decision is urgent and every day the matter will be discussed until decided. It might be a good plan to lock the directors up and feed them on bread and water until they agree.

There can be no question but this long delay in choosing a fair site is depressing. Whatever benefit accrued from winning the victory in Washington has been diminished by the uncertainty of the site. The business impetus started by the victory seems to be lost. Realty transactions have not been as brisk as they ought to be and the general public is lined up in the knocking class.

Mrs. Inez C. Peterson explained to a jury that she was suffering from temporary mental aberration when she impersonated Mrs. Henrietta Farrelly and borrowed $10,000 from the Frankenau Investment Company. Unfortunately for her the jurors were not troubled with mental aberration when they promptly convicted her. She might have fared better if she had accused the man who loaned her the money of being crazy.

Thomas Coursey, a young stevedore, turned his aged mother out in the rain at 2 a.m., but he will not do it again, at least for ninety days. Police Judge Shortall gave him the limit in the County Jail, at the same time telling him that he was the most despicable human being that ever appeared before him for sentence, and the punishment would have been severe had the law allowed it.

Some people may not like the new dances, but Matty Baldwin, pugilist, from Boston, is not one of them. He was taken to the Barbary Coast the other night and initiated into the "bunny hug." This is what he said: "I have been around in many a burg and played many a game, but this good old town of San Francisco has them all beaten like an eggshell. Why that grizzly bear stuff is in a class by itself. It got my goat right off the reel. If I did not have to train for my fight with Welsh I would be dancing it every night."

Marriage is a failure, according to Mrs. H. C. Jones, and she is asking the courts to give her freedom. One of her main objections to her husband is that he did not like the Christmas presents she gave him. It is now incumbent on the court to ascertain whether the husband paid for them.

Three hundred dollars a day for himself and one assistant is what Bion J. Arnold of Chicago wrote the city authorities that he would charge to tell us how to improve the street car service. This might not be unreasonable if the noted expert could report in one day, but he is silent on the subject of the length of employment. For much less money any citizen would tell the administration that what is needed is more cars.

According to Lawyer Hanlon, the metaphysical possession of the office of Chief of Police is vested in "Gus" White. He admits that the material grip is held by John Seymour. The treasurer will pass on the philosophy of the case when he decides which gentleman is entitled to the salary. Meanwhile both the men are acting like perfect gentlemen and not indulging in fisticuffs.

An intelligent Coroner's jury decided that Mrs. Johanna Corvino, who was killed by her brother-in-law, Lelio Corvino, "had come to her death as a result of gunshot wounds caused by a party or parties unknown to the jury." The slayer may be unknown to the jury from lack of a formal introduction, but he is known to the police, who have him in custody, because of his confession of the deed.

PLUTO.

WHY MEN BECOME GIANTS.

Result of a Change in the Pituitary Gland Which Sensitizes Certain Cells of the Body.

Prof. Arthur Keith, conservator of museum and Hunterian professor, Royal College of Surgeons, in an address at the Royal Institution in London, on "Giants and Pigmies," adduced some interesting scientific facts.

He dealt with the physical difference between giants and ordinary people, using as an illustration the famous giant, O'Brian, of the eighteenth century. Recent discoveries relating to the cause of giantism, he pointed out, showed that the key to growth was to be found in what was called a pituitary body at the base of the skull.

"This body," he said, according to the London Express, "which is a little thing which will not fill a teaspoon and is smaller than a small grape, has come to be a thing of very great importance. It was discovered by a French physician, who found in a case of abnormal growth of head and feet that this small body at the base of the skull had enlarged, and he jumped to the idea that it must be secretion and that it must somehow regulate the growth of the body.

"It was found that abnormal growth sometimes began after the age of 22, when the lines of growth had closed, and it was concluded to be a disease, the name 'acromegaly' being applied to it.

"Prof. Cunningham had made similar discoveries in relation to giantism, and it was found that one of the things that went to regulate growth was a substance which was circulated through the blood, and which, when it went to certain cells, sensitized them in the sense that it made them keener to work."

Prof. Keith referred to Machnow, who was exhibited at the Hippodrome a few years ago, and said he was a man of the same type as the famous O'Brian, namely, an acromegalic giant. Very few of those giants lived longer than 23 years.

"I have heard recently," he said, "of a soldier in one of the regiments of Guards who was 18 years of age and was 6 feet, 8 inches and growing rapidly. I have no doubt that in that case we have a real giant. This problem of growth is most marvelous, and things which we hardly dream credible are coming to light."

Rufus H. Thayer, judge of the United States Court for China, after having served on the bench at Shanghai for two years, is in Washington for a vacation. Judge Thayer, though born in Michigan, is really a Washingtonian. Some years ago he served as Judge Advocate General of the District of Columbia Militia, was a member of the School Board, one of the organizers of the Public Library, a member of the Board of Trustees of the Public Library and chairman of the District Peace Jubilee at the close of the Spanish-American War.

NATOMAS WILL USE BIG NEW DREDGER.

Southern Californians Have Interest in Company.

Lincoln Consolidated Gets Long-sought Vein.

Noted Tightner Mine Bonded to Eastern Men.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SACRAMENTO, June 9.—The Natomas Consolidated of California, the giant $25,000,000 dredging company in which numerous Los Angeles people are interested, has again taken the lead in the construction of new types of dredgers in the California field. The company has placed an order with the Yuba Construction Company of Marysville for a 15-cubic foot bucket dredge with a steel hull. Hitherto all dredges constructed in California have had wooden hulls, usually composed of Oregon pine. The Yukon Gold Company recently ordered two steel dredges for use in Alaska, and the Natomas immediately decided that this type of dredge was desirable for the California district. The cost of the new goldboat will be approximately $275,000, and it will be one of the most powerful dredges ever constructed.

The hull will have a length of 150 feet, with a width of fifty feet, and depth of ten feet. It will be operated on the Humbug Hill deposit near Folsom, a short distance from Rebel Hill, where the Natomas now has a monster 15-cubic foot boat in commission. The dredge will have a capacity of approximately 350,000 cubic yards per month, and will be equipped to excavate to a depth of about fifty-five feet. The boat will be operated throughout by electricity, and will be officially known as Natomas No. 10.

The company has been operating Natomas No. 8, the first of the 15-cubic feet, for several months at Rebel Hill, and No. 9 of identical type and capacity will go into commission before the close of June, according to present indications. Each of these boats handles approximately 350,000 cubic yards of material at about 2 cents per cubic yard. This includes all expenses. The success attending the operation of these dredges has been so marked that other companies are preparing to fall in line. Near Oroville the Natomas is also about to place a 15-cubic foot bucket dredge in action. With all these boats in operation, it is expected that within a short time the annual production of this company will exceed $5,000,000 per year.

Vein Struck at Lincoln.

The south drift on the 800-foot level of the Lincoln Consolidated, located in the Sutter Creek district, has intersected the long-sought vein. It has increased from a narrow stringer of a few inches to four feet in width, with assays running $22 per ton. The company will immediately send out a drift from the next lower level in order to prove the extent of the strike. The company is saving the ore for milling, and if conditions continue to improve, steps will be taken soon for the erection of a milling department. Several Southern Californians are among those interested.

The Lincoln Consolidated won honors in the early days of the State, being an important factor in the preliminary financing of the Central Pacific Railroad, when Leland Stanford and his associates were promoting the project. At this time the Lincoln was one of the big producers of the Mother Lode, and made the fortunes of several. Among the fortunate ones was Samuel Stewart, brother of Senator Stewart of Nevada, the famous silver advocate. After the property passed from the Stanford interests two strong companies in succession endeavored to work it successfully, but in vain. The mine was then closed and allowed to remain dormant until about a year ago when the present company secured control.

Alleghany District.

It is officially announced that the noted Tightner, the king of property of the Alleghany district, has been bonded to a strong syndicate of eastern capitalists. The interested parties decline to make the amount of the deal public, but it is known to be large, as some months ago owner H. L. Johnson declined to bond the mine to a German combination for $2,500,000. Under the present arrangement the bonding company is obligated to perform a large amount of development work, and to keep developments well ahead of production. It is also understood that the owners are to receive an excellent royalty on all ore marketed.

The Tightner has achieved fame as one of the richest gold mines in California, its production of bonanza quartz changing Alleghany from an almost dormant camp to one of the liveliest in the State. On the dumps alone ore valued at $50,000 is available for immediate treatment. It is reported that the bonding company will carry on the building of the new mill, foundations for which are being laid.

One of the best strikes made in the district for many months is reported from the Irelan. The vein is four feet wide, with the shoot showing ore of remarkable richness. Several thousand dollars have already been extracted, and the adit gives backs of 200 feet, a raise is being driven on the vein to open it to the upper workings. The Irelan is operated under a bond by Fred Clark, a relative of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst. George Hegarty is manager.

Harvard Reports Strike.

The Harvard mine, one of the largest active producers on the mother lode, reports the uncovering of an excellent ore body on the 1150-foot level. The quartz ranks with the best ever found in the mine, and is expected to materially increase the yield during the next few years. The strike conclusively demonstrates the persistent nature of the ore bodies of this district, which lies along the Tuolumne portion of the great mother lode gold zone.

Steam Shovel Mining.

Nat Ellery, State Engineer, and Geo. W. Scott, a well-known politician, have taken options on approximately 300 acres of gravel land in Sierra county, and plan to mine the deposits by means of a steam shovel. Preliminary tests indicate that the gravel will run about 25 cents per cubic yard, which will enable the bonders to operate along profitable lines. It is planned to excavate the gravel by a steam shovel, discharge into hoppers and treat the product along the lines practiced in dredge mining. If the venture proves successful it will mean the working of immense auriferous deposits in the Sierra Nevada foothills, that have lain idle since the anti-hydraulic regulations went into effect.

Coal Mining in Siskiyou.

The Siskiyou Coal Company has been organized to conduct coal mining near Ager, Siskiyou county. The company controls approximately 2000 acres, and has developed a good seam of coal by shaft and tunnel work. Another seam has been located on which a steam drill has been placed in action. Two shifts are at work, and the company states that development will be vigorously prosecuted. The coal is lignite, and said to be of high quality. Several hundred tons of coal have already been mined at this property and sold at a fair profit. Vincent Delaney is manager.

Eagle Bird Changes Hands.

San Francisco people have purchased the Eagle Bird mine, Washington district, and it is authoritatively stated that developments will be prosecuted along broad lines and a new plant installed. The hoisting plant and ten-stamp mill were destroyed by fire about two years ago, since when the management has made no effort to resume production. Lack of finances were the cause, as good reserves are developed, and all that is needed is a new plant to place the property among the producers. W. M. Wilson is manager.

Tonopah People Get Shively.

The noted Shively silver-lead mine, near Villareal, Inyo county, has passed into the hands of Keith & Kerr, prominent Tonopah mining men, for a reported price of $50,000. This property was discovered last fall, and has already produced approximately $35,000 from shallow depth.

Kingman.

GOLD ROAD MINE HAS BEEN SOLD.

BIG SMELTING COMPANY TAKES OVER THE PROPERTY.

The Price Agreed Upon is Four Dollars a Share, Making the Consideration a Million and a Half. Dr. Godshall Bonds a Group of Promising Prospects.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

KINGMAN (Ariz.) June 9.—Telegrams have been received here in the last two days affirming the sale of the Gold Road mine to the United States Smelting, Refining and Mining Company at $4 per share, or a total of about $1,500,000, the largest amount ever paid for a mine in this county. Officials of the Needles Mining and Smelting Company, the local branch of the big corporation, which is operating a half-dozen lead-zinc mines in this district, cannot confirm these reports, but a number of stockholders of the Gold Road mine are in receipt of wires and letters stating that the terms for the sale had been agreed upon and the transfer concluded. Furthermore, Manager McCackill of the Gold Road has just been called into Los Angeles headquarters

The United States company has had an option on the Gold Road property since last December. Three months were spent in sampling under direction of Engineers Anderson and Howatt and the results were admittedly very satisfactory. A large amount of the Gold Road stock was, however, held in France, which necessitated a trip there by President Bayly and an official representing the United States company. The reports just received follow cablegrams from Paris announcing conclusion of negotiations with the French stockholders.

The Gold Road, one of the biggest gold mines in Arizona, has been producing steadily since 1900. It has an ore shoot about 1250 feet long and from six to twenty-six feet wide with a fair average width of twelve feet, averaging $15 per ton. It is developed to a depth of 800 feet and equipped with a new 300-ton mill and cyanide plant, now yielding about $80,000 per month.

The proposed advent of the big smelting corporation into the San Francisco gold district of this county is regarded with general favor because it will add to the confidence in the district, call forth more development in a great many promising prospects and insure a permanency of operations. The operations of the Needles Mining and Smelting Company in the lead-zinc mines of the Cerbat Range for the past year and a half have done just these things, and the entire district from Kingman to Chloride is more active and actually producing more than ever before.

At Secret Pass, Superintendent Wilhelm, developing the Harrison prospects for the Olds Auto Company, reports continued high-grade ore in two shafts down about 100 feet.

The Ruth mill and cyanide plant have been started on ore and are giving good results.

PEARCE CAMP AWAKE. FORMERLY WAS ACTIVE.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

TOMBSTONE (Ariz.) June 9.—Pearce camp is showing signs of rejuvenation. Work has been started again on the old Commonwealth mine, said to have produced $35,000,000 within a few years of its operation after purchase by a Pennsylvania company about 1896. The original workings caved in and two stamp mills have been destroyed by fire but the ore body is still believed to retain much of its old-time richness. Representatives of the Clark syndicate of Nevada have taken over the old mine and are preparing extensive work.

The original discoverer of the Commonwealth mine, John J. Pearce, has incorporated another company to work eight claims adjoining the Commonwealth, where a shaft will be started within sixty days. Pearce has held these claims in reserve for years and has repeatedly expressed the opinion that they are at least as rich as those be sold. They are in the same character of ground and along the same general geological trend and there is evidence that a second bonanza will be developed as soon as the workings have reached a depth of several hundred feet. The new company is mainly composed of Tombstone men, familiar with local conditions. V. G. Mellgren is president of the new corporation and one of the directors is P. M. Warnekros, now of Los Angeles, but a pioneer Arizonan.

Clifton.

DIRECTORS VISIT ARIZONA COPPER.

COME FROM SCOTLAND TO SEE THEIR PROPERTY.

It is Believed They Will Recommend the Building of a New Smelter Three Miles from the Present Site—Company Has a Big Acreage of Claims.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

CLIFTON (Ariz.) June 9.—Directors of the Arizona Copper Company, Limited, who recently spent several weeks of investigation in this locality, considering plans for the betterment of the company's property and for economy in the operation of its works, have sailed for Scotland, where their report will be placed before the board of directors.

It is locally understood that the committee has agreed to recommend the building of an entirely new smelter at a point about three miles from the present site, and some distance below the Shannon plant. With confidence that the report will be accepted, ground for the smelter already has been secured in the purchase of a placer claim covering the location desired. The new location is along the line of the Arizona and New Mexico Railroad, which is practically owned by the Arizona Copper Company, but a new bridge will have to be built to it across the San Francisco River. It is privately told that the new works will entail an expenditure of more than $1,000,000, and will take more than two years in their building.

The company's yearly product averages 35,000,000 pounds, valued at about $4,500,000. It is probable that the corporation owns more mining ground than any other within the Southwest, having hundreds of claims covering the hills around Morenci, Metcalf and Coronado, with its own ore-carrying railroad reaching almost every shaft and tunnel. Most of the ore-bearing ground in this locality is owned by one of three companies, the Arizona, Detroit or Shannon, each having its own reduction works, and each its own railroad system. Though rich ore has been found at a number of points, the Longfellow of the Arizona Copper Company having the richest history of any southwestern copper mine, the ores generally are of very low grade, averaging between 3 and 4 per cent. at the concentrator, yet the extraction costs are being kept down so that profit is usually assured and ample. Labor is cheaper than in any other Arizona copper camp, as most of the rock is handled by Mexican laborers who receive about one-half the usual miners' wage. Remarkable economy also has attended the use of gas engines, the fuel being generated at a general gas plant near Morenci and carried by pipes to the various works.

The Shannon Company is reported to be making copper at a cost of 11 cents a pound, earning about $15,000 a year for its stockholders at the present price of copper.

The Frisco Placer Mining Company this week will start a test run on placer ground several miles below Clifton, on the San Francisco River. It is claimed that the ground samples not less than 75 cents a yard. The gravel is to be handled by cable scrapers into sluice boxes, trommels and amalgamators, power being furnished by three gasoline engines. Thirty men are employed and 1000 yards of ground will be handled a day.

OLD PLACER WORKINGS. COMPANY SPENDING MONEY.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

FLAGSTAFF (Ariz.) June 9.—The operations of the Lee's Ferry Placer Mining Company near Lee's Ferry on the Colorado River in the extreme edge of the Territory are far more extensive than generally appreciated. The company is spending about $500,000 in putting in machinery for working placer ground of known richness [illegible] the Southwest, the most available railroad station being Flagstaff, about 150 miles distant.

Down to the mouth of the Little Colorado the canyon of the Colorado is rich in placer gold. Lee's Ferry owes its name to John D. Lee, chief of the Danites who hid in the canyon for two years following the Mountain Meadow massacre. He is known to have worked placer diggings that returned richly in gold for the labor of only a few men, but the location of these bodies seems never to have been divulged to anyone outside of his original party. Whether the modern company now working has struck the old John D. Lee's diggings or not is a question. It is believed more likely that Lee found his nuggets in some side canyon in small pockets.

It is reported that the placer company purposes to enlarge the scope of its work eventually by an extension of its hydraulic canal to agricultural lands that lie near the canyon, which, at that point, is not very deep. Transportation will be provided eventually for the locality by a north and south railroad which must cross the Colorado River at that point, if anywhere, as it is the only available crossing upon the stream within Arizona or Utah. A party of surveyors traversed the ground southward from Utah last year, working in the interest of Senator Clark, who sought connection between the Salt Lake Railroad system and his United Verde mines at Jerome. Incidentally the line would traverse rich mineral country, bearing gold and copper, would pass through great timber belts on the Buckskin plateau, and below Flagstaff and would pass within a short distance of great coal beds on the Navajo reservation. Most important of all it would furnish the only railroad line that would connect the extremes of the inter-mountain region and would give almost direct connection between Salt Lake and Southern Arizona.

Henry A. Middleton Smith of Charleston, who has been selected by President Taft to fill the vacancy in the United States District Court caused by the retirement of Judge Brawley, is a descendant of one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. He is about 58 years of age, and is said to have been for something like thirty years, a glutton for work.

IN THE EARTH.

Rare Minerals, Metallurgy and Chemistry.

Not Tellurium.

LEE (Cal.) May 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you please give a prospector a little help?

I have a quartz ledge with wire-gold and iron in different forms. I cannot get the gold malleable.

Will you tell me what my ore contains, what the trouble is with the gold and so forth?

No. 1 tellurium or what? No. 2 bright-iron crystals. No. 3 hematite, containing fine lines of quartz. No. 4 quartz with blue and green oxide or sulphate, and it has come out on the rock since it was dug out about two years ago. No. 5 gold broke out of a button.

Please tell me what to assay for and greatly oblige me.

This ore comes from about three-quarters of a mile from Lee, south.

Yours respectfully,
W. H. L.

ANSWER. No correspondent is answered more cheerfully, in these columns, than that class of real men—the mining boys in the hills.

Your samples were tested with the utmost care and we find: No. 1 is quartz, iron-oxide, "peacock iron" with traces of antimony, bismuth, sulphur, arsenic and selenium. No. 2 is quartz with iron present and the yellow coating here and there throughout the mass is ferrous and ferric iron. No. 3 is iron peroxide (hematite) with iron oxides, sienna present. No. 4—traces of iron oxides, copper, carbonate, sulphur, arsenic, antimony and bismuth. No. 5 is impure gold, impurities copper, antimony, bismuth and selenium.

We find practically nothing to assay for excepting gold.

How you obtained the gold we do not know; this impure gold bullion carries silver also and we believe that the brittleness of the gold is caused by the impurities named and which can be eliminated by refining.

Nickle Not Present.

GAVIOTA, May 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you a specimen of rock and would like you to let me know if it contains nickle, or is it of any value whatsoever?

This specimen was in place and I found it in the northeastern part of Santa Barbara county. By giving me this information I will be thankful to you. Please let me hear from you through "In the Earth."

Yours truly,
A READER.

ANSWER: Your sample is quartztic with chlorite on one side of the mass. Iron oxides present. Nickle not even a trace.

Dumortierite.

LOS ANGELES, May 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Samples were taken from a sort of copper district—Greenwater. They look like copper ore, but assays show goose-eggs.

Please inform me through the "In the Earth" column what the bunch amounts to. Yours truly,
E. C. B.

ANSWER: Sort of copper district! Assays show goose eggs! Huh!

The rock is a silicate of alumina of smalt-blue color and it is named at the sub-heading.

The samples are the most handsome ones we ever saw or tested, but the commercial value of the material, other than as specimens, is nominal.

Silicates.

LOS ANGELES, May 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] As I have been trying to get in touch with your "In the Earth" for a few days and fail, I will leave you a note and three samples on your desk. I would like to know what they are. Samples are from New Mexico.

I would like to talk with you personally.

Yours respectfully,
R. T. E.

ANSWER: It would be a pleasure to "talk with you," but time will not permit personal interviews.

Sample No. 1 is a silicate of lime and magnesia. No. 2, like No. 1, but with more iron oxides present. No. 3 is a low-grade, siliceous talc, with Fuller's earth present.

If you are seeking a low-grade cement mixture, your samples might pass muster—if limestone were near at hand.

Fluor Spar.

PARKER (Ariz.) May 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Locality, four miles from the Colorado River. Name, please.

Yours truly, J. C. T.

Fuller's Earth and Mud.

SANTA ANA, May 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] While doing some work on a mineral spring we came across a stringer of the enclosed sample in the box.

In a spring only a short distance away we have a natural sulphur gas.

Please tell us what it is and if it is an indication of anything of commercial value.

Found in Orange county, at the foot of Mt. Santiago.

Thanking you for past favors, I am, Yours respectfully, E. E. B.

ANSWER: Glad to hear from you. The sample is an inferior grade aluminum silicate (clay,) with carbonaceous matter of no value present.

The sample points to absolutely nothing of value on a commercial scale.

We separate the material as aluminous Fuller's earth, and contaminated with organic matter.

Triboluminescent Quartz.

LOS ANGELES, May 9.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I read with a great deal of interest your reply to the letter from Crescent, Nev., in last Sunday's Times, in which you gave a brief description of sphalerite.

As you have so often rendered us assistance through your valuable column in testing the samples of vanadium ore that we have sent you from Camp Signal, I have decided to call upon you again for help.

Your findings on the above-mentioned ore have since been corroborated by the United States Geological Survey.

Under separate cover I am sending you two pieces of white quartz. You will notice that by rubbing them together (in the dark) that a bright glow is produced.

This glow cannot be produced by scratching with steel, and when the two pieces are rubbed under water the same result is noticed.

On examining the inclosed samples you will notice that the edge of one and the side of the other have been worn smooth, and on rubbing these two surfaces together you will find that the best results are obtained.

This contradicts a statement we received from a party who might be considered an authority, that the glow is produced by the numerous rough edges on the surfaces.

We have shown this phenomenon to mining men from all over the world and no one has ever seen anything just like it, and are unable to give a satisfactory reason for the glow.

If you can help us on this as you have in the past, we will be very much gratified.

Thanking you in advance, I am very respectfully yours. J. F. M.

ANSWER: Uusually flint (quartz) strikes fire when struck with steel.

The samples you submit show the characteristics outlined by you.

Now cometh the good, old chemistry subject before us. We ask of the rock what are you?

Chemical reagents and tests show hydrogen sulphide and a trace of selenium present which, by friction, is glowingly separated from the rock, especially so under water.

Someone may sit erect and assert that the odor is as of sparks from flint and steel, and that during the nascent process of the escaping elements the aroma is far sweeter than that of hydrogen sulphide. Such an assertion is true in fact, but the other fact remains that hydrogen sulphide in the presence of selenium and water gives the same reaction as the sample.

Almandite.

PIUTE, May 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Am mailing you a sample of ore from an immense dike, that I would like to know what it contains of value.

I mailed a sample to a New York purchasing company and they told me they would purchase, at twelve dollars per ton, but did not state what it contained of value; there are several thousand tons in sight and located about twenty miles from the railroad on a good county road.

Will you kindly answer and let me know if you think it has any possibilities of a commercial proposition, or if the purchasing company offered me its market value.

Enclosed please find stamped envelope for reply.

Thanking you in advance.

Yours respectfully, E. E.

ANSWER: We mailed you stamped envelope with information that answer would be made in this column. It is not possible to reply to correspondents with personal letters. When ore samples represent material of more than ordinary interest then personal correspondence is called for. All of this is meant in kindness to correspondents.

We are at a loss to figure out how your altered granite deposit is worth $12 per ton unless it carries gold, and for which element it was not tested.

Almandite (iron-alumina garnet) is present in the rock, and it would be better to concentrate from the mass before shipment. This variety of massive garnet is used as an abrasive.

Sulphates.

YUMA (Ariz.) May 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Found this sample in a lagoon not far from Salton Sea. I take it to be a mixture of nitrates of some kind; however, I refer the stuff to your "In the Earth" department for classification.

Yours truly, G. S.

ANSWER: The sample is impure sodium and aluminum sulphates with iron present. It represents matter of doubtful commercial importance.

Spotted Stuff.

PARKER (Ariz.) May 2.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Would you please "spot" the samples sent you today under separate cover by the writer and greatly oblige a number of "terrapins" interested in section where these rocks occur, which is about twenty miles west of Parker, Ariz.

Yours very truly, P. M.

ANSWER: No. 1 is lime-bearing rock with iron oxides and a bare trace of copper. Might answer for cement mixture.

No. 2 is altered granite with traces of molybdenite, arsenic, antimony, bismuth and sulphur.

No. 2 has, heretofore, been sent to us as "rich in tellurium." We have always been unable to detect tellurium in such rock.

Tin and Platinum Absent.

LOS ANGELES, May 9.—[To the Editor of The Times:] From Rogue River, Oregon, said to carry platinum, osmium, iridium, gold and tin. Horns a native metal.

Yours truly, G. M. F.

ANSWER: For nearly thee years we have been analyzing and testing, at various times, the rock submitted by you.

Analyses have repeatedly been made on similar rock by many of our associates in London, New York City and at Washington, D. C.

We have yet to find any member of the platinum group present.

Carefully tested for tin the result has always been—no tin present.

It is not our desire to have further or other discussion on this "stuff" unless the necessity arises when, rest assured, there will be no difficulty in stating the exact constituents of the rock, notwithstanding the fact that we are not alchemists.

Gem Garnet.

NORRIS (Mont.) May 9.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The sample in this package was found in the sluice box up the Madison River at its intersection with Cherry Creek and about fourteen miles nearly northeast from Norris.

From its peculiar color, and its reflection on a watered mirror, I believe that the gem is more than garnet, and again its hardness is a puzzle to me. Can it be ruby? Thanking you in advance for some information on the gem through the columns of The Times.

Yours very truly, C. W. L.

ANSWER: Refraction, polarization, dichroism, and mineralogical-chemical tests show that the sample is not ruby.

There is no question, however, about the fine gem qualities of the specimen; it is iron-alumina garnet and represents the most handsome variety of any garnet—of its class—in the world.

Her Father's Business.

A wealthy business man of Chicago had married a policeman's daughter. As he became rich, both he and his wife spoke less frequently of the fact the father had been a policeman. Not that they were ashamed of it, but it was just as well not to mention it too often.

One day, Mrs. Dahl had a luncheon at which there were many well-known society women. The conversation drifted to the subject of their fathers' business. After everyone else had told how her father had made his money a guest said:

"And now, Mrs. Dahl, what was your father's business?"

"My father was in the copper business," replied Mrs. Dahl composedly.—[Mack's National Monthly.

Why Panama Government Lands Are the BEST Purchase in the WHOLE WORLD TODAY

They are the most fertile lands on earth.
They have only recently been thrown open to Americans.
They have heretofore been devoid of transit facilities.
They will soon have the markets of the world at their doors.
They can be had on terms which make them virtually a gift—

$2.50 per acre down, and $2.50 in four years with no taxes to pay until completion of title.

The profits from tropical agriculture are almost beyond belief, and 1000 per cent. is not uncommon.

(The United Fruit Company has 20,000 acres in sugar which cost less than $100,000 four years ago. They reported a profit last year exceeding $1,000,000. This year they will have 30,000 acres under cultivation.)

Parts of Panama have a delightful climate, with a mean temperature of 80 degrees, and a variation of never more than 10 degrees on either side.

The rainfall is ample, but not excessive, and so distributed throughout the year as to give the very best results.

Panama has been kept back solely by lack of a stable government and a total absence of transportation facilities. The United States Government is now back of Panama, while transit facilities are near at hand.

Cannot anyone realize that with ships passing through the Canal to almost every point on the globe, that the world's markets will be opened to this region as no other point on earth?

For a man who can anticipate what these great impending changes mean a fortune lies within his grasp.

Unique Spectacle.

CEREMONIES WILL BE IMPRESSIVE.

Message from Pope Through Bishop Conaty.

Great Altar Will Establish Record for Size.

Floats in Subsequent Parade Will Be Gorgeous.

SAN DIEGO, June 10.—The unusual and unique spectacle of the Pope's word being spoken to an immense congregation outside of a Catholic edifice will be witnessed here the morning of July 19. Pontifical high mass will be said by Bishop Conaty before a temporary altar to be 200 feet in width and 100 feet deep.

This ceremony will be a curtain raiser to the beginning of the groundbreaking exercises to mark the first work on the exposition buildings. The celebration of high mass will be preceded by a procession of 200 priests. The procession will be from St. Joseph's Church at Third and Beech streets to the exposition site in Balboa Park, where the altar is to be erected.

Bishop Conaty spent Thursday and Friday here conferring with the heads of the local Catholic societies, which bodies will have charge of these exercises. Bishop Conaty stated he is highly pleased with the reports of progress. While on a recent visit to San Francisco he received encouraging words from the clergy of that city, all of whom are anxious for the success of San Diego's undertaking and the part in which the Catholic societies are to participate.

According to the plans of the Catholic societies, the altar to be used for the pontifical mass will be the largest ever constructed out of doors in the history of California. The ceremony will serve a double purpose. Not only will it be the initiative of the exposition celebration, but, also, it will be a celebration of the one hundred and sixty-eighth anniversary of the founding of the first Franciscan mission in California, that of San Diego, which occurs July 16. The altar will be a replica of the one in the Franciscan church in the City of Mexico, from where the Franciscan fathers sent out to explore California received their instructions.

Following the pontifical mass, there will be a navy and military mass, to be said for the sailors and soldiers who belong to the Catholic Church. The programme will close with the singing of a national hymn by the immense congregation. Bishop Conaty while here inspected progress in the construction of the floats for the mission parade. He expressed both admiration and wonder at the achievement of the sculptors and others engaged in the work.

The real ceremony of the groundbreaking will occur in the afternoon of the same day under the auspices of the board of directors of the exposition. Gov. Johnson has promised to be present to make an address on the significance of San Diego's undertaking.

Preparations for the several parades are being rushed. Maj. H. R. Fay, commanding officer of the local brigade of Coast Artillery, will be grand marshal of all processions scheduled. For the mission parade the Catholic societies have chosen forty captains, who are to have charge of the characters to be represented in connection with the different floats. A captain will have charge of each float, and one for each allegorical or historical grouping. Elaborate decorations for all parades is promised.

SAN DIEGO BOOMING.

Exposition Causes Impetus in Building Progress—Business Property Bringing Good Prices.

SAN DIEGO, June 10.—The approach of Panama Exposition season, dealers and brokers state, is the impetus to the most remarkable era of building activity in San Diego's history. Reports show that more than 6000 men are employed in the various arteries that go to make up the building industry. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are being invested in business blocks, rooming and apartment-houses and in private homes.

The value of permits for the year has grown to almost $2,000,000. H. D. Smith this week started construction of a three-story frame and plaster store and apartment building at Fifth street and University avenue. The dimensions are 50x80 feet, embracing one large storeroom and thirteen apartments. The cost will be $15,000.

Toms & Blair have awarded to Brawner & Hunter a contract to build a two-story building, 50x100 feet, on the east side of Fifteenth street, between J and K, to be used as a factory building. The factory will be equipped with machinery to manufacture a patent gravity hinge. The enterprise represents an investment of $25,000.

A. J. Bradley has begun the erection of a two-story frame residence at Second and Spruce streets to cost $5000. A. G. Belford has begun a cottage on Georgia street between Madison and Adams, to cost $1500. M. R. Roberts has begun the erection of a bungalow on Getti street at the corner of Hooker, to cost $1500.

Charles Holzwasser, late of Los Angeles, has leased for six years the entire Fletcher-Salmons building, 100x100 feet, four stories, which he will use as a department store. Holzwasser bought the bankrupt stock of the Barnett-Stine Company, and will continue the business.

Masons of National City are considering plans for a temple to be erected at the northwest corner of Ninth street and National avenue, where the lodge owns a site, 6?-155 feet. The plan advocated is to erect a two-story building, the second floor to be the lodgeroom. The cost will be about $10,000.

J. O. Foy, a wealthy lumberman of Spokane, this week purchased of J. G. Burne 100x150 feet at the northeast corner of Tenth and B streets, for $25,000. One of the lots contains a seventeen-room apartment-house. Foy contemplates the erection of other buildings.

T. K. Billson, a mining man of Montana, this week bought two valuable lemon ranches in the Lemon Grove district for $25,000. He bought of John Bourgh fifteen acres containing 16-year-old trees for $14,000. He bought of John O'Marr ten acres with 16-year-old trees for $11,000.

N. H. Knefler and Fred Knefler have bought of E. B. Eddy, five acres of fine lemon trees at Sixteenth and K streets, National City, for $12,500. Eddy has bought of Charles Wade a half block of land at the southwest corner of Twenty-fourth street and N avenue, National City, for $1800. Eddy has started a bungalow to cost $2500. The Knefler brothers came from Chicago.

HEREABOUTS.

In one of the back rooms of the Alexandria Hotel during the week past, there has been given a very instructive demonstration of a new cotton gin. It is the first machine built which does not operate with saws in ginning, and the first, therefore, which does not mutilate the fiber. For several months one of these machines was utilized in the Imperial Valley, where all of the crop of one planter was ginned as an experiment. It was successful in every detail and the cotton produced was untorn, the fibres perfect and absolutely free of chopped bits of seed and other waste materials. On this account no further cleaning processes are essential and three or four operations through expensive machinery have been eradicated. The plan of the machine is very simple. Four large steel forks, fitting close to a revolving brush of tightly packed, evenly cut horsehair gradually push the seeds from the cotton while the sticky bristles drop it into the waiting hopper. C. A. Pearce, the inventor of the machine, which is known as the Universal Fiber Gin, first became interested in cotton picking, ginning and spinning in India. He worked more than thirty years in perfecting his machine, and it is to further demonstrate its usefulness to the cotton growers of the Southwest that it is shown. Of the cotton industry, Pearce declares there has been a great waste in the past. "This has been due to the gins used," he said yesterday. "If the gin is to assume its legitimate position in the industry, it must furnish the spinner with sound staple and cease to convert into waste large quantities of commercial articles, changes as radical as those which have come over the spinning, precaring and weaving machinery in the past. At an address before the New England Cotton Manufacturers' Association, one of the principal speakers stated that three-quarters of the life of the cotton is taken out of it in the murderous methods of ginning. "We nearly wear it out before we begin to weave it," he said. "Last year the cotton crop of the world, including the seed, exceeded $900,000,000, which when reaching the spinner was subject to losses of 25 to 35 per cent. because of the faulty ginning. The new gin presents many valuable aspects. It delivers uninjured cotton fiber, more cotton, uninjured seeds, immunity from fires, from personal injury and other details worth while. It is the fight for introduction that we are looking after now. Wherever we can get an interested audience to inspect its work we are sure of it becoming a factor in the business."

The great land areas around Yuma are rapidly becoming very valuable property by reason of the fast strides of irrigation. J. H. Maxey, one of the chief contractors of that district, who has been staying at the Lankershim a few days, is building a large number of canals which will carry the water from the new Yuma dam far to the interior of the district. "There are a large number of private companies in the field, and many of these have big capital behind them with which the projects of irrigation will be pushed," he said. "Several of the companies will have eastern representatives, and one of them will have two representatives in Europe demonstrating the value of irrigated lands in Arizona. This will soon bring a high class of farmers to the district, and will help greatly to build up the wonderful Southwest, of which we are all proud. Maxey has just closed a large grading contract in this city, and will soon have several carloads of equipment and horses in Los Angeles.

Capt. A. C. Ducrot of London, who is a guest at the Alexandria, will leave soon for Europe, where he expects to go on a lecture tour on the beauties of California. He has been the California representative of an English mining syndicate for nearly a year, and has familiarized himself with every portion of the Southwest. One of the things which he will chiefly lecture on will be the coming expositions at San Francisco and San Diego. "These should be real aquatic events, at least the one at San Francisco," he declared, for the reason that the great exposition is in honor of a maritime opening. "The promoters of the big exposition and the officers are not yet certain whether they will erect their magnificent buildings in Golden Gate Park or in the harbor, where much improvement that is needed could be accomplished at the same time. As soon as this is decided, I shall leave for Europe and will carry on a series of lectures to attract a high class of tourists, as well as to send to this section immigrants of the best type, people who have some means, and will be an upbuilding of the country."

GIANTS STILL LIVE.

Two Men In British Army Nearly Seven Feet Tall—Others Over Eight Feet Tall.

The distinction of being the tallest man in the British army belongs to Private H. Barter, who has just joined the First Battalion Grenadier Guards. Barter, who is only 18 years of age, stands 6 feet 8¼ inches in his stockings, and is still growing, says Tit-Bits. Barter thus beats Maj. Oswal Ames of the Second Life Guards, who reaches the height of 6 feet 7½ inches, and who formerly had the record of the British army by three-fourths of an inch.

They are both dwarfs, however, compared with Loushkin, the Russian giant, who was no less than 8 feet 5 inches in height, and who at one time was a drum major of the Imperial Regiment of the Russian Guards, and served in the wars of Circassia with such distinction as to obtain three medals. A model of Loushkin was exhibited for a number of years at Mme. Tussaud's exhibition.

Mention of Machnow recalls Miss Mariedl, the Tyrolese giantess, who appeared at the Hippodrome in 1907, and who stood 8 feet 3 inches high. She was 23 years of age, and her physical attractions were such that while appearing at the Hippodrome, she received a proposal of marriage from a Mr. Darral, the son of a wealthy Australian farmer, who stood no less than 8 feet 8 inches high in his boots, and was broad in proportion. Mr. Darral was reported to have two sisters in Australia, each of whom was 7 feet 6 inches in height, while his father, one of the tallest men in Australia, stood 8 feet 6 inches in his socks.

EORGE W. CABLE, THE NOTED NOVELIST, the Surrender of New Orleans, at the Age of Fifteen Be-of the Fourth Mississippi and Fought Through the Rest of the War.

The orders were given in French; the manual was French; the movements were quick, short, nervy. Their "about march" was four sharp stamps of their neatly shod feet—un, deux, trois, quatre—that brought them face about and sent them back tramp, tramp, tramp, over the smooth white pavement of powdered oyster shells. Ah, the nakedness of that once crowded and roaring mart!

And there was a "foreign legion." of course, the city had always been full of foreigners; but now it was a subject of amazement, not unmixed with satire, to see how many whom every one had supposed to be Americans or "citizens of Louisiana" bloomed out as British, or French, or Spanish subjects. But, even so, the tremendous pressure of popular sentiment crowded them into the ranks and forced them to make every show of readiness to "hurl back the foe," as we used to call it. And they really served for much. Merely as a gendarmerie they relieved just so many Confederate soldiers of police duty in a city under martial law, and enabled them to man forts and breastworks at short notice whenever that call should come.

That call, the gray heads knew, was coming. They confessed the conviction softly to one another in the counting-room and the store fronts when they thought no one was listening. I used to hear them—standing with my back turned, pretending to be looking at something down street, but with both ears turned backward and stretched wide. They said under their breath that there was not a single measure of defense that was not behindhand. And they spoke truly. In family councils a new domestic art began to be studied and discussed—the art of hiding valuables.

A Great Silence Upon Trade.

There had come a great silence upon trade. Long ago the custom warehouses had begun to show first a growing roominess, then emptiness, and then had remained shut, and the iron bolts and crossbars of their doors were gray with cobwebs. One of them, in which I had earned my first wages as a self-supporting lad, had been turned into a sword-bayonet factory, and I had been turned out.

For some time later the Levee had kept busy; but its stir and noise had gradually declined, faltered, turned into the commerce of war and the clatter of calkers and ship carpenters, and faded out. Both receipts and orders from the interior country had shrunk and shrunk, and the brave, steady fellows, who at entry and shipping and cash account desks could no longer keep a show of occupation, had laid down the pen, taken up the sword and musket, and followed after the earlier and more eager volunteers.

There had been one new, tremendous sport for moneyed men for a while, with spoils to make it interesting. The sea-going tow boats of New Orleans were long, slender, sidewheelers, all naked power and speed, without either freight or passenger room, each with a single tall, slim chimney and hurrying walking beam, their low, taper hulls trailing behind scarcely above the water, and perpetually drenched with the yeast of the wheels. Some merchants of the more audacious sort, restless under the strange new quiet of Tchoupitoulas street, had got letters of mark and reprisal, and let slip these sharp-nosed deerhounds upon the tardy, unsuspecting ships that came sailing up the Passes unaware of the declaration of war.

But that game, too, was up. The blockade had closed in like a prison gate. The lighter tow boats, draped with tarpaulins, were huddled together under Slaughterhouse Point, with their cold boilers and motionless machinery yielding to rust. The more powerful ones had been moored at the long wharf vacated by Morgan's Texas steamships; there had been a great hammering, and making of chips and clatter of railroad iron, turning these tow boats into ironclad cotton gunboats, and these had crawled away, some up and some down the river, to be seen in that harbor no more. At length only the foundries, the drydocks across the river, and the shipyards in suburb Jefferson, where the great ram Mississippi was being too slowly built, were active, and the queen of southern commerce, the city that had once believed it was to be the greatest in the world, was absolutely out of employment.

Speculating in Food.

There was, true, some movement of the sugar and rice crops into the hands of merchants who had advanced money to grow them; and the cotton presses and cotton yards were full of cotton, but there it all stuck; and when one counts in a feeble exchange of city for country supplies, there was nothing more. Except—yes—that the merchants had turned upon each other, and were now engaged in a mere passing back and forth among themselves in speculation the daily diminishing supply of goods and food. Some were too noble to take part in this, and dealt only with consumers. I remember one odd little old man, an extensive wholesale grocer, who used to get tipsy all by himself every day, and go home so, but who would not speculate in the food of a distressed city. He had not got down to that.

Gold and silver had long ago disappeared. Confederate money was the currency; and not merely was the price of food and raiment rising, but the value of the money was going down. The State, too, had a paper issue, and the city had another. Yet with all these there was first a famine of small change, and then a deluge of "shinplasters."

Pah! What a mess it was! The boss butchers and the keepers of drinking-houses actually took the lead in issuing "money." The current joke was that you could pass the label of an olive oil bottle, because it was greasy, smelt bad and bore an autograph—Plagniol Freres, if I remember rightly. I did my first work as a cashier in those days, and I can remember the smell of my cash drawer.

Instead of 5-cent pieces, we had car tickets. How the grimy little things used to stick together. They would pass and pass until they were so soft and illegible with grocers' and butchers' handling that you could tell only by some faint show of their original color what company had issued them. Rogues did a lively business in "split tickets," literally splitting them and making one ticket serve for two.

A City in Decay.

Decay had come in. In that warm, moist climate it is always hungry, and wherever it is allowed to feed, eats with a greed that is strange to see. With the wharves, always expensive and difficult to maintain, it made havoc. The occasional idle, weather-stained ship moored beside them, and resting on the water almost as light and void as an empty peapod, could hardly find a place to fasten to. The streets fell into sad neglect, but the litter of commerce was not in them, and some of their round-stone pavements after a shower would have the melancholy cleanness of weather-bleached bones.

How quiet and lonely the harbor grew. The big drydocks against the farther shore were all empty. Now and then a tug fussed about, with the yellow river all to itself, and one or two steamboats came and went each day, but they moved drowsily, and, across on the other side of the river, a whole fleet of their dingy white sisters laid tied up to the bank, sine die. My favorite of all the sea steamers, the little Habana, that had been wont to arrive twice a month from Cuba, disgorge her Spanish-American cargo, and bustle away again, and that I had watched the shipwrights, at their very elbows, raze and fit with three big, raking masts in place of her two small ones, had long ago slipped down the river and through the blockaders, and was now no longer the Habana, but the far-famed and dreaded Sumter (one of the first of the Confederate privateers to win a name for herself by her daring on the high seas.)

The movements of military and naval defense lent some stir. The old revenue cutter Washington, a graceful craft, all wings, no steam, came and went from the foot of Canal street. She was lying there when Farragut's topmasts hove in sight across the low land at English Turn.

Near-by, on her starboard side, lay a gunboat, moored near the spot where the "lower coast" packet landed daily, to which spot the crowd used to rush sometimes to see the major-general, Mansfield Lovell (commander of Confederate department No. 1, with headquarters at New Orleans,) ride aboard, bound down the river to the forts (Jackson and St. Philip, which guarded the approach to the city from the gulf.) Lovell was a lithe, brown-haired man of forty odd, a very attractive figure, giving the eye, at first glance, a promise of much activity. He was a showy horseman, visibly fond of his horse. He rode with so long a stirrup-leather that he simply stood astride the saddle, as straight as a spear, and the idlers of the landing loved to see him keep the saddle and pass from the wharf to the steamboat's deck on her long, narrow stage plank without dismounting.

A City No Longer Glad.

Such petty breaks in the dreariness got to be scarce and precious toward the last. Not that the town seemed so desolate then as it does now, as one tells of it, but the times were grim. Opposite the rear of the store where I was now employed—for it fronted on Common street and stretched through to Canal street—the huge, unfinished customhouse reared its lofty granite walls, and I used to go up to its top now and then to cast my eye over the broad city and harbor below. When I did so, I looked down upon a town that had never been really glad again, after that awful day of Shiloh (April 9-10, 1862.)

She had sent so many gallant fellows to help Beauregard, and some of them so young—her last gleaning—that when, on the day of their departure, they marched with solid column and firm-set, unsmiling mouths down the long, gray lane made by the open ranks of those old Confederate guards, and their escort broke into cheers and tears, and wover their gray shakos on the tops of their bayonets, and seized the dear lads' hands as they passed in mute self-devotion and steady tread, while the trumpets sang "Listen to the Mockingbird," that was the last time; the town never cheered with elation afterward, and when the people next uncovered it was in silence, to let the body of Albert Sidney Johnstone, their great chevalier, pass slowly up St. Charles street behind the muffled drums, while on their hearts was written as with a knife the death-roll of that lost battle. One of those—a former schoolmate of mine—who had brought that precious body, walked beside the bier, with the stains of camp and battle on him from head to foot. The war was coming very near.

Many of the town's old forms and habits of peace held fast. The city, I have said, was under martial law; yet the city management still went through its old routines. The volunteer fire department was as voluntary and redundantly riotous as ever. The Police Courts, too, were as cheerful as of old. The public schools had merely substituted "Dixie," the "Marseillaise," and the "Bonnie Blue Flag" for "Hail Columbia" and the "Star Spangled Banner," and were running straight along. There was one thing besides, of which many of us knew nothing at the time—a system of espionage, secret, diligent, and fierce, that marked down every man suspected of sympathy with the enemy in a book whose name was too vile to find place on any page. This was not the military secret service—that is to be expected wherever there is war—nor any authorized police, but the scheme of some of the worst of the villians who had ruled New Orleans—the "Thugs."

Just Before the Capture.

But the public mind was at a transparent heat. Everybody wanted to know everybody else, "Why don't you go to the front?" Even the gentle maidens demanded tartly, one of another, why their brothers or lovers had not gone long ago, though, in truth, the laggards were few indeed.

The very children were fierce. For now even we, the uninformed, the lads and women, knew the enemy was closing down upon us. Of course, we confronted the fact very valorously, we boys and mothers and sisters—and the newspapers. Had we not inspected the fortifications ourselves? Was not every man in town ready to rush into them at the twelve taps of the fire alarm bell? Were we not ready to man them if the men gave out? Nothing afloat could pass the forts. Nothing that walked could get through our swamps. The Mississippi—and, in fact, she was a majestically terrible structure, only let us complete her—would sweep the river clean!

But there was little laughter. Food was dear; the destitute poor were multiplying terribly; the market men and women, mainly Germans, Gascon-French and Sicilians, had lately refused to take the shinplaster currency, and the city authorities had forced them to accept it. There was little to laugh at. The Mississippi was gnawing its levees and threatening to plunge in upon us. The city was believed to be full of spies.

The Day of Terror.

I shall not try to describe the day the alarm bells told us the city was in danger and called every man to his mustering point. The children poured out from the school gates and ran crying to their homes, meeting their sobbing mothers at their thresholds. The men fell into ranks. I was left entirely alone in charge of the store in which I was employed. Late in the afternoon, receiving orders to close it, I did so, and went home.

But I did not stay. I went to the riverside. There until far into the night I saw hundreds of drays carrying cotton out of the presses and yards to the wharves, where it was fired. The glare of those sinuous miles of flame set men and women weeping and wailing thirty miles away on the farther shore of Lake Pontchartrain.

But the next day (that of the passage of Forts Jackson and St. Philip by Farragut's fleet, leaving New Orleans at its mercy,) was the day of terrors. During the night fear, wrath, and sense of betrayal had run through the people as the fire had run through the cotton. You have seen, perhaps, a family fleeing with lamentations and wringing of hands out of a burning house; multiply it by thousands upon thousands; that was New Orleans, though the houses were not burning. The firemen were out; but they cast fire on the waters, putting the torch to the empty ships, and cutting them loose to float down the river.

Whoever could was going. The

NEW TOWNSITE FORGES AHEAD.

Van Nuys Becoming Important Urban Center.

The rapid and substantial development of the new townsite of Van Nuys in the San Fernando Valley is one of the sensations of Southern California real estate circles. Here where a year ago the harvesters were removing the last of the great crops of the old Lankershim and Van Nuys ranches, is being established an urban community that bids fair to rank with the best of the suburban places near Los Angeles.

The two factors that have contributed the most to the recent spurt of Van Nuys are the laying of the magnificent $500,000 boulevard system that is being completed for the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company through the heart of the valley, and the construction of the double track, rock-ballasted electric railway through the same rich section. With unsurpassed communication to Los Angeles established, the advance of the new townsite has been certain and rapid.

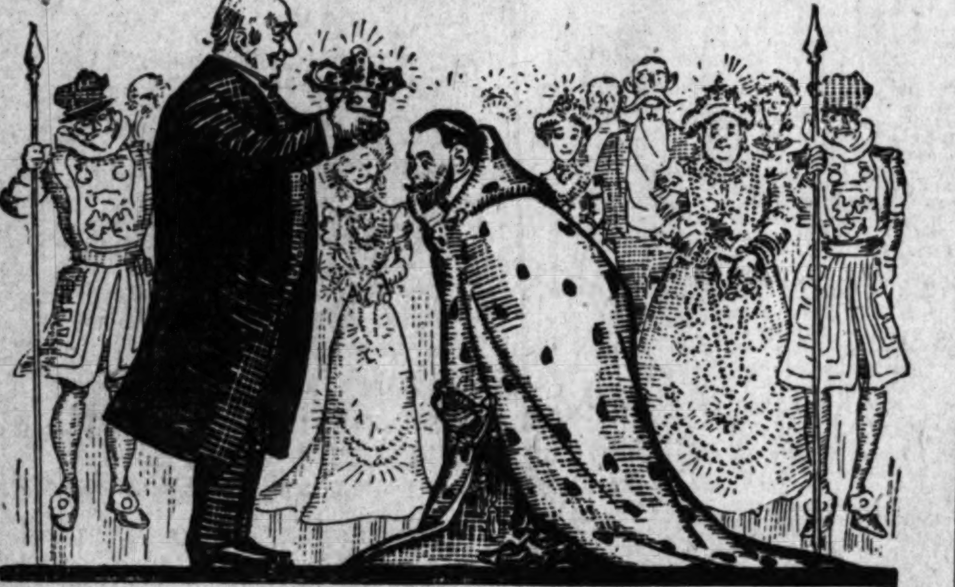
COLONEL CROWE OF CRIPPLE CREEK.

BY WALLACE IRWIN.

COLONEL PORTRAYS FORTHCOMING CORONATION.



"George," he says, holding up the crown, "this little trinket is for a good boy. When you wear it, you will be a King and very little else."

"WHATS the good o' this here coronation business anyhow?" asked Sandow Jones, the timid bandit, looking up from the Foreign Page in the Sunday paper.

"Well," said Col. Crowe, "there ain't no greater stimulant to the hotel business than coronations—'ceptin' maybe prize fights. I was to the coronation o' Jim Jeffries up to Reno recently, and I remember payin' $150 a night for the privilege o' sleeping in a box car with my feet stickin' out into the Nevada climate and my head on the chest of a sportin' character who smelled of onions and snored in the German language. Durin' royal celebrations folks ain't re-sponsible for what they charge the traveler for the discomforts o' life. So I ain't a-goin' to take no chances on London, this time. I ain't got the least objection to coronations, when took in moderation. George is a good boy, as Georges go—God blezzim!—and they're welcome to give him the official shampoo and clap the di'mond weddin' cake on his kingly brow while a thousand earls in plush pants and onyx hosiery yell 'Belt 'im proper!'—but they got to git along without any help from me."

"Maybe you ain't been asked," suggested little Sandow maliciously.

"It's darn lucky I wasn't," said Col. Crowe. "How could I go when I ain't got a dress suit?"

"King-worship is running very high over there," I commented.

"Especially high for Americans," said the colonel. "When leaders o' Noo York sassiety are payin' $2000 a night for a hall bedroom with only enough bureau space to keep $75,000,000 worth o' joolry in; and when the rarest cream-puffs o' Newport are orderin' special diamond tiararas in the hopes o' bein' mistook for queens when they appear at the King's Butler's Postillion's Social Charity Barn Dance—well, it kind o' sort o' seems to me it would be cheaper if we had a coronation all our own and kept the money in the country."

"Ain't the English people a-payin' for their coronation?" asked Sandow.

"What a question," snorted the Colorado giant. "D' you think an Englishman would be caught payin' for anythin' as long as there was an American around? It's my cheap but ostentatious opinion that the whole blow-out was started by the hotels and boardin'-houses of dull Merrie England. Prob'ly Treasurer Lloyd George went around to Manager Asquith and says, 'Herb,' says he, 'it's a-goin' to be an awful hard year for the rich. That there Budget is beginnin' to act powerful expensive and we got to have a war with Germany before next election.' 'Let's raise the Tariff,' says Herb Asquith, borrowin' the phrase from Senator Aldrich. 'You might work that old bunko in the United States, but not here,' says Dave. 'I'll give it up. What do you propose,' says Herb. 'Let's have a coronation,' says Dave with that wonderful originality which has endeared him to all classes. 'It won't cost us a bean and it pays better 'n' a World's Fair. We got all the materials—a cathedral, a king, a perfectly good second-hand crown, two or three trained archbishops and a coronation robe modeled after the one wore by the late Richard Mansfield.' 'But the display features of the show 'll come to considerable some money,' says the cautious Asquith. 'Shucks!' says Dave, 'we can always depend on the American Duchesses to furnish vulgar ostentation.'

"So the plan is took up by the Mayor and Board o' Works and a fine invitation card is got out all covered with gold initials and coats-of-arms, so 's to please American trade. This is how it goes:"

The colonel sketched the following display, with a stubby pencil on the back of an envelope:

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE FIFTH

will give an

CORONATION

At Westminster Episcopal Church

(near Parliament Bldg)

Somgtime during June 22nd, 1911

Invitations Difficult
Barbarous Magnificence Required

"I suppose lots of Americans will get them there invitations," said Sandow Jones rather enviously.

"That's jest about what a mosquito's brain like yourn would suppose," said Col. Crowe, "but the facts is different. The honest but greedy managers fully realize that the thing you'll go the farthest to see is the thing you can't git into. You've seen crowds stand all day in front of a tenement building just because there's been an I-talian murder inside and police is blockin' the door. Curiosity has killed lots o' cats and saved lots o' kings. If everybody was invited to that there Coronation it would be as dull as any other political convention. But it's the crowd outside of Westminster Abbey that's goin' to make that crown-fittin' contest a riot o' color and spend enough money to pay off England's National Debt."

"How 've they got the nerve to keep Americans out?" asked Sandow.

"They got a set o' very hard rules," said Col. Crowe. "In the first place a gent ain't allowed to come unless he's got a lady with him what he can prove is his wife. Then no female is permitted to wear less than a million dollars' worth o' genu-wine jools and look like a lady while doin' it. Then she mustn't be addicted to divorces or hobble skirts. You savvy the double-cross in them there rules? A lady who wears $1,000,000 worth o' jools habitual yet has never been divorced is pretty mighty scarce, even in Milwaukee.

"Then they are goin' to measure ladies by the gallon, too, before they can enter Westminster Abbey on the 22nd. To pass the mark she's got to average two gallons: Three quarts di'monds, two quarts pearls, quart 'n' a half o' rubies and enough mixed heirlooms, bangles and pendiums to fill up the balance. I dunno how this rule 's goin' to be enforced, but I suppose the Lord Chamberlain 'll stand at the carriage entrance with a milk can to see that nobody's short. Maybe a few proud but poor Norman families 'll be a little trifle shy, but I bet every one o' the American duchesses 'll give 'em full measure and flowin' over.

"I read in the paper this mornin' how the Duchess o' Cincinnatti was goin' to appear in a skirt o' Hope di'monds with a court train o' pearls embroidered with emeralds to represent scenes from Irish history. Her waist, what there is of it, will be made o' rubies with a ruffle o' thousand dollar bills around the neck. Her ears 'll be hung with paperweights o' rubies and she will wear a tiarara set with the crown jools of the late King o' Siam. About the time the jooler had finished makin' this dress it seems 'Er Grace's grandmother, Mrs. Mulholly, made 'er a present of seventy-five perfect sapphires which was handed down to her from King Solomon. Now the Duchess—goblezzir!—is in a awful puzzle. She's got to wear them sapphires out of respect for 'er grandmother and King Solomon—but where 's she got room to wear 'em? Dunno. Guess they'll have to build an extension on the Duchess."

"What's a Coronation like?" asked Sandow.

"You've seen baseball games, ain't you?" enquired the Colonel.

"Bet I have," said Sandow.

"Well, a Coronation's the least like a baseball game of anything you can imagine. It's more like a circus procession follered by a Mystic Shriners' initiation. And yet it'se got a certain charm that's all its own.

"Early in the mornin' London is all astir. Mounted policemen are chargin' back and forth droppin' their h's and pickin' 'em up again without even dismountin' from their fiery steeds. The simple householders o' London are hard at work raisin' British flags and hikin' the room-rent on American tourists. All along the line o' march from the Royal Palace to Westminster Abbey the streets are lined with red, white and blue buntin' just to remind the generous tourists that Broadway isn't the only place where you can blow your wages and git nothin' much to show for it. The quaint pavements, worn with the footprints of Milton and Darwin and Christopher Columbus, now echo to the tread of American tourists. They occupy the windows and seats and grand stands and sing anthems by Alfred Austin. But where are the Royal subjects of King George? They are in the background, thank you, carefully countin' the gross profits for the week.

"Suddenly the Life Guards Cavalry Band, playin' 'Dixie' and 'My Money Lies Over the Ocean, (the latter tune out o' respect for the American heiresses,) swings into view. Next comes John Hays Hammond and Whitelaw Reid follered by the King of England and other notorieties. There is a deafenin' cry of 'God Save the King!' but from the general Chicago accent mixed up in the yell, nobody seems quite sure whether they mean George Fifth or Jack Hammond. Anyhow George and Jack take off their tiles at 'bout the same time. Then a few mixed kings and emperers pass unnoticed, and the procession is over. That there five minutes of excitement has cost some Americans a thousand dollars a minute—showin' that Coronation is a more expensive game than Faro with less chance o' shootin' the dealer.

"The next scene of the drama opens in Westminster Abbey. The dim cathedral aisles of that grand old edifice are now lit up by something which looks like an Edison electric display, but later turns out to be merely the duchesses settin' together in the midst o' their jools. One or two elderly peeresses is standin' up, because solid di'mond skirts ain't suitable for settin' postures.

"Pretty soon the stage door opens and the Archbishop o' Canterbury walks in. A pause. Then Mr. and Mrs. George Five sasshay up to their seats on the platform.

"Mrs. George is disguised as the Queen o' Di'monds, but George is more millinary in his appearance. He wears a pink op'ra cloak cut empire style with sheer foulard at neck and sleeves, box pleating, eyelet embroidery and panels of real Irish lace over brocade. (Tell me, Sandow, if I'm wrong.)

"The audience gits right excited when they see the King. Ain't that jest like an Englishman? They've known for six or eight months that George would be here at the proper time, more anxious n' anybody to git his crown; yet they act surprised and elated when he shows up. An intense silence falls. Nothin' is heard but the sputter of the movin' picture machines in the gallery.

"Five or six heralds disguised as chorus girls step forth and holler, 'Hail!' So the audience hails accordin' to orders. A sort o' spieler, called the Master Dromedary, jumps up and yells, 'Does anybody object to this here King?' But nobody seems to have nerve enough to kick. So the game goes on.

"In some ways a coronation is like a dressmakers' convention. There seems to be an awful lot o' takin' and tryin' on before they're satisfied. First the King shells off his op'ra coat, and they slip on a solid silk night shirt with fringe around the edge. So far so natural. Then they cover him with a golden bedquilt with a hole for his head to go through. Then, regardless of the June weather, they fetch out an ermine auto-coat cut kind o' large around the collar. Onto George she goes. And then comes the crown. This piece o' hardware is bore on a velvet stretcher by four infant Dooks who will prob'ly never do another lick o' work till the day they die.

"The Archbishop o' Canterbury now makes a few remarks:

"'George,' he says, holdin' up the crown, 'this little trinket is for a good boy. When you wear this you will be King and very little else. I'll tell you what 'll be expected of you from now on. You will have the privilege of openin' Parliament, but not expressin' any opinion worth actin' on. You can set in the throne, but you must leave the real rulin' to Lloyd George. You are entitled to as many children as you want, you can dress ten years behind the styles and you needn't go to the Ascot races unless you feel like it. By wearin' this crown you inherit the usual Divine Right; to look perfectly blank, to ride in a gold hack and keep your mouth shut in times of public excitement. Now put your head a little to one side, and let's try on the bonnet.'

"A minute later the King stands forth with the crown on his head. It fits kind o' loose over his bump of sagacity, but he is too fussed up to object. A scene o' royal rejoicin' begins at once. A cannon is shot off outside and a million American tourists yell 'Long live the King!' the way they learned to do by readin' the works of Anthony Hope.

"After that the Queen gits hers. They give her the same treatment as they did the King, only when they put on the crown her loyal subjects so far forgit themselves as to yell, 'Votes for Women!' Then the show busts up with a grand circus parade, led by the King and Queen and Jack Hammond, each bowin' to his or her delighted subjects. But the American Duchesses, all surrounded by corps and platoons of Pinkerton detectives and insurance agents, hurry home to lock 'emselves where they belong—in safe deposit vaults."

Col. Crowe struck a red-headed match on the sole of his boot.

"They give a King a mighty fine send-off, don't they?" commented Sandow Jones.

"A King at a coronation is like the corpse at a Mexican funeral," said Col. Crowe. "They make an awful fuss over him at the time, but that's about the last 'y ever hear of him."

LINCOLN AND SMART-WEED.

During an address delivered to the old soldiers on Memorial Day, in Whittier, Rev. Charles Cohe Woods related the following:

"My grandfather, John Bransom, lived in a small village, ten miles west of Springfield, Ill. At the time Abe Lincoln was a surveyor, and we had the honor of having for a boarder the future President. One day while at his work he noticed two men, a large and a small one, who had been lounging around the village postoffice, had got into a fight and the large man was on top. Lincoln went on with his surveying, but glanced occasionally in the direction of the fighters, the large man still on top. When he could stand it no longer he called to another lounger saying, 'Why don't some of you men go and separate those fellows? Don't you see the little fellow is getting the worst of it?' Not a man made a move to interfere. Finally, Abe could stand it no more. He laid down his surveyor's instruments, walked over, with that long, peculiar stride of his, grasped the big fellow by the seat of his trousers with one hand and his shirt collar with the other, throwing him to one side; then planting one knee on his breast, he pulled up a handful of smart-weed (and Illinois smart-weed smarts) and rubbed it under his nose and around his eyes in a vigorous manner, then deliberately walked back to his work, leaving the big ruffian with plenty to do."

A Penguin as a Pet.

I outbid a friend for a penguin, which became an interesting pet. The friend wanted the bird for its skin. On board ship the bird soon got accustomed to its surroundings, and found that the cook was one to keep on good terms with, and it haunted the galley, getting many titbits.

It was always in attendance when the market boat came alongside in the morning, and followed the steward as he carried the day's provisions aft. Strange to say, it developed a great liking for lettuce, although its natural food is fish, and another curious trait was that it would never pick up food from the deck or out of water, but would always take it ravenously from the hand. It behaved like a child, and would make a whining noise.—[The Scotsman.

But we want to impress firmly upon your mind the fact that in this development, where lots are selling for only $375, the improvements are not only numerous but they have been made with due regard for their long life. The cement sidewalks have been put in WELL, not hurriedly. The streets have been WELL graded and are THOROUGHLY oiled. The water supply furnishes an ABUNDANCE of pure, soft mountain water. The electricity and gas connections will give SATISFACTION to residents in the tract.

In other words, we will not only sell you a big, fifty-foot lot in Los Angeles' most attractive and rapidly growing suburb, at a phenomenally low price and on remarkably easy terms; but we will take care, by the nature of the improvements that we have made, and the wise restrictions that we shall enforce, to insure your getting the utmost possible pleasure out of your home there.

GOOD ROADS NATIONAL CONVENTION DRAWS BIG PEOPLE TO ITS SESSIONS.

THE national convention in the aid of improved highways is to be held at Richmond, Va. This will be the first annual congress under the auspices of the American Association for Highway Improvement, which was organized in Washington in November, 1910, to stimulate interest in the good road movement along practical lines.

The organization of this association was due to the informal meeting of highway commissioners and automobile officials held by the Touring Club of America in New York City soon after the International Good Roads Congress in Brussels. The Touring Club agreed that the time was ripe to form a national association in America, which would do for the roads of this country what the congress is able to do abroad, and the success of the American Association for Highway Improvement has justified the wisdom of the movement.

This coming convention will mark the greatest assemblage in the interest of good roads ever held in the United States. Farmers, business men, highway officials, railroad men, engineers, automobile users, manufacturers of road machinery and, in fact, men in all classes of work, have signified their intention to take part in the congress. Many automobile tours are being planned under the auspices of the Touring Club with Richmond as the objective point.

During the week of the convention many trips will be made to the Virginia capital from New York, Boston, Chicago, Atlanta, New Orleans, St. Louis and many other places. Through the influence of the association, farmers, railroad men and automobilists are working in harmony with the United States government to give this country an adequate system of improved highways.

Among the organizers and those who are preparing the programme for the forthcoming event are, besides President Page, W. C. Brown, president of the New York Central lines; Lee McClung, Treasurer of the United States; Louis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railway Company; W. W. Finley, president of the Southern Railway; J. E. Pennypacker, Jr., secretary of the association; B. F. Yoakum, chairman of the 'Frisco lines; Dr. E. J. James, president of the University of Illinois; James McCrea, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; Bryan Lathrop, Lincoln Park Commission, Chicago; Leonard Tufts, president Capital Highway Association; James S. Harlan, Interstate Commerce Commission, and Lafayette Young, former United States Senator from Iowa.

President Taft has been invited to attend the coming convention. The President takes a deep interest in the aim of the association, and in a letter recently received from him by Logan Waller Page, president of the American association, he says:

"I am much interested in the work of the American Association for Highway Improvement, and I am in full accord with its aims and purposes. I consider the lines on which the association is working to be thoroughly sound, and with such men as you have associated with you much should be done to better the conditions of the public roads."

The Newest Mineral.

Natramblygonite, the world's newest mineral, which was discovered on the Royal Gorge high drive by Prof. Waldmar T. Schellar of the United States Geological Survey during a recent visit, is in demand by universities, museums and scientists generally where at present its only value is that of a curiosity. It is a soda amblygonite, or a hydroflue-phosphate of alumina and soda, with the soda in part replaced by lithia, according to exhaustive tests made at Washington.

The new mineral is found in combination with tourmaline, muscovite, feldspar and quartz. Its specific gravity is 3.04; hardness, 5.5; luster, vitreous; color, grayish-white, while under the microscope it is translucent.

So far as known at the United States Geological Survey the mineral is not found anywhere else. It is believed to have a value in the arts and interest awaits discovery as to its use.—[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

NEVADA CITY IS NAMED AFTER CAR

NATIONAL CAR CAPTURES THE IMPORTANT HONOR ROLL.

Prospector Starts Out After Gold in Stylish Car and Comes Back With Purse Full of Money and With Regard in His Heart for Car That Made Him Famous.

Many motor cars have been named after cities, but only one city has ever been named after a motor car. That one place is National City, Nev., named in honor of the National motor car.

This fact came to light on a recent trip of T. R. de Quelin into the desert country. He met the man who discovered the site where the town is now located and rode in the National car with which the town was discovered.

James Workman is the founder of National City, and he still lives there and can be seen daily driving about in his faithful National touring car.

Workman was a prospector of the most up-to-date-kind. When he started out after gold and silver he started fully supplied with everything a prospector might need. In the tonneau of his machine he had a camping outfit and gasoline to last for weeks. It was on one of these trips in the early part of 1907 that he discovered the deposits to which he gave the name of the National district. He had been out for two weeks on the trip, and the car had been doing wonders. Through the sand and over mountains where there was nothing resembling a road the car had been carrying the prospecter. Many times he had stopped and done his work, but the trip was not proving a very successful one, no pay dirt was being turned up.

Investigation showed that there were still three five-gallon cans of gasoline which had not been emptied and after studying his location and figuring just how far he could go and then get back to the nearest town, he started for a distant mountain.

Wolfskill, his brother-in-law, is no chicken, having been born near where the Arcade Depot stands, sixty odd years ago. He used to supply San Francisco with oranges in the days before there were railroads south of San Jose, but of late years has conducted a place for the sale of flowers.

A fine old gentleman, half a century ago, was Rabbi Newmark, who was the first rabbi in Los Angeles; and he had a fine old lady as a helpmate. These two had four daughters and one son—all fine looking. S. Lazard, who was one of the owners of the original Ville de Paris, forty odd years ago, married one of the daughters, and M. Kremer, the City Assessor of the time, married another. Harris Newmark—since the time of his marriage with the third—a wholesale grocer on Los Angeles street—took another, and then Eugene Meyer, a partner of Mr. Lazard, took Harriet, the fourth, one of the prettiest young women I have ever seen. I was present at the wedding forty-two years ago, and remember how handsome, both bride and groom looked. Eugene is President of Lazard Freres Bank in New York. Harris Newmark and Mr. Lazard are retired merchants, and Mr. Kremer died in this city about three years ago.

Henry Hamilton, who came to Los Angeles in 1868, from San Francisco, and from Ireland in 1856, was a most agreeable and upright person, but he had something of an up-and-down career. It has been supposed by many that Hamilton established the Los Angeles Star. But this is not the fact. The Weekly Star (La Estrella) was established by a man named Theodore Foster in 1851, but in a short time afterward became the property of William R. Rand, who, in 1853, sold it to a man named James M. Lewis, who, in 1854, sold it to J. S. Waite & Company. It changed hands twice afterward, and in 1859, became the property of Hamilton. In 1861 Hamilton made the Star a red hot secession organ, and early in 1862, the paper (and all its belongings) was seized by the Federal authorities and taken to Wilmington, and Hamilton was sent to Alcatraz Island. But in a few months he was liberated, on condition that he quit the country, which he did, in company with James J. Ayers, long and favorably known in Los Angeles as a one-time owner and editor of the Express. The two exiled themselves in Honolulu until the close of the Civil War, and for a time after their return set type and wrote editorials in San Francisco. In 1866 Hamilton returned to Southern California and for about three years published a weekly paper in San Bernardino, called the Guardian; and early in 1869 came back to Los Angeles and re-established the Weekly Star. In the meantime he had built a home and made an orange grove at San Gabriel; and, tiring of the newspaper business, in 1872, sold his paper on credit to George Washington Barter, late major in the First (loyal) Mission Artillery. But Maj. Barter failed to put up anything for a year, either in principle or interest, although he had changed the paper into a daily, and in April, 1873, I purchased the entire concern from Mr. Hamilton for $5000 cash.

SOME ANTIQUES.

T. B. F. Bates of Oakland, Me., has a trap made by a Lubec blacksmith in 1787 to catch bears. The present owner also has used it for trapping bears. The trap has two large springs, one on each side of the jaws. On one of the jaws are five large teeth and on the other six. The jaws have an opening of 12x14 inches.

J. P. Morgan has presented to the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association of Washington, George Washington's umbrella. Lewis P. Bell of New York gave to the association a pair of brass fire dogs presented to Gen. Washington by Gen. Lafayette, with a piece of Mrs. Washington's wedding gown.

Thomas Boring of Huntingdon, Pa., has an old railroad ticket that is dated about as far back as any that can be found. The date of 1871 on a ticket to Lock Haven from Tyrone discovered several weeks ago was thought to be an old one, but Mr. Boring has in his possession one that he bought in 1854 for transportation from Tyron to Hollidaysburg.

I. S. Stetler of Frederick, Montgomery county, Pa., sent a quaint old wooden shovel to Town and Country, asking that the relic, which is considerably over a hundred years old, be presented to the proposed Perkiomen Valley Museum. The relic is made out of one piece of wood and cunningly carved, and is in a fair state of preservation.

E. S. Richardson of Tyler, N. H., drives a horse that is known to be at least 39 years old. It is the last horse that Dr. Gage of Briar Hill and Concord owned, and it was given to Mr. Richardson by the doctor's daughter, Mrs. Morrill, sixteen years ago. The horse is in fine condition for its age.

Science of Scarpology.

The very latest index finger intimating what sort of person our neighbor is has just been pointed by Dr. Garre of Basle, Switzerland, in his new science, "Scarpology." "Scarpology" is a word derived from the Italian and Greek, and signifies the science of shoes—in other words, "shoeology."

As a man of science, Dr. Garre starts scientifically thus: "Scarpology is the art of reading the character or weakness of men and women by the way they use their shoes. The eyes are the mirror of the soul, declare the poets, but show me one of your shoes after two months' wear, and I will tell you your character."

According to Dr. Garre, the heel of the shoe worn evenly shows a man of energy, a good worker, and, in a woman, a good mother. If worn on the outside only, the wearer is a man of initiative; if the outside tread is excessive, it may perhaps denote a tendency to trusting to chance. If this mark of wear be on the inside, it denotes a weak or irresolute man, but a sweet disposition in a woman.—[Tit-Bits.

The Irishman's Shillelagh.

The shillelagh, which showed at Louth that it has not entirely lost its old importance as a factor in deciding elections, is no raw limb of a tree. It is almost as much a work of art as a well-balanced cricket bat. The old shillelaghs were as carefully looked after by their loving owners as is a rifle in the wilds. Cut from the sturdiest of young blackthorns, and showing as little taper as an ebony ruler, it was weighted with lead or iron at the end nearest the grip, so that its center of gravity was about four-fifths of the way from the hitting end. When properly seasoned by being kept in the neighborhood of the farm oven for a few months it became a thing of supple steel. And the proper pronunciation of the name of this fearsome weapon is the melodious one of "shillaily," with the accent on the "ail."—[London Chronicle.

NEW ORLEANS BEFORE FALL.

great mass, that had no place to go to or means to do with, was beside itself. "Betrayed! betrayed!" it cried, and ran in throngs from street to street, seeking some vent, some victim for its wrath.

I saw a crowd catch a poor fellow at the corner of Magazine and Common streets, whose crime was that he looked like a stranger and might be a spy. He was the palest living man I ever saw. They swung him to a neighboring lamp post, but the Foreign Legion was patrolling the town in strong squads, and one of its lieutenants, all green and gold, leaped with drawn sword, cut the rope and saved the man. This was but one occurrence; there were many like it.

I stood in the rear door of our store, Canal street, soon after reopening it. The junior of the firm was within. I called him to look toward the river. The masts of the cutter Washington were slowly tipping, declining, sinking—down she went. The gunboat moored next to her began to smoke all over and then to blaze. My employers fell into ranks and left the city—left their goods and their affairs in the hands of one mere lad (no stranger would have thought I had reached 14) and one big German porter. I closed the doors, sent the porter to his place in the Foreign Legion, and ran to the levee to see the sights.

The Yankee Ships in Sight.

What a gathering! The riff-raff of the wharves, the town, the gutters Such women—such wrecks of women! And all the juvenile rag-tag. The lower steamboat landing, well covered with sugar, rice and molasses, was being rifled. The men smashed; the women scooped up the smashings. The river was overflowing the top of the levee. A rainstorm began to threaten.

"Are the Yankee ships in sight?" I asked of an idler. He pointed out the tops of their naked masts as they showed up across the huge bend of the river. They were engaging the batteries at Camp Chalmette—the old field of Jackson's renown. Presently that was over. Ah, me! I see them now as they come slowly round Slaughterhouse Point into full view, silent, grim and terrible; black with men, heavy with deadly portent; the long-banished Stars and Stripes flying against the frowning. Oh, for the Mississippi! the Mississippi! Just then she came down upon them. But how? Drifting helplessly, a mass of flames.

The crowds on the levee howled and screamed with rage. The swarming decks answered never a word; but one old tar on the Hartford, standing with lanyard in hand beside a great pivot-gun, so plain to view that you could see him smile, silently patted its big black breech and blandly grinned.

Walking Through the Gates of Death.

And now the rain came down in sheets. About 1 or 2 o'clock in the afternoon (as I remember,) I being again in the store with but one door ajar, came a roaring of shouting and imprecations and crowding feet down Common street. "Hurrah for Jeff Davis! Shoot them! Kill them! Hang them!" I locked the door on the outside and ran to the front of the mob, bawling with the rest, "Hurrah for Jeff Davis!"

About every third man there had a weapon out. Two officers of the United States navy were walking abreast, unguarded and alone, looking not to the right or left, never frowning, never flinching, while the mob screamed in their ears, shook cocked pistols in their faces, cursed and crowded and gnashed upon them. So through the gates of death those two men walked to the City Hall to demand the town's surrender. It was one of the bravest deeds I ever saw done.

Later events, except one, I leave to other pens. An officer from the fleet stood on the City Hall roof about to lower the flag of Louisiana. In the street beneath gleamed the bayonets of a body of marines. A howitzer pointed up and another down the street. All around swarmed the mob.

Just then Mayor Monroe—lest the officer above should be fired upon, and the howitzers open upon the crowd—came out alone and stood just before one of the howitzers, tall, slender, with folded arms, eying the gunner. Down sank the flag. Capt. Bell, tall and stiff, marched off with the flag rolled under his arm, and the howitzers clanking behind. Then cheer after cheer rang out for Monroe. And now, I dare say, every one is well pleased that after all, New Orleans never lowered her colors with her own hands.

Next Sunday: "How I seized Mason and Slidell for Capt. Wilkes," by Admiral D. Mac Neill Fairfax, executive officer of the U.S.S. San Jacinto, at the time of the Trent affair, which nearly brought on war between the North and Great Britain.

ARROYO SECO ENCHANTED SPOT.

NATURAL BEAUTY OF VALLEY TO BE PRESERVED.

Municipality and Residents of Crown City to Work for Perpetual Care of Arroyo Park—Improvements in Prospect—Plan to Establish Assessment District.

PASADENA, June 10.—Not for many years has a proposition come before the people of this city which will mean so much for its beautification as the acquiring of the Arroyo Seco and its banks for public park purposes. Two meetings of the City Council and a large number of interested property owners have been held during the past week, with the result that, unless present plans miscarry, Arroyo Park will be a reality before another year, and, possibly, in less than half that time.

The present plan is to secure, by condemnation proceedings, all of the arroyo, banks and bed, or all that land lying between Arroyo drive, the beautiful driveway following the meanderings of the crooked arroyo from Columbia street to the Linda Vista bridge, and the western city limits from Columbia street, just south of Busch's gardens, on the south, to the Scoville Dam on the north, consisting of about one hundred acres. This will not include the Busch gardens, but it is the belief of the promoters of the scheme that Adolphus Busch will willingly grant permission for the park project to pass through his property, which, in itself, will be one of the most attractive features of the great natural park.

The proposition now before the Council is to condemn the land and pay for it by establishing an assessment district covering the entire city; those living adjacent to the park to pay more, in proportion to the value of their property, than those lying farther back, the assessments to be graded back in proportion to the distance from the park.

When this park is secured, it will not stand alone, but will be a link in the chain which will comprise one of the largest and most beautiful natural parks in the world. On the south, it will connect with Arroyo Park, which is proposed for South Pasadena and Los Angeles, extending as far south as Sycamore Grove. Then to the north, later on, the park will be extended to Devil's Gate, and on into the beautiful Arroyo Seco Canyon. Nearly all of the land from Scovill's Dam to the canyon is owned by the three Pasadena water companies, and when that land is taken over by the city, together with other property of the water companies, which it is hoped will be accomplished before another year, it will be made into a park. Beginning at the mouth of the canyon and extending to its source, all the land is within the government forest reservation.

From the time the early pioneers began arriving in the then little settlement of Pasadena, or the "Indian Colony," the beauties and grandeur of the arroyo have been realized and everyone has looked forward to the day when it would be acquired for public park purposes. Every year for forty years the possibilities of the park have been discussed, but each year it was laid aside. During the past few months first one thing and another has occurred to bring the matter to a focus. The successful carrying of the bonds for the proposed bridge across the arroyo at Colorado street and the building of the big bridge at the Ostrich Farm have attracted attention to the Arroyo Seco. The movement started in Los Angeles and Highland Park and has had marked effect.

Anticipating the possibilities of the acquirement of the arroyo park by the city, the syndicate which a year ago bought the fifty-seven-acre strip of land on the east bank of the arroyo extending from Prospect Park north for a half mile, has begun extensive improvements on that property. The new reinforced concrete bridge at the north terminus of Prospect Square avenue spanning the deep ravine is now completed at a cost of $25,000. It is a beautiful structure and will add greatly to the value of that section. Ground has been broken for a series of wide, winding driveways through "Arroyo Park Tract." Every foot of the tract affords excellent building sites and the promoters expect to have the tract ready for sale of lots by next winter. Arrangements have been made with the Lake Vineyard Land and Water Company for running a large water main from a supplemental reservoir, which is to be built near Devil's Gate, directly to the tract.

In addition to this tract, it is stated, practically every bit of land lying north to Devil's Gate, extending from the bank of the arroyo back for a distance of one to two blocks, has been bought up recently by syndicates and by wealthy individual investors, all of whom are working on plans to beautify their properties in line with the improvements of the Arroyo Park tract. In other words, present plans comprehend the extension of the swell Orange Grove-Grand avenue-Prospect Park district north to the mouth of the Arroyo Seco Canyon and making the entire district one of the show places of the country.

For years this territory has been occupied by small houses and shacks. It has been ostracized from the balance of the city by lack of water, and, with the exception of a little patch of lawn here and there, it has been allowed to grow up in weeds and brush.

STIMSON AN IMPROVER.

To the G. Lawrence Stimson company more than any other company, or to more than all other companies, is the credit given for the many beautiful homes which have been built within the Orange Grove district during the past few years. At the present time that the company is building four houses at a total cost of $90,000. One of these houses, which will be located at No. 605 South Orange Grove avenue, is for Samuel B. Welch of the firm of Cunningham, Curtiss & Welch of San Francisco. Another will cost $35,000, will have fourteen rooms, and will be occupied by George W. Stimson. It will be located at No. 340 South Orange Grove avenue. The third house will be built at No. 450 South Orange Grove avenue, and will cost $25,000. At No. 161 Columbia street the same company is building a $7500 home for Edward M. Mackey of Pasadena.

In addition to the beautiful homes the Stimson company is building in the Orange Grove district, it is also building in Oak Knoll, for J. M. Hixon a beautiful home among the oak trees, of English style, shingled and plastered, which will cost $20,000; for J. M. Porter, No. 510 Prospect Square, an eight-room mission-style villa which will cost $8000; and a $15,000 residence in Altadena for T. P. Phillips. This house will be of Italian style, with tile roof and will be located at New York avenue and Mar Vista street. The same company is building a home in Altadena for Mrs. James L. Nimick, which will cost $7500.

The contract for the building of the $15,000 clubhouse of the Altadena Country Club has been let to Dowell & Loesch of Pasadena. The clubhouse will be built on the club grounds, at the corner of Hill avenue and Mendosa street, overlooking the San Gabriel Valley.

The contract for the building of the new Elk's home on West Colorado street, on the brow of the hill, was let during the week to Matthew Slavin, the contractor, for $51,568.50.

NO LET-UP.

SOUTH PASADENA, June 10.—Although summer is supposed to be a dull time for real estate operators, the list of sales reported shows that this city never stops growing, and that desirable residents are coming in as rapidly now as at any time in the past.

Two large sales reported by Fagg-Dublin Company, Fair Oaks avenue and Mission street, are as follows: Mrs. Caroline Dobbins to Alexander J. Mitchell of Los Angeles, a lot at the southwest corner of Garfield avenue and Monterey road, 107 feet on Garfield avenue and 240 feet on Monterey road, covered with live oak and all kinds of handsome shrubbery, $14,000. Mr. Mitchell, who is manager of the Colorado Yule Marble Company, will improve this place with a handsome residence.

Mrs. Jewett to Dr. Browning of Los Angeles, three and one-half acres at the intersection of Meridian street and Diamond avenue, improved with a three-story house, fruit trees of all kinds and shrubbery, located on a hill overlooking the city, consideration $16,000. Dr. Browning will remodel the home and grounds immediately, and move his family to this city.

E. C. Williams has traded his South Pasadena properties for a ten-acre, 9-year-old orange grove in San Fernando Valley, also five acres of good orange land near San Fernando.

L. Martin to J. Biel of Pasadena, lot 50x150 on Electric avenue between Huntington drive and Oak street, improved with a seven-room two-story residence.

G. Sterlinger to J. Brown, lot 50x150 on Electric avenue between Huntington drive and Oak street, improved with a seven-room two-story house.

Mrs. Georgia S. Hilty to Julius V. Seyler, lot 50x149 on Electric avenue near Oak street, consideration $2000. This lot is being improved with a bungalow.

POMONA TRADES AND SALES.

POMONA, June 10.—Sales amounting to over $46,000 were consummated in three days this week through the realty agency of J. A. Fitch as follows: James A. Dare sold to Mmes. C. Evans and O. L. Herrold a five-acre lemon grove at San Dimas, Mr. Dare taking as part payment a house and lot on Center street, this city, consideration $8750; Arthur M. Dole sold two lots in the Walker-Dole tract; W. S. Fackler sold to W. F. Thorne of Los Angeles a thirty-six-acre alfalfa ranch near Pomona Heights with a well and pumping plant, Mr. Fackler taking as part payment a house in Pasadena near Hotel Maryland, consideration $25,000; M. W. Metzger of Claremont purchased an improved valencia and navel orange grove at San Dimas for a reported consideration of $11,000.

WHITTIER ACTIVE.

WHITTIER, June 10.—Recent real estate sales aggregating over a quarter of a million dollars are reported by local dealers, atlhough this particular season of the year is usually accredited with being dull among realty operators.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Wiebers of the Hotel Windermere, Santa Monica, announced the engagement of their daughter, Ethel, to Frank M. Cook of Alameda. The wedding which will be an important event of the summer season, will take place early in August at the Hotel Windermere, and elaborate plans are already being made to make it one of the most beautifully appointed ceremonies of the season. Miss Wiebers, who has made her home with her parents in Santa Monica for the past eight years, is an accomplished musician and elocutionist. Mr. Cook is first officer of the steamship Capistrano and after receiving his captain's papers in August will accept the captaincy of one of the Coast steamers. The young people plan to make their home in Alameda.

Beach society folk are taking great interest in the "Masque of Pandora," a play to be produced July 1 for the benefit of the Santa Monica Bay Sunshine Society. The play is from Longfellow and affords an opportunity for many beautiful scenic effects. The entire stage setting as well as all of the costumes will be strictly Greek and very elaborate. Appropriate songs and dances will also be a feature of the evening. The entire affair is under the direction of Mrs. G. G. Watt, a prominent beach society woman and brilliant elocutionist. Among those who will participate are Mrs. C. H. Ritchie, president of the Sunshine Society, who will take the part of Hephaestus; Miss Margaret Obera Miller, a talented beach reader will appear as Epimetheus; Miss Juanita Sponsler is cast as Pandora; Miss Anne Vejar, a student at the Egan Dramatic School, will portray the character of Prometheus. The Three Graces and Three Fates will be played by the Misses Margaret Whitcomb, Elsie Harris and Ethel Sexton. Miss Betty McNabb will appear as Hermes and the part of Eros will be taken by Lawrence Steiner. There will also be a chorus of about twenty beach society girls, who will appear as the Oreades and Eumenides. The play will be given in the Venice dancing pavilion, the proceeds to be devoted to erecting a summer home for working girls at this beach.

Mrs. P. J. Dudley entertained recently at her Santa Monica home with an informal bridge party in honor of Miss Valerie Salathe, one of the season's most popular brides-elect. An attractive color scheme of lavender and white was effectively brought out by the use of sweet peas gracefully combined with bows and streamers of tulle and satin. Score was kept on cards painted with bridal scenes, and the prizes, a hand-painted pin tray and a silver pencil, were won by Mrs. Frederick B. Salathe and Mr. Arthur Collins. Later a supper was served, covers being laid for Miss Valerie Salathe, Mrs. Frederick Salathe, Mayor and Mrs. T. H. Dudley, Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland Hutton, Misses Ryan, McCall, Murphy and Jessica Parks, Arthur Collins, Marshall Ketchum and Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Dudley.

Hand-painted place cards marked places for the following guests: Mrs. Alonzo Whitaker, Miss Alice Whitaker, Miss M. Bergk, Mrs. J. R. Moore, Mrs. M. E. Myers, Mrs. Frank Townsend and Mrs. Vawter.

Mrs. Spencer-Schwarz of No. 823 Third street was hostess this week to the members of the Santa Monica Tuesday Afternoon Bridge Club. The house was artistically decorated with cut flowers and ferns. Force, McNary, Frederick B. Salathe, Force Parker and Spencer-Schwarz. Mrs. Wilkinson will be the hostess next week at her home on Second street.

Hazzard, cashier of the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank and a member of the Stanford alumni. Prof. Jordan, who arrived in Imperial Sunday evening was met at Imperial Junction by E. W. Sherman, a former Stanford student. Among the guests at the luncheon Monday noon, were members of the Imperial School Board and of the University Club. The luncheon was interspersed with brief talks, Dr. Jordan speaking of the advance in all lines at Stanford; Hon. John M. Eshelman, railroad commissioner, spoke of the atheletic feats of Stanford; Dist.-Atty. Phil Swing closed the pleasant occasion with felicitous remarks.

Tropico.

A FAREWELL complimentary luncheon was extended to Mrs. Clarta Gulvin, formerly of Tropico, but now of Turlock, by the ladies of N. P. Banks Corps Saturday, in their hall on Glendale avenue. Mrs. Gulvin is a past president of the corps, and almost the entire membership of the corps, as well as the post, were present to do her honor. The table decorations as well as the dining-room were scarlet and green, and presented a charming appearance when the long line of guests, old soldiers and members of the corps marched in and were seated before the tempting viands prepared by the ladies. After the luncheon an hour was spent in the hall in general converse and the presentation of a short programme, consisting of music, readings, short speeches by many who were in a happy frame of mind, thus making the occasion one of great merriment, for the "Boys in Blue" are nothing if not humorous. Many a good army story was told by the "old boys," and stirring scenes of '61 revived, making the day one long to be remembered. The guest of honor took the train for Turlock that evening, carrying with her the love and good will of her old associates. The programme: Vocal solo by Miss Evans; address, Mrs. Beers; reading by Mrs. M. C. K. Shuey; piano solo by Jessie Dutton, a six-year-old granddaughter of a deceased soldier; short addresses by many, but one notable one, and which carried joy to the hearts of all, was made by Mrs. D. H. Imler, announcing the fact that every cent of indebtedness against the G. A.R. hall had been wiped out. As this had been a source of great anxiety to the ladies of the W.R.C., and for which they had labored heroically, the announcement brought forth long and loud applause.

ECZEMA BROKE OUT ON FACE AND BODY

When Two Months Old. She Scratched, as It Itched. Did Not Sleep for More than a Week. Was In a Terrible Condition.

Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and In Two Weeks She Was Well.

"When my baby was two months old, she had eczema and rash very badly. I noticed that her face and body broke out very suddenly, thick, and red as a coal of fire. I did not know what to do. The doctor ordered castile soap and powders, but they did no good. She would scratch, as it itched, and she cried, and did not sleep for more than a week. One day I saw in the paper the advertisement of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, so I got them and tried them at once. My baby's face was as a cake of sores.

"When I first used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I could see a difference. In color it was redder. I continued with them. My baby was in a terrible condition. I used the Cuticura Remedies [Soap and Ointment] four times a day, and in two weeks she was quite well. The Cuticura Remedies healed her skin perfectly, and her skin is now pretty and fine through using them. I also use the Cuticura Soap to-day, and will continue to, for it makes a lovely skin. Every mother should use the Cuticura Remedies. They are good for all sores, and the Cuticura Soap is also good for shampooing the hair, for I have tried it. I tell all my friends how the Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured my baby of eczema and rash." (Signed) Mrs. Drew, 210 W. 18th St., New York City, Aug. 26, 1910.

For more than a generation, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have afforded the purest, sweetest and most economical treatment for affections of the skin that torture, disfigure, itch, burn, crust, scale and destroy sleep. A cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and a box of Cuticura Ointment (50c) are often sufficient. Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole props., 139 Columbus Ave., Boston, Mass.

Mailed free, samples of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, with 32-p. book on skin treatment.

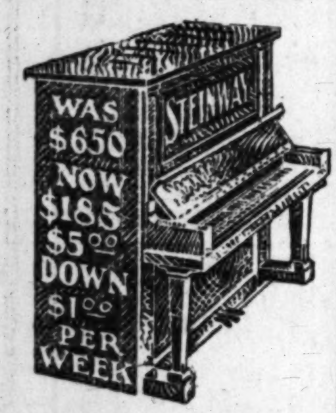
Everybody's Getting Pianos and Talking Mach
at Eilers Trustees Sale of the Brown & Co. Stock

The Piano Market of Los Angeles



The heading of this advertisement means just exactly what it says. Eilers Music House is selling pianos and talking machines to so many people every day, that it seems truly as though everybody were coming here to participate in this closing out of the entire Brown & Co. stock by the trustees, and to save from $100 to $300 on any one of the world's best makes of pianos and player pianos.

Name any instrument that you want. You will find it in this store during this great trustees sale at the lowest price that you ever conceived possible. It is a fact that the Eilers prices are so low during this sensational Sale that the manufacturers object to our advertising the prices because it affects the business of other stores in Los Angeles who are selling the same pianos at $150 and $200 and $300 more than the Eilers figures.

During the Spanish-American War, soon after Andy Burt was made colonel of the Twenty-fifth Colored Regiment, he informed his men, then at Chickamauga, that they must play ball half an hour every day in order to get hardened up. The colonel stopped at first base, got another player to take his place, put on his uniform and announced: "I am Col. Burt until further orders."

Prof. Edward Charles Pickering, director of Harvard obervatory for many years, has just received from Emperor William of Germany the decoration conferring knighthood in the Prussian order, "Pour le Merite," which is the highest honor for scholarship that is conferred in Germany. Only two Americans have previously received a similar honor. They were Newcomb and Agassiz. Since the death of Agassiz there has been no American member of the science department of the order, and the only American in the fine arts department is Sargent, the painter.

Ollie James is one of the most interesting and lively characters in the House of Representatives. He is not yet 40 years old, but he is serving his fifth term in the House. He began his public career at the age of 16 as a page in the Kentucky Legislature, became well known in his State as a hard-hitting campaign orator, and has been a consistent Bryan Democrat.

Mrs. Robert D. Evans has given $1,000,000 to the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, to construct a wing to the present building. This addition is to be used as a picture gallery and is given as a momerial to Mrs. Evans's husband.

J. B. Haggin, the multi-millionaire owner of Elmdorf Stock Farm, at Lexington, Ky., has caused notices to be posted requiring the several hundred employees on the 9000-acre estate to be shaved every other day. Haggin believes that "whiskers" propagate dangerous microbes, and the order is meant to affect particularly employees in the dairy department. A barber shop is being installed, and accompanying it is being erected a $100,000 bathroom, both of which are to be maintained free of cost to the employees.

EDUCATORS, SCIENTISTS.

Prof. W. L. Brooks, manual training instructor in the Columbia County High School, has in his leisure hours, done all the work on a handsome residence now approaching completion more than 5000 concrete blocks were made by him, and put into the building, and all the carpenter work and wiring is also of his handicraft.

Miss Julia Underwood of Quincy, Mass., who claims to hold the country's teaching record, has resigned after completing fifty-six years of service in the local public schools. Miss Underwood taught in one school fifty-four years, the same school in which she herself received her early education. She was born and always lived in Quincy.

Miss Anne X. Walker has completed her forty-ninth year as teacher at Franklin, Pa. For forty-three years, or since 1868, she has taught in one building, and for twenty-two years in one room. She announced to the board that she would not be an applicant for next year, but the board will not permit her to sever her connection with the schools, and she will be elected general supply teacher at a moderate salary, and it will not be necessary for her to work more than thirty days in the year.

Visiting Cards for Dogs.

Visiting cards for dogs are among the latest freak novelties. They are used by women who take their dog pets with them when they visit houses where there are also pet animals. In a home where a little King Charles has all the attention and affection usually bestowed upon a child a card basket contains the engraved evidence of visits from Schnapps, Fifi, Jumbo, Tip, Lassie, Bijou, Aime and many other canine friends of little King. Many of these cards were added to the collection on one day when King had a reception. One card marked "Regrets" came from Sultan, a Maltese cat.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ABOUT YOUR OWN FIRST NAME.

Its Origin and the Famous Folk Who Have Borne It.

PERCIVAL.

PERCY.

The Many Derivations Suggested for This Name—The Confused Story of the Blameless Knight Parsifal of King Arthur's Court—The Famous English Poet Who Was the Name's Greatest Bearer—Percival Pott, Great English Surgeon, and the Good He Did Mankind—His Accidental Way of Inaugurating a New Method of Treating Fracture—His Love for His Mother and Goodness to the Poor—Other Famous English and American Men of the Name.

By FRANCES MARSHALL.

More derivations have been suggested for this name, perhaps, than for any other, and none of them has been proved the best. However, it is generally accepted that the name means "companion of the chalice," and the sentiment of this meaning is certainly suitable to the first great bearer of the name.

The Norman family of the name came from the valley of the Perche, it is said, and hence were called Perci-val, or later Perce-val. Perceval, of the name of the knight of romance, was said to signify pierce the valley. Pasre, or Parschfal, the hero of Arabic legend, was so named because he was a poor dummling. Again, it is said that Percy was first pierce-eye, because the master of Alnwick Castle, when he surrendered his stronghold to Malcolm Caenomer, treacherously thrust the sword on which hung the keys of the castle and pierced Malcolm's eye. Still, another explanation is that Percival is of Welsh origin, and comes from parzyfal, the champion of the calron.

Perhaps one reason for all this confusion is that the story of Percival—Parschfal, as the Arabian hero is called, Peredur as he is in Welsh—is a story of many variations. In them all there appears a wonderful and mystic cup, a poor orphan, whose dull wits are awakened by a glimpse of the cup until he spends his whole life searching for it, his pure and spotless life and his final attainment of his goal.

By the eleventh or twelfth centuries these stories had taken on a Christian significance. Perceval or Parsifal, was the spotless knight of King Arthur's court who sought the Holy Grail, the cup or goblet which was used when the Holy Eucharist was instituted. His search typified the Christian's search for perfection and his many disappointments, the impossibility of its full realization in the world. In some of these stories Perceval was the first and highest of all the knights, in others he gave place to Sir Galahad. Wagner, in his great opera of "Parsifal," uses one of the famous mediaeval versions of the legend.

Whatever may be the exact meaning of this name, the life and adventures of the spotless knight of King Arthur's court made it popular in England. Since his day men in almost every walk of life have borne the name.

Probably the most famous of all the men by the name is Percy Bysshe Shelley, one of the great English poets. Shelley, born in 1792, has an interest for Americans not often noticed, for his Grandfather Bysshe was born in America. Mr. Byssche returned to England to settle on a small landed inheritance which came to him.

Even as a schoolboy Shelley showed the love of personal freedom and hatred of oppression which later characterized his work. He rebelled sturdily against the bullying of the older boys at Eton and by the time he entered Oxford he was known as a young man of radical views. Six months after his entrance to the university, in 1810, Shelley wrote and circulated a pamphlet entitled "The Necessity of Atheism," and the Oxford authorities expelled him.

For the next few years Shelley's life was wandering. In the summer after his expulsion he married Harriet Westbrook, the 16-year-old daughter of a London inn-keeper, and the two wandered from place to place, followed by bill collectors, for several years. The marriage proved unhappy, and in 1814 Shelley and Harriet Westbrook parted, and Shelley eloped with Mary Godwin.

He went, about this time, to Italy, where he spent the rest of his short life. He was soon recognized as one of the foremost revolutionary poets of the day, as well as one of the greatest lyric writers. His life was happy, for his friends appreciated his genius, and the great reading public read and liked his poems. But Shelley was always sad, and although he was personally charming, and beloved by every one who knew him, he never cared for long life.

In the summer of 1822, when he was scarcely 30 years old. Shelley started out in a little sailboat to cross the lake where he was spending the summer. A squall came up, capsized the boat, and Shelley was drowned.

"Adonais" is perhaps the most popular of Shelley's poems. "Queen Mab," the "Revolt of Islam" and "Prometheus Unbound," three long poems written at three different periods give his philosophy of life.

In some respects, of even greater importance than Shelley was Percival Pott, the famous English surgeon who was born in 1714. His father was a London scrivener, who died when Percival was only three years old. He left the boy and his mother and sister but a small box containing less than five pounds. But the bishop of Rochester took an interest in the poor little family and helped them. Percival was sent to boarding school. From babyhood, almost, he showed an interest in surgery, and when he was fifteen he was bound for seven years to an able surgeon. In order to give her son this privilege, Mrs. Pott had to deny herself, for a premium of almost a thousand dollars had to be paid for this seven years' training.

As soon as he was on a firm footing himself, he bought a horse and carriage for her, and refused to marry until after her death in 1746.

Pott joined the staff of St. Bartholomew's Hospital after his apprenticeship was ended, and rose quickly to be one of the most prominent physicians in England. He organized many reforms in surgery, two or three of them so valuable that they still go by his name. Pott's disease, for instance, a sort of curvature of the spine, was one of his specialties, and Pott's fracture is another ill identified by his name. An accident is responsible for the world-wide fame which came to him as a result of his treatment of this fracture. He was riding one January day in Kent street, Southwark, when he was thrown from his horse. He found that he had a bad fracture of the leg, but he would let no one move him. Instead, he sent for two chairmen to bring their poles. Then he bought a door from a near-by householder, and when the chairmen came he had them nail the door to the poles, lift him from the cold pavement, where he had been waiting, to this strange stretcher, and carry him home.

After the fashion of those days, the doctors all wanted to amputate the leg, but Pott would not let them. He treated the fracture himself, and showed the other doctors how to treat it, and soon he could walk as well as ever. Ever since, this sort of fracture has been known as Pott's fracture, and has been treated in the way he prescribed.

Pott was noted for his kindness of heart. He used to give wherever he thought his help was needed, and he was especially charitable to struggling young doctors. It is said that once three needy young surgeons lived at his house until he could find them self-supporting positions.

Pott's own high ability and splendid character put surgery and medicine on a higher plane than it had been. It was said that until his day a surgeon could never earn enough to eat until he was so old that he had lost all his teeth. Pott gained fame as a lecturer, and during the convalescence from the fracture he turned his attention to writing. His medical books show a purity of style that is almost classic. He resigned from the staff of St. Bartholomew's Hospital in 1787, after having served it, as he liked to say, "since a boy for half a century."

Percival has had many other famous English bearers. Among them is Percy Kirke, born in 1646, whose father was gentleman of the robes to Charles I, and whose mother, noted for her beauty, was given away at her wedding by the King. Kirke rose in military service and was finally colonel of the regiment, whose badge was the paschal lamb, and which was therefore called Kirke's Lambs. He is described as a short-tempered, rough-spoken soldier, but he was well liked, nevertheless.

Another English Percival, like Pott, was interested in medicine. This was Percival Barton Lord, born in Cork in 1808. Lord studied medicine and surgery at Edinburgh and acted as resident surgeon of the hospital there during an epidemic of cholera. When he was only twenty-six he made some really valuable discoveries concerning consumption. At that time he was made assistant surgeon of the East India company, and was sent to Bombay. Lord studied Persian, made friends with the Afghan chiefs, and gained great fame in the East. Murad Beg, the dreaded emir of Kunduz, whose brother was threatened with blindness, heard of Lord's skill and sent for him.

Lord was unable to avert the blindness, but he gathered much valuable information on his journey through Tartary to see the emir's brother, and sent this information to the English government. Lord was in the East at the time of much fighting, and took an active part in the work of the soldiers. As he once wrote to his mother, he was "busied in casting cannon, forging muskets, raising troops, horsemen and foot, talking, persuading, threatening, bullying and bribing." Lord was killed on an expedition to capture a Mohammedan.

Well-known present-day American men of the name are Percy Lee Atherton, composer of several operas and many popular songs, and Percival Lowell, one of the foremost astronomers of the day, and brother of A. Lawrence Lowell, the president of Harvard University.

STORIES OF FAMOUS POEMS.

"'OSTLER JOE."

George R. Sims.

I stood at eve when the sun went down,
By a grave where a woman lies,
Who lured men's souls to the shores of sin
With the light of her wanton eyes;
Who sang the song that the siren sang
On the treacherous Lurley height;
Whose face was as fair as a summer's day,
And whose heart was as black as night.

• • • •

In the summer, when the meadows
Were aglow with blue and red,
Joe, the 'ostler of "The Magpie,"
And fair Annie Smith were wed.
Plump was Annie, plump and pretty,
With a face as fair as snow;
He was anything but handsome,
Was the "Magpie's" 'ostler, Joe.

• • • •

Little Joe, the child was christened,
And like babies grew apace,
He'd his mother's eyes of azure,
And his father's honest face.
Swift the happy years went over,
Years of blue and cloudless sky;
Love was lord of that small cottage,
And the tempest passed them by.

Down the lane by Annie's cottage,
Chanced a gentleman to roam;
He caught a glimpse of Annie,
In her bright and happy home.
Thrice he came and saw her sitting
By the window with her child;
And he nodded to the baby,
And the baby laughed and smiled.

• • • •

'Twas the same old wretched story
That for ages bards have sung;
'Twas a woman, weak and wanton,
And a villain's tempting tongue;
'Twas a picture deftly painted
For a silly creature's eyes,
Of the Babylonian wonders
And the joy that in them lies.

Annie listened and was tempted,
Was tempted and she fell,
As the angels fell from heaven
To the blackest depths of hell.
She was promised wealth and splendor
And a life of genteel sloth;
Yellow gold, for child and husband—
And the woman left them both.

• • • •

That's the blossom I fan would pluck today
From the garden above her dust;
Not the languorous lily of the soulless sin,
Not the blood-red rose of lust,
But a sweet, white blossom of her love,
That grew in the one green spot,
In the arid desert of Phryne's life,
Where all else was parched and hot.

In "'Ostler Joe" George R. Sims has woven a most pathetic story of a young woman, lowly bred, but fair of face, who was married to an honest man, but was lured away from home and family with the promise of the gay life of a city. In London she reveled for awhile, until broken down in health, and forsaken by those who had led her there, she became ill. The honest 'osler heard of her fate, and went to her assistance.

"In his arms death found her lying
From his arms her spirit fled,
And his tears came down in torrents,
As he knelt beside his dead."

On account of the great length of the poem only seven verses are printed, but they are the most striking of the twenty-two and give a good idea of the story, and the character of the poem.

"'Osler Joe" was written sometime in the seventies, when Sims was one of the writers on "The Circle," a newspaper with a short life in London. The poem had been given considerable publicity, but it did not become famous until Mrs. Brown-Potter, the actress, recited it in Washington, and was very severely criticised for giving a poem of his character at a notable social function.

Of the many hundreds of thousands who have read the poem in this country, very few heretofore have known anything of the story that inspired it. Whether or not the subject of this poem is still living, but it is only in justice to him, if living, that he shall be known as Mr. M.

Mr. M. was born in the north of England of a sturdy yoeman family of much means. After a course at one of the universities he entered business in one of the large manufacturing towns of Lancashire, prospering beyond his most ardent hopes. Mr. M.'s marriage to an accomplished and beautiful woman in his native city followed later. Several happy and harmonious years were passed in quiet domesticity, when in an unlucky hour he had the evil fortune to introduce to his home a strikingly handsome infantry officer, whose regiment was then stationed within a few miles of where he lived.

This man proved to be a roue of the vilest character, as M. discovered when it was too late.

The officer was a younger, handsomer and wealther man than M., and his personality and grace of manner were such that he soon made an impression on his perhaps too confiding victim, who, after a few months' acquaintance was persuaded to elope with him. It is but just to say that M. always believed that his wife had been the victim of hypnosis, and not at all through her want of affection for himself.

However, his home life was shattered. After a futile effort to trace the guilty ones on the continent, the broken-hearted man obtained the civil service appointment which took him to India, where he stayed for many years, in a brave effort to forget a past which had unexpectedly wrecked his life.

It was at first Mr. M.'s purpose to stay in India, but that heart-longing to see the home land once more proved too powerful a magnet. There might also have been something else in his soul, an unuttered hope to see the woman who had wronged him, but who, in spite of her frailty, he still loved. He bore her no feeling whatever but that of tender pity.

One day Mr. M. found himself in Liverpool and here he stayed for several weeks, wandering listlessly and aimlessly through the streets, finding no peace and in some mysterious way expecting to see his lost love of long, bitter years ago. This thought, always uppermost in his mind, delayed his departure from day to day and from week to week.

One afternoon, as he was going along Lime street, he felt someone touch him on the shoulder. He turned with a shiver. There was a queer feeling experienced as though something was passing out of his life. His accoster proved to be a wee bit of a girl not more than 12 years at most.

She spoke a few words, the tears rolling from her eyes. He perfectly understood her.

"She's dying," the girl appealed, "and wants you—wants you so bad. She said you would come if I told you. Please come with me. It's only a few streets up."

The child need not have said so much, for he well understood who wanted him. Without a word he followed her meekly.

It was his dying wife he met up several fights of rickety stairs in the rear room of a wretched tenement. Penury, starvation, misery, death—all were there.

The unhappy woman, with no traces of her former beauty left, lay gasping for breath in the final throes of consumption. She was breathing her last as her husband stepped, with tears, into the room.

His great love was hardly prepared for this shocking spectacle, this extraordinary change that approaching death and sin had wrought. A sob met him, a weak cry, a few inarticulate words, a lifting of two pallid, emaciated hands and the poor creature's troubled and humbled spirit had passed from earth.

There is little more to be written. The handsome infantry officer, tiring of his victim, had deserted her in less than a year. After that Mrs. M. fell lower and lower in the depths of her misery and degradation, until death at last mercifully stepped in and ended the struggle.

And this is how "'Ostler Joe" came to be written, Sim's disguising personages of the real story by introducing actors in a humbler walk of life.

About twenty years afterwards "'Ostler Joe" became notorious rather than famous in the United States, owing to the resentment of some Washington ladies, attending a reception at Secretary Whitney's, at the audacity of Mrs. James Brown-Potter in reciting Dagonet's ballad. Mrs. Potter was, at that time, a young matron in New York society. She was known as an elocutionist and reader. When she recited "'Ostler Joe" in Washington, it was said that a number of ladies present left the room. Immediately afterwards the ballad was printed in the newspapers throughout the country, and almost every shade of opinion was expressed regarding the audacity of Mrs. Potter in reciting it.

One example of the critical attitude was when George Bancroft, the venerable historian, requested Daniel Dougherty, the silver-tongued orator, to recite "'Ostler Joe" to him. Mr. Dougherty doubtless read the verses with a beautiful enunciation and splendid elocutionary effect. Bancroft listened attentively, and, when he was through, expressed his opinion of the selection by saying that not only was the sentiment objectionable, but the literary quality of the poem was poor.

On the other hand, Mrs. Potter had hundreds of defenders, and the poem found its champions as a very touching expression of homely sentiment and humble life, carrying a forceful lesson of Christian charity and the strength of a man's love.

"'Ostler Joe" instantly became a favorite selection with elocutionists and readers, and it is wholly difficult at this distance of time to fully appreciate the sensation that was caused by Mrs. Potter, when she dared to introduce "'Ostler Joe" to society.

Miss Tillie Smith, who bought 160 acres of land from the government in South Dakota, also has the contract for carrying the United States mail between Carter and Shoemaker, in that State. She has had a lot of experience carrying goods over the muddy roads, and is considered competent to take the mail contract.

ter and same of flour, being careful not to brown. When a bubbling mass, add at once, but gradually, 2 large cups creamy milk; let boil up a few seconds, stirring constantly to free from lumps. Now add salt and pepper to taste, and lastly 2 tablespoons chopped nasturtium seeds, pickled. Use green seeds, testing with needle to see that seed has not begun to harden as they must be tender and drop in vinegar for 2 or 3 days. Instead of these mock-capers (nasturtium seeds,) chopped parsley may be added to cream sauce, or a teaspoon of lemon juice, or same of onion juice, or ½ teaspoon mustard.

RICH SAUCE FOR FISH—Mrs. Florence Jay Slick, 147 Angelica street, Redlands—One-half cup butter rubbed to cream, add yolks 2 eggs, one at time, and beat well. Stir in juice of ½ lemon, ½ spoon salt and pinch cayenne pepper. When ready to serve, add ½ cup boiling water, place bowl in pan of boiling water and cook until thick, stirring all the time. Stir in gradually 1 tablespoon finely chopped gherkins just before serving.

BAKED FISH—Mrs. Mae Dodge, Fullerton—Arrange thin layer sliced salt pork, then onions, sweet peppers, ½ can tomatoes and bit of bay leaf in baking dish. Lay fish on, spread with butter and flour creamed smooth. Sprinkle with cracker crumbs, salt and pepper, and bake until brown and bones are free.

BAKED FISH—Mrs. P. H. Poor, 2618 University avenue—Select fresh, firm-fleshed fish for baking; clean thoroughly, cut off fins and, if preferred, head and tail; wipe dry, sprinkle inside with salt; have needle and thread ready for sewing up fish as it is stuffed; cut strips fat bacon or salt pork to lay in gashes or on top of fish, to baste while baking. STUFFING—Into bowl put 1 cup stale bread crumbs, add ½ teaspoon salt, dash white pepper, 1 teaspoon onion juice, 1 teaspoon minced parsley, 1 small sweet pickle chopped very fine, 1 tablespoon melted butter; mix and fill fish. Place fish in pan and add slices of bacon and 1 cup hot water; baste often; allow 25 to 30 minutes for baking fish of 3 to 4 pounds, in moderate oven. When done, place on platter, remove strings and garnish with slices of lemon and watercress. Serve with the following: HOLLANDAISE SAUCE—Cream ½ cup butter, add 1 level tablespoon sifted flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, dash pepper, and 1 tablespoon lemon juice or vinegar; add slowly ½ cup boiling water. Cook until mixture thickens, then add beaten yolks of 2 eggs.

CASSEROLE OF FISH—Mrs. C. W. Kendrick, San Dimas—Put 6 tablespoons cooked fish (haddock is good) and 3 tablespoons cooked rice in basin and season with salt, pepper and about ½ teaspoon lemon juice; dissolve 1 heaping tablespoon powdered gelatine in ½ cup milk and let cool somewhat. Then pour it over fish mixture and add 4 tablespoons whipped cream. Pour into small wet ring mold and put aside to set firm. Turn out, and fill center with slices of tomato. A few capers will decorate nicely.

COLD BOILED FISH, SAUCE TARTARE—Mrs. V. B. de Mars, Florence—Tie fish of requisite size in thin cloth and place in cold, salted water, into which juice of ½ lemon has been squeezed; bring slowly to boil, allowing 15 minutes to every pound. When cold, slip fish onto platter, taking care to keep it whole, and set on ice. Just before serving, smother in sauce tartare and garnish with slices chilled cucumber dipped in chopped parsley. SAUCE TARTARE—Make usual mayonnaise dressing; add trifle more mustard and mix into it 2 tablespoons capers, 1 very small onion, 1 medium-sized cucumber pickle, ½ small red pepper, all chopped very fine.

TO BOIL FRESH FISH—Ella Magee, 122 North Johnston street—Wrap fish in towel, cover with cold water, salt, little vinegar; let heat to boiling point; boil 3 minutes for largest fish. Serve with rich cream sauce and boiled green peas.

TO STUFF AND BAKE FISH—Mrs. Alice Watson, 140 South Albany street, Huntington Park—Bass, shad and fresh codfish are good for baking. Soak bread in cold water until soft, drain it, mash fine and mix bread with 1 tablespoon drawn butter, little salt and pepper, 2 raw eggs (makes dressing cut smoother.) You can add some spices if desired. Fill and sew up fish. Put 1 teacup hot water in baking pan, and little butter. Place in fish and bake about 40 or 50 minutes.

FISH, A LA CALIFORNIA—Margaret A. Burgess, 121 North Hill street—Made from cold salmon, trout, pike, using leftover portions. Stir gradually into this 1½ cups cold boiled fish, picked fine and stand mixture over hot water for a moment until thoroughly heated. This mixture may be filled into individual shells or paper cases, slightly browned in oven and served as second course at luncheon.

FISH AND POTATO SCALLOP—Mrs. C. W. Kendrick, San Dimas—Wash 1 pound boneless codfish and pick into small pieces. Freshen by putting into basin with luke warm water and setting where it will keep warm but not get hot. Change water if it gets very salt and let stand till well freshened. Boil and mash 6 good sized potatoes, add 1 egg, ¼ pint milk, salt and pepper. Beat till creamy. Put 1 tablespoon butter in pan over fire, add 2 tablespoons flour and mix. Add 1 pint sweet milk and stir till smooth and thick. Add salt and pepper. Butter pudding dish and line bottom and sides with potato, heap fish (well drained) in center, pour sauce over and cover with layer of potato. Bake till golden brown. Recipe should be cut down for small family.

FILLED FISH—Mrs. E. Manheim, No. 960 Dewey avenue—Medium-sized trout or rock cod. Clean carefully and fill with this dressing: Fry finely chopped onion in 2 spoons butter. Then put in layer of fish seasoned with pepper and salt, then crumbs then fish and so on till all is used, finishing with crumbs and small pieces butter. Serve fish in glass dish with half the dressing stirred in with it; spread remainder over top and lay tightly curled lettuce leaves around edges.

PLANKED FISH—Mrs. Nellie McGill, No. 1546 West Eleventh street—Planking is a form of broiling. Heating the wood imparts peculiar flavor to fish. Fish plank should be of hard-wood, 18 inches long and 12 inches wide. Heat very hot, place fish, skin side down, dust with salt and pepper, baste with melted butter, and put in under oven of gas stove, before wood fire, or on shelf in coal oven. Cook quickly 25 minutes, baste again, decorate with potatoes a la Duchess, pressed through a star tube; put back in oven and cook until potatoes are brown. Garnish with parsley and lemon and send to table.

If fish is dry, 2 slices salt pork placed on fish improves flavor. Fish should be served on plank garnish with parsley, cover fish with maitre de hotel sauce. The plank gives peculiar, delicious flavor which distinguishes it from fish baked in ordinary way.

BAKED WHITE FISH—Mrs. H. L. Hibbard, No. 739 Alpine street—Cleanse and bone a white fish weighing 2 to 3 pounds. Stuff with dressing of 1 loaf bread, ½ pint milk, ½ tea cup butter, salt and pepper and little minced onion. Tie fish and put in baking pan with little milk; bake about ½ hour. TURBOT—Mrs. H. L. Hibbard, 739 Alpine street—Take white fish, steam till tender, take out bones and sprinkle with pepper and salt. For dressing, heat pint milk, thicken with ¼ pound flour; when cool, add 2 eggs, ¼ pound butter and season little with onion and parsley. Put in baking dish layer of fish, then layer sauce till full. Cover top with bread crumbs and bake ½ hour. Canned salmon may be used with good results.

BOILED BARRACUDA WITH SAUCE—E. S. Fuller, Santa Ynez—Lay cleaned fish in salted water 2 or 3 hours, then wrap in cheesecloth and lay in large granite kettle of hot water in which put 1 tablespoon vinegar. Wash fish, pick in ½-inch pieces, and free from bones. Pare potatoes and cut in quarters, allowing heaping pint to a level cup fish. Put potatoes and fish in stewpan and cover with water. Boil 25 minutes, or till potatoes are soft; do not let get soggy. Drain off all water and beat fish and potatoes until light; add butter and pepper, and when cooled add stiffly beaten egg whites and more salt if needed. While fish and potatoes are cooking, try out several pieces sweet fat pork, and when crisp remove slices and keep warm. Shape mixture in cakes ½ inch thick and brown in fat on both sides. Drain and serve with hard-boiled eggs cut lengthwist and laid on each cake. Garnish with crisp pork.

CODFISH BALLS—Mrs. U. S. Tilburn, L. B. 377, San Fernando—Soak over night 1 pound boneless salt cod; in morning cover with fresh boiling water, and set at back of stove for 1 hour, then pour off water and pick apart with fork. Have ready some nice mashed potatoes (1½ as much potato as fish,) mix while hot with fish, adding 1 tablespoon butter and 1 well-beaten egg. Add pinch pepper and whip with fork until light. Roll into balls, then in cracker crumbs and fry to rich brown, in salt pork fryings.

CODFISH AND MACARONI—Mrs. G. L. Kendrick, San Dimas—Soak till well freshened 1 pound salt codfish. Drain and break it into small flakes, removing any skin or bones, and steam till tender. Into buttered pudding or deep pie dish put layer cooked macaroni, then layer fish. Add few slices hard-boiled egg, then another layer macaroni and one of fish. Set over steamer while preparing this sauce: Into saucepan put 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon flour, ¼ teaspoon salt and same of pepper, and stir over fire till well mixed. Chop fine 3 heaping tablespoons suet, and mix with 3 heaping tablespoons bread crumbs and put it into basin with fish, also about 2 teaspoons chopped parsley, 1 teaspoon chopped onion, 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper. Beat up 2 eggs with ½ pint milk and stir into above mixture. Mix well. Butter well a pudding dish, put in mixture and press down well. Cover top with piece paper greased. Steam 1 hour. Turn onto hot dish and pour over it this SAUCE: Put 1 dozen oysters in their liquor over fire, bring almost to boil. Strain liquor into basin. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in saucepan, stir in 1 tablespoon flour till smooth, add oyster liquor and 1 cup milk. Stir till it boils. Then add 4 tablespoons cream and then oysters (halved) with little salt, lemon juice, and very little red pepper.

SALT CODFISH WITH CHEESE—Mrs. M. S. Robinson, 358 Fireman street—Pick fish to pieces and parboil few minutes. Drain off water and to 1 teacup fish add 1 pint rich milk. Wet 1 large tablespoon flour with little milk and stir in fish and milk. When it boils add 2 beaten eggs, season with pepper, butter, bit of parsley and grated cheese to taste. Scatter fine bread crumbs on top and brown in oven.

BAKED HALIBUT—Helen Fitch, 2730 Raymond avenue—Take nice piece halibut, weighing 5 to 6 pounds, and lay it in salt water for 2 hours. Wipe dry and score outer skin. Set in dripping pan, sprinkle with little flour and salt and pepper; lay on top 3 slices bacon and 2 slices onion cut thin across onion. Put tablespoon butter or bacon grease and little water in pan. Bake 1 hour, basting often. Cook slowly. Serve with white gravy or cream mayonnaise.

BROILED HALIBUT—S. E. Lower, 479 Maylin street, Pasadena—Cut halibut in slices about inch thick, season with pepper and salt, and lay them in melted butter, about ½ cup, 1 hour, then roll in flour; place in pan and broil on broiler 20 minutes. Serve very hot.

PICKEREL, JEWISH STYLE—Margaret A. Burgess, 121 North Hill street—Clean and wash fish; place in kettle (somewhat larger than fish,) with 3 or 4 slices onion, handful parsley, ¼ pound butter, 1 pint white wine, 1 glass stock, salt and pepper; cover and cook slowly ½ hour. Lift carefully and put on warm platter. Add while stirring ¼ pound fresh butter to sauce and pour over fish.

ANGELES SALMON—Margaret A. Burgess, 121 North Hill street—Select salmon steak, at lease 2 inches thick; tie or wrap in cheesecloth; half fill kettle with boiling water, to which has been added slice of onion, bay leaf, blade of mace, 4 tablespoons tarragon vinegar or lemon juice and 1 teaspoon salt. See that salmon is covered with water and simmer 20 minutes. Lift carefully and lay on bed of crisp lettuce leaves, and surround with peas. Heap mayonnaise around peas, or change to tartar sauce by adding chopped olives, gherkins, parsley and capers.

BAKED SALMON—Mrs. Nellie McGill, 1546 West Eleventh street—Slice as for frying, place in dripping pan, dredge with flour and put over top flakes of butter and little white wine. Season well with salt and pepper and bake 10 minutes. Remove from pan and keep hot. Place in saucepan piece butter and 8 green onions finely chopped, but do not brown; add flour enough to make thick gravy, and white wine and water enough to make sauce. Add salt, pepper and little cayenne, 2 sliced lemons and chopped parsley. Let boil well and pour over hot fish.

BAKED HERRING—Mrs. Alice Watson, 140 South Albany street, Huntington Park—Soak salt herring over night, roll in flour and butter and place in baking pan with very little water over them, season with pepper, and bake.

BAKED SALMON—E. S. Fuller, Santa Ynez—Scale and wash a small salmon, lay in salted water for several hours, wipe dry and bake in granite pan in either of two ways. First, slice 1 large or 2 small onions, put these in and around fish, pour over all 1 large cup cooked tomatoes, sprinkle with little butter, salt and pepper and bake till tender. Second, fill opening in fish with simple bread-crumb dressing, containing plenty of chopped onion, tie fish in 2 or 3 places, pour cup tomatoes over and bake. If tomatoes are not liked, use hot water, adding ½ teaspoon mustard. One tablespoon butter on top of fish to baste it improves this dish.

BAKED SALMON—Mrs. M. A. Crawford, Hemet—Drain oil from 1 can salmon and remove all skin and bones; shred meat with fork and add 1 cup powdered bread crumbs, enough chopped cucumber pickle to flavor, salt and pepper to season highly and 3 eggs beaten very light. Beat whole thoroughly and turn into buttered baking dish, dot with bits of butter and bake 45 minutes in steady oven. Serve with cucumber sauce made by grating enough peeled cucumbers to fill coffee cup, add ½ cup olive oil, 3 dessertspoons vinegar, salt and white pepper to taste. Mix thoroughly.

BOILED SALMON—Mrs. G. L. Kendrick, San Dimas—Select fresh salmon, 2 to 4 pounds; scrape skin; wipe with cold, wet cloth; tie in square cheese cloth and put into kettle well-salted boiling water; or, better, lay fish on perforated pan and steam it; cover closely and cook slowly until flesh will leave bones easily; time will vary according to thickness of fish. When done, drain, remove skin, arrange on hot platter. Pour white sauce over and around fish. Have more sauce in gravy dish, for salmon needs plenty. Garnish with hard-boiled eggs cut lengthwise into quarters. It is nice to serve with this dish, boiled potatoes, green peas and cucumbers. To make extra choice, have ready a maitre d'hotel sauce—One rounded tablespoon butter creamed and blended with 1 tablespoon minced parsley, sweet green pepper or gherkin, 1 level teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon cayenne and 1 tablespoon lemon juice, or any favorite catsup. Spread over fish and garnish with lemon points and sprigs of parsley dipped in hot butter.

BOILED SALMON A LA CALIFORNIA—Mrs. Nellie McGill, 1546 West Eleventh street—Take juice 3 lemons strained, 1 cup water, 1 teaspoon vinegar, slice in 1 onion, 1 cup seeded raisins, 8 bay leaves, 6 cloves, with heads removed. Let this come to boil; put in salmon, large 2-inch slice, adding little salt, and let boil 5 minutes. Add 2 tablespoons sherry, also 1 sliced lemon (seeds removed,) and 3 teapoons sugar. Boil until salmon is cooked through. Serve cold.

SALMON BALLS—Mrs. C. W. Kendrick, San Dimas—Turn contents of ½-pound can salmon into bowl; drain off as much oil as possible and take out all bone and skin. Then rub fine with fork; beat in yolks of 4 eggs, ½ cup mashed potato, 1 tablespoon cream, salt and pepper to taste. Make into balls size of small apple, dip in beaten egg, then in fine bread or cracker crumbs or fine cornmeal, then again in egg, and fry in deep boiling-hot fat to delicate brown. If well beaten, will be very light and fluffy. Garnish with parsley or watercress. Any kind of cold cooked fish may be used same way.

SALMON CROQUETTES—Mrs. M. A. Crawford, Hemet—Shred contents of 1 can salmon, from which oil and bones have been removed, and season highly with pepper, salt and little lemon juice. Add mashed potatoes seasoned as for table in proportion of 2 parts fish to 1 of potato. Mix well and shape into croquettes, dip each in beaten egg, then dredge with bread crumbs and fry in hot fat. Drain and serve, garnished with parsley.

SALMON CROQUETTES—Mrs. H. L. Hibbard, No. 739 Alpine street—Take equal parts canned salmon, (after draining,) and mashed potatoes; season with salt and pepper, dip in egg and cracker crumbs, fry in butter or drop in hot lard. Left-overs of fish also may be used this way.

ESCALLOPED SALMON—Mrs. P. H. Poor, No. 2618 University avenue—Take 2 cups milk, put in double boiler; when near boiling add 1 tablespoon corn starch wet in a little cold milk, then add tablespoon butter and let come to good boil, stirring all the time; this is the sauce. Take can salmon, remove bones and skin, then shred in small bits. Into buttered earthen or granite dish place layer cracker crumbs, sprinkle with salt and pepper, then layer of shredded salmon; moisten with sauce. Continue this until dish is full. Have last layer cracker crumbs. Add bits butter and bake in moderate oven about 25 to 30 minutes.

ESCALLOPED SALMON—Miss Emma Gatzke, San Fernando—Take canned or leftover fresh salmon; line a dish with fish with bits of butter over it, a little pepper, onion if liked and then cracker crumbs; fish again, and so on till dish is filled. Then pour cup or more milk over it and bake in oven from 15 to 20 minutes.

SALMON WITH POACHED EGGS—Margaret A. Burgess, No. 121 North Hill street—Cut 5 rounds of bread an inch thick, remove centers, leaving case with narrow rim; brush over cases with melted butter and brown delicately in oven. Fill with cold boiled salmon, flaked and heated in 1 cup cream sauce to 1 pint salmon. Place poached egg on salmon, season with salt, pepper and chopped parsley and garnish with slices lemon. Serve hot.

SALMON LOAF—Mrs. H. L. Hibbard, No. 739 Alpine street—1 can salmon, ½ cup cracker crumbs, ½ cup milk, 1 egg; mold in loaf, put in bag and steam ½ hour. Cut in slices and serve with dressing of yolks 4 eggs, 2-3 cup oil, red pepper, salt and mustard to taste, juice of 3 lemons, and, last of all, 1 cup thick cream.

SALMON MOULD—Rose Wood, No. 410 North Bunker Hill avenue—Drain oil from nice canned salmon, pick off bits of skin, etc., put in basin with 1 tablespoon cream or milk and 1 tablespoon vinegar (or anchovy sauce.) Add little pepper, salt, dry mustard and nutmeg, and mash mixture well with fork. Press closely into glass or china dish and smooth surface. Melt butter in saucer or cup and pour on surface. Let cool and serve. Not to be turned out of dish.

SALMON PASTY (SWEDISH)—Mrs. C. W. Kendrick, San Dimas—Fry 2 pounds thinly sliced salmon cutlets in butter till nicely browned; let cool; take 2 pounds some other fish, finely minced, and add tablespoon melted butter, 2 well-beaten eggs, juice and grated rind of 1 lemon, salt and pepper. Mix well. Line deep pie mold or pudding dish with pastry; on bottom spread layer of minced fish; on this salmon, and around cutlets pack oysters, shrimp and mushrooms closely together. Cover with balance minced fish and cover all with pastry crust. Bake 1 hour in moderately hot oven. Serve with white sauce.

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY SYDNEY FORD.

Mrs. C. Coulson Gardiner,

regent of the Queen Alexandra Chapter, Daughters of the Empire, who was honored as one of the two delegates appointed from the United States to represent the imperial order at the coronation festivities in London.

THE coronation of King George V. is to be celebrated here on this edge of the American continent in splendid style by the Daughters of the Empire, who are planning a royal ball and entertainment to take place on the evening of the 22nd and which will be attended, not only by the British people hereabouts, but by a large number of Americans who are cordially bidden to join in the festivities. Invitations have been sent to English, Scotch, Irish and Welsh societies throughout Southern California and when one considers the thousands of British people living here and in close vicinity it is safe to estimate that the celebration of King George's accession to the throne will be properly recognized in Los Angeles.

It is only about a year since this order of the Daughters of the Empire was formed in Los Angeles and already there are two chapters with a combined membership of 150 women, all of whom are British born, as that is a condition of membership. A new chapter—the Victoria—has just been organized in Riverside, and the wife of the British Vice-Consul at San Diego, Mrs. Allen Hutchinson, is about to start a chapter there, and another is projected at Santa Barbara.

Since the Imperial order was organized in this country less than two years ago six State chapters, of which the local Queen Alexandra chapter is one, have been formed besides many local chapters and the order is looked upon as a power in the land and has been requested to co-operate with the Peace Committee in the British Empire and the United States and in the commemoration of the century of peace between English speaking nations.

The regent of the Queen Alexandra Chapter, Mrs. C. Coulson Gardiner, was honored by the invitation to be one of two delegates appointed in the United States to represent the order in London at King George's coronation where a special stand is to be reserved for them and their friends to view the procession. A further courtesy is the free transportation throughout the British Isles. Mrs. Coulson was in London at the time of the coronation of the late King Edward and enjoyed a personal acquaintance with King George when, as a young Prince he was at Halifax on board ship, before the death of Prince Clarence.

The order stands largely for philanthropy which is introduced in all its departments—of music, arts and literature—a definite aim being to assist talent in any of these departments. The orders of the United States already plan the erection of a building near some large city not yet decided upon, for a home for British women and men, built on the cottage plan, something like the Burdett-Coutts Home at Highgate, London. The Los Angeles chapters have rendered noble assistance to British people who were ill or in distress in this city in accordance with the high purpose of the order.

Mrs. Harcourt Wilson is regent of the Princess Mary chapter which is composed of young women who named their chapter in honor of the young daughter of King George and Queen Mary.

The officers of the Queen Alexandra Chapter are: Mrs. C. Coulson Gardiner, regent; Mrs. Fred Winstanley, first vice-regent; Mrs. Alfred W. Morgan, second vice-regent; Mrs. Harcourt Wilson, third vice-regent; Mrs. Thomas S. Davidson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. E. Gerald Ward, recording secretary; Miss Dorothy Fagge, treasurer; Miss E. C. McCullough, standard-bearer.

The last named office suggests the pretty ceremony of initiation of new members when the candidate stands under the two flags—the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes—as she signs the register of members.

Club Gossip.

Some of the women are puzzled as to just how it will work out—that new City Club that has started with such vigorous vim.

Said one prominent club woman who is identified with half a dozen or more leading womens' organizations: "I am asking myself what effect this new Monday club with its popular luncheons will have on the Ebell Club, which meets in the afternoon of the same day. Most of us will plan to do our weekly shopping Monday morning, you see, and wind up at the City Club for luncheon. Then, after we have listened to a strong address by some leading educator, politician or philanthropist, how much energy will we have left to go out to Eighteenth street to sit through another two hours?

"Another thing I am questioning is this. It may seem a small matter, but it is just these little things that count, after all; how many women will feel like paying 50 cents for lunch on Monday and another 50 cents on Friday at the Friday Morning Club, where the lunches are such a popular social feature?"

"Well," replied her listener, "you know it's almost time for both these clubs to adjourn for the summer, anyhow, and by the time they reconvene next October it will be election time, and the suffrage question will be settled then—at least for this year—and after that probably the new City Club will develop into an out-and-out political organization, and join forces with the men's city club."

"I understand," observed a third, "that already a six-story building is projected by the City Club, to be used for women only, located in a downtown district, where elegant club quarters will be fitted up."

Hollywood Club Elects.

The annual election of officers occurred at the Hollywood Woman's Club last Wednesday, and the following women were chosen to preside over the destinies of the club: President, Mrs. Calvin Smith; vice-president, Mrs. E. G. Schloesser; recording secretary, Mrs. F. W. Redhead; corresponding secretary, Mrs. G. H. Given; treasurer, Mrs. H. L. Knox; board of directors, Mmes. B. W. Harper, A. G. Gurney, F. W. Bartlett, C. R. Sturdevant and Edward Winterer.

The programme was prefaced by the reading of interesting newspaper clippings by Mmes. DeCamp, H. L. Knox, Wardley Wilton and McKeever, the main feature being the musical programme offered by Mrs. Graham S. Putnam, who has recently come to Hollywood from Salt Lake City. She was assisted by her young son, John Alden Putnam, a lad of 13, who is a veritable prodigy, and who has had the advantage of study in Germany under some of the best instructors of the Old World.

Miss Kathleen Hampton, a charming young girl, added to the afternoon's entertainment by her recitations.

Next Wednesday the annual club luncheon will be given at Toberman Hall, when clever toasts wil be responded to by members, the president-elect, Mrs. Calvin Smith acting as toastmistress and the officers and board of directors receiving.

On June 21 the annual reports for the year will be read and the new officers installed.

Contents of Club Woman's Handbag.

Talk about the contents of the small boy's pocket! They are as nothing compared to the contents of the club woman's hundbay. I met her at a parlor conference the other afternoon. She had previously disposed of some 2000 lead pencils for the benefit of the blessed babies of St. Elizabeth Day Nursery; had attended and presided at a woman's organization, dropped in at a benefit matinee, and incidentally was taking in the Y.W.C. C. parlor conference on her way home.

When the basket was passed around for contributions for the travelers' aid department she excused herself while she stepped into the hall to get her purse. She returned carrying what looked like a small edition of a transcontinental suit case which she proceeded to open. In her search I mentally noted the following articles which she fished out on her way to the purse—a volume of Roberts' "Rules of Order," a gavel, a constitution of her favorite club, a bank book, a convention report, a receipt, book and another of order blanks, a pair of opera glasses, gloves, handkerchief, smelling salts, calling cards, and a memorandum book, a street car transfer, two postal cards and a letter that she had forgotten to mail—some seventeen separate and distnce articles you see.

Club Notes.

The California Badger Club held its annual banuet last Wedesday at Casa Verdugo.

Tomorrow afternoon Mrs. George Goldsmith (Lillian Burkhardt) will entertain the Ebell Club, of which she is a member, with a rendition of "The Piper," the play that won the Stratford prize of the Shakespeare Memorial Theater.

W. L. Hubbard, former musical and dramatic editor of the Chicago Tribune, and at present editor in chief of the American Encyclopedia and history of music, addressed the Friday Morning Club last week, telling the members how we are to become a musical people.

The annual meeting of the Fine Arts League occurs next Tuesday at the Hotel Alexandria.

Cliff Dwellers Close.

The last meeting of the year of the California Chapter of Cliff Dwellers will be held on the 15th at the home of Mrs. J. P. Curtis at Tenth and Elm streets, Long Beach, when the members residing in that city will entertain the Los Angeles women at a luncheon

Here's a Proposition.

A woman who has a grievance, and a well-founded one at that—writes me as follows:

"You may have observed that some women who closely confine themselves to the specified calling day of their fashionable friends, calmly disregard the designated day of others who make no pretentions to being in society and, as a rule, they cheerfully admit that they came on an off day because they are calling on Mrs. So-and-so who lives in the vicinity, whose day, presumably, they feel compelled to observe.

"Now, I maintain that the woman who is up to her ears in work every day in the week, but who quits early one day in order to be in readiness to receive her friends, has a much better right to have her "day" observed than the woman of leisure who is not liable to be caught in working regalia and utterly unprepared to receive visitors.

"You are in an admirable position to point out the fact that these thoughtless women are guilty of an offense against good form; that a really well-bred woman would instinctively pay regard to the designated day of the busy friend rather than to that of the society favorite, if she must choose between them. And please make it emphatic."

California Hospital Nurses Banquet.

A big "Seeing Los Angeles" automobile rolled away from the California Hospital Thursday night just at twilight bearing a crowd of white-gowned nurses, the graduating class of 1911, who were bound for Mt. Washington Hotel, where the annual alumni banquet came off.

The Alumni Association of nurses of this great hospital now numbers more than 100 members, a large representation of whom were at Mt. Washington to welcome the class of 1911, who received their diplomas June 1. Miss A. A. Williamson, superintendent of nurses at the hospital, and her assistant, Miss Mildred Nichols, were also on the reception committee and a delightful banquet was served in the hotel dining-room. Miss Kent, president of the Alumni Association, welcomed the class, and Miss Shaw responded.

Miss Hilton acted as toastmistress and her keen and clever remarks kept the guests in a gale of merriment. Miss Williamson responded to the toast to the Alumni Association; Miss Simpson spoke very much to the point on "Emergencies," and Mrs Durbin replied to the sentiment "What Next?" Between courses the seniors sang class songs and at the close of the banquet impromptu dancing was enjoyed.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Mrs. Andrew Allen, a Chicago woman, has an original way of taking an interest in her maid servant. She found that her maid was engaged to a young motorman. She investigated the character of the man, and, finding that he was all right, turned the library over to him and the maid twice a week for nine months. The marriage took place the other day in her parlor, fifty of the friends of the bride and bridegroom being in attendance.

Miss Florence S. Markham has completed twenty-two years of service for Uncle Sam in carrying the mails between Stockbridge Station and the Interlaken postoffice, Pa. three miles distant. She has traveled in that time 59,904 miles on regular trips between these two places, and side trips made each day will bring the total up to 62,000 miles. For the first twelve years Miss Markham made a round trip of six miles a day, making a total of 22,464 miles. For the past ten years she has made two round trips a day of twelve miles, a total of 3840, all of which makes a grand total of 59,904 miles.

Helen Wollan, 22, has saved $6000 from tips she received as maid in the women's parlor at the Hotel St. Regis, New York, in a service of three and one-half years, and has sailed for Europe to make her home with her mother at Vienna.

Mme. Caroline Angelo is the first woman to be allowed to vote in Portugal. Mme. Angelo is the wife of a doctor, and the judgment granting her the right to vote has just been delivered by a magistrate of the Civil Court of Lisbon. This decision comes too near the next elections for other women in Portugal to have their claims tested.

George M. Brown, District Atorney, has announced the appointment of Miss Mabel Albright as deputy District Attorney of Douglas county, O. Miss Albright for the present will have complete charge of prosecutions of juvenile offenders. Miss Albright is the only woman holding the position of deputy District Attorney in Oregon.

RESH LITERATURE—BOOK REVIEWS.

lished by T. N. Foulis of Edinburgh,) he declares that love cannot do all, and that man is cowardly before all that is eternally feminine.

Nietzsche's doctrine of the superman has called forth much misunderstanding. Orage brings out the meaning of Nietzsche on this point with unusual clearness. Nietzsche's superman is not the superman of dreamers and idealists, but the practical and possible man of the earth.

The spirit of man must pass through three phases, he tells us—the camel stage, the lion stage, and childhood. Mark the order. The first phase—that of the camel—is designated by the will to power in its forms of submissive service and its respect for duty. For the task of being beasts of burden, power and endurance are essential, as well as the will to service and the ability to assume responsibilities. Such men are the public servants and officials, the law-makers of the people, and their aim is, and should be, service. The fact cannot be disguised that this will to service is merely a differentiation of the will to power. These men are at the bottom of the ladder, but they are necessary, for they are the preservers of life.

The second phase—that of the lion—is the one of destruction which follows preservation, whether in the individual or in the mind of man. All great forces of destruction have necessarily followed the metamorphosing of the force of conservation. In destruction belongs the preparatory race for the superman. In this phase, the will to power is in direct antagonism to the preservative will. Men in the lion stage, however, are not allowed to be lawless or irresponsible. Around these men fall the old ideals of duty and service. The dissolution of old ideals in itself would be fatal did not the race first retain in its spirit the knowledge of service which has come to it as a heritage through the camel phase.

The last stage is that of the child. For the child is really the superman. In the child there does not exist the human consciousness of the microcosmic and the macrocosmic; he is not conscious of responsibility and duty; there is within him no will to serve—which was the camel's. Nor is there in him the consciousness of the rejection of responsibility; he is without the will to power—which was the lion's. This child would rule by his instincts, by his presence, by his whole condition of being. Nietzsche held that every means was justifiable in producing this type. The child would, within himself, embody all the elements and morals of human progress; he would be the synthetic creature of the universe.

The doctrine of the superman is merely the fundamental of Nietzsche's philosophy. He can see this brought about only through a transvaluation of human values, through a recasting of life, through an understanding of the relations of man and woman, through the production of that art which constitutes a surplus of will above the will to live, through the adoption of the master-morality, and, finally, through placing human progress above idealism, health above holiness, efficiency above salvation.

IMPORTED LITERATURE.

A RED FLOWER. By Vsevolod Garshin. Brown Bros., Philadelphia.
THE GRISLEY SUITOR. By Frank Wedekind. Brown Bros., Philadelphia.
RABBI EZRA; THE VICTIM. By Frank Wedekind. Brown Bros., Philadelphia.

THE amount of continental literature published in this country is surprisingly small. We have had enough of it, however, to know of the rich and splendid genius of contemporary Russia, Germany, Austria, and Scandinavia. As a nation, we prefer literary sherbets to beef, and the few attempts to translate and import some of that remarkable literary output of the Continent has not met with a warm reception. Gradually, however, the names of Wedekind, Garshin, Norrevang, Strindberg, Stendahl, Gorky, Andreiyev, Schnitzler and others are becoming known in this country.

Much credit for this is due to Brown brothers, publishers, of Philadelphia, who have issued a dozen or more volumes of modern continental literature. Their "Modern Author Series," under which appear, from time to time, short stories and dramas translated from the works of modern European authors, have given Americans, for the first time, such grim and powerful tales as "Silence," by Andreiyev, who is probably the greatest of all Russian writers today; "Motherlove," a terrible one-act play by Strindberg, in which is depicted the vampire mother; "A Red Flower," an unusual short story of a madman; "The Grisley Suitor," a story dealing with the psychology of adolescence, by Frank Wedekind, who is one of the most conspicuous figures in the German world of letters today; and "Rabbi Ezra" and "The Victim," by the same author.

In "The Victim," (which covers only twenty pages) a girl of the streets tells her story—simply, unemotionally, at times almost coldly; but it has about it something of the power of a great novel—an undercurrent of poignant tragedy. It is one of the really great short stories.

It was Brown brothers who gave us Wedekind's other book, "The Awakening of Spring," a drama in four acts, dealing with the awakening of sex in children. This same firm also published "A Dilemma," by Andreiyev, a remarkable analysis of a mind on the borderland of insanity, which last year was reviewed to some length in this paper.

Through this same firm we have been made acquainted with Strindberg's "Fordringsagare" (The Creditor), a psychological study of the divorce question, which, in Germany, is the most popular of all of Strindberg's plays.

An undertaking of this kind by an American firm should be encouraged. Our literature is in need of the influence of continental thought.

TEXT BOOK FOR FLYERS.

THE NEW ART OF FLYING. By Waldemar Kaempffert. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)
MONOPLANES AND BIPLANES. By Grover Cleveland Loening, B.Sc., A. M. Munn & Co., Inc., New York. (Price $2.50.)

TWO books on aeronautics arrived in the same mail. A great flood of these books has recently inundated the market. From every quarter they come. The majority of them are valueless—written hastily by amateurs in order to catch the market while the interest in flying is in such a stage that people are avid for information concerning the art and principles of aerial navigation. As a rule, these books are slipshod and unauthentic — going over ground which has already been traversed numerous times.

Such a book is Waldemar Kaempffert's "The Art of Flying." While there are practical difficulties in the way of authors on aviation completing works of much permanent value, still there are phases of the development of aeronautics which could be recorded, to the permanent enrichment of aeronautical literature. It is too early to definitely arrange a complete history of aeronautics, and it is too late to go over all the myths of Icarus and tell in popular vein of Langley and Lilienthal—for the public is familiar with these stories. Kaempffert has not only fallen a victim to this latter method of writing aeronautical history, but has failed to avail himself of what possibilities his subject has at this time.

The chief difficulty in writing a successful book of this character is due to the fact that so many portions of original data are in the hands of widely separated individuals. The principal pit into which all writers on the art of flying fall, however, is the speculation on the future of aeronautics. Kaempffert is no exception. In a long chapter on "The Flying Machine of the Future" he gives us an essay of prognostications which at its best is fanciful, and at its worst is puerile. There is little in this book of any particular value, and a person, who is at all well read on this subject, will find little additional data to add to his stock of facts.

A book of far greater scope and of much greater merit, is "Monoplanes and Biplanes." I am even inclined to think that Mr. Loening's book is the best that has yet been published on the subject. While it is rather technical for the usages of the ordinary reader, it nevertheless has sufficient general interest and information to carry the reader over the more scientific parts.

Aeronautics is surprisingly compilcated in its mathematics and physical researches—far beyond the comprehension of the unscientific lay mind; but results of investigation and experiment may be told in concise form for general use. An aeroplane is a simple thing, mechanically, and is much easier to understand than other inventions. But the principles by which it is operated are complicated, and known only in a general way. Almost anyone, nowadays, by following specifications of successful models, can build an aeropane that will fly; but it required years of experimenting and thinking to evolve the first successful flyer.

Loening, in his book, has selected the historical material from a great mass of authenticated data, and from this he has evolved a work which is comprehensive both to the scientific man and to the general reader. A description of the successful types in use gives a very good resume of what has been done in the last two or three years along successful construction and aviation.

READERS' LIBRARY.

THE GREAT ENGLISH NOVELISTS. Edited by William J. and Coningsby Dawson. Harper Bros., New York. (In two volumes.) (Price $1 per vol.)

TWO volumes of "The Great English Novelists" have just been added by the Harpers to "The Readers' Library," which now contains seven volumes in all; two each of the "Great English Letter-Writers," "The Great English Short-Story Writers," and one of "The Great English Essayists." All of the books are furnished with prefatory essays, tracing the history of the novel, essay, short story, and letter, from its origin in the Bible or classical literature, down to characteristic specimens in the literature of today.

While some of the most brilliant passages of English literature are included within the compass of this library, the tendency of the undertaking is conventional and scholastic rather than literary. Also, in the "short-story writers," there was an obvious effort to exploit the Harper authors. The collection, however, is not without its merits, although an editor with a broader and more elastic taste could have improved much in the selection.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

Among the brilliant men who figure in the pages of Lieut.-Gen. Sir W. F. Butler's autobiography is Parnell. The writer tells of visiting him on his estate in Ireland during the shooting season, and gives this summary of his character: "Parnell was quite unlike any other man that I had ever met. Tall and strikingly handsome, there was in him something beyond definition or description. It was power utterly careless of its possession, seemingly unconscious of its own strength, unaggressive in its mastery, unstudied, impassive, without one touch of haughtiness. He was usually silent, but saying what he wanted to say in the straightest words; never offensive, always fair; always thinking, but never absorbed in his thoughts; thoughtful of others; alive to everything around him; entirely without pose or pretense; even in temper; showing breeding to his finger-tips. You say all these things, and you might say fifty other things about him, and yet you are conscious that you have said nothing; and the reason is this, that you might just as well attempt to describe the flight or passage of a Marconi telegram through space as to set down in words the secrets of this man's pre-eminence."

Kate Douglas Wiggin paid a charming tribute to Ellen Terry at one of the farewell dinners given to her in New York, in the course of which she said: "We are saying good-by to that elixir of sunbeams labeled by her parents, Ellen Terry. She is going home to England. Her heart may be beating with anticipation, but her American friends will miss her sadly. I confess that a country having ninety-five millions of people and no Ellen Terry in it seems a foolish sort of a place, a little dull, and not quite well furnished." Mrs. Wiggin has been spending the past month in London, where luncheons and dinners have been given for her by Countess Arrim and Sir Charles Wyndham. On May 19, at a dinner given by the American Circle of the Lyceum Club, she spoke for "The Guests," and at the Women Writers' Coronation Dinner on May 29 she spoke to the toast, "The Literary Life."

The origin of the perennial spring poem, which, like the poor pun, we have always with us, has apparently been discovered; and the guilty originator was a Manchu emperor of China—one Ch'ien Lung, born in 1736. Certainly, the following poem by him, quoted in Prof. Ian C. Hannah's "History of Eastern Asia," is so like the characteristic magazine spring poem of today that any respectable magazine would accept it as a "filler" without question; and it is a safe conjecture that it must have been the father of them all. Any member of the Poetry Union, New York Local, would not fail to point out the Twentieth Century Nuances in this poem:

"The season is a month behind in this land of northern breeze,
When first I hear the harsh cicada shrieking through the trees,
I look but cannot mark its form amid the foliage fair—
Naught but a flash of shadow which goes flitting here and there."

Frederick W. Taylor, author of "The Principles of Scientific Management," claims that one of the most beneficial results of the introduction of his famous system will be the elimination of strikes. In his recent Carnegie Hall speech before the representatives of forty industrial plants, Mr. Taylor said: "Labor's fear of new methods is only the old fear of strange things. It will disappear in time. There are 50,000 men at work under scientific management, and they are receiving 30 to 50 per cent. more wages than other men in the same trades outside. There have been no strikes where the principle is in operation, although the most serious kind of strikes have been called in the same trades under other conditions." It has been commented that in "The Principles of Scientific Management" Mr. Taylor tells how he spent thirty years and $200,000 to find out what makes a man lazy.

A singular story comes from a small town in Pennsylvania. On April 21, 1910, a cow was born on a farm near Alburtis, at almost the identical moment when Mark Twain died at his home in Connecticut. On her right side, outlined in dark brown against a snow-white background, is a profile bust of that author. The likeness, which was plain at the birth of the calf has grown more and more distinct, until it is now impossible to fail to identify the well-known features. Naturally, the cow was named Mark Twain. It is safe to say that the great humorist would have appreciated this joke of nature at his expense.

Mr. and Mrs. William Farquhar Payson have just sailed for England. He will be in London for the coronation, and will spend a good part of his summer in a round of visits to English friends and relations, many of whom have enjoyed Mr. and Mrs. Payson's hospitality in New York or in their charming home at Bristol, R. I. Mr. Payson, known by his "Periwinkle," "Barry Gordon," etc., is both author and publisher. As a member of Sturgis & Walton Company, he will look after his firm's interests in London.

Despite the large number of successful novels to his credit, Anthony Hope is still a young man. His latest novel, "Mrs. Maxon Protests," published last week, is in some respects his most ambitious novel. Mr. Hope lives in one of the fine old houses on Bedford Square, the property of the Duke of Bedford. Forbes Robertson, the actor, is an intimate friend and a near neighbor. Anthony Hope spends his summers at Overstrand, near Cromer, on the coast, where much of his writing is done. His wife, who is known as one of the most beautiful women in London, was an American girl—Miss Elizabeth Sheldon of New York.

John Muir's new book, "My First Summer in the Sierra," is dedicated "To the Sierra Club of California, Faithful Defender of the People's Playgrounds."

BOOK NEWS.

It is a curious fact that the countries in this hemisphere which were first discovered and explored by the famous travelers of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries are the least known today. The accounts of explorations in South America left by the Pizarros and others interested Dr. H. J. Mozans so much that he undertook a tour of the northern portion of South America, following in the footsteps of the old Spanish conquistadores. His volume published last year, "Up the Orinoco and Down the Magdalena," recorded the results of the first half of this journey, and the publihers promise for publication this month the companion volume, "Along the Andes and Down the Amazon."

"If Artemus Ward, Theodore Hook, Bill Nye, and Mark Twain, had ever conspired together and written a story in collaboration, the result might easily have been the story of 'The Magic Flue,'" says Dolores Bacon, in her new volume, "Operas Every Child Should Know." "Yet the opera of that name," she continues, "is one which every man, woman and child should know, for even this ridiculous story could not ruin the lovely music of Mozart."

One reviewer of of "The Grain of Dust," says he does not believe that Mr. Phillips had finished it before his death, and calls it "the first rough draft of the story he'd have done if he had not been murdered." As a matter of fact, however, Mr. Phillips was in the habit of writing each of his stories nine times, and "The Grain of Dust" was no exception. The story began its serial run the week after the author was shot; and the Appletons, who have now published the book, say that it was in type in their office four months before that time.

Recent incidents in our neighboring republic have aroused far more interest in books in that country than such uprisings generally do. The Appletons report that C. M. Flandrau's book, "Viva Mexico!" which has gone through several editions during the last three years, is in greater demand now than at any time since its publication.

Harry Franck's "A Vagabond Journey Around the World" has gone to press for its fifth printing. The author is at work on a new book, "Four Months Afoot in Spain."

The fortieth edition of Frances Little's "The Lady of the Decoration" is selling.

Immigration to Canada.

Of the 311,084 immigrants to enter Canada for the fiscal year ending March 31, the United States furnished 121,451. Comparatively speaking, that is not many, but figures showing that anybody at all is willing to leave the United States looks a bit queer.—[Louisville Courier-Journal.

SECURITY LAW AND ADJUSTMENT CO. is engaged in a legitimate law practice, which will stand the test of investigation by the Superior, Supreme or Appellate Courts of this State.

If you have a legitimate action at law, bring it to this company, which will safeguard your interests. Consultations strictly confidential, without charge.

SECURITY LAW AND ADJUSTMENT CO.
SIX ATTORNEYS.
ONE AN EX-SUPERIOR JUDGE.

We never deviate in our practice from the law as found in the State statutes. This company does not fear judges who owe their positions to political pull, or favor, or who arrogate to themselves power which exceeds that held by the U. S. Supreme Court.

BOOKLET FREE BY MAIL.

For the instruction and education of its numerous clients, and the general public, this company is having compiled from the records, autobiographies of judges who owe their positions to political pull, and the sanction of the machine-made political boss. Chapter one will explain in detail the methods followed by political judges in securing nominations and elections at the hands of push political conventions.

The succeeding chapters will explain the method adopted by political judges in securing free transportation from the Southern Pacific and kindred corporations, and the free use of telephones, etc. (Affidavits will be published to prove the record.)

In the quest for place and power political judges never fail to sacrifice the boss who made them, in an endeavor to advance their political and selfish interests. The snub from a Governor of this State is received with a smile, when policy calls for it.

The greatest menace to a republic is a judiciary which arrogates to itself powers not sanctioned by statute law. For example: Political judges frequently make arbitrary rulings, and as often repudiate them, when selfish or political ends can be served.

Political judges have it in their power to violate the provisions of the statutes by standing in with popular Sheriffs, and in order to secure their influence may, if they so will, order legal papers served by Deputy Sheriffs when the State statutes provide that such papers may be served by any person over 18 years of age. See statutes.

Such a ruling would add to the emoluments of the Sheriff and help materially in mending the political fences of broken-down and impotent political judges, who might indulge in such practices, and work great hardship on litigants by greatly increasing the expenses of legitimate litigation.

Political judges are past masters in the art of blinding the public to their true value, as the making of grandstand plays constitute their only asset.

The public is protected from this character of judge by a State statute which provides for the recall of political judges who prostitute their honorable position to base political and selfish ends.

All of the foregoing will be found in the booklet which will be mailed, free of charge, on application to the

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.
A RESIDENT OF LOS ANGELES 27 YEARS.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The horoscope shows the powerful influence of the planets in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic and financial affairs; talents; environment; about children; relatives; when and where to travel; what to seek or to avoid; when in danger of losses, troubles, etc., etc.; also your good periods coming — GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Mary Mannering, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, ex-Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Julia Marlowe, Anna Held, Jefferson, Louis James, Lillian Russell, Calve, Admiral Evans, H. E. Huntington, De Wolf Hopper, Maxine Elliott, etc. These are a few of the more NOTED PUBLIC PERSONS—and for this reason ONLY are they here mentioned—ALL positively read by PROF. ALTHOUSE, besides hundreds of the best people of Los Angeles, with whom all his readings are strictly CONFIDENTIAL.

DR. J. A. LARSON writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory thing I have ever had in my life. I know a great deal about these sciences, and I consider your work as the most THOROUGH and reliable of any reader in the United States."

MME. BALDWIN writes: "The Horoscope you wrote for me is absolutely CORRECT. My friend, MME. NORDICA, the singer, first showed me her Horoscope, and recommended your work to me. Inclosed find check for four more Horoscopes—all friends of mine."

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING gives also an ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S SKILLED WORK, with his trained judgment, must in no wise be classed with that of other readers. Therefore, do not waste your money on the idiotic advice and warning of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics—those doing dishonest work.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of HOROSCOPES and hand reading has brought him a LARGE AND SUCCESSFUL PRACTICE. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

HIGHEST GRADE OF WORK that skill and experience can produce, therefore—HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigation along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES DOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

STANLEY AND HOLT.
THE WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHICS,
247—S. HILL ST.—247.
LOW FEE—FOR THIS WEEK—LOW FEE.

Prof. Stanley desires to state that he has associated with himself Prof. Holt, who has just returned from Europe, and who is without question one of the greatest psychics the world has ever known. He being a member of the Psychical Research Society of London and Paris, also belongs to the famous adepts and Magi of India, having spent 6 years of his life in that country under the tuition of the greatest teachers of psychology the world has ever known.

KNOW THY FUTURE.

Byron Stanley is too well known that any introduction is necessary. He has been a resident of this State for 23 years and a constant worker in this city for the past nine; is a property holder. If you want the benefit of these able psychics, and want the truth, you will consult Stanley and Holt.

DO YOU WANT TO KNOW ABOUT YOUR BUSINESS, HEALTH, MARRIAGE, LOVE AFFAIRS, OR HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR CONDITION FINANCIALLY AND SOCIALLY?

ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. IT IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END. IT IS BETTER TO CONSULT NO CLAIRVOYANT THAN ONE WHO IS NOT ABLE TO HELP YOU.

If you want the truth, with reliable advice, you will consult Stanley and Holt on past, present and future. Also remember what has been told you, which too often is not the case.

Before you go into anything of importance—or undertake anything serious—in business or love or marriage, or before you make any change—you should consult the master mind of PSYCHICS.

STANLEY AND HOLT
fully appreciate that in this day of sensational advertising there are more false claims and misrepresentations chaperoned through the columns of the daily press than the most hypential tongue could utter in a lifetime, until one cannot be blamed for doubting almost everything they read. Therefore, they say to you—come to them this very day and let them give you a complete reading, telling you every hope, fear or ambition, better than you could explain yourself. They will tell you the bad as well as the good, keeping nothing hidden from you. They will tell you everything upon matters of love, marriage, divorce, business, health; in fact, they will read your life like an open book.

Don't struggle with a burden you can divide. A troubled mind begets a morbid conscience. Sympathy, consolation and timely advice heal the worst of wounds. Be advised and relieved of anxiety.

Readings, 10 to 8, daily and Sundays.

Stanley and Holt do not read by mail and have no time to wait on people who call through curiosity.

WANTED—DO YOU WISH TO SELL YOUR real estate? Houses, business property or building lots in Los Angeles or surrounding towns or cities? Do you know that we sell more real estate at auction than any ten average real estate brokers do at private sale and more than any five auctioneers combined? We will sell your real estate for cash. If incumbered you get all cash over and above your indebtedness. Why not try yours at auction? Instead of trifling from day to day (trying to sell) when you know you have a good chance of selling your property on a certain day and at a certain time without further delay. Remember that we guarantee you your price and positively make no charge for commission unless we actually sell, therefore you take no chances whatever. We can sell your real estate and sell it quickly (if worth the price you ask.) Others are selling by auction with great success, why don't you? We invite you to call at our office and see the list of properties that we have handled. Follow our auction ads in the Los Angeles Times and other papers. This will convince you as to our ability. Every auctioneer cannot successfully sell real estate. It takes a genuine real estate auctioneer to do so. We are real estate specialists at auction and have been for fourteen years and employ a large number of competent people for every department of the business. Our office is always open for consultation—call and let us explain to you. Secure our terms right; now is the time to sell. The H. C. PRICHETT COMPANY, Auctioneers. Phones Main 3224; Home 1221. 420 Security Bldg.

FOR SALE—NO HOOF, NO HORSE. Statistics show that 80 per cent. of all lameness is caused by hard and contracted hoofs. The dry season in this section is very hard on hoofs. As a hoof toughener, nourisher and grower, there is nothing equal to ESHELMAN'S WOOL FAT HOOF HEALER. Do you know about "Wool Fat?" It is great. It is not a grease. Grease and water will not mix. Wool Fat is very penetrating, and readily mixes with the water of the foot. It gives natural stimulation and nourishment to the hoof. Nor is there anything that can be compared with it as a remedy for contracted hoofs, split hoofs, quarter cracks, mud fever, corns, grease heels, and for cuts anywhere on any stock. Send for folder with many testimonials of prominent horsemen, vets and others. 4 oz. pkg., 25c; 12 oz., 50c; 32 oz., $1.00; 5-lb. pail, $2.00; 10-lb. pail, $3.50. Easy to apply. Directions with each package. Money back if not satisfactory. If not sold by your dealer we will prepay carriage.

We are the only Patent Attorneys who are practical mechanical engineers, and draughtsmen, and who are able to assist in perfecting inventions and putting them in shape for patenting and manufacturing; over 25 years' experience with large industries in the East, and over 5000 applications handled. We can show samples of the best patent work ever performed. The patent to E. H. McGuire for amalgamator, secured by us, was filed Feb. 13, 1911, allowed April 22, the final fee paid May 11, and the patent issued June 6, 1911.

SPECTATOR KILLED BY UNION PICKET.

Violence in Cleveland Strike of Garment Makers.

National Organizer, Woman, Is Under Arrest.

Employers to Hold a Conference Tomorrow.

CLEVELAND (O.) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The killing of a spectator, a union strike picket, the announcement that eight cloakmaking firms asked for a conference Monday with the strike settlement committees of the union and the arrest of Miss Josephine Casey, national organizer for the union, while on picket duty, marked the fourth day of the garment workers' strike today.

Yaro Simica, 19 years old, a teamster, was shot and killed when he joined officers in a chase after Benjamin Aquino, picket. Police were trying to catch and disarm Aquino when Aquino shot twice into the crowd. Simica fell with a bullet in his abdomen. Aquino was arrested later and a charge of murder was placed against him at Central Station.

Strike officials announced tonight that a conference had been asked for Monday by representatives of eight of the firms affected by the strike. President A. Rosenberg, Local Organizer Feit and Attorney Lewis A. Katz will meet them. President Rosenberg announced that the union stands ready to submit the strike questions to an arbitration committee, and United States Judge William L. Day was suggested by him as one man who might be acceptable to both sides.

Miss Josephine Casey took personal charge of the picket work at the H. Black & Company plant in the forenoon and accosted each of the girls as they went to work. Men from inside the factory attempted to interfere with the work of the pickets, and a call was sent to the Police Station. The police on strike duty at the plant began to disperse the crowd and when the patrol wagon arrived they loaded Miss Casey, five other women pickets and two of the men pickets into it. All of the pickets were released on their personal bond, and Miss Casey returned to picket duty. In the afternoon she addressed the woman's suffrage party of Cleveland, and the organization passed resolutions of sympathy for the women strikers.

A quiet Sunday was predicted by union leaders. Instructions were given the strikers at all of their shop meetings this afternoon to observe strictly their holiday and forget all about the strike. There will be no meetings Sunday.

Man Arrested Refuses Or Is Unable to Make Statement—Held in Jail to Await Investigation.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OREGON CITY (Or.) June 10.—On suspicion of being the perpetrators of the murders of William Hill, Mrs. Hill and Philip and Dorothy Rintoul, early Friday, at Ardenwald, a man was taken into custody late today near Milwaukie.

Deputy Sheriff Miles, who made the arrest, found him walking along the Southern Pacific grade between Milwaukie and this place. He was brought here and placed in jail awaiting investigation.

The man either refuses or is unable to talk.

He is about 35 years old and very unkempt. His clothes are badly stained and otherwise soiled, but there is nothing that resembled blood stains.

The authorities will keep the suspect in custody until microscopic comparison can be made between the blood stains found on the bodies of the victims and prints from the man's fingers.

SCOTCH-IRISH PEOPLE.

Ireland Was the Original Scotland, and the Irish the Original Scotchmen.

[Herbert O'Hara Molineux, in New York Tribune.] Everyone knows that the Irish and the Scotch are nearly related, but not one in a hundred has a clear idea as to what that relation is. Yet it is writ so large on the pages of Scotland's history that he who runs may read.

Scottish authentic history is far less ancient than that of Ireland, but its dawn reveals the West of Scotland peopled by Irish Celts and the East of Picts, whose ancestry is unknown. The first prince of the Irish in Scotland was Fergus, son of Eric—a friend of St. Patrick—who crossed over with an army from Ireland in 503. His great-grandson, Conell, was King of the Irish Scots when the apostle of Scotland, Columba, who was an O'Donnell, began the conversion of the Picts.

The Irish in Scotland continually extended their dominion, and by the ninth century they had the whole country under rule. In the middle of that century Kenneth, son of Alpine, (in Irish, MacAlpine,) lineal descendant of the Irish Fergus and Eric, succeeded his father as King of the Irish Scots, his sovereignty being acknowledged throughout the land in 846. The purely Irish monarchy he founded remained such till 1058, when Malcolm Canmore married a fugitive Saxon princess, but the sense of racial unity prevailed without cleavage till after the downfall of the Stuarts.

Thus it comes about that the language of Scotland, its clan polity, its plaids and kilts, its music and customs, are identical almost with those of Ireland. "The Irish," declares Collins, "colonized Scotland, gave it a name, a literature and a language, gave it a hundred kings and gave it Christianity."

Were these facts not known some of them might be inferred. Thus Ireland was the original Scotland (Scotia,) and the Irish the original Scoti (Scotia,) country and the people being known to Roman medieval Europe under those names. Scotland, for centuries serving as an Irish colony, was known as Lesser Scotland (Scotia Minor,) the adjective only being dropped about the thirteenth century, when Ireland had come into its present name. The Latin for Irishman has always been Scotus, and in Gaelic Irish and Scotch are known simply as Gaels of Erinn and Gaels of Albinn.

WILL FIGHT LICENSE PLAN.

Visalia After a Series of Contests Over Liquor Traffic Will Vote Again Under New Law.

VISALIA, June 9.—Not satisfied with two defeats within the past four months, the saloon men of Visalia are going to put before the electors of the city once more the question of licensing saloons. To do this, they will take advantage of the Wyllie local option law, passed by the last Legislature and of which Assemblyman Wyllie of this county was the father. George Birkenhauer, former Supervisor, today began the circulation of a petition asking the City Trustees to call a special election at which will be submitted the proposition, "Shall the sale of alcoholic liquors be licensed in the city of Visalia?" As far as known, this is the first time that the local option law has been taken advantage of in California, either by saloon men or the advocates of temperance.

Visalia has had two strenuous anti-saloon fights recently. The first was when the former City Trustees called a straw-vote election to ascertain the sentiment of citizens on this question. The result was 659 to 518, the anti-saloon forces being in the majority. This election was held on February 23. The old Council was at that time about to retire from office and took no official notice of the result of this election. Later, the old Trustees ran for re-election on a saloon regular ticket and all were defeated by the candidates of the Good Government League, who were pledged to make Visalia a dry town. The latter were elected by majorities ranging from forty to 150. The new Council has passed an ordinance closing out Visalia's saloons on June 30. At the meeting of the Council Wednesday evening, a request was made by the saloon men that they be allowed to continue in business until the first of the year. The request was denied.

A rumor was afloat today that the saloon men will attempt to secure an injunction preventing the Trustees from putting into effect the ordinance putting them out of business. Good Government League attorneys declare that such an injunction will never be issued.

THE SEA MISSING.

James Bay Is So Shallow the Sea Goes Back Seven Miles With Tidal Changes.

"Aha, Harold Montmorency!" the hero used to say in the burlesques of melodrama, "I know that you have stolen the ocean, but I'll make good my escape in spite of you, mark my wor-r-rds!"

It seemed a hard thing to do, that larceny of the sea, but James Oliver Curwood, who has traveled in some queer parts of the frozen North in search of tales of that region, tells a story that appears to involve just that achievement.

"On my first trip to James's Bay," he says, "we reached the bay just at sunset and camped within a hundred paces of the water, which stretched away as far as the eyes could see. It happened that I was the first to waken in the morning, and when I crawled out of my tent I gave a yell that aroused the camp. The sea was gone.

"Not a sign of that vast stretch of water could I find, except the great hollow partly grass grown dip in which it had been. My first thought and a natural one was that my reason had left me for an instant. Where had the sea gone? Had we really camped on its shores the night before? I strained my eyes but could see nothing but that dip speckled with pools of water.

"At the time I was in the company of a big Hudson Bay Company's man and I turned to find him laughing. Then the explanation came forth. At this point James's Bay was unusually shallow and at low tide the sea dropped back seven miles!"—[New York Sun.

REVENGE ON A JOKER.

A Returning Bridegroom Gets the Concentrated Results of His So-Called "Jokes."

All the pent up wrath of local bridegrooms who had suffered from tomfoolery and so-called "jokes" at their weddings was let loose upon Raymond E. Shute, of Glassbord, N. J., who had been one of the ringleaders in the silly game for several years.

Shute was married himself a few days ago, but managed to get away by a subterfuge. The plotters were busy, however, and they "got" him. Upon the return of the newly wedded couple to their home they were overpowered by a company of visitors and given the ride about town in the cart which had seen service so often under Shute's lead. The bride was then taken to her home, while the crowd proceeded to work out its revenge.

Shute was first taken to the public fountain, where he was compelled to take off his shoes and socks and wash his feet. He was then taken to the Auditorium ballroom and there did some spectacular dancing in his bare feet with his trousers rolled up to his knees, to the great delight of the many dancers.

Next he was hurried to a waiting automobile and taken to a cafe, where his face was blacked and he was forced to eat a salted coconut pie. Some sugared oysters had also been prepared for him, but the brigade relieved him of that ordeal.

In another automobile he was taken to Spring Lake, about two miles out in the woods, where he swam across the pond a couple of times while the crowd cheered.

This concluded the programme and the bridegroom was taken back to his bride. Throughout the whole performance Shute never balked.—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Leavenworth, Kan., is stirred up by the filing of ouster suits against Mayor Albert Dolge and Chief of Police J. T. Taylor, by Atty.-Gen. John S. Dawson, for failure to enforce the prohibitory law. Similar proceedings have been taken against two of her former Mayors, Crancer and Abernathy, but they failed of results.

Simple Tastes.

BINDING TYRANNY OF CLOTHES IS THE BANE OF KING GEORGE'S LIFE.

Although He Hates Dressing Up and Detests Uniform He Must Change Sometimes as Many as a Dozen Times a Day—Entitled to Wear Thirty British Uniforms and Scores of Continental Ones.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 8.—In America the ideal of every young man who wants to have a good time without too much work is to be a millionaire. In England the young man of similar propensities thinks he would like to be king. Of course, Americans know that most millionaires work harder than most day laborers, but few people either in England or America realize that the King also works as hard as the poorest of his subjects, and a good deal harder than most of them.

It is true that much of the King's work is what most people would call pleasure, but when one has to work at pleasure for twelve or fourteen hours a day it becomes hard labor, and there is no getting out of it for King George. He is the official head of British society, and the English church and the British army and the British navy, not to speak of the British empire, and he must be on show at all sorts of ceremonial functions all the time. And at every function he must be appropriately dressed. On a busy day when he has a dozen or more engagements the mere labor of changing his clothes alone would frighten an ordinary man, who puts on one suit in the morning when he goes to business and maybe changes for dinner when he gets home at night.

THE SEASON.

The present London season began on May 6, when the court mourning for the late King Edward came to an end. It closes about the end of July and from May 6, practically to August 1, King George will be literally on the run all day and every day, performing all sorts of social engagements and every day changing his clothes anywhere from six to a dozen times. The season will culminate, of course, at the coronation on June 22, which probably will be the busiest day of King George's life, but the festivities before and after it will be such that more than ordinary strength and stamina will be required to carry him through. It is a safe enough prediction, however, that King George will come through all right. Unlike his father, he is a strong believer in the virtues of the simple life, and he spares no pains to keep himself in the pink of physical health. He is an abstemious eater and almost a teetotaller, and he never misses a day without taking his accustomed stint of physical exercise. A season like the present one would have sent King Edward off a wreck to a continental "cure" at the end of it, but the King, when urged to arrange for such a cure in August, declared that he would get all the rest he needed during his voyage to India for the great coronation Durbar.

Apart altogether from the extraordinary festivities of the season King George is a busy man and even in ordinary times clothes take up a lot of his time. This is particularly hard on him because he doesn't care for dress. King Edward delighted in "drssing up" as keenly as any debutante geting ready for her first ball. He studied clothes and was never more pleased than when he had designed some little alteration in the ordinary dress of a gentleman. No man in the kingdom had a wider or more accurate knowledge of the niceties of military uniform than he. He knew to a hair's breadth the right position of every button on every uniform. If a decoration were a fraction of an inch to the right or left of the proper position he spotted the mistake at once and woe betide the valet who was responsible. King George, like all monarchs, of course, is a stickler for accuracy in such details but he doesn't charge his mind with them and he takes no delight in them. He trusts his valets. As far as ordinary dress is concerned he is particularly careful never to wear anything that is at all out of the way. He never will set a fashion as his father constantly was doing.

ONE DAY.

Here is a typical day in the King's life, showing not only his actual engagements, but how he has to dress for them. He rises at 7:30 a.m., gets into breeches and boots and goes for a ride in the park. When he comes back to the palace about an hour later he changes into ordinary morning dress, a lounge suit, breakfasts at 9:45 o'clock, and then spends the morning with his secretaries going over his correspondence and attending to the ordinary business of the day. He finds an hour during the forenoon for his physical training with Sandow or one of his assistants. If he has no public engagement, he need not change his clothes again until lunch time, when he gets into a frock coat and dark trousers, but if he must grant an audience or receive an Ambassador, he must don one of his many uniforms. His favorite uniforms, if a man who detests uniform can be said to have favorites, are those of a field marshal of the British Army, and the undress uniform of a British admiral. The latter, indeed, is the one that he wears most of all, and his naval training is probably accountable for this preference.

If he receives a foreign Ambassador, however, he must wear the uniform of one of the regiments of the Ambassador's country, to which he is entitled. There are also thirty uniforms of British regiments of which he is honorary colonel which he must wear on certain occasions. If it is a quiet day, he may get through the afternoon without changing again, but if he has two or three engagements, he may have to change as many times. He dresses for dinner about 7 o'clock and dines at 8. If the dinner is a mere family function, he wears the ordinary gentleman's evening dress, but if it is a state affair, he must wear state dress, consisting of an evening coat glittering with orders and black silk breeches and stockings. A variant on this which is permitted, is what is known as "pantaloon dress," consisting of an evening coat, with black trousers cut close to the leg and fitting tight around the ankles.

IS ECONOMICAL.

King George on the whole, however, has a decidedly economical taste in clothes and his tailor decalres that he is an ideal customer. The reason for this is that he never requires any freaks and that his figure is such that he is easy to fit. His ordinary clothes are made by H. Davis of Hanover street and his uniforms by Jones, Clark & Dawson of Sackville street. No doubt a good many American tailors think they would like to have the account, both for the good money that it brings in and for the advertising to be got out of it. They wouldn't like it so much if they knew the facts. The King's tailors must never use their royal patronage in any way to increase their trade and the King's clothing bill is a modest one. He pays from $40 to $75 for a suit, the lower price being for his lounge suits and the higher for his evening clothes and his tailor's bills rarely exceed $2000 a year. His uniform bill, if he laid in uniforms as King Edward did, would be a much heavier one, but as a matter of fact King George hasn't many. Of course he has the British uniforms that he is entitled to wear, but I learned the other day that in some cases he makes one tunic do for three or four regiments by changing the trimmings and ornaments as the occasion requires. This is quite an appreciable economy as a full uniform outfit, consisting of full dress and undress, costs about $400. He owns few foreign uniforms, but is content to order them as he requires them.

ETIQUETTE.

It is royal etiquette for a monarch when he receives the right to wear the uniform of another country to have it made by that country's tailors. So easy is King George to fit that when he finds he needs a German or a Russian uniform he simply sends an old tunic over as a pattern. Another monarch who is equally fortunate is the Czar. A few months ago he wanted a British uniform and sent a tunic to King George's tailors. When they came to cut the cloth they found that they didn't need the Czar's pattern at all. They just used King George's and the result was a perfect fit.

So, therefore, King George's wardrobe is not an extensive one. His outfit of ordinary clothes, as has been said, is rather smaller than that of most rich men, and his supply of uniforms, while it may grow as he has occasion to pay state visits abroad or attend ceremonial functions at home, is at present small. In addition to the uniforms of the thirty British regiments, he is entitled to wear that of at least one regiment in every country in Europe. In many he may wear two or three. King Edward had all these uniforms always ready.

HIS VALETS.

Of course, the mere act of changing is made as easy for the King as possible. He has two valets, the senior, Howlett, having been with him for a number of years, and two "brushers" who assist the valets. A valet and brusher are always on duty. Every morning the valet receives a copy of the King's list of engagements for the day and it is his duty to have the appropriate clothes ready when the King comes to change. He must know all the niceties of all the uniforms and see that everything is correct to the last dot. In spite of all this responsibility the pay is not high. Howlett receives a salary of $600 a year and has an apartment in St. James's Palace. Of course, he will also be pensioned, as King Edward's valet was, when he grows too old to work or when his master dies.

Apart from all this dressing and undressing and all the regular and extraordinary business he will have to attend to during the coronation season, King George will have to do a lot of private entertaining. The other day he went over the list of his royal relatives who will actually be housed in Buckingham Palace during the coronation ceremonies.

"I never knew before that I had so many cousins in the world," he said to his secretary. And no wonder he made this remark, for there will be eighteen distinct parties of them in the palace comprising over ninety persons in all who can claim close blood relationship. Imagine having to be polite to ninety uncles and cousins and aunts all at one time for a fortnight on a stretch. And being polite is not merely a form with King George. He is a strong believer in the duty of hospitality and he may be relied on to see personally after his guests' comfort and to devote some personal attention to each one. An ordinary man would have difficulty in remembering all their names.

Hardly a day will pass during the crowded three months without a banquet of some sort at which King George will have to preside and make a pretense at least of eating. Here is where his abstemiousness will stand him in good stead. As a rule, he eats only the plainest food, cooked in the simplest manner. Roast or boiled meats, green vegetables and fresh fruit in season form his staple menu and his appetite is small. He drinks nothing but a little claret of the lightest variety. At banquets the most skillful chef can't tempt him to try experiments with his digestion. He sticks to the plain food and selects just what he wants from the menu.

EARLY HOURS.

He is also a believer in early hours. As a rule he manages to get to bed by 11 p. m. and even on state occasions he usually gives the signal to retire before midnight, and when he does get to bed he sleeps soundly. And he never worries. If he has a chance to take a ten minutes' rest in the middle of a crowded day he does so. King Edward utilized these unexpected intervals to jump into a motor car or a carriage and dash off to see some one. King George lies down on a couch and gathers energy for the rest of the day's work. When he gives one of his secretaries or aides a piece of work to do he dismisses it from his mind until the result is ready for his approval. He had made up his mind exactly what he wanted before he assigned the job, and he insists on having exactly what he ordered. King Edward often changed his mind a dozen times while the work was in progress, and when it was done found that it didn't suit him at all. Another trait of King George's character which saves him from undue strain is his trust in his assistants. Once he selects a man he places implicit confidence in him and requires uncommonly strong evidence against him before he withdraws that confidence. King Edward often was swayed by the gossip of the Court and hampered his assistants by this lack of trust.

King George will get through his busy season all right and if he does go to a "cure" at the end of it, it will be not because he feels he can't do without it, but because his family and physicians have insisted on it as a precautionary measure. And if he goes it will be to an English "cure," for the King is very keen on reviving the glories of the English spas at Harrogate and Bath, which he regards as fully equal to the fashionable "bads" on the continent.

what is today the Bimini section and the entire northwest portion of the city has suffered because of its existence. Property values in its vicinity have been kept down to a value which is ridiculously low when it is considered that the district immediately adjoins both the Wilshire and Westlake sections and that dwellers along a large part of its extent are only about seventeen minutes from the heart of the city.

The Temple street car line comes to a halt at this slough for the reason that people will not build at the edge of a swamp. In the entire vicinity the croaking of frogs is distracting. Yet the Temple street line, if continued to Vermont avenue, would open one of the most attractive areas in the entire city. The development of the entire northwest part of the city has been hampered by this slough and not only the property holders near its brink but the city at large can find good cause to condemn it.

Plan Unbelievably Simple.

The park department declares that the transformation of this nuisance into a positive benefit to the city is a simple and comparatively inexpensive undertaking, once the ugly depression comes into public possession. Of course there will be the usual attempt to hold up the city through excessive appraisals, but the municipality should make short work of any who try such a dodge. Excepting for park purposes the slough is worth nothing.

The plans of the commission call for the planting of both banks of the ravine with dense woods, the installation of a perfect drainage system and the laying out of walks. Grassy slopes and flower beds will be created at intervals and at suitable places the sunken garden effect striven after. Such a parkway can be made inconceivably beautiful.

Through it will run the boulevard connecting Westlake and Sunset Parks with the water department's beautiful tract at Silver Lake and with Griffith and Elysian Parks. The park project, if carried out along the lines suggested by the commission, would in almost no time at all redound as much to the advantage of the northwest part of the city as today it works to the disadvantage of one of the most sightly and accessible sections of Los Angeles.

The writer believes firmly that it would be hard to overestimate the great enhancement in values that would result from the transformation of this slough into a parkway. Sites along its brink, which are today almost shunned, would after the carrying out of the Park Commission's plans, command a prospect as lovely as any on the Arroyo Seco. It is not unreasonable to predict, in fact, that such sites would be bought by the wealthy for improvement with mansions such as adorn similar ravines in Pasadena. Crossing and recrossing such a parkway would become a pleasure and the feature of a car ride to or from the Bimini and Heliotrope drive sections.

It is safe to say that the building that would follow to the west of the ravine and northwest toward Hollywood as the result of the improvement would establish values which would pay for the project ten times over in a few years. By making it possible to carry out the Park Commission's ideas the City Council will be killing innumerable birds with one stone.

STEEL STRUCTURE TO BE REARED.

SUBSTANTIAL IMPROVEMENT FOR VALUABLE CORNER.

Local Capitalist Has Faith in Los Angeles' Stability—Will Expend Vast Sum for Stately Five-Story Structure at West Sixth Street and Boylston Ave.

Los Angeles is becoming noted for the excellent class of its hotels and apartment buildings. To the number of high-class apartments which have been constructed and have been planned for early erection, will be added a magnificent brick, concrete and steel structure to be erected on the northwest corner of West Sixth street and Boylston avenue for George K. Darling of this city.

The imposing structure which Mr. Darling plans to build will be in the form of a letter "H," and will occupy one of the choicest apartment-house sites in the city. It will cover the greater part of a corner lot 178x150 feet in size. The building will cost $150,000. There will be five stories and basement. Wide stairways will lead to the entrance lobby, which will be situated on the second floor. There will be 240 guest rooms in the building, divided into suites of from two to six rooms each, with private baths.

The main floor will contain besides a number of living suites, social parlors, a large dining-room, billiard room and game room. The second floor will contain a banquet hall and a ballroom. These rooms will be richly decorated. The wood finish will be of mahogany and oak, with polished floors of quarter-sawed oak and maple.

The three upper floors will be devoted entirely to living apartments. These will be in suites to suit. The bath rooms will be fitted with the best grade of sanitary fixtures. Steam heat, hot and cold running water, intercommunicating telephone system, and vacuum cleaning apparatus will be installed. Several passenger and freight elevators will be operated from the basement to the roof. There is a central tower surmounting the building from which a fine view can be had of the entire city.

The building will have a frame of structural steel, thoroughly fireproofed; the floor slabs will be of reinforced concrete, the partition of hollow terra cotta and the exterior walls of brick. The outside facing of the first story will be of granite.

Mr. Darling, before becoming a permanent resident of Los Angeles, was a prominent business man of Pittsburgh, Pa. Besides the property upon which he will build the apartment building pictured on this page, Mr. Darling has several pieces of business property upon which he contemplates the erection of substantial structures.

CITY LOT FOR ORANGE GROVE.

John J. Hill reports the sale of the Sunburry apartments, southwest corner of Tenth and Byram streets, from J. S. Atterbury to W. M. Hillis. Mr. Atterbury takes as part payment a twenty-acre orange grove, with fine improvements, at Riverside. Price involved is $80,000.

FAIR EXCHANGE.

The Albert H. Beach Company, through D. P. Beougher, has exchanged a seven-room modern house, situated on Capitol Hill, Denver, Colo., valued at $7000 and owned by W. D. Thompson, for a house and lot situated on Prospect boulevard, Hollywood, worth $12,000, owned by E. E. Peters.

NEW HOMES SELL.

E. Rabin & Co. report the following sales: W. J. Linn buys on New Hampshire street lot 40x150, improved with six-room house, furnished, $3500; M. S. Kornblum, lot 50x150, improved nine-room house, on Kingsbury Drive, near Fourth street, $8500; A. Franklin, corner West Ninth and Avenue A, Colton, $5000.

IDYLLWILD SOLD.

The well-known mountain resort known as Idyllwild, consisting of 3665 acres of land in Riverside county, nestled among the San Jacinto mountains, has been sold to Frank R. Strong, George W. Dickinson, C. L. Whipple and S. A. Selover, acting as agents for interested parties. The reported consideration is $150,000. The new owners propose to continue the resort as heretofore.

PARK BOOSTS VALUES.

Northwest Property Owners Approve Plans—Slough to Be Made Beauty Spot.

The prospect that the slough which crosses the northwest part of the city at a point just east of Bimini Baths will be converted into a parkway connecting Sunset and Griffith Parks, has served to greatly stimulate realty activity in the vicinity of this ravine. The effect, in fact, is evidenced throughout a large part of the Wilshire and Westlake sections where everyone is discussing the new park and its certain influence on values.

One of the tracts which will be benefitted by the Park Commission's great project is the Westlake addition, which, though lying three blocks away from the ravine, is yet within the zone that will find in the new parkway a delightful recreation spot. Bryan & Bradford, general agents for the property, which lies in the sightly area bounded by First and Temple streets east of Reno street, state that recent buyers of lots in that tract are enthusiastic over the park enterprise, and that inquiries by prospective home-builders have more than trebled since the park board endorsed the parkway project. Similar reports are made by other dealers in the same neighborhood.

The following recent sales in Westlake Addition are reported by W. S Radis, manager of lot department of Bryan & Bradford; Anna Gyer, 50x127 feet, west side of Dillon street north of Council, $1650 cash, now being improved with $3500 residence; Mary H. Day, 50x120 feet, east side Vendome, south of Council, $1500 cash, now being improved with $3000 bungalow; F. D. Prescott, 50x127 feet, northeast corner Vendome and Council, $1650; Paul C. Hancock, 150x120 feet, to 15-foot alley, east side of Dillon, north of First street, $4500, is building a seven room bungalow; Ira A. Marshall, 50x127 feet, east side of Dillon north of Council, $1500 cash, has two story, eight room house now under way; E. R. Menwell and Paul C. Hancock, 150x120 feet, to 15-foot alley, west side of Dillon street, north of First street, $5100.

Getting Together.

DICKER IS ON FOR A SCHOOL.

HUNTINGTON PARK HIGH MAY COME INTO CITY.

Proposition Receives Favor of Majority of Heads of Families in Territory Proposed to Be Added to Larger District—Reasons Given for Mutual Advantage.

Annexation of the Huntington Park Union High School district to the Los Angeles High School district appears to be almost assured.

Under a new law it is necessary to have a petition for this purpose signed by a majority of the heads of families of the Huntington Park district indorsed by the County Superintendent of Schools and approved by the Los Angeles City Board of Education. The petition has the required number of signatures of heads of families of the Huntington Park district.

Mutual advantages are stated in favor of the proposed consolidation of districts. One of these is that the present High School tax in the Huntington Park district is $1.01 on $100, while in the Los Angeles High School district it is 19 cents on $100.

The Vernon common school district, which is a part of the Huntington Park High School district, has five students in the High School and is paying a High School tax of $10,000 per year.

Material reduction of the High School tax is urged as a big advantage the property owners of the Huntington Park district would gain by annexation. Acquirement of land much needed for agricultural training and of a school plant that would care for several hundred pupils now crowded in the Los Angeles High Schools are presented as inducements to property owners of the Los Angeles district.

In the Huntington Park High School there are at present 105 students. The school has a capacity for 450 students. It may be reached from Los Angeles with a 5-cent fare. It has twenty-two acres suitable for the use of agricultural classes, buildings almost new that cost $100,000 and a power plant and water system.

SYNDICATE BUYS KNOLL.

New Owners Will Subdivide Property Into Attractive Residence Tract.

A large deal in inside acreage has been concluded through the agency of Cloyd G. Guyer, whereby James V. Baldwin and associates have sold to a syndicate of Pasadena and Los Angeles men, twenty-six acres of land fronting on Wilshire boulevard and joining the westerly side of the 200 acres of land just purchased for $1,000,000 by R. A. Rowan & Company. The price paid for the property was $136,000. The new owners, among whom are Freeman A. Ford, Harry Gray, William H. Burnham, F. P. Fay and John F. Taylor, have incorporated as the Wilshire Heights Company, and will subdivide the property in fifty handsome lots, and will expend about $50,000 in improvements, beginning work at once. The lots will each have a frontage averaging about 100 feet and a depth of 180 feet with fourteen-foot parkings. The building restrictions will be such as to insure the highest class of improvements. The supervision of the work and the selling of the property will be done through the agencies of James V. Baldwin and Cloyd G. Guyer.

PROGRESS NOTED.

Alfred E. Gwynn, manager of the Western Building and Investment Company, reports great activity on the various tracts now being developed by this company. During the past two weeks five houses have been sold in the Hollywood tract; on its Main-street property twelve sales have been made, and in College Terrace, on Eagle Park avenue, ten houses are under construction.

Here it is! Don't look any further! A fine six-room bungalow, strictly modern—hardwood floors and every convenience. As pretty a little house as any one could wish. And the location is close to Western avenue on West Twenty-ninth street, on a fifty-foot lot, well improved with lawn, flowers and shrubbery. We haven't seen a bargain like it for a year. The bank loaned $2000 on it. Now the owner must sell. He leaves for South America this week. Be wise and take the chance here offered you. Only $3550.

REMARKABLE BARGAIN HERE.

$6500.

Look at this! A nine-room, modern home, finished in hardwood, with furnace and every convenience, for such a figure! A fine home in a location unexcelled on West Adams Heights. Think of it! We have never offered any bargain like it. It lacks none of the excellencies of the best homes, and the lot is covered with bearing fruit and shrubbery. The property is worth $9000 of any man's money. The owner sells because he must leave at once. It is the chance of a lifetime. Only $6500.

ATTRACTIVE WESTMORELAND HOME.

$6750.

The man who desires a close-in home will look far before he finds the equal of this. An eight-room house of that attractive chalet bungalow style, built but a short time, and with all the modern and cosy ideas to make a delightful home. Hardwood floors downstairs, polished above; big living-room, handsome dining-room and small breakfast-room; a garage and a big 60x150-foot lot, well improved. You could not want it nicer. And the location is Westmoreland, close in. Price only $6750.

EIGHT-ROOM, WILSHIRE BUNGALOW.

$8000.

Seventy-foot lot.

This property consisting of an eight-room bungalow, finished in hardwoods, situated on an east front corner lot, seventy feet wide, is the ultimate thing in bungalows and is absolutely the finest finished house for the money we have ever seen.

The living-room is finished in mahogany, the dining-room in oak, the den in birch, and the remaining rooms in beautiful egg-shell white enamel.

There are two bedrooms and an elegant bath downstairs, and upstairs is a beautiful suite consisting of a large bedroom, bathroom and fine sleeping porch with a concealed bed.

A dainty Dutch breakfast room, very convenient to the kitchen, is the last feature of this dream of a house. There is a good garage.

Remember the seventy-foot lot, the eight rooms, hardwood floors throughout, and hardwood finish, and the two baths, and you will be convinced that this is a bargain.

BEAUTIFUL WILSHIRE BUNGALOW.

$8750.

This bungalow is the swellest thing built this year. It stands on a sixty-foot corner lot, facing east, in Wilshire; and the eight commodious and elegantly appointed rooms, with two baths, sleeping balcony and three porches, make the largest and handsomest bungalow we have ever seen. It is finished with the last word in Wanikaskie mahogany and elegant decorations, superb lighting facilities, and attractive rooms throughout. It has a furnace and an automatic water heater in the basement; hardwood floors everywhere; the family bath tiled, and servant's room and bath well arranged to the rear; breakfast room delightfully sunny; one large room above stairs that will be either billiard room, or play room or balcony bedroom, and there is a regular balcony opening off of it. Last, there is a fine garage, with drive. The price of $8750 would not duplicate the property.

BEAUTY ON HIGH GROUND.

$11,500.

This magnificent new house is situated on an east-front lot at the highest point of beautiful Rampart blvd. There are nine large rooms, with oak floors throughout, unique electric fixtures, handsome wall hangings, two up-to-date bathrooms, gas furnace, and fine garage with plumbing and servant's quarters. The grounds are beautiful, with shrubs and roses in profusion. Easy terms.

NEW HAMPSHIRE NEAR WILSHIRE.

$15,000.

East front lot, 75x150 feet, only a step from the boulevard, and a house of nine rooms and garage large enough for two cars with two finished rooms and bath in the second story. This beautiful home has a commanding view of the city and mountains and is surrounded by several homes costing over $100,000. There are five bedrooms, large living-room, dining-room, library, breakfast-room, kitchen and pantry. The cellar is very large, of solid concrete, has furnace, Ruud heater and an expensive water filter. A responsible party can handle this property with a very small payment.

LARGE RESIDENCE IN WILSHIRE.

$22,000.

We have seen no residence of twice the figure that surpasses this in superb arrangement, thoughtful comfort, and quiet elegance throughout. It stands on a wide lot, very close to Wilshire blvd., and it has the benefit of large gardens that lie alongside. The entire lower floor is finished in hardwoods—the splendid hall and stair in golden oak, the spacious, dignified living-room in dark mahogany, the large and elegant dining-room in Peruvian mahogany, and the secluded, livable library in weathered oak. Needless to say, there are maid's room below stairs, a furnace, automatic water heater, garage with chauffeur's room, hardwood floors all through the house. This home is a harmonious whole; there are perfectly stunning bedrooms, baths, balconies and every necessity such as closets and attic. We believe this property unequaled by anything of anywhere near a like price in the city. It is the opportunity of some man who wants a splendidly built and faultlessly finished residence in Wilshire.

FOR SALE—
ARE YOU SHARING IN THE GREAT GROWTH IN VALUES IN LOS ANGELES REAL ESTATE? Join now and profit in the great development of the SOUTHWEST. It is an opportunity of a lifetime of which you should avail yourself. PANAMA ACRES located in southwest, along the Shoestring Strip, just where lot subdivisions leave off and the rich farming district north of Strawberry Park begins. Acres for $600—$60 Cash—$15 Month. The best acreage offering around Los Angeles. Take Strawberry Park car on Broadway, or San Pedro Interurban car, west on Third to Athens, see Mr. Belton there, he will show you in auto, or see Warren F. McGrath, with STRONG & DICKINSON, 147 S. Broadway. Nothing coming to the one who waits but dust from the procession.

FOR SALE—
YOUR MONEY WILL EARN YOU MANY TIMES 4 PER CENT.
It's all very well to bank your "nest egg." That's a very good way to accumulate money. But you must realize that your savings are not bringing you the maximum return. Why be satisfied with a little 4 per cent. interest, when your dollars can earn you many times that income, and still be JUST AS SAFE? Even though your savings are small at present, you can place them where your earnings will be big. Just pick out a lot in Arlington Square, pay $25 cash and then $15 monthly. Prices will never be lower than they are today, only $725 up. Values are growing, will grow as Los Angeles grows. When you get ready to sell in a year or two, your profit will be a very handsome one. Remember—I am not advising you to purchase the ordinary lot, that looks to some problematical growth or possible improvement for its value. This is a finished district. The car service is already here—good car service by several lines, with five-cent fare. City conveniences here, too—including gas, electricity, telephones, etc. And fine improvements already installed—graded and oiled streets, cement walks and curbs, and wide, tastefully planted parkings. You'll appreciate what a safe investment Arlington Square is when you see the property and the fine homes being built on it. Do this at once. Take Inglewood car to my tract office, corner Arlington street and Santa Barbara avenue. Or, come to my downtown office, and have me take you out in my automobile.

The foothill slopes of Eagle Rock are nearer to the center of Los Angeles than much of the vaunted southwest. The elevation is about 750 feet, insuring pure, bracing air. The finest lots in Eagle Rock can NOW be purchased for from $500 to $800. Most of them are covered with trees—all of them face on well improved streets and are properly restricted. When the new bridge across the Arroyo Seco is built, and Greater Occidental College is established in Eagle Rock, these same lots will be selling for from $1000 to $1500—if you are able to buy them at all. FOR SALE—
UNDER BIG ROOSEVELT DAM.

Acres of beautiful, heavy, growing alfalfa fields right on railroad and at town amid thriving farms. Under rules of United States Reclamation Service we must reduce at once our holdings of 18,000 acres, known as "Famous Chandler Ranch." Same applies to fertile farms of beautiful grain; all level as a floor with abundance of running water.

Oranges—Lemons—Grapefruit.

Ten acres or more right at townsite, ready for working, with running water on land; finest sandy loam, very deep; all on ten yearly payments.

Government will turn over to farmers big Roosevelt Dam, reservoiring 1,300,000 acre feet water, with thousands of electrical horse power, with big income to farmers. Also many mammoth wells of 78 per cent. clear warm water, operated by electrical power from government project.

When you learn that this is twice as good as homesteading the very best of lands, you will know what an opportunity exists in the beautiful fertile Salt River Valley, where sunshine, abundance of water and the richest soil known (see government reports) has made everybody there so prosperous and happy.

CANTALOUPES THE EARLIEST.

We started to ship cantaloupes in May this year, and estimate the yield per acre will amount to twice what we ask per acre for the land we offer. If you are familiar with the cantaloupe markets you have heard of the "Mesa Cantaloupes," which means flavor, size and top prices.

Home markets.

Truck gardens get top cash prices supplying near-by mining towns. Demand for poultry and eggs exceeds supply, although same can be produced at half cost of Southern California. Same obtains with cattle, sheep and hogs, with plenty of range near-by.

Cost per acre—$100 to $150, 10 years' time; deal direct with owners. Our aim is to close out quickly, so get in while you can. No pioneering or hardships.

An opportunity seldom offered. We hold an option on 27,000 acres of good agricultural land at $3 per acre. The soil is a deep rich alluvial deposit. The water indications are excellent. The rainfalls are sufficient to insure large crops of grain. The railroad passes through this body of land. The land is located in the best part of the State of Sonora. If you are interested in this proposition, and are qualified to make an investment after personal inspection, come to the office for full particulars. Arrangements are being made for an inspection trip about June the 20th.

YUCAIPA VALLEY—

FOR SALE—

RED APPLES

GROWN

are the most staple of all fruits. An orange is a luxury, an apple a necessity. There are no RED MOUNTAIN GROWN APPLES on the market today, the supply is exhausted. Do you wonder at our statement that apple growing in the Yucaipa Valley is as profitable, if not more so, than orange culture. Our very best land cost you only $275 an acre, including one share of water stock in a mutual company, with each acre, giving you not only a water right, but water ownership, very easy terms. It cost you about $160 an acre to bring your apple trees into profitable bearing, which brings your orchard complete at a cost of $435 an acre.

Apple growers from Colorado, Michigan, Oregon, Washington and New York, as well as orange and lemon growers, together with a large number of business men from Southern California are buying this land almost daily and planting apples. WE URGE YOU TO LOCATE IN YUCAIPA. Take a trip with us any day in the week, free excursion to buyers. Let us show you our bearing orchards of apples, cherries, etc.; over 1000 acres of young orchards, hundreds of acres of young orchards planted to potatoes, onions, beans, sweet potatoes, etc. Now is the time for you to see the fruit and truck in growth. PRICES WILL SOON ADVANCE. One year old orchards in Yucaipa are selling at from $420 to $500 an acre, which is a profit to the early investor of from 50 per cent. to 75 per cent. in twelve months.

Call in and see a sample of Yucaipa apples at our local office. For further information or illustrated booklet, call on or write.

SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY—

FOR SALE—OR EXCHANGE.

We have in the fertile San Joaquin Valley, close to town, 320 acres of as good alfalfa land as can be found; 40 acres now seeded to alfalfa which, if let go to seed, will seed the balance in a short time. The wheat crop all ready to harvest, together with the alfalfa, will amount to at least $3000. There is a small house, large barn, corrals, etc. Large flowing water and gas well supplying fuel and light. Irrigation water is obtained from a ditch that runs through the ranch. There are also 2 horses, 7 cattle, chickens, harnesses, wagons, all kinds of farm implements, in fact, everything to continue ranching on a large scale. This, if sold before harvest, (with crop and improvements,) will be equal to $4000, and that amount brings the price of $100 per acre to less than raw land value.

Owner will take L. A. or vicinity to $5000; $10,000 cash, balance in 5 years. This is a chance to pick up some easy money, but requires quick action to get the crop, as after harvest it does not go with the land. If you are interested in a first-class alfalfa ranch call on us, we certainly can interest you, as this is a bargain.

OWENS RIVER LANDS—

FOR SALE—
OWENS VALLEY OFFERS
to the farmer unusual opportunities for diversified farming. With the elevation of 4000 feet, no fogs, abundance of mountain water running by gravity, a disintegrated granite soil, having been washed from the mountains for centuries, a growing condition is created, the results of which are almost unbelievable.

Alfalfa as high as four tons to the acre; timothy with 10-inch heads; from 350 to 500 bushels of potatoes to the acre; as fine Spitzenberg and Winesap apples as grow in Washington and Oregon; a hog, cattle and poultry country that we believe is superior to anything in the State, and, on top of this, the most delightful climate and wonderful scenery.

Our lands are situated four miles from Independence, the county seat; in tracts of ten any twenty acres, under modern irrigation system. Manzanar townsite in center of property.

Surely any farmer figuring on making a change should at least investigate Owens Valley before deciding. Buying a farm is buying a home, and it may be that you will spend the rest of your days on the next farm you buy. Certainly it is worth very serious thought. We want to mail you booklets and pictures, which will tell you a complete story of Owens Valley.

PROFITS—
The California oil industry has come to stay. It is an established business, producing more wealth for the State than any other single industry. If you cannot own an oil well outright, you can own an interest in one or more. To do this you must make a careful selection in making your investment. Tie (every time) to the men who make good. Good men and men who make good will have nothing to do with anything except good properties. This fact also insures your company of a good management.

THE MIDWAY VIEW OIL COMPANY is a young and growing institution. It has a producing property in the Maricopa Field. It has recently acquired valuable property at Fullerton which is known for its high-grade oil, selling from 85 cents to $1.25 per barrel. There is a rush for the best properties in this rich field. Fortunes have been made at Fullerton already, but more will be made in the future.

The time to make an investment in an oil company is before they have drilled all their ground. Start with a young company and stay with it. Buy Midway View stock right now.

Before buying or selling any stock, we suggest that you get our prices because it is to your interest to trade where you can do the best.

Conflict of Scientists.

In New Jersey not long ago a herd of New York cows was taken to an abattoir for slaughter; a State health inspector examined them and pronounced all but one of them to be suffering from tuberculosis—and he forthwith ordered them killed and their carcasses destroyed. Then the outraged owner called in the Federal authorities, and cattle experts from Department of Agriculture examined the carcasses in the presence of numerous public-health officials and veterinarians and with the result that they declared that there was not the slightest trace of tuberculosis in the anatomy of any of the condemned animals. Next their activities were directed at the lone live cow, and she was pronounced to be badly infected! Now, which finding was correct— the State or the Federal one? Which cow had tuberculosis and which had not? Did any of them have it? And if the condemned animals did not, who or what is going to indemnify the owner for his loss? The whole thing looks to be a good deal of a hollow mockery.—[New York Commercial

SEEING THE LORD.

A Sermon by Dr. Wilbur Chapman, the Famous Evangelist.

Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman preached in Washington-avenue Baptist Church, Brooklyn, last Sunday. At the morning service his subject was "Seeing the Lord," and he said:

I ask your attention to a passage of Scripture, which is the word of the King of Israel to Jehoshaphat. The expression which forms my text this morning is so frequently found in the old testament as well as in the new that I chose it not because of its connection especially, but because of what the expression teaches whenever you find it in the Scriptures. It is in I Kings 19: "I saw the Lord."

It must have been a wonderful sight. We have seen wonderful things ourselves. We have seen the sun rise in the morning, and we have seen the sun go down behind the western hills in the evening; and all nature has seemed to be new in the morning, and everything has seemed to be transfigured at night. But no man in this world has ever had a vision equal to the vision described in this text: "I saw the Lord." Moses saw Him, and received the plan for the tabernacle; Jacob saw Him, and instead of being called the "supplanter" he becomes "Israel the prince;" Israel saw Him and his lips were cleansed; Simeon and Anna saw Him, and they said: "Let thy servants depart in peace for their eyes have seen the salvation of the Lord," as much as to say, "There is no sight greater, we have reached the climax. Now let us depart and be with Thee;" Peter saw Him, and instead of being shifting as the sands of the seashore, he becomes Cephas, the rock with the waves of unbelief breaking at his feet as they break over the rocks on our northern coast; Saul saw him, was stricken with blindness and his whole being was changed and he became Paul the apostle, glorying in the fact that he "bears the marks of the Lord Jesus;" John saw Him, and he said, 'I fell at His feet as if I were dead, and then, when his eyes were opened and he looked again, he gave us what is really the unfolding of the age: "I shall sleep in Jesus and in His likeness rise to know and to adore Him."

We spent a few days in London not a great while ago and two of our party, because they had not seen London, tarried there a few days while we journeyed to the north, and when they came to us they reported that they had seen wonderful things. Their eyes had looked upon that great obelisk on the Thames embankment, that was restored by Rameses II, that Moses and Joseph and Jacob had looked upon, but they never mentioned it to us; they had looked at the marvelous statuary in the British Museum, that the apostle Paul himself had seen; they had been in Spurgeon's Tabernacle; they had stood in Whitechapel, where William Booth stood years ago before the Salvation Army had been formed, but they did not mention these things to us. It seems they had gone down to Windsor, and the guide, knowing they were Americans, said the royal family were out driving in the park, and if they cared to wait they would see them. They waited two hours and a half and then down the great driveway King George V and his Queen and the royal children came driving, and when they came back to us and we asked them regarding their journey, they said: "We have seen the King," and everything else had been forgotten. There is no greater sight than that described in our text: 'I saw the King." See Him, and gold will lose its power; see Him, and earthly honor will be a thing hardly worth seeking; see Him, and distinction among men will be a thing that you will not give very much for. But that is the sight of sights: "I saw the King."

What does this vision mean? Let us find it first in the experience of Moses, in Exodus xix, 20, where Moses is given the law by God. I think if we really understood God's law we would tremble in these days. They tell us that men are today breaking God's laws. No man can break God's laws. You can break yourself against them; and that is what society is doing. The law shows a man that he is a failure and the law is a schoolmaster to bring us to Christ." If you face the law you will say: "Woe is me, for I am undone." But I turn you to the New Testament and present you to Jesus, who says: "I am the way, the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." And the other vision is when Moses has the plan for the tabernacle submitted to him. God has a plan for every life. There is not a boy or man in this audience this morning but that God has a plan for his life. God has a plan for your life. Whatever that plan may be, let your life fit into it. It may be business or law or the ministry, but get into it. There is not a woman here but that God has a plan for her life. It may be just the care of children or to brighten the home or to make better the society of which you are a member. Fit into God's plan. But listen; you will have to get alone with God, and be still before you will ever know His plan. You must see him before you know His will concerning you. It is a great text: "I saw the Lord."

Let us use Jacob as an illustration: Genesis xxxii:24: "And Jacob was left alone; and there wrestled a man with him until the breaking of the day. And when he saw that he prevailed not against him, he touched the hollow of his thigh; and the hollow of Jacob's thigh was out of joint, as he wrestled with him. And he said, Let me go, for the day breaketh. And he said, I will not let thee go except thou bless me. And he said unto him, What is thy name? And he said, Jacob. And he said, Thy name shall be no more called Jacob, but Israel; for as a prince hast thou power with God and with men, and hast prevailed." Suppose you have failed. Suppose you have come face to face with God's law and realized your weakness. Suppose you have broken yourself against God's law, and your life is practically a failure. Suppose you have gone along forty years without fitting in. Suppose He called you to preach, and you didn't answer. Suppose He asked you to sing, and your lips were sealed. I saw a man in New York give away thousands of dollars, and I said, "I wish I could give away money with evident pleasure as you can." He said, "I came, a German boy, to New York. One Sunday in the Sunday-school God called me to preach and I turned a deaf ear. I need not tell you I am worth millions now, but I have had an aching heart for years." I had the joy of seeing in that friend in his bank one to whom my text spoke, and I had joy in telling him that, although he had failed, God would forgive him. Though the canker worm had eaten away his life yet God would restore his peace. And if you are going to have your life made right you will have to come into close quarters with God, as Jacob did. There is too much of the Jacob nature in you and you will never come out as God would have you until the Jacob nature is under your feet and the spiritual nature is in the ascendancy. You must get alone with God and make bare your heart to Him. I know why you are impatient in your home; why you are unfair in business; why your home is not as your father's home was; why your children have never heard you speak a word of prayer; why you have lost your influence with men and your power with God, and so do you.

Get alone with God and He will put His finger upon the thing that causes your weakness, and He will send you away, Jacob no longer, but Israel, a prince with power. Take Isiah as a witness. Read the Sixth chapter of Isiah; you will se how and when he realized his weakness; an angel came with a coal from off the altar and placed it upon his lips, and his lips were cleansed and forthwith he spoke of matchless power. Power comes when you see Him, power for service. There are men in this audience who would give their right hand if they could forget the past. There are men and women who have failed again and again. No one knows it but themselves and God. Because you have failed so frequently you are saying: "Don't talk about service. What can I do?" You can do everything if you see Him. If you see Him.

I lift Him up to you this morning. You who are without Christ; you are here this morning without hope and without help; all the money you have will profit you little when your body is dead and your wife is gone, and your heart is breaking. I want to tell you of Jesus. How can you find Him. First, make no compromise with sin. Second, recognize the sense of your need. Money cannot touch it, human friendship cannot, earthly power cannot. Third, recognize the fact that He can help you. Drop back into His arms and trust Him. Take Him. If you are already a Christian you are saying: "But may I see Him?" Yes, you may. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

There are two reasons why we have no vision of God; why we have less than our fathers had; why the foundations of the home seem to be shaken. First, we are too busy. Second, our hearts are not right in the sight of God. But you may see Him. I will tell you how: Go where you think you may find Him. Wherever there is an aching heart, the shadow of the cross will heal it. Fasten your eyes upon Him. Shut your eyes and keep still and you can see Him here. But all this is as nothing compared with what we shall see after a little while. In Revelation xix—watch very carefully these verses. (I love this book because this is the book in which we find Jesus reaching the triumph of His wondrous work, of His redemptive experience for you and me.) Listen: "And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse: and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness He doth judge and make war. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on His head were many crowns; and He had a name written, that no man knew but He Himself——" allow me to leave but one verse and read: "and the armies which were in heaven followed Him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean." It must have been a great procession. But which is Jesus? Sometimes I think we should know Him by His face "marred more than the face of any man;" sometimes I think we should know Him by His voice, "like the sound of many waters;" by his hands, for there are no hands like His. But I know how we shall know Him. I find that in the verse I did not read, the thirteenth: "And He was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood." That is Jesus. Jesus with the scarlet robe upon Him. Lift up your eyes and look at Him. When you bow your heads in prayer talk to Him. I lift Him up before you this morning.

PORTUGAL'S QUEER LANGUAGE.

You Cannot Use the Same Phrases That Are Common with English-Speaking People.

The English-speaking person traveling in Portugal, who thinks in his own language and who tries to speak in the language of the country, is a great smile producer.

For instance, you never marry anybody in Portugal, unless—strange paradox—you happen to be a priest. You marry "with" your beloved Maria, and the priest marries you both. You never dream about anybody, but always "with" them, according to "Answers" of London.

When the landlady at your boarding house is ladling out your soup, you call out, "Arrive." You are telling her to arrive at the stopping point; in other words, that you don't want more than she has put out. When you see a child that you want to fondle at the other side of the room you say to her, "Arrive here." And the child promptly "arrives."

In England, when we speak of walking, we refer to a certain use of the legs, but the Portuguese verb "to walk" has many more significations. In Portugal, not only do the people walk, but also the trams walk, the trains walk, a balloon walks, and a boat walks. Stranger still, the hands of a clock walk around the face! A clock, by the way, never goes; it "works."

Unless you are very intimate, or very rude, you never say to your fair partner at dinner, "Will you have some bread, some wine?" etc. You inquire "Will your excellency have some bread?" or, "Will the lady have some bread?"—the "lady" meaning not some other lady, but your fair partner herself.

In spite of winter you are never cold in Portugal unless you are a corpse. You are "with" cold. In the same way you are occasionally "with" heat, "with" headache, "with" hunger, or "with" thirst. When you have occasion to discuss the weather, you say, "It 'makes' cold," "It 'makes' hot," etc. On your way home from an entertainment you tell your companion that it "makes" dark.

If in speaking of her husband a wife says he is a "tame" man, she merely means that he is a man of peace and justice.

The word "house" means more than with us. Your buttons share your own privilege of living in a house. The buttonholes are called "houses" of the buttons. The squares on a chessboard are also "houses." You say, "I'm going to 'do' the beard." Neither do you say on the way to the barber's, "I'm going to get my hair cut," but you say, "I'm going to cut my hair."

When you are in Portugal you have twenty fingers but no toes. If you want to make a distinction, you say, "Fingers of the hand," or "Fingers of the foot." Instead of telling the servant to set the table, you tell her to "put" it. When you go to the theater you "assist." You don't mean by that that you' 'come on," nor even that you do a little scene shifting. You mean that you are there.

Residents in flats who meditate taking a holiday in Portugal will be relieved to hear that no one plays the piano there. They merely "touch" it. Neither do they ring the bells. They "touch" them also. But they "play" stones, meaning that they throw them; and a ship at sea "plays" when it pitches and tosses.

Be careful how you tell your landlady that you intend to dine out, or she may think, with a shrug of the shoulders, that you intend to dine "outside," i.e., in the garden. In answer to the kind inquiries of your friends, don't say that you are well; say that you are "good." Be careful in your use of words. Some words similar in form are widely different in meaning, as an American missionary once discovered when preaching in Brazil (once a Portuguese colony.) His subject was the Prodigal Son, and he informed his hearers that when the young man returned home his father killed for him the fatted beetle! But he had merely made a mistake in one solitary vowel.

A "sleeping" bridge means a bridge that is immovable (not a drawbridge.) Stagnant water also "sleeps." So do trucks or trains that wait anywhere during the night. When they laugh in Portugal they "untie themselves to laugh;" and when they cry they "unmake themselves in tears." A persistently unfortunate man says, "I am so unlucky that if I fell on my back I should break my nose."

SPINNING ASBESTOS.

Possible to Spin Single Threads a Hundred Yards in Length of Only One Ounce Weight.

All asbestos lands in Canada which belong to the Crown can be acquired either by purchase or concession, or may be occupied and worked under a mining license, says the India Rubber World. Any person may prospect without a license, however.

In 1877 a farmer named Fecteau discovered deposits of importance, and the first real mine began operations shortly afterward. It is said that the enterprise was a paying one from the start. Seven mines in all were opened in the first few years. One of these is said to have paid $24,000 net in one year upon an investment of $6000.

Asbestos was first mined in Italy, and prior to 1800 it was the only country that produced it at a commercial profit. The Italian asbestos is very silky in appearance and gray to brown in color. Often the fibers are several feet in length.

Asbestos, upon leaving the cobbing sheds, is sent to spinning mills in bags holding about one hundred pounds. Upon its arrival it is first forecarded by a machine similar to the saw tooth gin used in cotton mills. This separates th tangled fibers, after which a final carding takes place on a regular carding machine. When the asbestos leaves the carding machine it is combed smoothly and the fiders laid parallel in a uniform mass. This mass is treated in a rota spinning machine.

This first spins it into a coarse yarn, and then draws and spins this yarn until it becomes fine and quite strong. Where a hard, strong thread is required for certain fabrics the asbestos yarn is put into a doubling and twisting machine, where two or more of the yarn threads are combined. Of course, if the asbestos is to be impregnated with rubber a smooth, hard-finished thread is not desirable.

The spinning of asbestos for a long time seemed of great difficulty, owing to the manner in which the threads persisted in slipping past each other. Finally, it was discovered that under the microscope a thread of asbestos showed a notched surface, and that by means of a special twisting the spinning could be made successful. Now, after much experimenting, manufacturers are able to spin a single asbestos thread of 100 yards in length, not weighing over an ounce.

A NOVELIST'S DISLIKE.

Cannot Understand What People Buy Novels For—No Use for Them Himself.

Not every novelist would speak right out in meeting as frankly as does E. Phillips Oppenheim, who declares he doesn't "see what a man wants to buy a novel for. I would not want to give one house room. One reads a novel and then is through with it. One should keep one's bookshelves for poetry, criticism and works of reference. Of course, it is poor policy for me to talk that way, but I am stating frankly my own opinion."

It goes without saying that Mr. Oppenheim, who is the author of about twenty novels and of many short stories, refers only to current fiction, including his own, and not to the great classical works of fiction, when he says he does not see why anw man should want to buy a novel. Surely there are half a dozen or a dozen famous novels which he would allow us to own, because it is more convenient to have them in the house than to get them from the library when one happens to be in the mood to reread them.

Mr. Oppenheim has no grudge against public libraries, which he says do not spoil the sale of a novel. "In fact, the libraries are the main customers, and they are a good thing." Serious-minded persons often complain that public libraries spend too much money for fiction, and libraries themselves are not agreed upon the question. Surely a public library without some of the best current fiction would be poorly patronized and would fail in its mission. And in it Mr. Oppenheim's collected short stories, dealing with the real lives of wage earners, whom he has neither caricatured nor idealized, might well find a place.—[Boston Globe.

AUSTRALIA'S BLACK OPALS.

Famous Gems Found Nowhere Else in the World—Many Other Gems Found.

The gem most sought after is the Australian black opal, which is found nowhere else in the world. It appears in limited quantities in the matrix of ironstone and sandstone in the Lightning Ridge district of New South Wales. It is estimated that since 1890 opals valued at over $5,500,000 have been found in the State of New South Wales. The State of Queensland also produces many opals, the production up to the present time amounting to nearly $1,000,000. Sapphires rank next among Australian gems in value of production. They are found in New South Wales and in Queensland, chiefly in the latter State, in the gravel or creek beds. The gems show excellent fire and luster, but the color is darker blue than the oriental sapphire.

In Queensland the present production amounts to about $75,000 per year, the total output to date being about $700,000. Other precious gems found in different parts of Australia include emeralds, rubies, amethysts, tourmalines and beryls. Diamonds are found to a limited extent in New South Wales and in South Australia. In the latter State the total production up to date has been something over $500,000. The diamonds found locally are used mostly for glass cutting, while South African diamonds are mostly used in the jewelry trade. Pearls found in pearl shell fishing along the northern coast of Australia are unusually small, but their aggregate value is probably considerable. —[Consular Reports.

STRAIGHTENING OUT BRAINS.

New York to Try a New Method for Reform of Twelve Thousand Abnormal Bad Children.

New York's abnormal bad boys and girls are to be looked after in an entirely new way, says the Baltimore Star. The city is fitting up rooms in the House of Refuge on Randalls Island and is preparing to separate the mental delinquents from the rest and give them special treatment. It is estimated there are 12,000 such juvenile "defectives" in this city.

Much is expected from the new treatment, which, it is said, has work-

OLD SCHOOLMATES WED.

Double Nuptial Event Yesterday In Which Two Sisters Become Brides of Two Partners In Business.

The double wedding of old schoolmates, after a long-distance wooing was the consummation of an old romance at St. Vincent's Church yesterday morning. The brides are sisters. The grooms are partners in business. All four of the parties were playmates and school companions in Dayton, O.

Deciding to seek their fortunes in the far West, W. B. Heimgartner and P. L. Noll came to Los Angeles five years ago and established themselves in the printing business. This grew and prospered and after a visit home last year, the young men decided that they would make this a permanent home not only for themselves, but for their sweethearts if they could gain their consent.

That they did this evidenced itself in the marriage. The Misses Anna and Augusta Hoefler arrived in Los Angeles two weeks ago and the former became Mrs. Heimgartner while the latter took the name of Mrs. P. L. Noll.

"Has Been" This.

TOOTH OF AGES STRUCK IN WELL.

REMNANT OF MIGHTY BEAST OF LONG, LONG AGO.

Remarkable Geological Discovery Made on Ranch Near Lone Pine. Place is Five Miles from Owens Lake and on the Lowest Granite Erosion Wash in Owens Valley.

Before the mastodon was the dinosaurus, before the dinosaurus was the ichthyosaurus, but as to what great creature stalked the earth in the morning of creation before the puny ichthyosaurus shook the earth with his mighty tread, science hitherto has only guessed. It is believed that a discovery made 252 miles east of Los Angeles Thursday morning, will answer the question.

The remains of the great nameless beast were found at a depth of 110 feet on the ranch of G. W. Ryan, one mile from Lone Pine and three miles from the Alabama range, probably the oldest geological formation upon the face of the earth. The find is only five miles from Owens Lake and is upon the lowest granite erosion wash in the Owens River Valley and in the first erosion from the high Sierras. Ryan and his men struck the monster skeleton while boring for water at a point located by M. Sardou, a Los Angeles man who is largely interested in the aqueduct country and who has been a lifelong student both of geology and archeology.

The drill evidently struck the skeleton directly in the head, boring through the mouth. There is evidence that the great head is from ten to fifteen feet in depth in the position in which it lies embedded in the earth. At 110 feet the drill brought up one-half of a tooth of the pre-historic animal. This half of a tooth is eight inches long from the tip to the center, showing a perfect molar cutting edge. The cavity that held the gums was white, but has turned black and has hardened since the exposure to the air.

Other parts of the tooth crumbled. The complete tooth would probably weigh twelve pounds. Mr. Ryan has decided to present it to Sardou for the Smithsonian Institution, and is perfectly willing that it should excavate beside the well for the entire remains. From a depth of 110 to 125 feet the machine has brought up bits of the animal's skull, but no other piece is as large as the gigantic tooth.

The Smithsonian Institution is placing an observatory on Mt. Whitney, in the vicinity of the Ryan ranch, and it is likely that it will take advantage of the permission to dig for the mammoth of history's dawn.

Accusing.

SAYS OFFICERS SHUT HER OFF.

LABOR STATISTICS MEN DENY WOMAN'S STATEMENTS.

Defendant in Eight-Hour-Law Case Declares Deputy Commissioners Treated Her Insolently, and Would Not Allow Her to Speak in Explanation.

That H. H. Lyon, Assistant Deputy Commissioner of the State Bureau of Labor Statistics, and J. F. Nolan, special deputy under Lyon, who are responsible for her arrest on a charge of having violated the eight-hour law, treated her very insolently, would not allow her to say a word in explanation, intimidated the youngest girl in her employ and then left her place and filed a complaint, is the declaration Miss A. M. Waite, No. 339 1-2 South Hill street, made yesterday afternoon. The two officials deny her statements.

Miss Waite said the action has injured her greatly and placed her in an embarrassing light on groundless charges. She must appear in the Police Court July 8 to answer to the charges of Lyon and Nolan that she has compelled her employees to work nine hours a day, despite the recent passing of an eight-hour law. She said yesterday that the services of several attorneys have been offered her, but that she has refused them all and will not engage legal assistance because she believes when she tells her side of the story in the Police Court and supports it with the statements of her employees she will be released.

She says that only one girl was questioned by the inspector, and that she was the youngest and smallest and was frightened by the display of badges on Lyon and Nolan and absent-mindedly gave the hours that the girls had worked before the eight-hour law went into effect.

"I have been a dressmaker in this city three years, have employed a number of women and girls and, under normal conditions, can continue satisfactorily," Miss Waite said yesterday afternoon, "but it is time to step down and out when the government goes to running my business for me, telling me what I may and may not do, affording me absolutely no protection and placing me in a position where any common spy can ring in a complaint against me and, under the title of 'a business man,' advise the officers of the law to investigate, the officers being at perfect liberty on such cowardly and anonymous advice to enter my rooms, treat me as if I were a criminal, frighten my girls, cause my arrest and show me up to the public as a deliberate lawbreaker.

"I wish particularly to defend my girls. Only one, the youngest and most timid, was questioned. She was first thoroughly frightened by not being told why she was being asked so many questions and when she made the mistake about the hours they worked, giving the old schedule they waited for nothing more, not even when she called to them, but hurried down the steps.

"The reason the informer thought the girls were working nine hours is that they come in the morning and go at night like they did before. At noon, however, they take an hour and a half off, in place of a half hour."

"I understand one of the inspectors said that I let the girls work nine hours a day if they wanted to. That is wrong. One of the mdid one day after the new law went into effect pick up her work during the noon hour, but when I saw her I told her that she would better not do that, as I didn't want to have any question brought up. I have allowed the girls to read, rest or study—one of them goes to night school—during the noon hour, but I never allow them to sew as it might be easy for someone to say that I made them do it."

WILL SEND PLANS NORTH.

Drawings Outlining Scheme For Conversion of College of Medicine Into General Hospital Ready to Go.

The plans and specifications of the alterations to be made on the administration building of the College of Medicine, which is to be converted into a general hospital, will be sent by Dr. George H. Kress, chairman of the Hospital Committee, to the regents of the State University at Berkeley in a few days.

Dr. Kress stated yesterday that work will begin on the building as soon as the plans and specifications are returned, approved, to Los Angeles. He believes that the fall months will see the work sufficiently under way to make the starting of the proposed big endowment and building fund campaign, logical. The Hospital Committee intends to install a number of beds with money already at its disposal, as soon as possible.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

PASADENA, June 7.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In looking over the Pasadena news in The Times of the sixth, I noticed an article referring to the condition of the roads between Pasadena and Los Angeles. Now I would like to ask some of the readers who travel over the roads in this county if they ever thought to take notice of the difference in different sections of the manner in which the roads are kept up by the superintendents who are appointed by the supervisors to take care of the roads. I think it would pay well to give premiums for the best kept roads to the superintendents in charge and encourage them in that manner to try and see which could give the best roads for the least expense to the county and make them report in some paper amount of time and material expended on each road under their charge. As an agent I probably travel on more roads in one month than the average man would cover in one year, and I must say some of the roads are a disgrace to any supervisor under whose charge they come.

I will select for a sample Santa Anita road from Colorado street down to a point where the bridge was washed out four years ago, and I will take oath that Mr. Strain of San Gabriel, who has charge of the lower end of this road, has done no work on it for the last four years. The San Gabriel Valley Water Company has three cottages at the end of this road occupied by families who are compelled to follow the wash to get out onto Huntington Drive over private property because Mr. Strain has neglected to keep up Santa Anita road as far as his section runs.

Mr. Mills, who has charge of the Lamanda Park section, has kept his part in fairly passable condition, but although this road is almost under the nose of Supervisor Manning and complaints have been frequently made about the dangerous condition up to now Mr. Strain has refused to put it in passable shape. There is an obstruction at the end to prevent machines from driving into the wash, but this is in poor shape, in fact one part fell down about six months ago and still lays on the ground.

Now when the good roads bonds were voted they claimed it would take a large quantity of work off the road department and give them more time to keep up the balance of roads under their care and we should get better results, but it seems to me the less they have to do the less they want to do. I was talking to Mr. Longhurst, who has charge of the pumping plants for the San Gabriel Valley Water Company and has lived in one of their cottages for seven years, and asked him what he thought of the condition of Santa Anita road and he stated that when Mr. Strain first let the road go he thought it was all right as it made splendid pasture for his cow, but in its present condition he is afraid to stake his cow on the road or rather what is left of it as she would be liable to fall in the deep cuts made during the years it has been neglected and break her legs.

I would like a few live men to note carefully all the roads as they travel over them and make a note of the conditions and report through your paper to the public so that the supervisors would be able to see which man keeps them in the best condition.

YOSEMITE EXCURSION.

The Y.M.C.A. excursion to Yosemite Valley will leave this city on a special train on June 26. A rate of $25 for the round trip has been secured, and more than fifty people have already taken reservations. The party will be limited to 200, and it is desired that those who wish to take advantage of the exceptional opportunity register as early as possible. The valley is exceptionally beautiful this summer, on account of the heavy snowfall last winter, which has increased the beauty of the falls. The excursion is under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. Glee Club, and full information may be had from J. L. Graham or F. D. Knight at the association building.

FORESTERS MEMORIAL.

Today is the memorial day set apart by the Foresters of America, when they will publicly meet to show that they still hold in remembrance those brothers who passed away during the last year. All the various courts and circles of the order in the city will meet in Unity Hall on the third floor, at No. 547 South Broadway. Addresses will be made by several prominent members of the order and music will be rendered by the Euterpean Club. The services will commence at 2:30 p. m.

THE ELKS AT ATLANTIC CITY.

The grand lodge reunion of the B.P. O. Elks will be held at Atlantic City, N. J., July 10 to 17, and the most elaborate preparations have been made to entertain the visitors. The sessions of the grand lodge will be held on the ocean end of the steel pier.

CLOUD OF QUERIES IN DOCTORS' SKY.

Suffragists Want to Know How They Stand.

Call for Opinions to Be Sent Out Broadcast.

Postal Card Answers Asked from Physicians.

BY H. C. WARNACK.

Are the doctors able to sit up and take notice? The woman suffragists of Los Angeles want to know. The question is pertinent, but the ladies will propound it with the grace of the physician who asks to look at a tongue or feel a pulse.

Some time this week every physician in California will receive the following challenge to his political conscience from Mrs. David Chambers McCan, chairman of the Press Committee of the Political Equality League:

"You are one of the acknowledged custodians of the sanitary conditions of your community. It has been proven that women stand for the cleanliness of streets, homes, schools, food and clothing. We are therefore appealing to you for an expression upon the suffrage amendment that will give women the power to assist in perfecting measures necessary to satisfactory sanitation. Kindly write your opinion upon the accompanying postal and return to our office."

Not only are the physicians of California to be asked to say what they think about the enfranchisement of women, but the American Medical Association has been invited to hold its sessions at the headquarters of the Political Equality League at Choral Hall when it convenes here Monday, the 26th inst., and the chances are that the invitation will be accepted. Moreover, one of the first persons to speak before the association will be an ardent woman suffragist, Dr. Evangeline Jordan, a specialist on children's teeth. This will be the first time in the history of the association when it has been addressed by a woman physician of any school.

The Political Equality League feels that its case is convalescent, but it has nevertheless placed itself in the hands of professional nurses. The State Nurses' Association meets in this city next Thursday and the nurses have asked for a suffrage speaker for their programme and for a set of suffrage resolutions for their consideration.

In the future the league will watch every convention in California and will attempt to be represented on the programmes of all such bodies. This includes both the National Humane Association and the American Order of Eagles.

The ladies went to Compton Friday night and claim to have captured everything from Watts to the sea. Their valiant host was led by Mrs. Elizabeth Tupper Wilkes, who resorted to much eloquence to prove that women are free souls and ought to have political freedom.

SPEECHES COMING.

Prof. Albert Wilson, principal of the Manual Arts High School, will speak at the home of Mrs. Walter Burn, No. 1056 West Washington street, tomorrow night, on "The Evolution of Women." Dr. C. C. Pierce will speak at the Political Equality League in Choral Hall next Saturday afternoon on "Methods of Progress."

Mrs. Elizabeth Strong, authoress and entertainer, was the principal speaker at Choral Hall yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Strong said that it is a great mistake to assume that only the so-called masculine type of woman is interested in political equality. She thought the Europeans should have more sense than to take some Americans as representative of America and that it is just as much of a mistake to take some women who stand for suffrage as the only sort interested in the subject.

She insisted that it is not the masculine but the distinctive feminine woman, the mother and the upholder of the home who is in the greater need of representation in politics. There never will be a time, she said, when women will cease to be women, regardless of what recognition may be given them. "As long as love reigns," she said, "all is well, and as long as the world rolls love will reign and down in the hearts of women will be that guiding star that leads ever on to the more beautiful home of the future."

"Some persons say that women, when given the ballot, will vote only on moral questions. Now the truth is that all political questions are both economic and moral. We are getting to have seven Sundays in a week instead of one and all great questions are considered from their moral effect upon the community."

"Nor are we trying to wreck the home. Instead, we accept the call to step out of the home for one hour that the home may be safer forever. We do not want votes, but the votes want us. A man's obligation to keep the ten commandments is as strong, whether he has any use for the commandments or not, and women must accept the responsibility of the ballot whether they want to or not, because it belongs to them. We often hear it said that this is a question of justice. So it is, and it seems to me a great injustice that women are not allowed to settle the question instead of letting the men decide it for them."

She said that a woman with a ballot in her hands commands respect in somewhat the same way that a nation under heavy armament is allowed to remain at peace. Besides Mrs. Strong, addresses were made by Rev. Dana W. Bartlett and Mrs. Simons.

The Votes for Women Club will hold no regular meeting Monday night. This will be in order to stimulate a greater interest in the appearance at Blanchard Hall, Tuesday night, of Hon. Alma V. Lafferty, member of the Colorado Legislature, and the first woman lawmaker to speak in Los Angeles.

TO HEAR MINISTERS.

Two weeks from today the ministers of the State will be heard in numbers upon the question of giving woman the ballot. More than 100 prominent divines of the larger cities have signified their intention of speaking on this theme.

Monday morning, the 26th inst., the members of the Ministerial Union will hear arguments against suffrage, but as many of them will have expressed themselves favorably on the day previous they are not likely to reverse themselves to any alarming degree.

The real problem of the suffragists now is, will women pay poll tax when they vote? There is an answer, but the guessing is too good to give it.

Doctors Prescribe Puritas

For Their Patients: Hospitals Use It, Because of Its Absolute Purity.

The fact that some two hundred physicians in Los Angeles use and recommend Puritas Distilled Water is evidence that trained minds agree that pure water is essential to health.

Druggists use Puritas in prescription compounding, where pure water is a necessity.

Practically all of the leading hospitals in Los Angeles use Puritas, because of its unquestioned purity and freedom from minerals.

And every home in Los Angeles ought to be supplied with Puritas Distilled Water, because, used freely, it keeps the body in a healthful condition, dissolves the mineral salts which may become deposited in the arteries through the use of "hard," alkaline waters.

Puritas is carefully distilled, aerated with pure ozone, bottled in demijohns that have been rinsed with distilled water before filling, corked so carefully that every drop will remain pure to the last glassful, with ordinary precautions.

Puritas is inexpensive. Five gallons cost but 40c, delivered within the old city boundary lines. At outside points the cost is a trifle more, owing to the long haul.

Puritas Distilled Water can be obtained through dealers in most towns in Southern California. If you are unable to find it readily, don't accept a substitute, but communicate with us, and we will see that you are supplied.

For the Neck and Shoulders

A Free Prescription That Instantly Removes Blemishes, Tan, Freckles and the Wrinkles and Marks Left by High Collars.

Prepare It at Your Own Home.

The Dutch neck and the evening gown too often expose the discolorations and blemishes of high collars or the effects of tan and freckles. It is easy to overcome these conditions and make the neck beautiful and white and soft and smooth—to remove, in other words, every blemish and to make the Dutch collar as attractive as it is comfortable. This prescription can also be used on the shoulders, and it is marvelously effective to beautify the hands and arms.

If you want to try it, go to your druggist, get an empty two-ounce bottle, also a one-ounce bottle of Kulux Compound. Pour the entire bottle of Kulux into the two-ounce bottle, add quarter of an ounce of witch hazel, then fill with water. Prepare this at your own home and then you know what you have. One application will astonish you. It is deliciously cool and soothing, and is not affected by perspiration. It will not rub off.

If you put it on one hand only, or on one side of the neck, and note the difference you will see the wonderful change it makes instantly. The results are permanent, and continued use of this prescription will result in a skin as soft and smooth as a child's, a skin from which redness and roughness and freckles have been entirely removed.

Scott of La Habra Leads A. S. Burns of Los Angele by Small Margin in The Times Greater Co

The Week Just Closed Brought Many Changes and Scores Are Now Even. Something of the Personnel of The Times Contestan Validity of the Prizes and Their Values is an Incentive to Conscientious and Energetic Work.

Well, it has been a big week for the contestants in The Times Greater Contest, and some skyrocketing has been noticeable in the way some of the workers have shot up to the top.

Yesterday was the busiest sort of a day until 12 o'clock, when the contest for the week closed, and a few surprises were in store for those who imagined their positions secure.

The Contestants' Bulletin on this page will show the standing of all of them at noon yesterday, and it is gratifying to notice the large number that have pulled themselves out of the kindergarten class and gone into the three, four, five thousand and up, grades.

The week wound up in a blaze of glory for the out-of-town contestants, although Los Angeles was not very far behind in what was accomplished.

John Scott, Jr., of La Habra, scored 42,600 points for the week. Pushing him closely was L. O. Lieber of Los Angeles, with 31,925 but better than all was little Harry Miehle of Riverside, who got busy about the middle of the week and piled up 15,350 for himself. William Sherman Hall of San Fernando-Pasadena scored lively with 12,975. A new one came to the front in the person of Lewis Black of Monrovia. We are not well acquainted with Mr. Black yet, but assume from the sudden start that he has made that we are going to hear more of him before the contest is over. He scored 8150 points for one week.

Among the women, however, it was anybody's race until one minute before 12 o'clock on Saturday. One or two subscriptions would have given the weekly prize to any one of three. Minnie Litchner finished the week with 13,225. Lillian Blood almost beat her past the wire with 11,125, while Ayls Sweet had an even 11,000. They never stopped work until a few minutes of the noon hour, and they were holding nothing back, either.

These figures and quite a number of smaller scores have made a few changes of considerable importance in the general result.

Scott still leads Burns by a very few points, while Lieber is only 7000 behind Scott, pushing him close for first place. Minnie Litchner heads the women with a total of 28,237, which is going some for the town of Alhambra. Harry Miehle has forced himself into eighth place, just a few points ahead of Lillian Blood, and Mrs. Cole is still running strong in sixth place. Lewis P. Black of Monrovia-Duarte, who was far down in the list yesterday morning, now ranks eleventh with 10,150, while a dozen other ocntestants are within easy reach of the 10,000 class.

While the official announcement of the winners of the week's prizes cannot be made until Tuesday morning, in order that all out-of-town contestants may have opportunity to have their points counted, which may have been mailed before noon Saturday, it is safe to assume that John Scott, Jr., of La Habra and Minnie Litchner of Alhambra win the prizes. It doesn't seem possible that anything not yet reported will sufficiently change the score to exceed their figures.

This thing is beginning to get interesting now, especially as the contestants are reserving their points until the last of the week in order to finish strong for the weekly prizes.

Prizes of the same amounts will be awarded again this week, which will end at noon Saturday, June 17. The highest male and female contestants for the week will receive $25 each in gold.

Do not overlook the prizes offered for the month of June, which with the weekly prizes you will find mentioned in a special announcement of this page.

Something About Them.

The contestants in The Times Greater Contest comprise every phase of character.

The dean of the corps is Fred W. Stein, 70 years old. Mr. Stein has been a resident of Los Angeles for twenty-four years, during which time he has drawn about him a wide circle of friends, all of whom are eager to assist him to become a winner in this contest.

He is the only Civil War veteran thus far entered. He has been honored by his comrades, being Past Commander of the Bartlett-Logan Post, G.A.R., which he joined in 1887, and is now quartermaster of that organization. Mr. Stein has been deputy County Tax Collector for Los Angeles county for eight and a half years.

A. S. Burns, the blind contestant, who has made such a wonderful race to date, was formerly a contractor and carpenter in Los Angeles. On May 27, three years ago, a nail pierced his right eye and injured it to such an extent that it was necessary to remove the eye. He suffered continually until January of this year, when the physicians found it imperative to remove his other eye to save his life. He is Past Grand of Acme Lodge No. 303, I.O.O.F., and is a prominent member of the First Methodist Church. He has the support of the Odd Fellows and the Methodists, and they are making a whirlwind canvass in his interest.

L. O. Lieber, who is running third on the list, is the electrical engineer with the Huntington system of street railways. The 5000 street-railway employees have organized a Recreation Club, of which Mr. Lieber is president, and he entered this contest with the undivided support of that entire organization. So keep your eye on Lieber, because the conductors and motormen and the street railway employees, generally, in Los Angeles are about as live a lot of citizens as we have here.

John Scott, Jr., of La Habra, who jumped to first place in a week, is a big 18-year-old boy; and, in passing, it might be well to state that the inside of John's head seems to measure up to the balance of his fine physique. The other contestants had better look well to their laurels, as young Scott has made up his mind to win, if he has to wear out a set of auto tires every week. His working territory extends from Santa Barbara to San Diego, and he says he is going to cover every inch of it before he gets through. Scott's father, John Scott, Sr., is a very prominent ranch and oil man in La Habra. He has one of the finest ranches in California, and between the ranch and his boy, he says he has reason to be proud.

Mrs. Cole, the elderly little widow, who has been making a lone fight with such success that she had second place for a long time and is still well up toward the top of the list, has been a resident of Los Angeles for many years. She has hosts of friends, and her greatest difficulty is to find the time to see all of them. She is making a good race and the chances are she will finish well up.

Little Leo Germain, 13 years of age, is a Los Angeles boy and a member of the well-known family of that name. He is a hustler, and if his future business life is systematized along the excellent lines in which he is conducting his part of this contest, his future is well assured.

Miss Alys Sweet of Los Angeles has lived here most of her life, and while she is not indulging in any pyrotechnics, she manages to come through each day with enough subscriptions to keep her among the first ten at all times. Her results are very consistant and indicative of systematic and well-planned work on her part.

And let us not overlook little Harry Miehle of Riverside. We do not know much about Harry except that he is a bright youngster who came down from Riverside alone and called on the Contest Manager to enroll his name. He evidently laid his plans very carefully, as when he started to bring in the returns, he seemed imbued with the idea of never knowing when to quit. Harry has jumped up to more than 17,000 in the score within the last week. This is going some for a youngster.

Miss Lillian Blood is a resident of Los Angeles, and is engaged as private secretary and stenographer with her brother, who is located in the Security building. Miss Blood has a wide acquaintance among business men, and it is noticeable that her subscriptions are from the representatives of most mercantile houses in Los Angeles.

William Sherman Hall of San Fernando-Pasadena is a bright youngster. His letters with enclosures every day indicate that he is keeping the pike hot between San Fernando and Pasadena. He is another one of the young men whose ambition is not limited and whose energy seems to equal his ambition.

George H. Anderson of Glendale is another one of the boys that has been so busy that he has never had the time to come in to see us; but he has a little brother 4 years old who generally delivers his goods to the Contest Manager. Of course the little brother is accompanied by the mother, but if George is anything like the 4-year-old, George is some boy.

While we are referring to those who are showing the greatest activity in this Contest, we must make special mention of Minnie Litchner of Alhambra. For the first week's prize she barely missed the goal with a majority of a few points in favor of Mrs. Cole, who had quite a little bit the start of her in the beginning. She heads the women's list this week, and is well up toward the top of the general score; and indications are that she is going to finish this contest with a handsome reward for her efforts.

Lois Irene Benton of Azusa, A. B. Eells of Ventura, Edward M. Davis of Los Angeles, H. F. Burton of Glendale, Robert Nieman of Highland and Russell Kreichbaum, the Hayward Hotel bell boy, are all among the elect. They accomplished excellent work from the beginning, and as the Contest goes along and becomes more active each day, their interest seems to increase with its growth. It seems quite safe to say that all of these mentioned will be prize winners, as well as many more who are working quietly, but who have not yet made any sensational sprints.

THE TIMES PRIZES.

We desire to talk a little more this morning relative to the prizes offered by The Times.

We want to EMPHASIZE THE VALIDITY OF THESE PRIZES and the fact that from the first prize to the last one, more than one hundred in number, there has been, and will positively be no inflation in the published valuation of these prizes.

The first prize, which is a choice between $12,000 IN GOLD or a $12,000 income producing orange grove, speaks for itself.

The grove or the money, which are equal in value, will be given to the winner as soon as his or her name has been announced at the close of the contest.

Following this are houses and lots, ranches, bungalows, pianos, furniture, motorcycles, bicycles, jewelry, shotguns, fishing outfits, phonographs, kodaks, etc.

Nineteen prizes in this contest are valued at $1000 or more, and no prize is worth less than $25.

Of course, next to the first prize, the most desirable prizes are the houses and lots, and ranches.

Speaking of these, our plan regarding the houses was a sensational announcement to the public and contestants.

Pretty nice idea this building your own house, isn't it? You do not have to win the first prize in The Times Greater Contest in order to make yourself independent for life. True, the first prize is your choice of an orange grove valued at $12,000 or the money itself, but only one can win that prize, while there are more than twenty other prizes valued at $1000 or greater. Quite a number of these are houses and lots and bungalows and lots.

They are all good, well located, and sightly lots, but have no houses on them at present.

Our new plan precludes the possibility of your having a house given to you which you might not want.

YOU ARE GOING TO BUILD YOUR OWN HOUSE IN THIS CONTEST.

In Los Angeles especially, the majority of people now own, or want to own their own homes, and while many houses are built to sell, and are sold, to those who can only pay on the installment plan, it is a fact that those who can afford to pay cash prefer to build houses to conform to their own ideas of comfort and attractiveness.

THIS IS THE BIG FEATURE OF THE TIMES GREATER CONTEST. EVERY WINNER OF A HOUSE AND LOT SHALL HAVE THE PRIVILEGE OF SELECTING HIS OWN PLANS; inspecting the lumber, the plumbing, the painting, the building and construction of his house, from day to day, as it is put up under his supervision.

NO INFLATION CAN BE HERE FOR YOU ARE SIMPLY BUILDING YOUR OWN HOME AND SENDING THE BILLS TO THE TIMES.

THE REO LIMOUSINE.

Leon Shettler always advertises that a live dealer will sell a live car, and the amount of business that he has been doing in the auto trade seems to bear out his statement.

The Reo Limousine offered in this contest at $2200, is one of the most attractive cars of its kind both in looks and quality that has been placed upon the Los Angeles market.

It is a thirty horse power auto, which is enough to take one anywhere and bring him back again.

The Reo 30 engine is built along the accepted lines of standard motor car engines with one exception: where most engines are designed with very little regard to weight so long as great power is developed, the Reo engine is designed with particular reference to the saving of weight and the conservation of power. The great power developed by the Reo motor is utilized by extreme exactness and refinement of all working parts, by the right material for every part without regard to cost, and by using the most positive and direct means of transmission, by allowing easy adjustment, by perfect lubrication and protection from dirt.

DECKER PIANO PLAYER.

The attention of the women in this contest is especially called to the Piano Player valued at $1000.

There are many people of musical bent who have never had an opportunity to receive a technical musical education, yet who are devoted to good music.

The Piano Player is an especially appropriate prize inasmuch as it can be used both by the musician and by the novice.

The particular instrument that we are offering is the Decker Piano Player, than which there is none better.

The house of Decker & Son has back of it a record of over fifty years devoted to the production of pianos that excel in that fundamental requisite in a piano—a purely musical tone. In the development of the Decker & Son Piano; the improvements along the lines of that all-important feature, acoustics, have been given first attention; but all of the other mechanical features have constantly received the careful attention required, which accounts for the progress of a piano manufacturing house, for constant development in tone, mechanical construction, action, durability and artistic creations in piano-case construction are requisites.

With a piano that has been developed to the highest degree of mechanical perfection, Decker & Son have attained a standing in the world of musical art, as attested by the testimonials from musicians of world-wide renown, and in the piano trade, dealers of distinction all over the country being their representatives, that means a product of surpassing artistic excellence which has been still further attested to by the many prizes and awards received by Decker & Son.

THE MITCHELL SIX.

This car is one of the leading prizes offered in this contest. It is equipped with magneto, top, five lights, generator and a complete set of tools.

It is a seven passenger car and is the very last word in auto making.

The Mitchell Six Cylinder car conforms closely in all of its more fundamental features to the constructions that have proven so successful in their four cylinder cars.

This seven passenger touring type has a roomy tonneau with wide luxuriat upholstered back and seat for three passengers and two extra large high back adjustable auxiliary seats.

This is the second year for this car, and shortcomings of its performance have been so rare as to demand practically no changes in this year's production, so in continuing this car as a leader of the Mitchell line for the coming season the company does so with the assurance that it is ogering a thoroughly well developed and reliable machine of a type that has been tested under all sorts of conditions and in the hands of all kinds of users.

In speed, while not a racing car, it has made records on both track and road, and even with an ordinary body and full load it will go much faster than anyone ought to go and faster than most people care to go.

Because of the great power and the even torque of the six cylinder motor, a car of this type can be run almost all day without gear changing, even though it be heavily laden and the roads traversed anything but level or smooth. That this simplifies and adds comfort to the task of driving, which even with the best of cars may become a very real labor in an arduous day's run, will be denied by no motorist who has had experience with the even rhythm of the six-cylinder motor, which once adopted is not easily given up for a reversion to the simpler and less-expensive four-cylinder, except for lighter loads or easier journeying.

The six-cylinder motor will consume very little more gasoline than the four-cylinder.

THE RAYCYCLE.

The Raycycle which is offered in this contest is a high-grade, thoroughly up-to-date 1911 model which is sold at $245, the price named in our prize list. This machine is handled by F. M. Jones, distributor for California, at No. 639 South Spring street, Los Angeles. It is one of the popular machines in this city, as it is easy to handle and ready to respond to every impulse of the driver.

BICYCLES.

Further down in the prize list will be found ten bicycle prizes, valued each at $25. These embrace a choice of the California or Stanford bicycles which are as fine as can be had for the money anywhere.

These are handled by John T. Bill & Co. and have the following

CHURCH BANQUET.

The Brotherhood of the Christian Church entertained with a banquet last evening in honor of all the Brotherhoods of the city, in Alexander Hall, Mission and Meridian. The ladies of the church furnished the supper. Pink carnations were given as favors, and the centers of the tables were graced by pink sweet peas and candelabra. The tables were arranged in the form of a cross, two long ones, and joined at the head by a short table, at which the speakers sat, J. H. Freeman acting as toastmaster. Following the banquet, the electric lights were turned on and toasts given as follows: "The Rise and the Progress of the Brotherhood Movement," Rev. L. J. McConnell; "Brotherhood and the Local Church," Bert F. Mull; "Brotherhood and Civil Affairs," Norman F. Marsh; "Brotherhood and Missions," William Hazlett; "Brotherhood and the Boys," Rev. First Baptist Congregation of Pomona Puts the Finishing Touches on Its New House of Worship.

POMONA, June 10.—Workmen have been busy the past few days putting the furnishings, electric fixtures and finishing touches in the new $80,000 First Baptist Church at the corner of Garey and Holt avenues. All of the chairs are in place, the floor coverings laid and the huge pipe organ has been properly "voiced" ready for the formal dedication which will occur tomorrow, the sermon to be preached by Rev. ORANGE SHIPMENTS.

The Pomona Fruit Growers' Exchange will soon complete the season's work on navel oranges, having only about fifteen cars more to ship, about 900 carloads having been shipped. There have been 3873 carloads of navels shipped from Pomona Valley this season. This includes the houses at Pomona, North Pomona, Clarmont, Lordsburg, San Dimas and Walnut. Of this amount of cars the San Antonio Fruit Exchange has shipped 3268. Twenty years ago the navel orange output from this same locality was only sixty-three cars.

Monrovia.

YOUNG ACTOR IS WINNING OUT.

MONROV ETAOIN ETAOIN EEEE PARTS FOR MANTELL.

At the Age of Twenty-one He Essays Parts Which are Usually Assigned to Men of Long Experience—High School Art Exhibit of Exceptional Excellence.

MONROVIA, June 10.—Engaged for juvenile leads in one of the leading Shakespearean companies of the country while his twenty-second birthday is yet to come, is the distinction won by Casson Ferguson, who is spending his summer vacation here. For two years Mr. Ferguson has been with Robert Mantell and at the close of this season in New York, was chosen to play leading juvenile parts in thirteen Shakespearean dramas which will be the repertoire of the Mantell company next season.

His story of success in the mimic world is a refreshing exception to the usual narrative of slow and toilsome ascent to the goal of public recognition and approval. To play at twenty-one roles which generally are achieved only after long years of experience, might well turn the head of any youth, but Mr. Ferguson stands prosperity very gracefully. He is still rich in illusions; the bloom is still fresh on his enjoyment of life and his mind as facile to impressions as it ought to be at 21. In other words, he is a normal, healthy boy who has "made good" and is proud of it but not inordinately. "All the world's a stage" and most of the play is comedy.

Inevitably, he has garnered some good tales of the road. "Since leaving Ann Arbor, the nearest I've been to a university was when we played at New Haven, Ct. Mantell was at the climax of a powerful death scene and the whole house was hushed to silence. Just at his last gasp Mantell said:

"The rest is silence."

Timed to the instant, Yale students, engaged as supers and congregated in a lower room, forgot where they were and shouted, "Rah, rah, Y-a-l-e," and the impressive scene terminated in an uproar. One of the best puns I ever heard I captured in New Orleans. One of the company presented a draft at a bank where there was a negro teller. He handed him the draft, asking, "Will you cash it, Othello?" Without a moment's hesitation the teller counted out the cash with "Des-de-money-a."

Mr. Ferguson is a graduate of the Dobinson School of Expression, Los Angeles, and soon after completing his course was given a try-out by Mr. Mantell and engaged. Dramatic critics concede to the young man a high degree of merit. The New York Sun critic, of the performance of Julius Caesar in Daly's Theater, May 10, says: "Casson Ferguson's portrayal of Decius was an admirable achievement. He has a voice of uncommonly agreeable quality and declaims well."

ART EXHIBIT.

The exhibit of the High School Art Department today so far excelled all predecessors as to negative comparison. Next to the surprising merit of the display its variety was the occasion of general comment. The four hundred studies in the salon included original work in charcoal, crayon, pen and ink, water color and oil.

Both free-hand and mechanical courses were generously represented.

While no award was made, probably the work of Fred Cronenwett and Emma Adams attracted most attention. The former limits himself to pen and ink and training has enforced his native ability and a fine appreciation of shading values with excellent draughtmanship and a subtle skill in the subordination of minor detail to essentials

Miss Adam's versatility is remarkable and evidences a facility of execution that is a real menace to strenuous endeavor. Her studies includes crayon, oil and water color and were all highly meritorious. Her best evidence of skill was a good copy of a Corot.

In the nuances of color her success is very unusual for one so young.

Paul Rockwood's cartoons were clever, humorous and original.

In the mechanical drawing, Francis Scott, Francis Boyd and Avery were among the best.

The art department is in charge of Miss Sophia Solomon, a graduate of Chicago Art Institute. During her three years' instruction a vast improvement in the quality and amount of work has been achieved. Miss Solomon has a happy faculty of interesting her pupils in their work and is further gifted with unerring perception of individual bent.

MOTORCYCLE VICTIM RECOVERS.

Upland Man Injured in Colton Event Appears on Streets Looking Good as New.

UPLAND, June 10.—Frank Higley, the Upland young man who was so seriously injured in the motorcycle races at Colton, during the carnival, is able to be on the streets again. It was found the skull was not fractured, as at first feared, and the operation for relief from brain congestion was successful, his recovery following rapidly.

ACTIVE QUIET SEASON.

The Brennan Tannery and Shoe Manufacturing Company is finding it necessary to erect a number of small houses in the eastern section of the city to accommodate a number of families, members of which are employed in the factory. The manager of one large apartment-house in Upland states that he is daily turning away prospective tenants, for lack of room, even though this is supposed to be the beginning of the "quiet season of the year."

A house-to-house canvass of the entire city of Upland, just completed by a firm securing data for a proposed directory, reveals the fact that Upland has 2972 inhabitants, a gain of almost 700 since the government census was taken. The increased attendance at the schools, as well as the added business at the postoffice, indicated a splendid growth, but the facts brought out are even better than anticipated.

The Upland grammar schools closed yesterday for the summer vacation. In nearly all the grades exercises, as well as a general social day, were enjoyed alike by teachers and pupils. The graduation exercises of the Eighth grade are to be held Tuesday, June 13, in the auditorium.

The depot of the Santa Fe Company at this point is being greatly improved in many respects, to accommodate the increasing business handled there. The baggage-room and express quarters are to occupy the central space formerly given over to an area-way, the waiting-room will be enlarged, as well as the rooms for offices, while the freight-room and freight platform will be extended to the east some ninety feet. The quarters have long been entirely inadequate to the needs of the agent and his assistants here.

SCHOOL COMES TO A CLOSE.

Huntington Beach Institutions End Sessions With Ceremonies of More Than Usual Interest.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, June 10.—The commencement exercises of the Huntington Beach High School occurred here on Thursday evening in the auditorium of the institution and were witnessed by a large crowd. Eleven diplomas were bestowed by the Board of Education, the recipients being Misses Helen Manske, Matilda Osterhaus, Frances Howard and Mary Hallicy and Lewis Blodget, Irwin Farrar, Roy Byram, Arthur Worthy, Victor Everett, Leo Livernash and Claude Swift. An address was delivered by Frank G. Tyrrell of Los Angeles and abounded with wit and eloquence. His subject was "Sleepyheads."

Graduating exercises of the local grammar school were held at the Tent City Auditorium on Friday evening in the presence of a very large audience, the speaker of the evening being Rev. C. F. Seccombe of Santa Ana, who made a hit with his comparison of life to a game of baseball, with its opportunities and rewards. Graduates were Alita Seely, Don Yeary, Paul Helme, Effie Adams, Gladys French, Hilda Hill, Gladys Lee, Joe Livernash, Frankie Double, Mildred Moody and Hazel Cowsert.

ELSINORE NOTES.

ELSINORE, June 9.—Splendid were the graduation exercises held Thursday evening in Bank Hall. Jack Ray and Harley Cline were the graduates. Their orations were on live political subjects. Mr. Ray's was "America for Americans," and Mr. Cline's, "The Trend of Political Opinion."

Hon. Mark Keppel of Los Angeles gave one of the best talks ever listened to in Elsinore on "Freedom." He touched upon most of the important measures before the thinking world, making a strong talk on universal peace, speaking for education, for the enfranchisement of women, for good air in school buildings, for pensioning old people, for wiping out the national debt and for abolishing poverty. He spoke of the civic hero as greater than the hero of war.

The hall was crowded to overflowing, many people remaining standing throughout the exercises. Music was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. E. Michener, Miss Louise Dickson and C. S. Wright. The High School chorus sang "America." The hall was beautifully decorated and the graduates received many floral tributes and gifts from their large circle of friends.

An auto route to Oceanside is being established and autos will be run three or more times a week from Elsinore, stopping at Murrietta, Temecula, where is situated the old burying-ground made famous by "Ramona," and where M. Machado has a splendid collection of Indian baskets. The Palai mission is also near Temecula and the trip will be one of much interest.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Kerr of Arlington who were here for the baths for Mrs. Kerr, who was helpless with rheumatism when she arrived, have returned home. Mrs. Kerr is much improved.

PERRIS.

PERRIS, June 10.—Farmers throughout the valley are busy harvesting their crops. Miller and Beatty have shipped in a large steam engine and combined harvester from Rosena and have begun work on their 600 acres in the eastern part of the valley.

Will Guthridge has commenced harvesting his 900 acres of grain near Ethanac. He reports the grain well filled and will yield about five sacks of barley to the acre. Mr. Guthridge also has 100 acres of wheat on summer-fallowed land which will run about ten sacks to the acre.

Two automobile loads of the members of the local lodge of the Knights of Pythias drove over Wednesday evening to assist in the installation of a K.P. lodge at Corona.

COLTON.

COLTON, June 10.—The seniors of the Colton High School gave a "Senior Circus" in Masonic Hall this evening. Included in the attractions were a menagerie, academy of music, art gallery, various side shows and other amusements. Confetti was also a feature of the evening. Colton Chapter No. 211 O. E. were guests of Gate City Chapter of San Bernardino at a picnic in Meadowbrook Park today.

RARE TEA SEEDS HEAVEN SENT.

ATTEMPT MADE TO GROW ROYAL PLANTS.

Consul Sends from China Seeds and Seedlings of Plants Never Before Beheld by White Men and Reserved Only for Use of Chinese Emperor.

Back in the country of the River of the Nine Windings, seven days' journey beyond, to the westward of Peking, there grows under the shadow of temples, especially erected to shelter them, the original tea plants that were sent down from heaven for the delectation of the Emperor of China, the Son of the Sun, says the Washington Star.

Few barbarians of the white race have ever been taster the tea of these plants. Such squandering of the gift of the gods would be profanation, to be followed by dire punishment. There is not enough tea raised on these plants for the Emperor himself and his immediate family. Even he has to eke out his supply of tea from the commoner crop, that Americans cannot buy at any price.

GROWING AT SUMMERVILLE.

But some of the seeds and seedlings of these secret plants have been secured by the Department of Agriculture and are now being grown in an experimental tea garden of the department at Summerville, S. C. The chances are it will be two years longer before the tea is ready to pick and experiment with, and the chances also are, according to the experts of the department, that the American public will not like it. However, it is an interesting experiment in agriculture and its progress is being watched by the department with interest.

Samuel L. Gracey, Consul of the United States at Foo Chow, was the profane iconoclast who secured the tea seeds. He sent them to Secretary of Agriculture Wilson with a report that reads like a romance of the dark ages. The department wanted to the best it could for the imported plants, ages. The department wanted to do latitude of Washington, so they were sent for trial to Summerville, where there is already an extensive tea garden. This may be news to most people, who have a hazy idea that tea is an exclusively oriental product. This is almost the case, but not quite so.

BUILT UP INDUSTRY.

Many years ago a Dr. hepard conceived the idea that the soil and climate of South Carolina were adapted to tea raising, and with the negro labor available there quite an extensive industry has been built up. The handling and curing of tea after the leaves are picked from the bushes are by an American method and decidedly more sanitary than those obtaining in China. But that is another story. There is a large and growing trade in this American-grown tea, and Summerville is the point the Department of Agriculture always selects to carry on any tea experiments.

Gracey had heard of the wonderful original tea plants that were sent down from heaven for the comfort of the emperor. No white man had ever seen them and seemed not likely to, as the journey was long and arduous and the plants jealously guarded from profane eyes. However, a consul has to do a great many things, and Gracey developed into a good enough Buddhist to be taken partially, at least, into the confidence of the priests.

He started off on his long journey with such a retinue as was fitting for the progress of a distinguished traveler, for a man in the interior of China is judged in importance much by his manner of travel on the road.

JOURNEY A LONG ONE.

It was a long trip to the country of the River of the Nine Windings. This proves to be a stream much like some of those in our southwestern butte and mesa country, where, flowing with little falls through a region of friable rock, it had in the course of aeons carved out for itself a sinuous canyon with nine turnings.

All the country and the people were strange. There was one butte 1000 feet high to be reached only by a rope ladder. On the tops of this there is a tea garden and a palatial summer home. It was the property of a mandarin in the lower country who had been able enough to accumulate a large competence and a thriving flock of enemies. When his winter residence got too hot for him, either physically or politically, he retired to his butte, climbed the ladder and pulled the ladder up after him, and left his subjects from whom he collected taxes for the Emperor and himself to discuss his iniquities till they cooled off.

UNDER SHADE OF TEMPLES.

But this was apart from the discovery of the sacred tea plants. They eventually were found growing under the shade of special temples and tended by priests raised for that vocation alone. There was not enough soil on the rocky ledge where the plants were growing to raise a dust, let alone a tea bush, and the earth for the plants had been packed in baskets from a distance and deposited a basketful at a time where it was most wanted.

The Bureau of Soils has been analyzing the earth and expresses the opinion that the sacred tea plants in South Carolina will develop into something rather different from their progenitors, as the soil, of which Consul Gracey sent them samples, is decidedly different from anything else of which the bureau has a specimen. It is a volcanic soil, and aside from its chemical constituents, its mechanical texture is different from any soil known in this country.

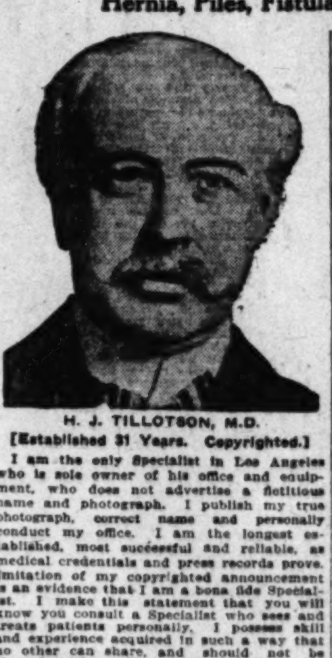
There were some seedlings growing under the parent tea bushes, and Consul Gracey got some of these as well as the seeds of the tea plants. They have all sprouted in the South Carolina field, where they are being tried, and will be raised under shade, though the Department of Agriculture has not built any temples to protect them nor imported any priests as attendants.

However, the department thinks it knows a good deal about the practical side of raising tea, though it may be a little shy on the religious ritual. It proposes to pick and cure the tea as soon as ripe, and the first samples will be sent for trial to Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, and whoever happens to be President at that time.

PLANNING FESTIVAL.

Milton Carleson, Swedish Vice-Consul in Los Angeles, left for San Francisco last night on business in connection with the annual midsummer festival which will be held here the 25th inst, at the Indian Village near Eastlake Park. The Danish, Swedish and Norwegian people look forward to this annuel festival with pleasure as such a festival is one of the greatest events of the year in their fatherland.

CURED IN FIVE DAYS
Hernia, Piles, Fistula and Varicose Veins



H. J. TILLOTSON, M.D.
[Established 31 Years. Copyrighted.]

I am the only Specialist in Los Angeles who is sole owner of his office and equipment, who does not advertise a fictitious name and photograph. I publish my true photograph, correct name and personally conduct my office. I am the longest established, most successful and reliable, as medical credentials and press records prove. Imitation of my copyrighted announcement is an evidence that I am a bona fide Specialist. I make this statement that you will know you consult a Specialist who sees and treats patients personally. I possess skill and experience acquired in such a way that no other can share, and should not be classed with medical companies. Experience is the safe standard by which judgment may be valued, and it is unwise and expensive to embrace the statements of medical companies. It is impossible for a medical company to attend college. Companies have no diploma or license to practice medicine in California or any other State. Medical companies usually are named after a doctor. A portrait, whose personality and identity are indefinite, is selected and published as the legitimate specialist of the office. Hired substitutes, with questionable ability, give consultation, examination and treatment.

A thorough investigation should be made by every ailing person as to the specialist he consults. Duty and destiny to self and those who depend upon you demand the best medical attention. I have the ability and can give you this service. I have always charged a very reasonable fee, so that my services may be obtained by any man who sincerely desires to be cured. I make no misleading statements or unbusinesslike propositions; neither do I desire to be particularly independent, and I would like to have you for a patient, if you will come to me on a strictly professional basis, and the inducements that I offer, which are my ability and thirty-one years' successful experience. Time-saving treatment and guarantee of cure of certain diseases.

NO MONEY REQUIRED TO COMMENCE TREATMENT. Many patients have no confidence in their doctor, because he demands pay before a cure has been effected, and there are many who have been misinformed about their condition, or through unsuccessful treatment have become skeptical and think there is no cure for them. I want an opportunity to treat such cases. It makes no difference about the financial part, as I accept pay for my services as benefits are derived, when I am satisfied the patient is reliable. Health is capital at interest. I will prove my ability to cure you before asking pay for my services.

WRITTEN GUARANTEE.

Dr. Tillotson's written guarantee means a cure or no pay for services. I guarantee to cure certain diseases or refund every dollar you have paid me for my services. My services cost you nothing unless I cure your Varicose Veins, Hernia, Piles, Fissures, Fistula or any disease I guarantee to cure. My terms are reasonable and no more than you are willing and able to pay.

Many Cases Cured Permanently in FIVE DAYS. Most Time-Saving, Most Natural, Most Safe. No Detention from Occupation, Family or Home. A Radical and Permanent Cure. I Will Give $500 to Any Charity as a Guarantee That Every Statement in This Announcement is True.

I cure rapidly, painlessly and at small expense. Cured patients are my testimonials; however, I do not make patients' names merchandise by publishing them. I will give conclusive evidence of my merit which is obtained and maintained by ability. I invite you to come to my office; I will explain my treatment for Hernia, Piles, Fistula, Varicose Veins, Pelvic, Nervous, Blood, Kidney, Bladder and Rectal Diseases. I will give you free a physical examination; if necessary a microscopical and chemical analysis of secretions to determine existing pathological and bacteriological conditions. Every person should take advantage of this opportunity to learn their true condition. Certainty of cure is what you want.

VARICOSE VEINS.

In the cure of Varicose Veins, Rupture and Associate Diseases of the Pelvic Region, I am successful in bringing to bear the curative power of Nature's forces in such a manner as to supplant the old-time, wide-open surgical operations. Once it required several weeks to cure these conditions and the method which some still use is such as to endanger the life of the patient and require a long period of convalescence. Now an absolute cure can be accomplished in a few days and with perfect safety.

TRUSSES SELDOM CURE RUPTURE.

Disregard for existing Hernias has cost many lives. The smallest hernias are the most dangerous to life, because of the increased liability to strangulation. I am aware that a great deal of fraud has been practiced on the public in connection with the alleged cure of Rupture, and when I say positively that I cure Rupture, to stay cured, I do not expect any one to accept my statement without investigation of my professional work. My claim to your confidence is based on absolute facts, accomplished results. A personal consultation. I will make a free examination and can explain every detail of your Hernia and demonstrate to you the curative value of the method I have discovered. I invite the careful investigation of any person who sincerely desires to be cured. I cure Rupture, in selected cases, with perfect safety, and entail no suffering, and do not detain you from occupation under Written Guarantee. Many cases cured to stay cured by several treatments.

PILES, FISTULA, RECTAL DISEASES.

These diseases are very common; most frequently found in persons of middle or advanced age; are exceedingly annoying, often very painful, and sometimes very dangerous, and frequently unfit one for pleasure or occupation. My treatment and successes are the result of years of experience; my treatment is kindly applied. I cure Piles without cutting. Some cases are cured by one or more treatments. If I do not cure your Piles, Fistula and other Rectal Diseases, my treatment does not cost you anything. Gentleness in treatment comes from treating many cases, so I guarantee a cure of Piles, Fistula, Fissures, Ulcers and all curable Rectal Diseases.

KIDNEY AND BLADDER DISEASES.

With these diseases you may have more complications than are presented by any other diseased organs. By my searching illumination of the bladder I determine accurately the diseases and by my microscopical examination and urinalysis, I make sure of the condition of the kidneys, thus laying foundations for scientific treatment.

THE RECALL IN ARIZONA.

[The Argonaut, San Francisco.]

Congress shows but little regard for its own dignity or for its functions under the Constitution of the United States by leaving it to the people of Arizona to determine whether the recall of the judiciary shall or shall not be included in the State Constitution. This is not a matter upon which Congress can afford to show either indifference or apathy. It is not one of those questions that can rightly be left for local determination by a Territory seeking admission into the Union, seeing that there are many able minds who consider it as fatal to the Republican form of government and opposed to the intention of its founders. That Arizona would have the power after her admission to amend her Constitution contrary to the advice of Congress is no reason why salutary direction should now be withheld. It was the duty of Congress not to withhold it. Something, at least, would have been gained by an expression of opinion from that source. The opinion itself would have been placed on record, and Congress would have performed one of the most vital duties incumbent upon it. To shirk that duty is to encourage disorderly processes everywhere, to weaken the authority of the Federal Constitution, to nullify its provisions, and to stultify Congress. It were better for Congress positively to sanction the judiciary recall than to take up a spineless attitude of indifference after a long and dubious look at the weather-vane. If this is indeed a matter for apathy, then there is nothing of importance in our national life.

The recall proposals as embodied in the Arizona Constitution are the most extraordinary that have ever been offered by a community claiming civilization. Any judge, after he has been in office for six months, will be liable to a recall petition, which becomes valid after it has been signed by one-fourth of the voters. He has then the option either to resign within five days, or to submit a defense which must not exceed 200 words in length, or about one-fifth the length of this column. The people will then pass upon his record. That is to say, every ignorant voter in the State will be asked to decide whether the accused judge has or has not correctly interpreted the law. Such at least will be the ostensible question for popular decision. The actual question will be very different. It will be whether the judge has or has not warped and twisted the law to suit the greed, the cupidity, the revenge of some particular dominant clique or party and to take vengeance upon him if he has not done so. It means that the judges must be the servile tools of the political boss, that they must creep and cringe in his anteroom with the aspiring poundkeeper and the seeker after illegal favors. It means eventually that the office of judge will be one of public opprobrium and contempt. It means that self-constituted authority, already the curse of our government system, will receive new powers and an enlarged influence. It means that the boss will become impregnable, that there will no longer be any authority beyond the reach of his whip.

There is no reason, we are told, why the judges should not submit at all times to the will of the majority, or why the judges, being elected by the people, should not also be removable by the people. Such arguments display an ignorance of the functions of the judiciary that is almost hopeless. Unless a judge is in a position to defy the majority, his dignity and his usefulness sink to the level of those of a policeman. Unless a judge is in a position to protect a single innocent person against the anger of a whole community, then we might as well have no judges. There are communities that are wholly controlled by labor unions. There are other communities that are wholly controlled by the enemies of labor unions. There are communities where the negro vote is paramount, and still others where enmity to the negro is dominant. But over all these conflicting elements is the law and the judges, and it is the law and the judges, alone, that limit the rights of a majority over a minority, which prescribe certain elementary rights belonging to the individual and with which there must be no interference even though he stand alone. The main object of the law is to resist the tyranny of majorities, not to fawn upon and to aid that tyranny. Without the law, without its independent and fearless interpretation, the rights of minorities, the rights of an unpopular individual, are placed in perpetual danger. It is the glory of the civilized law that it can protect the individual against the most powerful in the land, against every combination of wealth and influence. Let it be admitted that it has not always done so, but wherever it has failed it is because the right of popular election has been unwisely used, and the remedy is obvious. To take from the judiciary the one power for which it was created is simply to wrench away the props of popular liberty, the rights of the individual under the Constitution. And if the rights of popular election have been so unwisely used, what guaranty have we that the rights of the recall will be exercised with a greater discretion?

And if judges may be recalled by popular vote, why not also Governors and Congressmen? Indeed, why not the President himself? Why not let the whim of the moment control every governmental activity? Of course Lincoln would have been recalled in 1862, and probably Washington would never have reached the Presidency at all. Lincoln was elected by a minority of the people and he had to pass through a period of great unpopularity when even the Abolitionists deserted him. His recall would have been quite easy, even had he been allowed 400 words instead of 200 in which to defend himself. If the recall principle is to be applied to the judges there seems to be no good reason why it should stop anywhere short of disaster.

The funeral of Patrolman Cecil S. Bowman who was killed by a Santa Fe switch engine at Macy near Keller street, will be held Tuesday afternoon from his residence No. 1000 East Thirty-second street. A Coroner's jury decided yesterday afternoon that his death was accidental.

Interment will take place in a vault in Rosedale cemetery and the remains will later be removed to his former home in August, Me.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Peaches have been arriving through the week in very small shipments from the southern part of the State. They are of the white clingstone variety and are selling as high as $2 per box. The first car of peaches from the northern orchards is expected in tomorrow. They will bring a trifle less tha nthe small shipments. The price of apricots remains firm with small shipments reported. There have been no changes in cherries, fancy stock still selling as high as 12 cents. The housewife who expects to get cherries at less than 10 cents a pound this year will probably not get any at all. They are too scarce. Currants and gooseberries are at the height of their season and prevailing prices are probably as low as they will go.

Sweetwater grapes are moving as fast as they arrive. Prices are up to $2.50 per crate on them.

The price of eggs declined 1 cent, due chiefly to the lower demand. Receipts were 281 cases.

Butter was firm. Receipts of the week averaged lower than of that previous. Yesterday they totaled 42,989 pounds.

Cheese arrivals were 18,287 pounds. Three or four cars of eastern cheese have reached the local markets this week and buying at the low eastern prices has been very good. The stock will practically all go into storage.

Potato arrivals were 607 sacks. The call for spuds continues good. Much of the stock is badly bitten up by worms. Onions are cleaning up fast and the week at hand will see probably the last of the Bermudas.

In green vegetables there are few changes. Most of them are on the decline.

LOS ANGELES EXCHANGE.

The Trading Is Light But Most of the Stocks Show Gains—Home Telephone in the Game.

The closing day of the week is never a heavy trading day on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange and yesterday was no exception but the prices were good and the market inclined to be bullish.

Mexican Petroleum issues were active and on the uprise, the common closing at 36 and the preferred at 68. Consolidated Midway rose an eighth of a point. Home Telephone preferred was unusually active, but netted a loss over the preceding day. The past week as a whole was a period of heavy trading.

SAN FRANCISCO EXCHANGE.

Mexican Continues Strong Among the Comstocks—Manhattans Are Attracting More Attention.

[Special Service to The Times by B. F. Taylor, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—Mexican continued the strong feature of the market, and closed with a net gain of 20 points, 467½ bid. The rise in Mexican was easily traceable to the greatly improved showing on the 2500 level, and the fact that the output of the mine for the current week will have a large increase. Up to yesterday the yield was $2500 in excess of that of all last week, which amounted to $21,00, and it may possibly reach $25,000 and over for the week about to close. No advance has been made in the north drift on the 2500 level since Thursday, but the whole width of the face is reported to be in solid ore that averages $151 per ton, and this is the best showing of ore that has been seen on the Comstock since the days of the bononza in Consolidated Virginia. While squaring up in the drift yesterday, back of the face, twenty-one cars of ore, good, bad and indifferent, were taken out that averaged $84 per ton. The visitors, who inspected the mine yesterday, will have something highly interesting to see. Next week the work on advancing the drift will be resumed, and ere long a station will be cut out and a winze started in the ore below the 2500 level. Consolidated Virginia assessment added 25 cents, 142½; Union up 2½. Ophir lost 5. There was a big volume of business in Mexican.

Nearly a year ago, a drift on the 2450 level of the Consolidated Virginia from the C. & C. shaft side, which is opposite the present drift at that level, struck six feet of gold quartz, and then had to stop work on account of water. It is now drained and work commenced yesterday. Consolidated Virginia is likely to do much better. There was no changes anywhere in the Goldfield list. The Tonopahs were practically unchanged. Nevada Hills lost 5, Peak and Round Mountain the same as yesterday.

A clean-up of bullion from 10 tons of ore from the Ferguson-Gillan lease on the Union No. 4 ground at Manhattan, treated at the War Eagle mill, gave a total gross value of $3500, or at the rate of $350 per ton.

The directors of the Montgomery Shoshone at Rhyolite have decided that if the mill is not leased within the next thirty days to dispose of the machinery at the best possible terms.

The Manhattan stocks are still creating a great deal of interest. Good reports are coming from all the properties. Compared with last Saturday Mexican was up 20 points; Consolidated Virginia, 30; Union is off 12½. Goldfield Consolidated 7½. Florence 10, Nevada Hills 10.

WHEAT PRICES CRASH DOWN.

BIG MAY HOLDINGS HEDGED FOR JULY AND SEPTEMBER.

Leading Source of Support to the Market on Chicago Board of Trade Being Available No Longer Quotations Fill Like a Zeppelin Airship in a Gale.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, June 10.—Wheat prices came down with a crash today, especially for the July delivery. There were signs that the big holdings acquired in the May deal had been largely hedged for July and September and that a leading source of support was therefore available no longer. Feeling at the close was demoralized with last sales 1¾@3 3-8 under last night. Corn finished ¾@7-8 down, oats off ½@5-8 to 5-8 and provisions at a decline of 15 to 40. July wheat ranged from 88½ to 92, with last sales 3 3-8 net lower at 88 5-8. July corn fluctuated between 54 5-8 and 55¼, closing easy ¾ off at 54¾. Cash grades were weak. No. 2 yellow finished at 54½@54¾. High and low points for July oats were 38¼ and 37 5-8, with the close 5-8 off at 37 5-8. The week's big run of hogs counted against values in the provisions pit. At the final bell pork was down 22½ to 40, lard less expensive by 17½ to 20 and ribs were off 15 to a couple of dimes.

Cash quotations were as follows: Flour steady, winter patents, 3.90@4.45; straights, 3.70@4.25; spring patents, 4; straights, 4.00@4.25; baker's 3.40@4.50; No. 2 rye, 92; feed or mixing barley, 55@75; fair to choice malting, 85@96; flax seed, No. 1 southwestern, nominal; No. 1 northwestern, nominal; timothy seed, 8.00@11.00; clover, 15.75; mess pork, per bbl. 15.25@15.37½; lard, per 100 lbs., 8.12½; short ribs, sides, (loose), 7.50@8.25; short clear sides, (boxed) 8.12½@8.25.

Tone of Day's Dealings Indicated a Fair Degree of Underlying Strength and Important Movements Were in the Direction of Higher Prices—Bank Statements.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, June 10.—Stock market prices moved within narrow limits today and trading was on a small basis. The tone of the market indicated a fair degree of underlying strength and the important movements of the day were in the direction of high prices. Chief among these was a gain of about a point in United States Steel. Stock of the so-called Morgan group, the Erie and Southern Railway issues were among the strongest and most active of the list. The demand for the Erie stocks showed no abatement both the common and first preferred going to new high prices for the year. The bank statement was fairly well in line with expectations, showing a cash gain of $8,810,000 and a loan increase of $6,790,200. Bonds were firm. Total sales, par value, $2,265,000. United States 2's and 4's declined 1-8 and 3's 1-4 on call on the week.

THE COPPER INDUSTRY.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members of the New York Stock Exchange, 118 West Fourth st., Los Angeles.]

Two cars of structural steel have been received at the Mason Valley property, also transformers and other electrical equipment. During the month orders were placed for the blast furnace water jackets, traveling electric cranes and the aerial tramway, which will convey the ore from the mine to the railway. At the mine very little work was done during the month, as everything at the property is practically in readiness for the full requirements of the smelter when that plant starts operation. In addition to the stopes, which are thoroughly opened up and which contain a large quantity of broken ore ready to be drawn, there are upwards of 30,000 tons of ore on the dumps. A raise has been started from the No. 4 tunnel, which will come out under the No. 3 ore dump, through which this material will be handled. It is expected that the aerial tramline, which is soon to be installed, connecting the mine with a spur from the Copper Belt Railway, a mile distant, will be completed and ready for operation by early fall.

The continued advance in Old Dominion shares can only be construed as reflecting the steady improvement in the company's financial and physical condition. At 48 the stock is selling at the highest price since early in 1910.

Profits are running very close to $100,000 per month or much better than $2 per share on the 293,245 shares of Maine Co. stock outstanding, and the property's ability to make such a showing of earnings on a 12-cent copper market means that from the operating standpoint the mine is being handled more efficiently than at any other time in the company's history.

It would not be surprising if consideration were given at a very early date to an increase in the dividend of the Old Dominion Co. of New eJrsey to a $4 basis; this would permit the Maine company the shares of which are traded in on the Boston Stock Exchange—to double its present dividend, making it $2 per annum, and unless some unforseen development occurs this is likely to be the programme. It would indeed be strange if any copper mining company on a 12-cent metal market should find itself in position to increase its disbursement to stockholders; most companies are considering dividend reductions. Old Dominion is making its copper for 8 cents per pound. As a matter of fact, the March cost was 7¾ cents. For the first three months of this year the exact cost was 8.4 cents per pound, landed in New York and sold. This figure includes a charge of $4000 per month against the new hoist and also includes other minor construction items, together with development costs. In May the operating account was charged with $8000 to represent a portion of the cost of a new ore mixing device which will provide for a more even and satisfactory mixture of the ores for smelter treatment as well as provide further economies.

Underground the situation is particularly encouraging, and never before was the position of the property more impregnable from the standpoint of ore reserves. President Smith states that were such a course determined upon—of course it will not—Old Dominion could stop development work for the next three years and still have sufficient ore available for immediate stoping.

In the west end of the property on the 13th level ore conditions are most satisfactory, and General Manager Kingdom states that he has to date developed at least 400,000 tons of 5 per cent. ore in the Gladiator at the United Globe end of the property. This part of the property has been coming fast during the past twelve months. Two thousand feet still farther east, in the Buckeye claim, ore conditions are surprising the management. The development of commercial ore in the extreme eastern portion of the Old Dominion territory adds greatly to the intrinsic value of the property. The company has no debts outside of current bills. It has $500,000 cash in the bank and has net quick assets including materials and supplies of between $900,000 and $1,000,000. Old Dominion is today better worth the price at which it is selling than at any previous time. The ore supply is abundant, operating costs are the lowest and the financial position in every way satisfactory. The Phelps-Dodge interests are very sanguine regarding their ability to make Old Dominion shares legitimately worth twice what they are selling for and have backed their judgment with purchases of the stock.

The directors of the Copper Range Consolidated Co. have declared a quarterly dividend of 75c a share.

Three months and a year ago $1 was paid.

The dividend payments by the Copper Range Consolidated Mining Co. have been as follows:

1911	*$2.75
1910	4.00
1909	4.00
1908	4.00
1907	6.00
1906	6.00
1905	4.00
Total	$30.75

EXIT SOAP-BOX ORATOR.

Tired of Monotonous Life in Jail, He Concludes to Separate from Part of His Fortune.

Henry Gramm, charged with disturbing the peace, grew tired of the monotony of jail yesterday and decided he had rather be out. Accordingly he left $50 of his $1832 as bail, and with the balance departed from the Police Station.

Gramm is an I.W.W. and when the spirit moves him, a machinist. At Fifth and Crocker streets last Tuesday night he mounted a soap box and harangued so long and so loudly that the residents complained and he was locked up. When searched $1832.36 was found in his pocket.

"It's mine. I earned it," he said. The money was in the shape of a $1000 bill, a $500 bill, two $100 bills, six $20 gold pieces, a $10 bill and the rest in small change.

The L. A. Submarine Boat Co.

(Owners of the Cage Submarine Boat) through its authorized agent, the CONTINENTAL DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION, offers for sale a limited number of shares of its treasury stock at 75c per share.

PUBLICITY THROUGH THE PRESS.

A great deal has been published through the news columns of the press regarding this wonderful new and improved type of Sub-Marine.

DEMONSTRATION MADE.

Practical demonstrations have been made with a ten-foot model of the Cage Sub-Marine and same have been witnessed by marine engineers and naval officers, all of whom speak words of praise and state that this Sub-Marine will be so far superior to any other type yet invented that once we have demonstrated successfully with the large boat now being built at the Craig shipyard, the Government will undoubtedly adopt this type.

Photographs of the Sub-Marine taken when demonstrations were made can be seen at the Company's offices in the Ferguson Bldg., also drawings and all other data.

GREAT OPPORTUNITY FOR THOSE WHO INVEST NOW.

This is an honest enterprise offering untold possibilities for large profit through investment in shares of the Company's stock. Not only will the Government want this Sub-Marine, from which a large profit will be earned on each boat sold, but our boat can be used for commercial purposes whose importance and uses are manifold. Think of the fabulous fortunes now lying in the depths of the ocean and in the Great Lakes which cannot be recovered on account of inefficient facilities. All of these obstacles will be overcome as claimed by the inventor, when the Cage type of Sub-Marine is a reality, which we predict will be before the close of the present year.

IMPROVED TYPE OF CONSTRUCTION.

This type of Sub-Marine through its perfected devices for furnishing good air which it carries, and its mechanism, can penetrate a depth of over 250 feet under the water and remain from 10 to 15 hours without the slightest injury or inconvenience to its crew.

WILL AROUSE INTEREST OF ALL THE WORLD.

The recovery of one sunken vessel with its buried treasures will be sufficient to arouse the interest of all the world to the wonderful and practical uses of this type of Sub-Marine.

AS A PLEASURE CRAFT.

Then again, as a pleasure craft, the Cage type of Sub-Marine possesses a most unique and interesting feature. The sides of the boat will be equipped with strong glass eyes through which can be seen the beautiful Submarine Gardens and through which can be witnessed the frolics of the great fish of the briny deep. The Tuna, the Yellowtail, the Shark and the monstrous Whale can be viewed and studied in their natural element.

No promotion Stock has been or will be issued in this Company. Over 55 per cent. of the stock is treasury stock. The remaining 45 per cent. was issued (and is Pooled) in payment of all the patents and improvements and experiments to date. Patents and improvements are fully protected. Don't hesitate. Come and talk it over right now and before the price of stock is advanced to $1.00 per share, which will be very soon, as only enough stock will be sold to carry on and pay for the large sea-going boat now under construction at the Long Beach yards of the Craig Shipbuilding Co. Once this boat is completed, which we think will be by Oct. 1st, we predict it will not be possible to buy this stock under anywhere from $5.00 per share or more. Come to the Company's offices today where information and booklets will be cheerfully given you, or if out of town, write for information.

OLIVE CULTURE IN CALIFORNIA.

A Profitable Industry—Oil, on Account of Purity, Commands Higher Prices Than French Article.

WILLIAM E. CURTIS IN WASHINGTON EVENING STAR.

MONTEREY (Cal.) May 22, 1911.—There is a rapid increase in the production of olive oil and pickled olives in California, which is largely due to the pure-food law and is one of many benefits derived by the people of the United States from that legislation. Many new orchards are being planted. Old ones which were unprofitable are being trimmed up and cultivated. There is a general expansion of the industry which has not been profitable until recently, and the usual explanation has been that honest manufacturers of olive oil could not compete with the adulterated article from France and Italy, which has been represented to be very largely cottonseed oil from the United States.

Strange to say, many dealers have contended that consumers in this country prefer the adulterated article, because pure, natural olive oil is too rich and strong for them. There is no question of the superiority of the California oil over any we are getting from Italy and France, because it is made with so much greater care; just as the French oil is said to be much superior to the Italian and commands nearly double the price in the market.

We export to both those countries enormous quantities of cottonseed oil, which is used as a substitute, as well as an adulterant, for the genuine olive oil, but since the new pure-food law was passed, every purchaser of the imported, as well as the domestic product, is able to know what he is getting, and if he prefers the adulterated article, he can identify it by the label on the bottle.

Notwithstanding the very large increase in the production of olives and oil in California, our imports of both have been growing very rapidly. During the five years from 1906 to 1910 we imported an average of four times as much as we did in the corresponding period ten years previous. In 1871 the total imports were only 141,348 gallons; in 1881 they were 224,862, in 1891 they were 695,509 gallons, in 1901 they were 983,059 gallons and in 1910 they were 3,702,210 gallons.

The imports of pickled olives increase in about the same proportion.

NO NEED OF IMPORTING.

Secretary Wilson has a conviction that we can produce all the food we need on our own territory, and he believes that there is no necessity of importing olives or olive oil if the people of California will get busy and set out orchards. Olives will grow almost anywhere in the State in the lowlands, and the highlands, in the wet and the arid lands, and the enormous production in Egypt, Morocco, Algiers and other arid countries is sufficient proof that the olive tree does not require as much water as many other less profitable crops. Experts say that fifteen inches is sufficient, but the successful production of fruit in semi-arid regions depends entirely upon the choice of varieties, the distance of planting the trees, and the methods of culture and pruning, factors that are all within the control of the grower. The possibility that large areas of semi-arid land may be adapted for olive culture at least justifies experiments of sufficient extent to thoroughly test the question.

In California at present olive orchards may be found from Riverside, in the extreme southeastern part of the State; San Diego, in the extreme southwest; Napa, in the north; Oroville, in the Sacramento Valley, and at many points between. At all those places both oil and pickled olives are produced with great profit. The largest single orchard, so far as I can learn, comprises 500 acres, near La Mirada.

The demand for both the oil and the fruit is unlimited, and the California oil commands higher prices than either the French or Italian, which is due to its purity and high quality. Until recently it has been practically unknown in the East, but through the energetic efforts of George M. Curtis of Clinton, Iowa, who is said to be the largest producer in Southern California, both the oil and the ripe olives can now be found in the stocks of the leading groceries in the eastern cities.

GROWN IN MISSION DAYS.

Alexander B. Stewart, manager of the Curtis Oil Company of Bloomington, which is near Riverside, in answer to my question, said:

"Olives have been grown in California since the days of the first missions. The Franciscan fathers brought several varieties from Spain and planted them around the missions, and from those trees sprang a certain variety known as the mission olive—a good producer, containing a larger percentage of oil than ordinary olives, and also more suitable for pickling. There was not much done in the cultivation of olives, except around the missions, until the late seventies and early eighties, after nearly 100 years of non-development. Between these dates, however, many groves were set out, but good judgment was not used in the selection of location. The olive is a hardy tree, yet it needs some attention. Practically no care or attention was given them, and the results were far from gratifying.

Of late years, however, the demand for California ripe olives having greatly increased, prices to the growers have of necessity advanced, and at the present time many trees are being set out. Experience has taught the grower that with a little fertilization and irrigation, the results to be obtained are far more remunerative than from almost any other fruit, and the risk from frost, etc., is smaller.

"Growers have imported from Italy, France and Spain cuttings from almost every known variety, and about seventy-two varieties of olives now are growing in California. The University of California has issued a bulletin describing them, from which you can obtain a great amount of information. We have no accurate statistics of the number of trees planted, but groves are located all the way from the head of the Sacramento Valley to the Mexican border, it being the only place in North America, aside from the west coast of Mexico, where olives are grown. They are also grown along the western slope of the Andes, in Southern Peru and Northern Chile.

ANNUAL PRODUCT LARGE.

"The annual product of olive oil in California is approximately 800,000 gallons. In every instance this is marketed unadulterated and pure. The Department of Commerce and Labor shows that the exports of olive oil from European countries are in the neighborhood of three times as much as is manufactured here. The consumption of cottonseed oil in those countries is vastly less than the exports of that product to those countries from our southern States. I have talked with two or three Italian manufacturers personally, and they have invariably admitted that the great bulk of oil exported from Italy was formerly adulterated with cottonseed oil, claiming, however, that since the United States pure food law went into effect only a few Italian manufacturers are sending adulterated oil to this country. All table oil exported from Europe to South America, the Argentine Republic in particular, is about 75 per cent. cottonseed, but is nevertheless labeled and sold as olive oil.

"The production of ripe olives pickled in California, according to my estimate, varies from four to six million gallons. California practically uses no imported olives or oil. East of the Rocky Mountains the imported goods are sold almost exclusively.

"In the early days of the olive industry in California very little was known as to processes of manufacture. Italian, French and Spanish methods were used with poor success, owing to the fact that we wished to put out positively a pure product and could not get the flavor of the imported oil without the use of cottonseed. These facts have led to an entirely different method in California, called by us the 'natural process.' All that is necessary is to grind the olives, press them and allow the juice to settle. The oil is then skimmed and filtered. European oil is marketed very soon after manufactured, the bitter tannic acid twang being eliminated by the use of steam and hot water. The California growers age the oil by holding it from one to two years. This is done in a dark place, great care being taken to keep it cool, inasmuch as light and heat will turn oil a greenish cast and give it a rancid taste. Olive oil when first manufactured is of a golden amber color.

COST OF PRODUCTION HIGH.

"Regarding the value of total roduction of olives and olive oil, I would suggest that you figure 800,000 gallons of oil at $2 per gallon and 5,000,000 gallons of olives at 75 cents per gallon. This, of course, would be figuring in bulk, and not in highly attractive and expensive packages. It would also be figuring at a jobbing price in large quantities. The cost of production in California is far greater than in Italy or Spain, owing to the higher price of all materials, as well as the greatly increased cost of labor. Then again the grower here would not be satisfied with the small profit made by an Italian grower. The selling prices on the Pacific Coast of the imported goods are slightly lower today than our own product, notwithstanding the duty and the long transportation. At the present time the California growers cannot supply the demand, for the reasons that there are not enough of trees planted; also because many groves have been sadly neglected, although this condition is reported as having improved and becoming more rare.

"The Curtis Olive Company's factory was established in 1897, and has this year produced and marketed more olives and oil than any other mill in the State. Our capacity is 110,000 gallons of oil and 500,000 gallons of olives. We do not market our olives or oil in bulk, but sell everything under our own brand, catering to the eastern trade, where we find the demand growing extensively California product.

"The future of the olive and olive oil industry in California," said Mr. Stewart, "is assurred by the continually increasing demand for these products and by the fact that every packer sells his entire output each year and can sell more; also by the fact that olives are bringing the grower about three times as much as they did a few years ago. These conditions will surely induce many people to set out trees; but they will not bear a small crop until five years old and will not be doing proper work until after ten years of growth. It is not possible for people to set out trees fast enough to keep up with the demand for the manufactured article."

BEST USED FOR PICKLING.

The most perfect fruit on the trees is carefully selected and is used for pickling. After being thoroughly cleansed in running water in revolving colanders, the olives are run off into vats filled with brine. All manufacturers have their own recipes for making brine, and some of them are secret, but the general result is about the same. While experts claim to be able to detect the difference, the ordinary consumer would find it difficult to do so. After having remained in the liquor for a certain time the olives are passed through a separating apparatus by which they are automatically graded by sizes. The little ones drop first, and then the next largest, and so on. The pans into which they drop are carried across to the packing room, where rows of nimble-fingered girls place them in bottles, which are swiftly filled and laid aside for the corkers and labelers. Everything is done, so far as possible, by labor-saving apparatus, and the rooms and tables and jars are sterilized and scrupulously clean.

There are several processes of manufacturing oil, and they are all very simple, although not so simple, but much neater than those I have seen in Italy, Spain and elsewhere. Over there, as a rule, each grower makes his own oil with the aid of his family, and the oil mill is in an old building invariably connected with the stable, or the dwelling in which the owner lives. The fruit is crushed between an upper and a nether millstone, revolved by the power of a blindfolded donkey. Sometimes when the donkey is tired, or is needed elsewhere, the women of the family take his place. The oil that comes from the crushed fruit runs off through a gutter in the stone floor into big earthen jars, and is allowed to settle before it is bottled. There is no filtration except in very rare cases. The vessels and bottles are never sterilised, as a rule. Everything is done by hand, and often very dirty hands, at that.

In California the fruit is picked when ripe and dried either in the sun or by means of dryers. It is then crushed in a mill and the oil extracted by a powerful press, the details of these processes verying in different mills. In some places the olives are mixed with hot water before the first pressing. The first oil coming from the press is called the "virgin oil" and is the highest grade of salad oil. The pulp left from the first operation is again subjected to much higher pressure to produce the second-pressing oil. As a rule, this is mixed with the "virgin oil." The pulp is now treated with hot water and pressed again, when a third-grade oil is produced which is used for the table and also for lubricating fine machinery and for burning. The pulp still contains only matter which is extracted with carbon disulphid, and used in making castile soap and in dyeing. In this country very little of this lower-grade product is made. The oil from the different pressings is run into tanks with water and allowed to stand until the pulp and gummy matters settle. It is then drawn off, carefully filtered, and stored in a cool, dark place until ready to be bottled, as olive oil becomes rancid very quickly if exposed to light and heat.

NEW SCHOOL PLANNED.

City's Growth Demands Added School Facilities—Modern Structure to be Erected.

GLENDORA, June 10.—Plans have been perfected by Los Angeles architects, Allison & Allison, for a new grammar-school building, the cost of which will be, including the five-acre plot of ground upon which it will be erected, $50,000. The growth in population has made a new grade school an imperative need.

The new building will be of Spanish Renaissance design, two stories high, and will contain twelve classrooms, kindergarten department, sewing-room and an assembly hall with a seating capacity of 450 people. Provision will also be made for a manual-training department, to be established at a later date. Construction will be of either brick of reinforced concrete, with roof of red Spanish tile. The interior arrangement and facilities will be modern in every respect. The bond election to provide the funds for the purchase of the Foothill-boulevard site and for the erection of the school will be held June 17.

HOMES AT AUCTION.

Unusual Method Adopted to Close Up Affairs of Syndicate—Property Located in Wilshire District.

Probably the most novel sale of improved real estate ever conducted in Los Angeles will be the auction sale to be inaugurated by the Briggs Company next Wednesday. The houses, ten in number, are all new, range in cost from $3500 to $11,000; and their immediate sale is made imperative by the necessity of winding up the business of the syndicate which owns them.

The residences are located in the Wilshire district on restricted lots. The auction will begin next Wednesday at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, at 3810 Elmwood avenue. Thursday morning the auction will be resumed at 157 South Hobart boulevard. The houses are open for inspection daily.

FARMS OF CALIFORNIA.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

California has 87,670 farms, or 21 per cent. more than the 72,542 of 1900, ten years ago. Their total acreage is 27,882,000, of which 11,380,000 acres are improved. The farms average in size 318 acres each, against 397 acres in 1900, showing that smaller-sized farming is becoming more popular as the State settles up.

A census bulletin just issued gives the total value of California's farm land and buildings in 1910 as $1,448,560,000, as against $707,913,000 in 1900, an increase in the ten years of $740,647,000 ($33,000,000 more than doubled in value,) or 105 per cent.

The total value of farm land alone in 1910 was $1,315,718,000, as compared with $630,445,000 in 1900, a gain of $685,273,000, or 109 per cent.

Buildings alone were worth $132,842,000 in 1910, an increase of $55,374,000 or 71 per cent. over their value ten years previously.

In 1910 the value of the farm land alone constituted 91 per cent. of the total value of land and buildings, as compared with 89 per cent. in 1900.

The reported value in 1910 of farm implements and machinery was $36,393,000, as against $21,312,000 in 1900, a gain of $15,081,000 or 71 per cent.

The improved acreage formed 41 per cent. of the total farm acreage both in 1910.

The average value per acre of California's farm land and buildings in 1910 is stated as $51.95, as against $24.56 in 1900, a rise in value of $27.39 per acre, or 112 per cent.

Farm land alone was worth $27.19 per acre in 1910, the amount of gain per acre being $25.32 or 116 per cent.

The total number of farms operated in California in 1910 by owners, part owners and owners and tenants, comprising the "all-owners" class, was 66,265, as compared with 52,529 in 1900, an icrease of 13,736. That speaks well for the solidity of the agricultural idustry of the State.

The total number of farms conducted in 1910 by cash tenants, share tenants and cash-share tenants comprising the "all-tenants" class, was 18,035, as against 16,760 in 1900, an increase of 1275.

The farms operated by managers in 1910 was 3370, or 117 per cent. more than in 1900, though still but a small proportion of the total number of farms in the state, showing favorable as to absentee farm ownership.

Of the 66,265 "owned" farms there were 39,595, or 60 per cent reported free of incumbrance, and 26,670, or 40 per cent. mortgaged for varying amounts.

The expenditure for farm labor in 1910 reached the great sum of $49,375,000, as compared with $25,845,000 in 1900, an increased labor outlay last year of $23,890,000 (practically $2,000,000 a month,) or 92 per cent.

Fertilizers cost $2,182,000 in 1910, or $1,195,000 (128 per cent.) more than in 1900.

MANY SMALL FARMS.

The 87,670 farms classify as to size and number as follows:

Size—	1910.	1900.	Inc., 10 years.
10 acres and under	22,236	15,082	7,153
20 to 49 acres	20,532	13,110	7,422
50 to 99 acres	10,637	8,067	2,570
			Dec., 10 years.
100 to 174 acres	11,945	13,196	1,251
175 to 499 acres	12,520	12,005	485
500 to 999 acres	5,112	5,329	217
1,000 acres and over	4,688	4,753	65

Of the whole number, 87,760 of farms reported in 1910 for California, there were 84,692, or 97 per cent. operated by white farmers and 2978, or 3 pe rcent. operated by negro, Japanese, or other non-white farmers. The increase in the number of farms of white farmers during the decade amounted to 13,757 and in that of farms of non-white farmers, 1371.

BATTLE ENDS IN A WILD RIOT WHEN DIXON IS DISQUALIFIED.

Scores of Persons Engage in Mix-up in the Gallaries. Earl Rogers Fears Bad Effects—Moran-Wolgast Fight May Be Stopped in Addition to Local Interference—Eyton's Decision Justified in Opinion of Fans.

BY HARRY CARR.

A FOUL and a wild uproar ended the fight between Joe Rivers and Tommy Dixon, the tattooed sailor at Vernon yesterday.

After fifteen rounds of rough, dirty, foul fighting on the sailor's part, he tried kicking for variety.

Referee Eyton instantly stepped in between the fighters and motioned them to their corners.

The scene that followed is almost beyond description.

It was just as the boys were breaking out of a clinch that Dixon raised his knee, and, according to the most exper tringside testimony, tried to butt the Mexican in the groin.

A look of angry fury darted into Rivers's eyes, but before he could renew the attack on the bleeding little Irishman, Eyton grabbed Dixon by the shoulder and flung him contemptuously toward his corner.

For a moment every one in the ring looked bewildered. Rivers walked soberly toward his corner—where he turned, puzzled, and half raised one hand in a sort of apeal to know if Eyton had not neglected something.

Eyton crossed the ring and elevated the Mexican's glove to show that he had won; then he turned to face an onslaught.

There was a headlong flight from Dixon's corner; in the front of it was Jimmie Hurst, the Irish boy's manager. He was gesticulating almost frantically—his mouth opening and shutting with yells of remonstrance that could not be heard over the uproar that had broken out from the audience.

As Eyton came back to the corner of the ring for his coat, a river of excited sports seemed to burst down the aisle toward him.

THE EXPLANATION.

"What's the matter? What's the matter?" they howled.

"He deliberately kicked him," remarked Eyton, in a cool, even voice of explanation.

The sailor came to his elbow just in time to hear. The boy's wet, dripping body was spattered with blood, and the mouth that he opened to yell his frenzied protests was more like a jagged hole in his face than a real mouth.

"I didn't kick 'im," he shrieked, flinging his arms like a crazy person. "I didn't kick 'im; my foot slipped."

Suddenly flinging back the crowd that was gathering about him, Dixon rushed to the ropes and leaned over the reporters.

"I didn't kick 'im," he screamed in a hoarse, distraught voice.

He raised one blood-specked arm straight into the air. "I take an oath by m' mother, I never kicked 'im; my foot slipped." He was almost beside himself with excitement. His eyes stared almost insanely.

The crush around the reporters became terrific and dangerous. Sports were clawing each other like dogs in their eagerness to hear. Chairs were tipping over and men were reeling and falling.

In the middle of the crowd, leaning over the chairs of the sporting writers and glaring the excited fighter in the eye, was Earl Rogers, the attorney for the fight club.

"I'll take the responsibility," he shouted. "You can blame me for it. You fought a dirty fight all the way and I wouldn't stand for it. I've got to go into the Superior Court with this fight business, and I won't stand for it. You were licked all the way."

Tommy stopped and looked around for an instant abashed by the attorney; the sight of his seconds standing around him in shirt sleeves and most of them howling at the top of their lungs, seemed to revive his crushed spirits.

Seeing the crowd gathering in front of him, struggling with each other to get close to him, started him off again.

"Gentlemen," he began, "I take an oath by m' mother——"

But the crowd was making such a terrific uproar only the man next to him could hear.

UPROAR GROWS.

"Gentlemen," he yelled again, raising his fighting arm again for silence. But the uproar grew in volume until it was a storm.

"Aw, shut up; lemme talk," he roared in sudden anger.

DIXON ASTONISHED AT SUCH A THING.

"Why I never had any intention of fouling Rivers, if I did. I don't know how I could do such a thing. When we were coming together in the middle of that sixteenth round my foot slipped and hit him and the referee says I kicked at Rivers's stomach. What do you think of that? Me doing anything like that.

"Why, Rivers tried to get me to foul him a number of times, but I didn't. He has a habit of jumping up when you swing at his stomach and a man is liable to hit him low. I guess I did several times.

"It is too bad it was stopped when it was. He beat me easy in ten rounds, but I think I could have beaten him in twenty. I was just getting strong when they stopped the fight. I think he is a good fighter. I don't know any boy in the East that I have ever fought whose style is just like his. I'm going to stick around here for a week or so and then will probably go to San Francisco, if I can't get another go with Rivers.

MEXICANS ARMED WITH RIFLES HOLD UP PATHFINDING AUTOS.

Bullard and Party Recross Line and Pow-wow With Insurgents, After Which Cars Are Released—Wild Cat Disputes Way of Phoenix Club President, Who Beats Retreat.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL CENTRO, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Covered with the dry dust of the Mexican desert, and with lips cracked and faces bronzed by exposure to the burning sands, the crew of the E.M.F. pathfinder for the Los Angeles-Phoenix automobile road race reached El Centro at 2 o'clock this morning.

The car was driven across the boundary line into the United States just after midnight, and after the daring autoists had crossed a country where bands of insurgent socialist soldiers are encamped.

Twenty miles from Cocopah, Mex., the pathfinders sighted a campfire. The lights of the machine were dimmed, and George Purdy Bullard, who is in charge of the expedition, advanced on foot. After proceeding a mile a huge desert wild cat disputed the road and Bullard returned to the car.

After waiting, a dash was made for the line, and as the E.M.F. approached the campfire was extinguished.

Bill Lacasse, who was driving, took the road leading to the California and Mexico Land and Cattle Company's ranch-house, which is on the border. The immense wooden gate was not locked, and the E.M.F. slipped through without being challenged.

Two minutes after the car had crossed the line, the pathfinder party was challenged first by a United States soldier on sentry duty, and then by a tall insurrecto.

HAVE SLIM CHANCE.

The dash across the line had been watched by a captain of the insurrecto army whom his friends call Slim. Armed with a new Mauser rifle big Slim hailed the car and protested against the way the E.M.F. had been driven into the United States. Bullard, who is District Attorney of Maricopa county, at once decided to surrender and the car was driven back across the line into Mexicali.

Anxious to avoid any international trouble, which might arise, the E.M.F. crew climbed out of the car and it was practically delivered to the insurgent army men.

When the officers saw that no attempt was being made to sneak across the border, and that the autoists were willing to give them any information regarding the back desert country, the pathfinding crew was released, and after an hour allowed to recross the line into California and proceed to El Centro, in Imperial county.

Information given to the insurrectos regarding the desert resulted in the best of treatment, and formality was waived when the autoists told the Mexican soldiers of having seen a campfire near Cocopah, only twenty miles from Mexicali.

SPOILING FOR A FIGHT.

"We are going to have a fight," said a Mexican sentry, who waved a gun in front of the E.M.F. as it approached the line.

"We got orders to let nobody cross the line." When told of the campfire incident the Mexican said the soldiers were on duty night and day, ready to fight.

The third day's run of the E.M.F. was filled with thrilling incidents from the moment the Mexican line was crossed at Andrade. At that place Roger Lawrence, an engineer in the employ of the California Development Company's irrigation plant, gave valuable advice concerning the desert roads. He showed Bullard a route which would take the motor cars in the Los Angeles-Phoenix race through the bottom lands of the Colorado River, and close to the canal which carries water through Mexican territory to the Imperial Valley.

Indian bucks were offered large sums of money to pilot the E.M.F. from border to border. Though the red men know the way perfectly, not one would climb into the car.

"Mexicans, they kill my men," said a young Indian chief in explanation. "Him not want go, him stay here."

The big Indian grinned but stayed on the United States side of the line. The Indians have no use for the in-

"DIRTIEST FIGHTER I EVER MET," SAYS JOE RIVERS.

"Tommy Dixon is the dirtiest fighter I have ever stacked up against," said Joe Rivers in his dressing-room immediately after the fight. "I give him credit for being a clever ring general, for he uses about all the tactics there are to be used—both good and bad. I was really afraid to stay close to him too long for it seemed that at almost every opportunity he tried to foul me.

"Butting, kneeing and biting were what he tried to slip over. See these marks here?" he said, pointing to several abrasions on the upper part of his chest. "There's where he bit me."

The marks did look as if they had been made by teeth, although they were not very distinct.

"He hurt me pretty bad when he gave me that knee punch in the sixteenth.

"Despite Dixon's rough work, I will say that he is a game boy. I landed some hard wallops—about as good as I have ever put home—and he stood up under them in a way that surprised me. After the second round I felt that I was his master. In the first two rounds he rather dazzled me with the fancy stuff he sprung, but after I had sized him up I knew he could not do anything with me while I counted on gradually weakening him with heavy body punches. If the referee had not called it off in the sixteenth I believe I would have put him out before the opening of the twentieth round."

The first thing Rivers said when he got into his dressing-room was, "Get somebody to 'phone to my mother right away. She's mighty anxious to know how I came out."

Then he began to express his indignation regarding Tommy's methods of milling and his seconds joined in heartily.

"I am going to stay right here until July 4, when I expect to hook up with Coster," said Rivers. "You know, I am building a house for my mother and I want to get that finished as soon as possible."

JOE RIVERS WINS ON FOUL AFTER GIVING TOMMY DIXON BAD BEATING.

BY GREY OLIVER.

A GOOD, tough, game guy—Tommy Dixon—tried to beat Joe Rivers, boxer, yesterday at the Vernon arena and was not only handed a sound lacing for his efforts but lost the decision and was disqualified for fouling in the middle of the sixteenth round. The foul consisted in Dixon's kicking Rivers on the shin and when Referee Eyton saw this he stopped the fight and declared Rivers the winner.

As a matter of fact Dixon would probably have been disqualified for fouling long before he was had not Referee Eyton been lenient with him. Eyton doubtless thought that if he stopped the fight after repeatedly warning Dixon about fouling that some of the fight bugs would say that he was favoring Rivers.

Dixon was undoubtedly guilty of a number of fouls for hitting low and Eyton could have given no other decision than the one he did. He warned Dixon several times during the fighting and even went to his corner several times and cautioned him but it seems that these warnings did no good.

The way the fight was fought Dixon could not have won any other way in twenty rounds, had he made no better showing than he did in the first twelve. Rivers simply outclassed him, being better at every angle of the game. Rivers is far and away the better boxer, better at infighting and can hit a harder punch.

Each scored a knockdown and this was the only way in which the fight could be called an even one. Dixon floored Rivers early in the second round with a right to the jaw but the blow was not a very effective one at that for Rivers had hardly touched the floor before he was up again. He was certainly not down more than two seconds and was not in distress. When he arose he tore into Dixon with all sails set, fighting all the time. This second round was the only one in which it might be said that Dixon had a decided advantage.

Rivers knocked Dixon flat in the eighth, which opened with a clinch. Eyton warned the boys to quit wrestling and broke them. After they broke and backed away Rivers rushed Dixon to the ropes and swung a left to the neck. The blow sent Dixon against the ropes and, as he bounded back, Rivers slammed another to the neck and Dixon went down. He was not badly hurt, but he stayed down for eight seconds and when he arose Rivers kindly backed away and let him get to his feet.

The Mexican was the agressor in every round and continually backed Dixon around the ring. Joe sailed in right off the reel to set the pace and never stopped. The first round was given over to feeling each other out, but Rivers got in two good wallops when he landed a long left uppercut on Dixon's chin and when he chopped him on the jaw with his right. The first round was not very exciting, but Rivers had a shade the best of it on aggressiveness and clean punches delivered.

Every other round up to the fourteenth was a Rivers round and he certainly did lace Dixon to the queen's taste. He out-boxed him, smothered his leads, uppercut him, chopped his ears and jaws with right-handers, banged him on the kidneys and punched him in the stomach with rights and lefts.

Poor little Dixon bled from the

DELIGHTFUL TRIP THAT TAKES IN SCENERY LIKE THAT OF SWITZERLAND.

Beautiful Lake About Two Miles Long Hidden in the Conejo Country—Only About Forty Miles from Los Angeles—Magnificent Views from Two Mountain Passes Reached Over Good Roads.

BY EVELYN M'DOWELL.

ONE OF the loveliest spots within easy reach of Los Angeles by automobile is a short distance from the beaten track and not generally known to motorists. Quite by accident a few weeks ago, while making the tour to Camarillo, going by way of the Conejo Pass and returning by Santa Susana, we came upon the Mathiesson Lake, a beautiful body of water perhaps two miles long, situated upon the ranch of the same name, some four or five miles from the main Ventura road. Probably its unexpectedness added to its fascination, and also the fact that the sun was becoming rather low in the west and casting long shadows, but when, turning a sharp corner at the top of a rather steep, stony hill, we were suddenly confronted by the sight of this little sheet of water lying quietly among the hills, its smooth surface broken by gentle ripples, exclamations of surprise and admiration escaped involuntarily from the members of our party. The irregular outlines of this little lake, a long arm leading off at an angle, and its tree-grown islets, remind one at first sight of a miniature Como. At frequent intervals, fish are seen leaping to the surface. The shores of the lake slope quite abruptly and are amply clothed with vegetation, many bright flower-faces appearing among the green. The pendant gray moss which decorates the oak trees adds a semi-tropical touch to the scene.

HOW TO GET THERE.

And all this array of beauty is easily accessible to motorists. On the Ventura road about ten miles above Calabasas postoffice there is a gate at the lefthand side. Near this gate is a sign giving warning against plowing up public roads. This sign will help to identify the gate. Passing through this gate, a road leads through a barley field into Russell Valley. Some distance after passing through a second gate, you will come to still another, or rather two adjoining gates. That at the left leads into Triunfo Canyon, which, in turn, enters Malibu Canyon several miles farther down. But that is another story. The road that leads straight ahead past some houses and barns, is the one that takes us to the Mathiesson ranch. Another gate must be passed through just beyond this little settlement; then it is easy to keep to the main road to and past the lake. There are several gates to pass through. Be sure to close them carefully, as there are many cattle on the ranch, and you are on private property and are admitted only by courtesy of the owner. Camping, hunting and fishing are strictly prohibited. You are welcome to enjoy the beauty of the place, but not to despoil it. At the farther end of the lake are the ranch buildings, and here are more gates to be opened and closed.

As mentioned in The Times more recently, a company of Los Angeles gentlemen have been considering the matter of leasing the lake and maintaining fishing and hunting preserves there.

ON TO CAMARILLO.

After passing the ranch buildings, the road to Camarillo leads through beautiful oak-dotted grain fields, up a short grade and down a winding canyon, until a corner is reached, the road bearing off to the left going to Hueneme and Oxnard, while the one at the right joins the main Ventura road at the corner where the Borchard ranch house is located.

To make a complete and interesting round trip, turn to the left into the Ventura road at Borchard's and go over the Conejo grade to Camarillo, taking in the magnificent view from the Conejo summit. Arriving at Camarillo, turn to the right and follow along the railroad track to Somis, keeping on the main road bearing a little north of east, until Simi is reached. The road runs near the Southern Pacific tracks a good share of the way, but keeps to the south of Moorpark. Between Somis and Simi, and not far from Moorpark, there is a considerable stretch of sandy road, but this is not difficult to negotiate.

OVER SANTA SUSANA PASS.

From Simi to Santa Susana the road again keeps near the railroad, but leaves it at the foot of the Santa Susana Pass and winds around over the mountains through some very picturesque scenery. It will be worth while to stop a short time at the summit to take in the splendid "bird's-eye" view to be had here.

At the eastern foot of the pass, toward the San Fernando Valley, the road turns to the right, leading into Chatsworth. At the school house turn to the left, and following this main road, you will come in sight of San Fernando mission to the left. At the corner just south of the old mission are some shade trees and an abundance of good, cool water flowing from a pipe. It is a good place to rest a few minutes. The mission can then be visited.

Two miles of fine road lead to the town of Fernando. From here take the main Los Angeles road through Burbank and Tropico to Los Angeles.

This trip can be made comfortably in a day, but it is pleasanter to take it more leisurely, and if you like camping, camp out over night. As already stated, no camping is permitted on the Mathiesson ranch, which would be an ideal place to spend the night, but there is a fairly good camping place in a grove at the foot of the Conejo grade on the northern side. There is a small hotel at Camarillo.

LOZIER PLANS TO BUILD TRUCKS ON CAREFULLY DEVISED DESIGNS.

ONE of the latest of the big automobile concerns to enter the commercial truck field is the Lozier Company, and about September 1 the Lozier trucks will be placed in the various agencies throughout the country. This announcement was expected by the dealers who are selling the 1912 Lozier pleasure vehicles as the contracts sent out to them expressly stipulated that they were not "granted the privilege of selling the Lozier commercial vehicles."

The principal Lozier agencies in the larger cities, however, are arranging to take care of this part of the business next fall and of course the branch houses will all handle the truck line in connection with the Lozier automobiles.

While the Lozier is one of the last of the big builders in the field with trucks, it is well known that the company has been experimenting along these lines for a number of years. At the Plattsburg factory two years ago experimental trucks were at work on the road and preparatory work has been going on ever since. These trucks are now in service in Detroit and the building of vehicles for the market is being carried on in the new Detroit plant.

A number of the best features of some of the successful foreign trucks used in the army service have been incorporated, but the Lozier truck will be a distinctive creation of the Lozier engineers embodying the desirable qualities of the endurance and stamina which characterize the pleasure vehicles of this factory. The mechanical details, capacity and prices have as yet not been made public, but it is known that the trucks will be of large carrying capacity.

It is said that the first Lozier touring car was placed on the market in 1904, after four years of experimental work and the same careful preparation in bringing out a commercial vehicle promises to bring out a truck of unusual characteristics.

HAULS HEAVY LOADS.

Ocar Fitch, the Reo agent in Santa Barbara, is becoming one of the best-known figures on the road between the Channel City and Los Angeles. In the past two months the hustling Reo advocates has driven five trucks over the road between the two cities. In each trip his truck has been loaded to the breaking point with hay and grain, and other articles of produce. In spite of the conditions of the roads Fitch has always managed to finish the journey without losing any of his cargo.

GREER GOES EAST.

P. H. Greer, president of the Greer-Robbins Company, Southern California agents for Mitchell cars, left Los Angels last week for an extended eastern trip. Greer is going direct to Racine, Wis., where he will visit the big Mitchell factories and confer with the Mitchell-Lewis officials. After leaving there he will probably visit various eastern cities and other automobile factories. He will return about the first of July.

Obstacles Removed.

CROSS-CONTINENT AUTO TRIP NOW.

Motorists of the East Prepare to Make the Journey.

Difficulties Are No Longer Insurmountable.

Westgard Boosts Highway Across United States.

Eastern autoists are fast awakening to the fact that a transcontinental tour, with the pleasures of a motor trip through the State of California in view, is not one fraught with insurmountable obstacles or discouraging difficulties.

Because of the improved roads which have been built and are in process of construction throughout the Southwest, and the first-class hotel accommodations all along these lines of gasoline travel, a trip from the Atlantic to the Pacific is no longer looked upon as one of the wonders of motoring. In fact, long distance touring is becoming a popular pastime.

It was not more than a half dozen years ago that such a trip was the cause of the most widespread comment. So rapid have been the advances made in road and hotel building since then, and especially during the past two years, that the continental autoist is no longer looked upon as a pathfinder.

It is through Arizona and New Mexico that the well defined route to Los Angeles has been most recently marked out. This is largely the result of the efforts of the Touring Club of America which opened an active good roads campaign in this region over a year ago. The club has sent its official trans-continental pathfinder, A. L. Westgard, on two long tours through this country within this time, with the result that a widespread movement for improved highways has been aroused throughout the entire Southwest. Westgard has received the hearty co-operation of many representatives of the Touring Club along the route.

Govs. Mills and Sloane of New Mexico and Arizona have entered enthusiastically into the scheme and have secured larger road appropriations than before. In Arizona there are 1300 miles of good automobile roads leading through some of the most picturesque country in the United States. An appropriation of $15,000 has recently been made to improve a stretch of forty-one miles near the New Mexico boundary. In New Mexico itself, $10,000 has been voted for highway improvement near Albuquerque and convict labor is being used to better the condition of the present roads. Within the past year, over eighty miles of road have been improved between Las Vegas and Albuquerque.

IT'S CONTAGIOUS.

Kansas and Colorado have also caught the fever of good auto ways, and are following the good example set by New Mexico and Arizona. The Santa Fe Highway Association has taken the lead in this movement.

"The Trail to Sunset" is the appropriate name given by the Touring Club to the great southwest route to Los Angeles and the Pacific Coast. Scores of sign-posts bearing this picturesque inscription have already been erected at various points. This highway is the best possible route which could have been selected by the Touring Club and it has the additional distinction of being the first continental road ever mapped out and completely sign-boarded by any motoring organization.

"This great trans-continental highway, long the dream of the road enthusiasts, is much nearer realization through the untiring efforts of the automobile 'scouts' and 'pathfinders,'" said J. E. Pennybacker, Jr., secretary of the American Association for Highway Improvement, when discussing road problems at the Touring Club recently.

"I have followed with much interest the pathfinding tours of A. L. Westgard of the Touring Club of America from New York to San Francisco," continued Mr. Pennybacker, "and I can well understand the spirit of local pride which the arrival of the Touring Club's official car arouses in each locality visited and which results in an earnest effort to improve the local roads so as to make them worthy of being considered links in the new trans-continental route. These tours do great good and I congratulate the Touring Club of America upon the spirit of initiative and the farsightedness which prompted them to inaugurate the tour."

the valve stems on modern cars the most natural and best remedy would be to readjust the adjustable plungers, so that when the valve is on its seat there is just the thickness of a visiting card between the bottom of its stem and the top of the plunger when the engine is hot. If the plungers are not adjustable, it may become necessary to alter the length between the valve frame and the bottom of the valve stem, which can be done by turning the valve head in the lathe.

BASEBALL IN THE EARLY DAYS.

Baseball day by day, fifty years ago, would make very interesting reading. In the fall of '58 the first match game of ball under the New York rules was played in New England, and the year '59 saw several amateur clubs in the field in this part of the country.

Baseball was fast gaining a firm hold on the New England people and everything looked promising for the game when the war broke out in '61. In March of that year the Lowell Club was formed, Boston's finest baseball organization until ten years later, when Harry Wright brought a winner to the south end grounds.

The war practically killed baseball and the Lowell Club played but one game the first year of their existence. The game taking place at Medford on October 16 and won by Lowell by a score of 16 to 10. The founder of the club, John A. Lowell, is still a hearty Boston business man and as fond of the game as ever.

The war broke out early in the year, over fifty members of the Boston Baseball Club joining the army, and in the services of their country won fame and honor, while many yielded up their lives. Others returned to take up the game after the war was over with many interesting stories to tell of their scrub games with the "Johnnies" as the brave boys in gray were feelingly referred to.

The northern soldiers' great love for the game spread among both armies, and after the war teams were organized from Boston to New Orleans. The seed planted in the shadow of many a battlefield from '61 to '65 in the South land, has borne fruit a hundred-fold.

HARVARD DROPS THREE OPPONENTS.

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) June 8.—Several surprises developed in the announcement of the complete schedule for the Harvard 'varsity football team next season. Three teams which were played last year—Cornell, Westpoint and Bowdoin—have been dropped. Their places are taken, respectively, by Princeton, which will meet the Crimson at Princeton in the first game between the two universities in fifteen years; Carlisle, which returns to Cambridge after a year's absence, and Holy Cross, which has not been on a Harvard schedule for about five years.

The big game with Yale comes on November 25, and will be played this year at Cambridge, as will all of the other games, with the exception of the one with Princeton. The schedule follows:

September 30, Bates; October 7, Holy Cross; October 14, Williams; October 21, Amherst; October 28, Brown; November 4, Princeton, at Princetown; November 11, Carlisle; November 18, Dartmouth; November 25, Yale.

CARNEGIE MEDAL TO HARRY KNIGHT?

Friends Agitating Movement for Recognition.

Driver of Westcott Car at Risk of His Life.

Turned Into Wall When Man Falls on Track.

An active movement is on foot to gain meritorious recognition from the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission for Harry Knight, the youthful hero of the Memorial Day race at Indianapolis. A petition has been started, signed by a number of the A.A.A. officials in charge of the race, together with a number of prominent witnessed the heroic act of Knight. Also, an effort will be made to get the names of a number of the crowd of 71,000 persons who were present at the race and saw the thrilling spectacle.

The whole thing happened in an instant. Knight came down the stretch in his Westcott car, going at a speed near eighty miles an hour, when he saw the head of Anderson, Jagerburger's mechanician, bobbing in the air ahead, as the dazed man struggled to his feet after falling from the Case car, which Jagerburger was driving. With only an instant to think and act, Knight turned his car into a concrete retaining wall at the side of the track, and saved the mechanician's life, with death fairly reaching out for him and his mechanician, Clover.

As Knight's body went hurling through the air, prayers were on every lip, for his life. When reached by assistance, the plucky driver was still conscious enough to explain where he was most seriously injured, in the head. At present, he is lying with his mechanician, Clover, and Anderson, who was slightly injured in his fall from the Case car, in the hospital in Indianapolis with concussion of the brain. The doctors say that Knight will be out in a week or so and entertain no serious results from his accident.

The fact that Knight was well up in the 500-mile race makes his heroic action all the more commendable, and it is expected that public sentiment, coupled with active steps on the part of his friends, will bring recognition of his action.

This is the second time in his youthful career as racing driver that Knight turned his car aside from the track to save a life, the former act occuring at Fairmount Park in Philadelphia last year.

MOTOR COPS ARE LEFT IN THE REAR.

In Race With Simplex They Fail to Keep Up.

New Yorker Tries Out Highway and Sets Record.

Sawtelle Limits Stop Fast Flying Machine.

Los Angeles county has the best policed roads in the State, according to the various members of the automobile fraternity. There is not one of the many highways radiating from the city but what has its watchful guardians, and the possibilities of burning up the ground are few and far between.

The El Monte road, the Whittier road, the Venice road and the Long Beach speedway, are all covered by pairs of motor policemen on their two-cycle "Indians," and every day some of the daring or unwary are hauled up before local justices of the peace and are compelled to repent of their sins with good hard coin.

As a rule the victims fall easy prey to the stop watches, and the speedy two-wheeled patrols, but occasionally they get the better of the officers.

One of the biggest surprises ever slipped over in the constabulary happened last Thursday morning on the road to Venice. J. H. Lyons of New York, who is stopping at the Alexandria, took out his new Simplex touring car and started to cut down the time record between Los Angeles and the beach city. He had hardly gotten on his way before he discovered that the motor "cops" were on his trail.

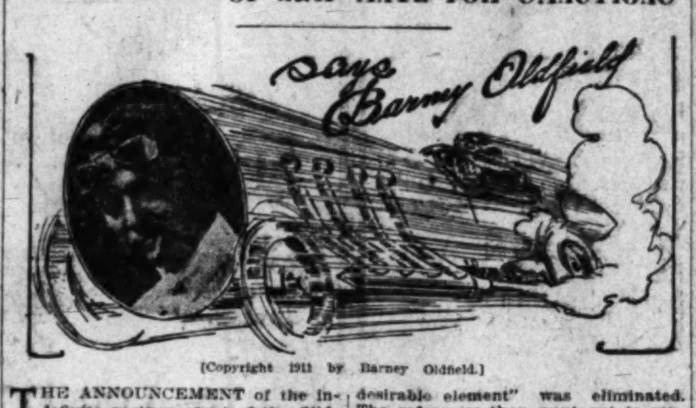
Instead of giving up and going to the nearest village justice and paying his fine, the New York man let the big car out to the limit. The pursuing vigilantes did likewise, but to their great surprise found that the auto gained on them every minute. In vain they opened the throttles of their mounts to the last notch, the Simplex kept increasing its lead.

The baffled "cops" stayed on, hoping for a puncture or something equally disastrous to stop the scorching car, and at last just as they had given up all expectation of catching the rapidly disappearing machine, the city limits of Sawtelle were reached and the big car was forced to slacken its mad gait.

The police quickly overtook their quarry and won the victory, but the amount of respect shown the driver of the Simplex would have been a revelation to the average offender.

It Costs Money.

GLIDDEN TOUR FIZZLES BECAUSE OF NEW ANTE FOR SANCTIONS



[Copyright 1911 by Barney Oldfield.]

THE ANNOUNCEMENT of the indefinite postponement of the Glidden tour, following closely the collapse of the proposed national circuit plans, seems to reflect a most unhealthy state of affairs in the racing game. Those close to the throne admit that there is small chance of a Glidden tour being pulled off in the fall or late summer as the announcement bulletin promised.

Three weeks ago I predicted in these columns that the $25,000 Indianapolis race would be a death blow to the automobile racing sport. Perhaps I may have exaggerated the conditions. Probably it would have been better to have suggested that a temporary stroke of paralysis of the sport would follow the running of the great race.

The Indianapolis race was participated in by nearly every manufacturer with racing or contest convictions. Preparing for the event was too important a matter to permit plans for another contest or race to be considered seriously or worked out. The terrific cost to the entrants was a staggering blow to the sporting aspirations of many. The ledgers showed many figures in the reddest of red ink.

And again, a great discouraging feature, from the manufacturers' viewpoint of the racing game, is the fact that no effort has been made to lessen the burden which is forced on the entrants in racing events and contests. Instead of figuring out a way for the makers to win back, in prizes, some of the enormous expense, the effort has been in the opposite direction: Promoters are encouraged to charge exorbitant entrance fees and are forced to pay such unreasonable sums for sanctions and visiting officials, that there is little left for the prize list.

LESSENING NUMBERS.

One years ago there were more than fifty racing events planned and scheduled for last season. If there are a dozen meets in view at the present time for the coming months, I have seen no mention of them. Notwithstanding the announcement that the national circuit was off so far as having drivers and cars to follow it, the Milwaukee Automobile Dealers' Association was forced to pay $1500 for a two-days sanction for June 16 and 17. Instead of being assured of several entries by the racing czars, the association in question had to contract to pay one driver a $2500 bonus for his appearance, besides offering $1500 more in cash prizes. Many other drivers have been demanding a bonus to enter.

The Minnesota and New York State fairs have also been quoted the $1500 sanction rate which can carry nothing with it but the attendance of certain officials who seem to be making quite a good living out of money that should go to the drivers and manufacturers.

After the Chicago Motor Club refused to pay $1500 for one of these "national" sanctions for the Algonquin hill climb, it was announced from New York that a "national" sanction had been issued at the regulation $50 fee.

Why should one promoting club be made to pay many times more for a sanction than another which had the backbone to refuse to stand for fattening the bank roll of certain officials? The Manufacturers' Contest Association should investigate the Milwaukee situation. It will not require much of an effort to hear all the details from either the officers of the dealers' association or the members of the automobile club of that city.

ELIMINATIONS.

For many years there was an insistent demand from certain quarters for the elimination of an "undesirable element" from the automobile racing sport. For some reason, or probably many reasons, it was claimed that racing should be conducted along "sportsmanship" lines and that there was no place in the sport for the professional driver who was interested in the promotion of race meets or exhibitions.

Early in the [illegible] "undesirable element" was eliminated. The reformers then went out to revolutionize the automobile racing sport. Evidently the manufacturers were too busy to listen to the roseate-hued promises of the officials, or could not figure out why they should make a bet before looking at their hand.

The failure to secure more than six entries for the Glidden tour should arouse those who have the good of the sport at heart (not merely for the sake of holding a fat job) sufficient to start an investigation to ascertain the cause of the slump in the promotion of, and interest of the makers in, racing and other contests.

BY TWENTY SECONDS.

Five days after the finish of the $25,000 Indianapolis sweepstakes event the officials announced that the winner was but about twenty seconds ahead of the second contestant, instead of over five minutes, as was announced when the checkered flag indicating the conclusion of the great struggle was flashed.

The mistake must have been exasperating to the entrant of the second car, who claims that had he known the difference was so slight the team manager could have urged the driver on. The fact is that the timing device was out of commission for over an hour during the race and some of the contestants say that there are many details of the timing and scoring that could have been far more lucid.

I am writing this from Chicago, for the management of the speedway was so thoroughly satisfied with its ideas, plans and proclamations that any criticism in Indianapolis was "lese majesty" of most virulent form and punishable by all sorts of horrible penalties. The 300-horse-power crown which was pressed on the perspiring brow of "Wild Bob" Burman, might also have been worn with becoming grace by the "big noise" of the speedway directorate, had his own valuation of his position been accepted by visiting press representatives.

DON'T DESERVE IT.

I notice that some well-meaning but uninformed motor enthusiasts of Indianapolis are trying to have a Carnegie hero medal awarded a driver who ran his machine into another car and a crowd of pit mechanics to prevent running over a mechanic who lay on the track, having fallen from an other racing car.

The mechanic did not move and four other cars missed striking him and continued on around the track. The drivers of these four cars are the fellows to get the hero medals. I was nearly opposite the scene of the accident and had the candidate for hero honors steered his car ahead like the others, instead of throwing on his brake and inviting a horrible accident by crashing directly into and wrecking another car in front of pits full of attendants, he would have prevented the worst accident of the race.

Nowadays it seems to be the proper thing to make a hero out of any driver who escapes from a bad accident caused either by his foolhardiness or lack of experience. If the association, which gets about $20,000 a year for sanctions and other fees incidental to the racing sport, would suspend or discipline these reckless or incompetent drivers when they cause accidents, it would be far better than most of the rulings on other matters that are handed down when there is another fee in sight.

There would be fewer spectators and mechanics killed in automobile racing if the drivers and officials of the meets were held liable for manslaughter.

WELCOME NEWS.

The decision to hold the 1911 Grand Prize and Vanderbilt Cup events over the Savannah course was welcome news to the great army of motorists who desire to witness clean sport with politics eliminated from racing affairs. There was never any question in the minds of the entrants in these speed classics as to where both should be held.

But the financial interests controlling the Long Island course brought such powerful pressure to bear year after year, that the good sportsmen of the southern city became discouraged after they had demonstrated that not even Europe could provide a better course or guard it more thoroughly than the Savannah committee did. It was only after the slaughter of drivers and spectators in the Vanderbilt Cup race last fall, that sentiment forced the promoters to return the Grand Prize race to Savannah.

Perhaps better management would have prevented many of the bad features of the last Vanderbilt, but nothing less than a course enclosed with a twenty-foot concrete wall will ever provide sufficient safeguards for drivers and spectators at a big road race in the vicinity of New York.

Philadelphia has shown its ability to conduct three Fairmount Park races without accidents to spectators, although the course through the city park was lined with a tremendous crowd. But it is a case of civic pride in the Quaker City and the charity organizations of the city distribute the receipts. Whenever commercialism enters into an automobile racing proposition the sport cannot be at its best.

The early announcement that Savannah has been selected for the scene of the two great races of America, will cause increased enthusiasm and interest among the foreign makers and drivers. Without the Hemerys, Wagners and Nazarres a Grand Prize race would fall flat. They were needed at Indianapolis to give the big race a real world's championship flavor.

COAST BOOST.

Every time I go on a tour in California I wonder why the Golden State is so far ahead of other States when it comes to good roads. With the exception of portions of New England, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, the majority of roads the motorist encounters in touring from city to city, would not be tolerated in Europe. Why is it that we have no national good roads organization with no other object than to work for good highway legislation?

I have toured many miles in every State in the Union, with the exception of two or three of the desert sections, and I know of conditions from actual experience and observation. California has the strongest automobile organization in the country and does the good roads work without aid from any outside source. In fact, the club sends about $3000 to the East every year to help out what is supposed to be a natural movement.

Aside from the New York to Atlanta highway, improved through the efforts of the New York Herald, and now a fairly good touring route, I know of nothing that has been done in any section of the country to provide a highway through different States and of sufficient length to be of use to automobile tourists. The time is opportune for a concerted effort to build interstate and trans-continental highways.

The mud-bespattered cars of tourists carrying shovels, block and tackle and other implements for the purpose of getting out of mud-holes, that one sees so often in front of hotels and garages, serves as a forcible reminder of our need of good roads. "If they have no roads they are savages." Let's get them.

Speaking of California and its good roads, the management of the annual Santa Monica road race desires the support of the eastern drivers and manufacturers. The course is lightning fast and is policed perfectly. Tetzlaff holds the American record of nearly seventy-four miles an hour over the course. The 1911 events will be run next Thanksgiving Day and should have many eastern entries.

SELL POOR OIL.

I frequently hear owners of high-priced cars complain that they are sold inferior lubricating oil when touring. The average garage in the smaller cities, especially, handles oil which should not be put into a good motor, or the other kind for that matter.

I know of instances where the pleasures of carefully planned tours were spoiled by having recurring motor trouble caused by the use of strange and poor oil. To the tourist the price is always the same, usually about 80 cents a gallon, the original cost being in the neighborhood of 20 cents. A gallon of oil may have a gallon of lubricating properties or again only a pint of the required properties.

My advice to the tourist is to take a lot of care in keeping tab on his oil supply and buy his favorite "tried and true" brand in the original sealed can at the first-class garages and carry an extra one-gallon can at all times for an emergency. It's worth the extra precaution and trouble.

A correspondent from New York takes me to task for my criticism a couple of weeks ago of Ralph De Palma. No matter what I said of De Palma's chances in a long race, I am of the opinion that he is the greatest dirt track driver in the world today.

Ralph holds the mile record for circular dirt tracks, having made the distance in 48:92 at Syracuse last fall. He also holds all the marks up to ten miles and he got them with a ninety horse power car. It will take a lot of nerve and daring for any of these fellows with even 200 horse power machines to get the darling Italian's records. Half my few grey hairs came as a result of trying to figure out how to beat De Palma.

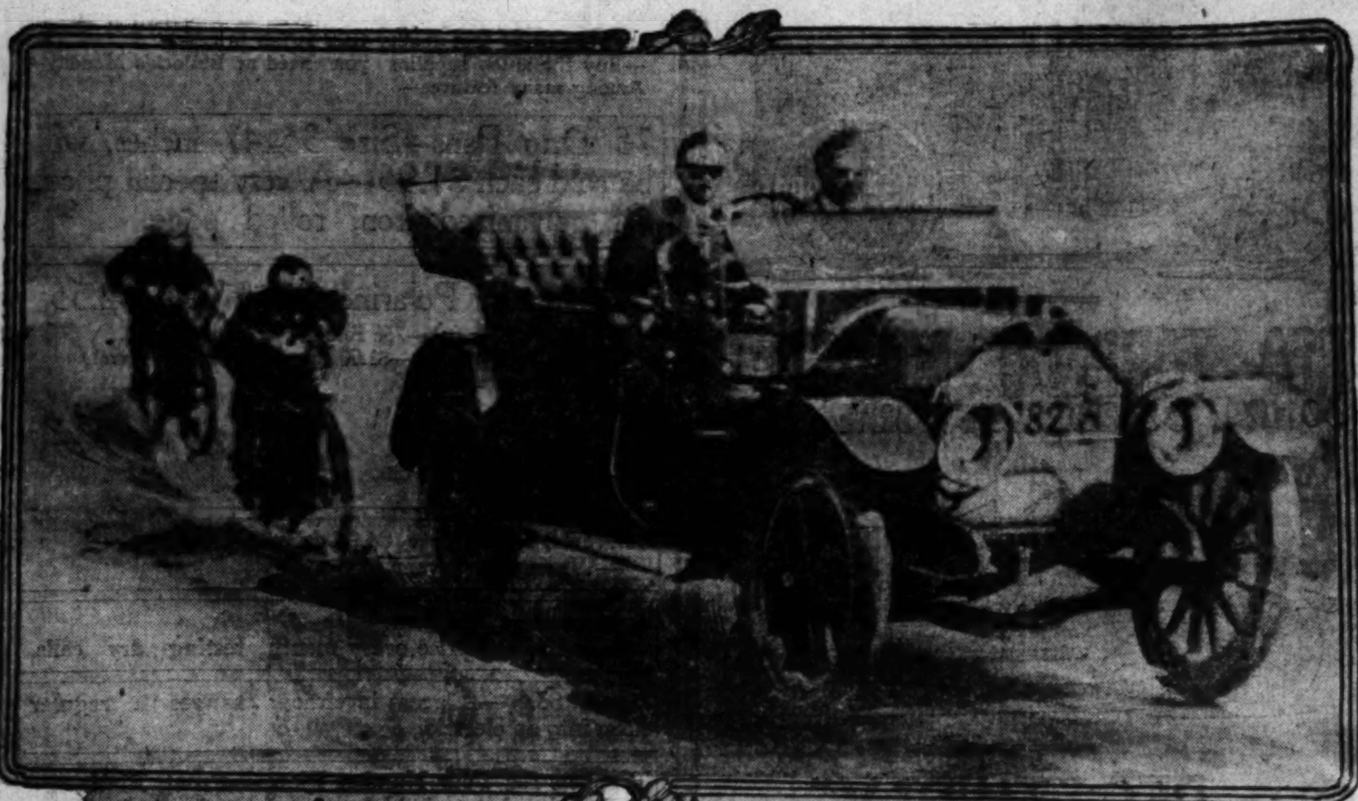
HARROUN IGNORES TETZLAFF'S DEFI.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS, June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ray Harroun thinks Teddy Tetzlaff, with his alleged Los Angeles backers, should beat some of the other men who finished ahead of the Coast driver first, if he is so certain he can beat the Marmon in a 500-mile race. In other words, the unique challenge made by the Los Angeles men in which $5000 is said to be posted with a Los Angeles paper as a side bet that Tetzlaff can beat Harroun, is ignored.

Neither Harroun nor the Marmon people care to be dragged into such a race meeting as the one proposed. It is rather more of a betting proposition, and the gambling feature seems to predominate over the idea of clean sport, is their opinion.

Harroun is out of the city giving exhibitions with his famous "Wasp" on the Hawthorne track. From Chicago he will go to Milwaukee, where he is to give similar exhibitions at the race meeting June 16.



Fast Simplex Getting Away from Motorcycle Cops, on the highway between Venice and Los Angeles. The officer finally caught the big car near Sawtelle.

PITTSBURGH MEET IMPORTANT EVENT.

It is the consensus of opinion among all followers of amateur athletics that the majority of athletes who win first places in the National A.A.U. track and field championships to be held in Pittsburgh, July 1, will be selected as members of the American Olympic team which will participate in the world's games to be held in Sweden next year.

Although the championships are to be decided much earlier this year the performances should eclipse those of previous meetings because they will be held a few weeks after the collegiate year. The college athletes are remaining in training after the eastern and western intercollegiates, and with a chance of going abroad they have settled down to the training grind in a manner which has led the athletic authorities to believe the Smoky City meeting will be a record-breaking affair.

In the Olympic games held in London in 1908 the club athletes did most of the scoring, but so many of these representatives either have resigned from active participation or are so badly on the decline that a new team must be organized to uphold the honor and glory which the Yankee teams won in Athens and London.

It was with a hope of discovering some men who can make creditable performances in the face of keen competition that President Brown of the National A.A.U. requested the national championship to be held earlier. It is a hard matter to keep college athletes in training from January until August and September, the months in which the national games generally have been held. According to the present arrangement the college stars will have to remain in training about a month after their regular season is [illegible]

WESTGARD PROUD OF HIS RECORD.

Tells New Yorkers How He Made Long Trip.

Delivers Report to Touring Club of America.

Says Good Roads Movement Has Firm Hold.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

NEW YORK, June 5.—A. L. Westgard, chairman of the Touring Committee of the Touring Club of America, who has just been making auto truck history by driving a loaded Saurer Truck across the great American wilderness of the Southwest, is back in New York, having left the truck at Los Angeles and rushed home and compiled the data which he obtained as to good roads, or rather bad roads. Mr. Westgard declares that it was the toughest experience in pioneering he ever encountered, and asserts that it would require a large retainer to coax him to undertake such a trip again.

The remarkable part of the trip is that the truck is on its way from Los Angeles to San Francisco as hardy and serviceable as the day it started, without having entailed a single bit of repairing and with tires scarcely showing any wear. On its arrival at San Francisco is will be shipped by rail to Denver, or probably Pueblo, and will then start on an eastward trip, probably reaching Chicago, by July 5, or 10, and New York, about the first of August, thus completing the span of the continent—the first loaded commercial truck to make the trip.

"We undertook the trip," said Mr. Westgard, "not so much to make a time record as to prove that it was possible to get a truck across that unbroken country at all. Last fall I agreed to make the trip if it could be done in six weeks, but after I once got under way, I wouldn't quit, and ultimately used up twice that time in the journey. I gained a lot of valuable experience, though, and I believe I accomplished a good deal of good for the cause of good roads.

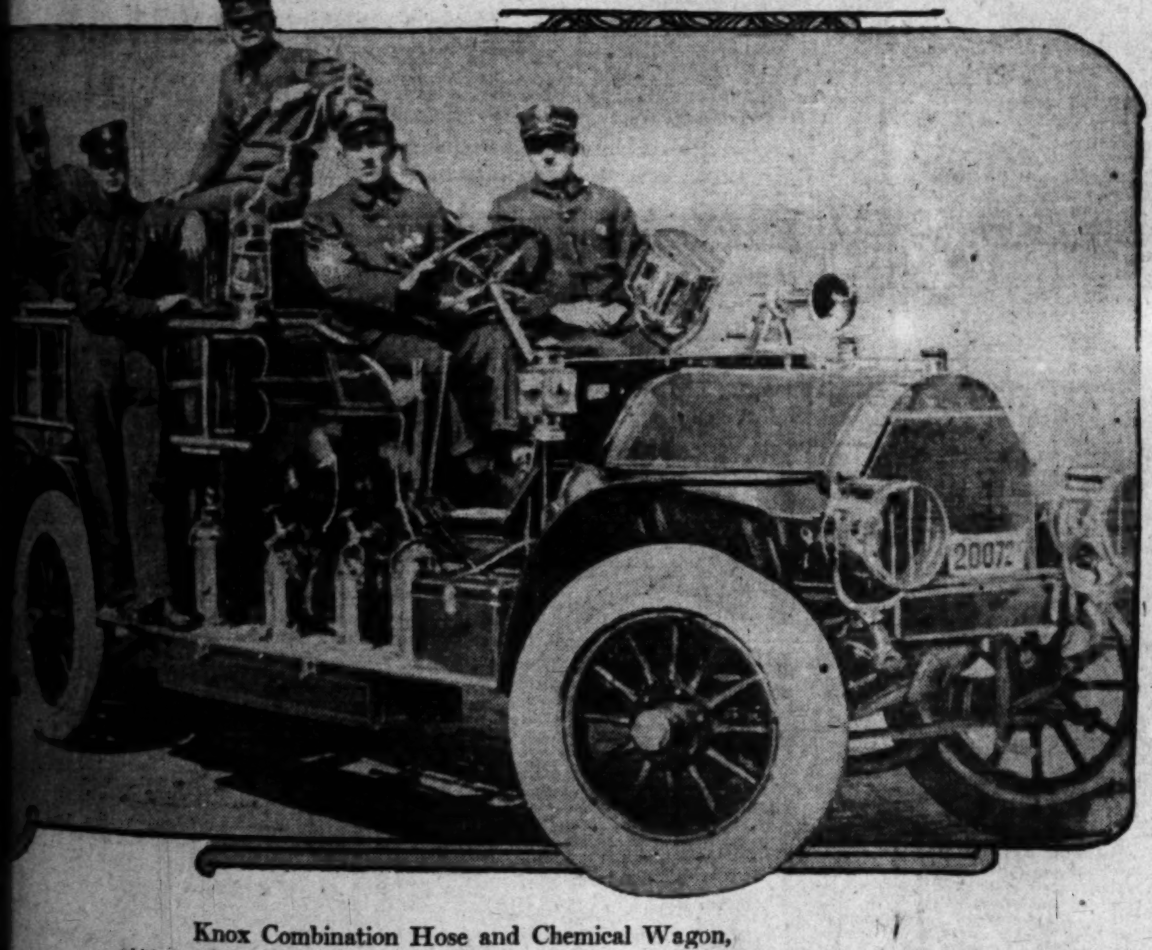
"I found that the good roads movement had taken a firm hold on public sentiment in that section. In New Mexico, I found that seventy-eight miles of good roads, have been built since I went through there last fall. I had long talks with Gov. Mills of New Mexico, and Gov. Sloan of Arizona, and I think they will lend a hand in trying to improve a main thoroughfare across the continent by the southern route.

FAIR HIGHWAYS.

"As it is, I found almost half of the 1500-mile journey over tolerably decent highways, and much of the rest of it suitable for travel by a touring car. But when you come to put a heavily-loaded truck over it, it's a different story. I had no idea what trouble we would encounter, yet the marvelous thing about it is that the truck didn't experience a single break, and all the adjustment we made during the trip, was to tighten up one or two of the rods, which worked a little loose.

"In all we ran 1525 miles, and it took us sixty-eight days. Thirteen days we concluded it was a saving of time to lay off and wait for better roads rather than to buck through them. At times we ran through—or rather hauled through—water five feet deep. I think the worst patch of traveling we encountered was at a point where the road was like porridge, and everyone declared we'd never get through. In a stretch of seven-tenths of a mile it took six men and eight mules twelve hours and fifteen minutes to get across the morass, and she went down to the axles eight times in a distance of 300 feet.

"At one point we were 132 miles from the railroad and within seventy-five miles of one for almost half our trip. We reached an altitude of 10,-900 feet, and dropped down 137 feet below sea level, in the Salton Sea region. We ran in temperature of 130 degrees at noon, and nights found the thermometer down to 20, so that it was prudent for us to drain the radiators to keep them from freezing. We camped twenty-six nights but the rest of the time, made towns and had fair hotel accommodations."



Knox Combination Hose and Chemical Wagon, which the Doerr Motor Car Company delivered to the City of Coronado Thursday.

NEW FIRE FIGHTER FOR CORONADO CITY.

The city of Coronado now boasts of one of the best automobile chemicals manufactured. It is a Knox make and is equipped with some of the most powerful engines ever seen in this section of the country.

The big fire destroyer has a speed of forty-five miles an hour on level roads, and is capable of overcoming the steepest grades. The car carries two thirty-gallon chemical tanks, the regulation scaling ladders and fifty feet of hose. The horseless fire engine is built along attractive lines, and has caused considerable comment since it first made its appearance in the southern city.

Coronado has set the style for the other cities. The chief of the fire department of Colton was in the city this week looking over the Knox chemical, with a view of having one for the valley city, and several neighboring towns have sent representatives from their fire department to get a line on the new fire fighter.

AMERICAN ENGINE ADOPTED IN LONDON.

American brains coupled with American capital have come into prominence of late in England. After five years of careful experimentation along the line of developing noiseless motors in motor busses to handle the London traffic, a successful engine has been invented, based upon the Charles Y. Knight sleeve-valve engine.

The engine critics and engineers put the new engine to the severest tests possible, and the result was an overwhelming victory for the American engine. To quote from the foreign press:

"Mr. Knight's conquest of the mechanical situation in the British Isles and in Europe came as a climax to the general demand for a silent, efficient engine."

A company has been organized to finance the manufacturing of the thousands of motor busses which will be required to meet the London traffic. The big company has a practical monopoly not only of the many routes in the metropolis itself, but of many of the districts outside of the city which as yet have not enjoyed any regular transportation service.

YEARLY MODEL IS FAVORED BY WALDON.

"Adherence to the regular yearly model," is the slogan that has gone forth from the Packard Motor Company. Vice-president Waldon declares that the public and the dealers have come to expect a change in the models of the cars each season, and are accustomed to designate their machines as 1911 or a 1912 car. The dealers and manufacturers in general agree with the statement of Mr. Waldon, and are in hearty accord with maintaining the present custom.

Moreover, the fact that a yearly style is customary will enable the manufacturers to turn out their supply without any unnecessary delays, due to sudden changes in minor details, and thus hinder the cars being put upon the market as fast as they are turned out.

TRIP TO THE COUNTRY.

Electric motors are becoming common travelers on the country roads these days. Last week a Columbia Electric made the trip to Van Nuys and back, going out through Hollywood and the Cahuenga Pass and back on the Ventura road. The machine came into Los Angeles via the Sunset boulevard. No accidents were suffered on the trip, and those who overlooked the demonstration of the electric as an out-of-town car were convinced of the practical use of the machine.

MRS. ELLIOT WINS SAN GABRIEL PLAY.

Handicap Golf Tourney Has Many Contestants.

New Water Hazard Proves Big Stumbling Block.

Champion's Trophies Number An Even Score.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

Mrs. J. V. Elliot, State champion, playing from scratch, won the ladies' golf tournament at the San Gabriel Golf Club yesterday. Her score was 88. The trophy, a gift of O. L. Wuerker, is the fourth that Mrs. Elliot has captured during the last six weeks and raised the number in her collection to twenty.

The San Gabriel links were able to boast an added charm yesterday, for they had a genuine water hazard. The usual very "seco" arroyo was a busy rippling brooklet, swift and barely negotiable, owing, we are told, to the very unromantic reason that a water main had burst higher "up stream." We had so hoped it was melted snow from the mountains. Still, it added great sport to the tournament, Miss Margaret James managing to get into it three times. There was no end of a scrimmage to rescue the ball from running out of bounds to the briny ocean.

Miss James was a little out of practice, not having played since the Los Angeles County Club tournament early in May, but towards the finish her old confidence returned and she made some splendid drives from the last tees. She had one piece of particularly hard luck when her ball, which she had cleverly played to clear one tree, struck a further one and rebounded further back than the previous stroke.

Mrs. Elliot's driving was beautiful throughout the game, clearing the bunkers with happy confidence every time. Her putting, however, was weak, and the greens did not seem to be in very good condition either.

Miss Alice Tobey, who has accepted the captaincy in place of Mrs. F. O. Wood, had been practicing during the week and was in good form. Her score of 96, with a handicap of 10, should have been a great deal better, but several pieces of bad luck occurred, the surprise water hazard being one of them. The club is fortunate in having her for captain of the ladies' golf club, for she promises to imbue it with her enthusiasm. She has a most delightful personality, but withal a strong one, and her mandates are likely to be obeyed. One of them is that competitors in tournaments shall be on time—if play begins at 10 a.m. beware of squalls if you walk in at 11 a.m. without a carefully thought-out excuse.

Mrs. E. L. Kohler also made a score of 96, and Mrs. A. M. Alkire, 98. Mrs. and Miss Roberts of Los Angeles also took part.

The jolliest luncheon was served afterwards on the porch, and Mrs. Elliot's recipe for iced chocolate can be enthusiastically recommended.

COUNTRY CLUB NOTES.

Friday night Mrs. Corbey gave a private dance at the club for her son. There were fifty guests who came out from Los Angeles in a special parlor car. The chef's punch was proclaimed irreproachable.

June 24 the High School seniors are giving a luncheon at this club to 100 guests.

Golfers at all the country clubs are becoming active now in view of the Morris and Higgins cup competitions for men and women respectively.

For the information of the Claremont County Club, Oakland, I will say that Mrs. J. V. Elliot is the State champion, not the Southern California champion. Just because the northerners did not choose to be represented at the tournaments at the Los Angeles County Club (being peeved, no doubt,) they cannot depreciate the value of Mrs. Elliot's splendid performance.

MONTREAL RACES.

MONTREAL, June 10.—On the final day of the Blue Bonnet track meet today, the authorities cut off all telegraphic facilities between the track and the city, thus preventing the sending out of the racing results.

Under what is known as the Miller law, passed a year ago, the sending of information from a race track is made unlawful. This law was not enforced during the nine days which have passed of the ten-day meet. Results:

Six furlongs: Ganogue won, Yankee Lady second, Shadewell third; time, 1:14.

Five furlongs: Froglegs won, Giagnet second, Senex third; time, 1:00 3-5.

surgents. They have been driven out of the fertile lands of the Colorado by Mexican soldiers.

REFUSES A RIDE.

Though the temptation to ride in an automobile is great, the Yuma brave would not get into the car. The chug-chug wagon was surrounded by Yumas and Cocopahs but went out into the desert without a guide.

After a short parley Bullard and Lacasse decided to try the route through. The car was driven across the line at Andrade and the bridge over the canal was reached just before the E.M.F. plunged into the thick undergrowth of the Colorado. Here the road is good, but is covered with briers in places.

For sixty miles the car was driven in an almost direct southwest line towards Mexicali. In the deep sands on the higher mesa the going was fierce, indeed. There was enough low gear work to satisfy even the desert rats.

One of the cars which was recently driven over the route in an effort to choose a course took the Mexican Central Railway tracks at Cocopah. The car was sent from that point into Yuma, more than seventy miles being made on the rails. This route, of course, is not to be thought of.

The E.M.F. could have taken the rails and El Centro would have been reached early in the afternoon. Instead Bullard said:

"This is to be a road race. The cars must be driven all the way to Phoenix over roads. I would not consider for a minute using railroad tracks.

GAME TO THE END.

"We will follow a route if it takes us all summer and we will map out a course if we have to spend many more nights on the desert. The E.M.F. is choosing the official route and no other car could have completed this route blazing trip without covering the course on the roads."

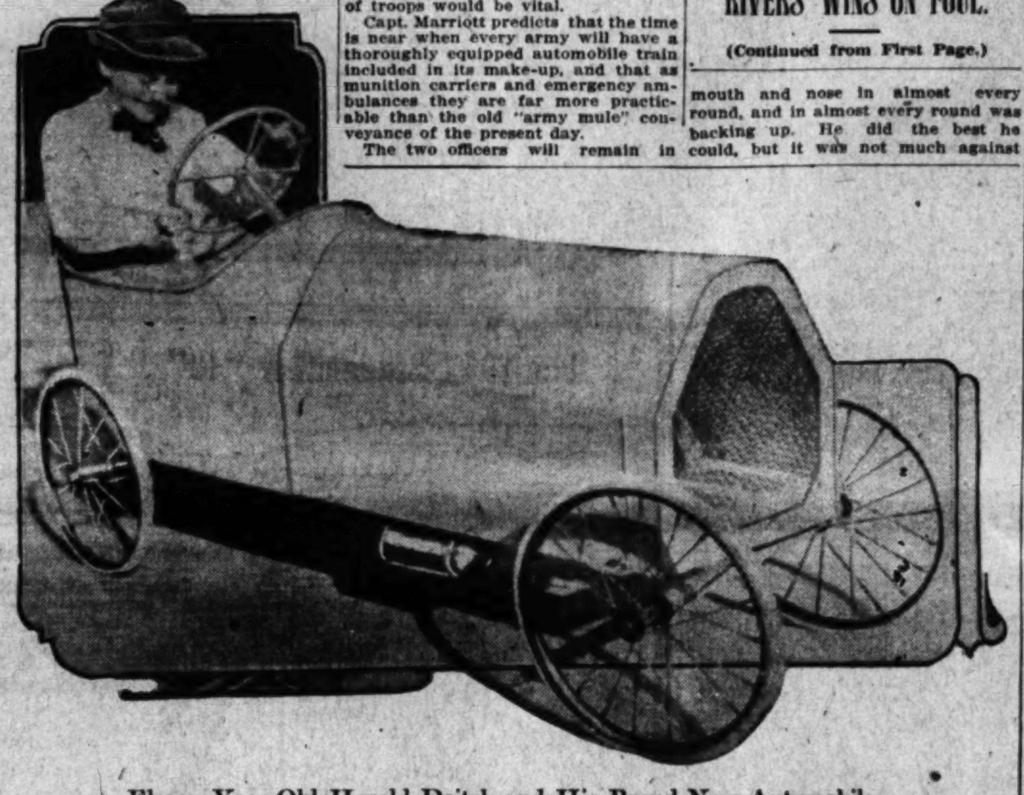
Mute evidence of what the war has meant to Mexico was seen yesterday as the E.M.F. crossed the line. Only five miles from Andrade an Indian village has been wiped out by fire. Ten miles beyond, another camp has been totally destroyed. The ranches are deserted, and at one place, where a few chickens and pigs were found, the Mexicans were so frightened that they disappeared in the underbrush as the car approached.

Stray bands of cattle were seen occasionally but most of the stock has been driven away from what will some day be a fertile country. The unrest amongst the Mexicans is so acute that it is impossible to get food or even water anywhere between Andrade and Mexicali.

The E.M.F. is positively the first automobile to cover this part of the race route as an official car of the A.A.A. While the road race could not be held at present through Mexican territory, it is expected that by November the route will be open and the Mexican soldiers be tired of watching for expected troubles.

Mexicali is wide open. The insurgent soldiers have a chance to get drinks in at least three big saloons either night or day. The line is being patrolled carefully in the vicinity of Mexicali and Calexico but automobile parties will not be welcomed for some time to come and at least until all the troubles are over.

The autoists were viewed with suspicion and Bullard and his party are glad to have escaped the bullets of the insurrectos at a time when it was foolhardy to cross the desert.



Eleven-Year-Old Harold Deitch and His Brand New Automobile, which his brother-in-law, Charles Owen, built for him, and which operated in fine shape in the tryout yesterday.

HE'S A HAPPY BOY, THIS AUTO OWNER.

There is one sure enough happy boy in this city and his name is Harold Deitch, who lives with his parents at No. 547 Girard street.

Although he is only 11 years old he is the proud possessor of an automobile, four horse power, chain drive, selective type, transmission, two speed forward and one reverse. It is air cooled and equipped with all the latest appliances.

All this may sound easy, but nevertheless, the boy's brother-in-law, Charles Owen, devoted his spare time for five months in building it.

The engine in this miniature car was taken from a motorcycle, and the wheels were made to order. The body of the car was built at the Auto Sheet Metal Works, and it has all the appearance that a really truly aristocratic auto should have, even to a business-like driver.

Harold has already taken all his friends in the neighborhood for a ride by turns, and if you should ask him where he is going next he is just as apt to say, "Around the world." He comes by his enthusiasm naturally though, as most of his relatives are devotees of automobiling.

ARMY OFFICERS PRAISE AUTOS.

Say the Motor Car Has Military Value.

Captains Casey and Marriot On Long Trip.

Examining Road Conditions For Official Use.

The use of automobiles for the army is being urged by Capt. H. R Casey, U.S.A., and Capt. F. A. Marriott, Company L, Fifth Infantry, who passed through Los Angeles this week on their way from San Francisco to San Diego. The two officers made the trip in a Knox "90," and declared that they had no trouble at all in coming down. Their only objection to the trip was the fearful condition of the roads between San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara.

Between the Bay City and San Luis Obispo the officers had no complaint in regard to the roads, and were lavish in their praise of the highway between Santa Barbara and Los Angeles. It was on the latter stretch that the big car was let out, and the distance covered in three hours and twenty minutes, just twelve minutes behind the record.

This is the second trip that Capt. Marriott has made by machine from San Francisco to San Diego. Last season he made the pioneer military drive down the Coast in a Stoddard-Dayton. The Captain is an old hand at the wheel and is one of the biggest enthusiasts for good roads in the country. He declares that in time of war, good roads would be one of the greatest assets in defense that the country could have, and especially on the Coast, where the rapid mobilizing of troops would be vital.

Capt. Marriott predicts that the time is near when every army will have a thoroughly equipped automobile train included in its make-up, and that as munition carriers and emergency ambulances they are far more practicable than the old "army mule" conveyance of the present day.

The two officers will remain in San Diego a week or so inspecting the artillery forces there and giving courses of instruction in the various departments and will then return by machine to San Francisco.

On the return trip the officers will endeavor to visit a number of the inland towns and to see as much of the State as possible with a view of making a report of the conditions of transportation facilities, especially in regard to automobile service.

The government has been taking an active interest in the experiments along this line of late, and especially since the Mexican trouble. It is understood that the commissary department is urging the use of automobiles in preference to the present mode of transporting army supplies, and it is on this account that the recent trip from San Francisco involves considerable interest in army circles.

The World Underpopulated.

How little mankind signifies in the scheme of nature is shown by a rather morose calculation of the Italian Prof. Zuccarini, who has figured out, among other things, that estimating the world's population at 1,300,000,000, the whole human race at present living could stand comfortably shoulder to shoulder in an area of 500 square miles. Taking the number of generations in the past 6000 years as 200, the room taken up by them all on above plan would only be half the size of Germany, or, for the sake of comparison, less than the area of Colorado. To bury all the people on earth would need a graveyard little larger than that area. If the dust left by each body be estimated at one-tenth cubic yard, which is a liberal estimate, it would cover only forty square miles to a depth of about three feet. This certainly seems insignificant compared with the great coral reefs and other immense deposits built up by the shells of tiny infusoria.—[New York Sun.

Mayor Dan V. Lackey of Oklahoma City has refused to turn the affairs of the municipal government over to Mayor Whit M. Grant, and the four commissioners elected recently under a commission form charter, until the courts have affirmed the legality of the new charter and of the election at which the commissioners were elected. A few days ago, after passing a resolution condemning the city administration, a mass meeting composed of between 1000 and 1200 representative citizens marched in a body from the Auditorium to the City Hall to demand of Mayor Lackey that he resign. He still holds the office to which he was elected despite the clamor being made about the City Hall.

Ten thousand dollars was the value placed on a hog by a jury in Atlanta, Ga., yesterday in the case of J. D. Debow of Nashville, Tenn., against the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific Railroad. The hog was Premier Longfellow's Premier, a pedigreed hog killed in a railroad accident.

DELIBERATE FOUL SAYS THE REFEREE.

"I stopped the fight because Dixon committed what appeared to me a deliberate foul in kicking or attempting to kick Rivers in the sixteenth round," said Referee Charles Eyton.

"I had warned him repeatedly to stop wrestling and clinching and to stand up and fight. Not only did I do this while the boys were fighting, but I went to Dixon's corner twice between rounds and told him what was required of him. He hit low in the clinches and had no excuse for persisting in the objectionable tactics for I clearly laid down the law to him.

"When he kicked at Rivers in the sixteenth round there was nothing for me to do but to stop the fight and give Rivers the decision. His act constituted a foul for which the rules of the game declare he must pay the penalty by losing the decision.

"Dixon is a game boy but his style is not such as will carry him far in the fight game, for he resorts to violations of the fundamental rules of boxing. Whether or not he deliberately attempts to foul, I am not prepared to say, but I had to watch him very closely in order to see that the rules were conformed to. Rivers fought a very clean fight and as far as I was able to observe made no attempt to foul Dixon."

RIVERS WINS ON FOUL.

mouth and nose in almost every round, and in almost every round was backing up. He did the best he could, but it was not much against such a good one as Rivers. He led repeatedly with his left, but Rivers's defense was too good for him. Rivers was calm and collected in every round and so sure of his ability to win that he forced the thing from the start.

He never gave Dixon a chance to rest and little Tommy spent the greater part of his time in backing up and clinching at every opportunity. He could not land on the Mexican effectively and soon realized that he could not box with him. His only hope was that he might do some damage in the clinches and here Rivers beat him to everything.

Tommy fought a bad fight. He hit low a number of times and yet it might be possible that these blows were not intentional for only twice did Rivers complain to the referee. Eyton saw these low blows, however, and tried to make Dixon cut it out. Eyton gave the only decision possible and from what was shown in the sixteen rounds, Rivers would certainly have received the decision at the end of twenty for his lead was too big all the way.

The fourteenth and fifteenth rounds were practically the only ones that were even. Rivers seemed to slow up a bit while Dixon had apparently regained some of his strength. What the result would have been had they gone twenty rounds is only guess work but I would certainly guess Rivers. Too much class.

Both of Dixon's eyes were swollen, there was a cut under his left eye and his lips were cut. About all the "wound" that Rivers has is a cut upper lip and several abrasions on his body where the Dixon gloves raked him. They don't look like a good match again.

The semi-final of ten rounds between Young Kaufman and Jack Davies, was a slam-bang slugging match from start to finish and was notable from the fact that Kaufman disposed of the desert "white hope." He was so much disposed of that Manager McCarey had the Vernon police stop the bout in the eighth round, Kaufman getting the decision.

Davies was a badly-beaten man at the end, and it was a merciful thing to stop the contest, for he might have been knocked out in another round. He was groggy and almost out in the seventh, and only his gameness saved him from going down.

He gave Kaufman the surprise of his life in the first round when he rushed Young Al to the ropes and knocked him half way over the strings. In the second Kaufman came back strong and gave Davies all the worst of it, having him wobbly and staggering at the end. The third round was fairly even and the fourth was Davies's by a shade. The fifth and sixth were even.

—That 64 leading motor car makers have made contracts with us for No-Rim-Cut Tires.

—That more pneumatic-tired cars at the shows this year were fitted with Goodyears than any other make.

—That last year our sales on automobile tires trebled—leaped to Eight and One-Half Million Dollars because of the popularity of No-Rim-Cut Tires.

The Reason Why

These tires cannot rim cut. And there is no other practical tire ever invented which can not be wrecked in this way.

This splendid guarantee against destruction and loss is accomplished by the flange curving outward instead of inward.

Instead of crushing down on a sharp cutting edge that cuts into its side, the tire presses down on a smooth curved surface. In this way injury is prevented.

ERE WE GET OFF.

BY J. ALEX. SLOAN.

where else. All the promoters in the United States looked upon the battle as too one-sided to stage it, but there was Winnipeg, Canada, where Caponi is not so well known.

The Canadian promoters figured that the interference of the Badger executive had served to advertise the contest in Winnipeg, and that the battle would prove a big drawing card.

I learned the real reason for the interference of the Wisconsin Governor yesterday. The fact was that the better element of fight followers didn't care to see a white man sacrificed on a black altar just to get a look at Sam Langford in action. There was still another side to the contest and that was an understanding between Langford and Caponi.

The Governor didn't know about it or if he did he said nothing nor did any of the other authorities. However, to have any kind of an exhibition whatever it would be necessary for these two men to know in advance about what was going to happen and to have the entertainment last long enough to give the spectators a look at the Boston Tar Baby.

No one thing tends to lessen the popularity of the boxing sport any more than an uneven match between a white and black fighter. This is especially true when the white man happens to be the under dog and at the present writing Langford and Johnson are so far ahead of the others that it is impossible to match them with white men who will be anything else but beaten before they climb into the ring.

Tony Caponi at the best was never anything more than a bad second rater. He never had a punch with enough steam behind it to bowl over an opponent and he has a jaw that is weaker than Peter Maher's ever was. Take the battle he had here in Los Angeles with Jim Flynn. The fireman went along for several rounds trying to hit the Italian on the jaw and finally when he did, Tony dropped like a log. Langford could beat him with one hand.

If the Canadian authorities do the right thing they will tie a can on the battle also.

Freddie Welsh is now in San Francisco preparing for his battle with Matty Baldwin on June 23. This contest should prove rather easy for the little Englishman despite Baldwin's superior strength. Welsh is much cleverer and faster than the Boston lightweight and should have little trouble outpointing him.

Just before he left for California Welsh announced that his training partner would be his sister. Freddie is very fond of her and says that there is no danger of him entering the ring out of shape if she oversees the job.

Jack Johnson's idea of the coronation is amusing. He thinks that all he has to do to be an honored guest during the crowning of King George is to show up with his wardrobe. Jack has enough clothes to supply an English regiment. I met him the other day and before I had talked with him two minutes he began enumerating his various styles of wearing apparel for afternoon and evening appearances.

Regarding his battle with Bombadier Wells, Johnson said that he would be glad to accept terms providing the purse was $30,000. Jack also said that he would take on either Sam McVey or Joe Jeannette in Paris if a suitable purse was offered him.

ment suits him and he doesn't take much stock in the doctrine that the fellow with the improvised apparatus gets the prizes. He has a reel that cost twenty bucks and each one of his rods set him back twenty-five or thirty simoleons.

Les Henry has gone back to his first love—the sporting goods business. He intends to get busy in promoting amateur sports of various kinds.

The supply of small boys in Omaha is to be taxed when the trans-Mississippi golf tourney is held in July. It is estimated that 500 caddies will be needed to aid the players. The boys at one of the Omaha clubs went out on a strike recently because the management refused to allow the donation of tips, and the promoters of the tourney are asking themselves this question: What would happen if the kiddies walked out just as the qualifying round was about to be started?

Athletes who represented Occidental College in athletics during the school year that is about to close are "sporting" 'varsity emblems, which were awarded last week. Basketball "O's" were given to Warner Hollister, Lysle McKenney, Howard Annin, Harry Kirkpatrick, Ned Bishop, Francis Baer and James Clapp. Letters for tennis were awarded to Misses Clara Baker, Marguerite Merrill, and Winnie Mace, Clarence Barker, Elvon Musick and Duffy Seay.

FORMER THROOP BOY STAR AT ANNAPOLIS.

Thomas N. Vinson, who was a leading athlete at Throop Institute two years ago, is making a great name for himself at Annapolis. He was the regular pitcher on the midshipmen's baseball team this year, and in the game with Rutgers last week held his opponents down to one hit and shut them out. Second base wasn't reached by a single Rutgers' man.

Vinson is 19 years old. He was appointed to the Naval Academy last year, after attending Throop for three years. While at the Pasadena institution he pitched for the baseball nine and also represented Throop in tennis, playing in doubles with Clifton Herd. They won the interscholastic doubles championship three years ago.

HOW TO SHOOT AN INCOMING BIRD.

"Never try to stop an overhead incoming bird," was one of the maxims of the old-time shooting school, but as a matter of fact it is easier to shoot an "incomer" than to wait until it passes over and becomes an "outgoer." The reason gunners have usually passed up the shot was that they shot under and behind the bird.

To make the shot the marksman should wait until the bird is about to pass over him, then, bringing up his gun, follow in from behind, cover the bird and swing in ahead of it and maintaining the same rate of speed, press the trigger the instant the bird is hidden behind the barrels. The gunner should not stop the swing as he shoots and should be sure the bird has disappeared from sight behind the barrels.

SAN GABRIEL GOSSIP.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

There have been merry doings all the week at San Gabriel. Members use the club more and more for their entertainments, as the atmosphere there always seems agreeable and good tempered.

Mr. F. Q. Story entertained quite a large number of friends to luncheon yesterday. He is one of those bachelors who know how to do this sort of thing so well.

On Wednesday there was a golfing party which included Messrs. F. B. Silverwood, E. E. Milliken, F. B. Banister and G. Horton, who played a spirited foursome over the links and then wound up with a merry party for dinner afterwards.

With the golf tournaments in prospect for Saturday, members have been busy polishing up their play, and some earnest practicing has been witnessed each day. Mr. C. M. Tobey and his daughter, Alice, have been amongst the most industrious, and if practice makes perfect we know who ought to win.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Sanborn are likely to be seen a good deal more often at the club now, as they have recently moved into their new home which practically adjoins the club's grounds.

On the twenty-sixth of this month there is going to be a great function held, when the seniors of the Alhambra High School will entertain 100 guests. There is a strong disposition to hold the plans secret for the present in order, no doubt, to burst forth with greater brilliance at a later date.

This club's chief interest for the last few days has been the selection of its golf team to compete for the famous Morris Cup. Once they have got that off their chest there is talk of some gay doings in garden parties, tennis tournaments and all the fun of the fair.

ACROSS THE CHESS BOARD.

Los Angeles leads by two points at the half-way mark in the team correspondence match against San Diego, the resignation of Rev. E. B. Adams, of the latter team, to C. F. Pierce, making the sixteenth game finished of thirty-two scheduled, on which the teams scores now stand at 9 to 7 after a remarkably close contest to date.

The latest game finished was played at Board No. 1, being the second of two gambits contested between the team captains. The San Diegan opened with a bishop's gambit which the Angeleno, defended with the Bledow counter according to agreement.

White consistently pushed the adding a formidable center which would assure a victory in the end, if the promising king's wing assault should fail. By the apparently risky expedients of playing 13 R—KKt, followed by castling on queen's side, Black thwarted the immediate assaults, but remained under pressure until move 20, when, having gained the move, he initiated a counter attack with a sacrifice which reduced White's center and drove both king and queen into corners from which they could not emerge.

In Section IV, the attacks are assigned to W. H. Smith against P. R. Ruth and W. Struve; Ruth against V. Asher and O. E. Frazier; Asher against Struve and Smith; Struve against Frazier and Ruth; and Frazier against Smith and Asher.

The Dust Disease.

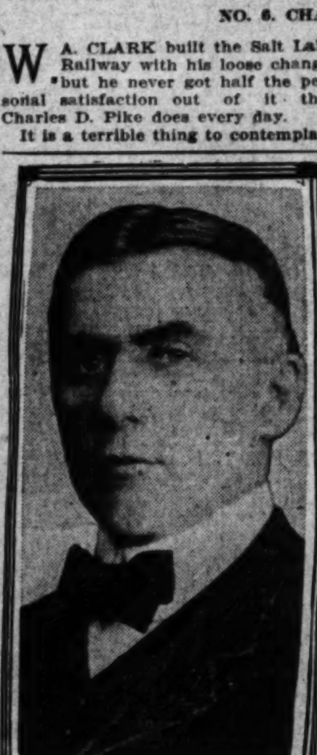
Now that we have the "typhoid fly" and the "malarial mosquito," science may soon order that not a few of those who experience a blue Monday be described as sufferers from "dust depression." Good physicians assert that much of the mental and physical languor which many people of indoor life report on Monday is due to their tremendous intake of dust on the day before. This powder is full of physical peril. It may actually have those germs which set up systematic disturbances, the effects of which we commonly call colds; it may, by merely piling in dirt and filth, so irritate the mucous membrane as to do other serious harm. It is a troublemaker in any form.—[Boston Herald.

FORTY PINK IMMORTALS.

NO. 6. CHARLES D. PIKE.

W. A. CLARK built the Salt Lake Railway with his loose change, but he never got half the personal satisfaction out of it that Charles D. Pike does every day.

It is a terrible thing to contemplate what would happen to the railway if anything happened to Charley. With his dignity and moral support removed it is no difficult task for the imagination to picture the road falling into decay, the rails rusting, the ties rotting and traffic at a standtsill. But cheerup—Charley is a mere youth yet and the only reason he packs that cane is that his position demands it.



Next to Senator Clark, this man is most interested in the Salt Lake road.

There's a whole lot of neighbors hereabouts who cannot realize that Charley Pike ever was anything but principal booster for the Clark road, and yet the railway is only about six years old and Charley is 45. Those who have thought about it at all have come to the conclusion that Pike was born at the age of 39 or such a matter, just in time to take charge of the then newly completed line.

This is a mistake.

For the benefit of all and sundry who are interested in the genesis of Charley the following thoroughly authenticated fact has been unearthed:

Charley Pike began his business career as a soap peddler.

Yes—I said "began."

Yes—I know he's still peddling soap, but it's a different kind.

The soap he first peddled was a brand known as "Soapine" (and this is no soap ad., for they don't make it any more, so don't try to buy it.) It happened thus:

Charles Dennison (Dennison is what the "D" stands for) was born in St. Johnsbury, Vermont, along in the late sixties for the reason that his parents, not being traveling folk, were unaware of the beauties of Southern California, Frank Wiggins at that time not being on the job. So Charles was a Yankee. Passing swiftly over childhood's happy hours we reach the period where he decided it was time for him to make his own way in the world. To sell things is second nature with a Yankee, whether it be wooden nutmegs or locomotives, so Charley went down to Bosting to find something that needed selling. He landed this Soapine job and was appointed principal missionary to the heathen in the far West—"far West" in Bostonese relating to that territory adjacent to and lying between Minneapolis and Chicago.

But the mind of young Pike soared above soap.

His association with Soapine having put a finishing touch on his native Yankee smoothness, Charles sought wider fields of endeavor and became a ticket scalper. When the Supreme Court made its few little remarks about this business in 1904 Charley came to Los Angeles and has been with us ever since — excepting for those dark, stale days when he throws a pall of gloom over the city by taking a trip to New York. These trips, however, are an absolute necessity to the welfare of the country, as how else would Judge Lovett and the rest of the boys know how to run the business back there if Charley didn't drop in on them every so often.

But the one great, overweening (whatever that is) joy of C. Dennison Pike's existence is to go up to Salt Lake City and usher in a theatrical troupe. Any company headed for Los Angeles with a star good for twelve-inch letters on the billboards, or with more than one baggage car of scenery, can reasonably rely on being met at Salt Lake by the railway equivalent for "dhe greates' dhragoman in dhe worl'."

Otherwise the Los Angeles engagement is not official.

The general run of travelers coming down from Salt Lake City have to find their way alone. The heartless railway company just sells them a ticket and turns them loose. Then, if they get lost on the desert through the engineer losing his bearings, or if the sun goes down at the wrong time, what are they to do? Answer: Nothing at all.

But these specially-favored theatrical companies don't need to worry, for Charles Dennison Pike is with them, and he will set any such complications right in a minute.

When Marie Dressler came to Los Angeles last winter she was telling some friends about the trip.

"We just had a dandy time coming from Salt Lake," she said. "You know the owner of the road was on the train with us."

"The owner?" said some one with a rising accent.

"Yes—Mr. Pike was with us all the way down."

"Oh!"

GARBUTT PLEASED WITH "MYSTERY."

New Racing Motorboat Runs at High Speed.

Iroquois Having Her Bottom Mended With Haste.

Entries Tuned Up Ready for Big Contest.

Covered with grease and of grimy countenances are the owners of five motor boats entered in the race around the island tomorrow morning. All day long yesterday the boats were tried out in the local harbor and the peace was disturbed by the staccato yelps of gasoline engines, which are unmuffled.

Frank Garbutt gave his new boat, Mystery, a good tryout yesterday afternoon and it was an interesting feature of motorboat sport to see this man of millions with his coat off working hard to get his engine tuned up.

The Mystery, which was built by Garbutt and his son in the back yard of their Los Angeles home, was launched on Wednesday and proves to be a boat of the "Viper" type, with some ideas of Garbutt's own, added. She is twenty feet long and along either rail has been placed wooden sponsons, hollow and buoyant. They act as shields against waves and flying spray and contain sufficient air to keep the boat afloat if she fills with water.

With her exhausts wide open yesterday, she tore up and down the channel and Garbutt's eyes glistened with pleasure and excitement over the speed the little craft showed. She appears to make twenty miles an hour without being opened wide, and will prove a strong factor in Sunday's race.

Charlie Fulton gave the Klattawa, a big red thirty-six-footer, a good run. The seventy-five-horse-power engine was put in first class shape by Edward McClay and E. M. Black, owners of the Del Rey. The big boat tore through the water at the rate of about eighteen knots with the engine only half let out.

Joe Fellows also had his Campbell running up and down the harbor channel at great speed and the craft is in fine shape for the event tomorrow. The Campbell has been in use all winter. While it is not as fast as most of the other entries, Fellows is relying on his skill to keep his boat going at a fast pace to land him the cup.

Warren Wood's motorboat, Iroquois, has had the hole in her bottom, sustained by running into floating timber Wednesday, repaired, and a new propeller has been installed. She will be ready for the race tomorrow, Wood says, even if she has a hoodoo folowing her.

Coey Dunkleberger, owner of the Eclipse, the fifth boat entered in the race, has tuned up his craft and expects to have her ready for a fair showing in the event.

All of the boats except that of Wood's were out in the channel yesterday and the roar of high-power-engine exhausts caused quite a large number of people to line the wharves and wonder what it was all about.

FIAT CARS SHIPPED AROUND THE GLOBE.

Fiat automobiles produced in the great works at Turin, Italy, are not only well known in Europe and the United States, but are sold in all the civilized countries of the world. Quantities of the cars are shipped into South America, Asia and Australia, and in all of these countries are acknowledged as one of the leaders of imported cars.

Of the 4000 cars produced each year in the Fiat works at Turin, Great Britain and Italy each take 500 annually. South America motorists buy 450 Fiats each year, and 400 are sold in the United States, France and Austria. German buyers take 350 and the automobilists of Russia and Australia each buy 150 of the Turin-made cars annually. The sale of Fiat cars reaches the 100 mark in Scandinavia and Mexico, and India takes 80 each year.

Seventy-five cars are sent each year to Spain, 50 to Portugal, China, Canada each 30, and 20 are sold in Japan. In addition to the numbers taken by the countries named, the Fiat concern sells 200 cars that are sent to countries not given in the above list. At the present time there are about 1500 Fiat cars in the United States.

EUROPEAN TOUR FOR DR. GRUNDY.

COLUMBIA CAR TO BE DRIVEN THROUGH EUROPE.

Long Beach Party Lays Out Long Itinerary to Points of Interest on the Islands and the Continent. To Try Famous Auto Roads in France.

Among the Southern Californians who will tour Europe this summer in automobiles will be Dr. Gorden Grundy and family of Long Beach. Dr. Grundy has just completed his medical course at Magill University, Canada, and will pass the next few months with his mother and sister in seeing the various interesting places in the old country.

A 1911 Columbia forty-horse-power touring car has been purchased especially for the trip, and every convenience has been added to the regular equipment of the car.

The Grundys will first visit England, where they will take in the coronation ceremonies and then pass a month wandering over England and Scotland. They expect to pass the latter part of July in the lake region of the Highlands, visiting all the points of historical interest. As the Scotish roads are notoriously bad, a chance will be given the American car to show its worth in a foreign climate.

During the early part of August France will be visited and the famous auto roads will be given a thorough trial. The route will be through Normandy, then east to the Rhine and up the banks of the famous river for several hundred miles, and then south to Marseilles. From Marseilles the party will continue southward to the foot of the Pyrenees, and from thence journey north to Paris.

Two weeks will be passed in the French capital, after which the trip to Geneva will be made. Several days will be spent in viewing the famous mountain resorts of the Alpine State, and then the descent into Italy will be made. Milan will be the first city of importance visited, then the route will be taken direct to Rome. Ten days will be spent in the Imperial City, during which time the numerous suburban attractions in the vicinity will be enjoyed. The route will next lay to the north on the way to Venice, and from there the way will lie through the Tyrolean Alps and on to Vienna.

After leaving the Austrian metropolis, Germany will be toured. The principal cities in the Fatherland will be paid brief visits, including Dresden, Frankfort, Berlin and Hamburg, where the machine will be placed on board ship and the return journey made to the United States.

On arriving in New York the party will at once come on through to the Coast, where the machine will be completely overhauled and prepared for the winter tours which are possible in Southern California. Mr. Grundy and his family expect to reach home the latter part of October.

COLORADO AT FLOOD PREVENTS CROSSING.

PHOENIX, June 10.—That the desert drive west of this point is not as dreadful as by some depicted is shown by the late arrival in Phoenix of A. J. Wirtz, who made the trip from San Diego in a light Mitchell car, carrying as passengers his wife and four children.

They came through with little trouble and without even a puncture, their main difficulty consisting in having to run as far north as Parker before the Colorado could be crossed, as the ordinary Ehrenberg crossing was unapproachable, the river being at flood.

The car will be driven westward to Denver, and later to the Wirtz home in Iowa. From this point Mr. Wirtz will take the Roosevelt road through Globe, intending to strike the Santa Fe somewhere north of St. John's.

HAMLIN'S BIG PLANS.

Buys Lot and Proposes to Construct Three-Story Building for Auto Business.

Ralph Hamlin, the Franklin agent, has recently purchased a lot on which he expects soon to build a new home for the popular air-cooled car. The lot, which is 50x158, is located on the east side of Olive street, near Tenth.

Hamlin will build a modern three-story building, which is to be devoted entirely to Franklin cars. Every facility for rebuilding cars of this make will be installed, and the Franklin man intends that owners of these cars shall have as good service as if they were next door to the factory.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamlin left yesterday for an extended eastern trip. They will go to Canada, then by the Canadian Pacific, the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River to Montreal. Hamlin will visit the Franklin factory at Syracuse, N. Y., for a week, and will then tour the East in an automobile. After their return plans for the new building will be commenced.

CARLOAD OF MITCHELLS FOR GREER-ROBBINS.

A carload of toy-tonneau thirty-horse-power Mitchell cars were received last week by the Greer-Robbins Company, Southern California agents for the Mitchell. This model takes the place of the open Mitchell surreys, and is a very neat model. It has the same size engine as the larger five-passenger cars. The local agents say that the toy tonneau will be very popular, as the first shipment was sold almost as soon as it arrived.

F. A. Hartley has opened a new branch in San Diego for the Greer-Robbins Company, and, after a few days' work in the new place, reports conditions as being very good. Hartley has already sold a five-passenger touring car and a thirty-horse-power roadster.

YACHTING NOTES.

The sloop Alert, owned by a syndicate composed of members of the Santa Barbara Yacht Club, has been placed in commission at Brundage's and will be taken to her club mooring in a few days by yachtsmen from Santa Barbara. The Alert is in better shape than she was last summer, as all her seams have been smoothed over so that she will not drag in the water. She will compete against the crack South Coast yachts in the August regatta at Santa Barbara.

Pat Orr, formerly owner of the motorboat Pat, is preparing to construct a 25-foot speed boat, in which he will install a White steam automobile engine. Orr gained considerable fame in the British Isles several years ago by taking a 16-foot open motorboat across the Irish Sea in pretty bad weather.

Al Brundage is building a 26-foot motorboat for an eastern man which he declares will make twenty-eight miles an hour with a forty-horse-power engine. The boat is of the hump-back type and is to resemble the Maple Leaf III., the fastest motorboat in the world. Brundage says the boat will be ready for the water some time in July and will prove a big factor among the faster boats in the harbor.

Only Q and R class boats will be eligible for the race from the end of the breakwater to Point Vincente on Sunday afternoon for a cup presented by Rear-Commodore Hubbel. The Shadow, Valkyrie, Merlin, Wasp, Seabird and Portola are entered in the event, which is arousing considerable interest among the owners of the smaller craft, who do not get much of a look in at the average races held with the larger boats entered.

Yachtsmen who sleep on their boats after returning late from a cruise claim that mosquitoes are scarcer this year than they have ever been before. It is the general belief among them that because the low land between San Pedro and Long Beach was flooded with oil off Los Angeles highways during the spring rains, the pests did not have much of a chance to breed and sleeping where there are no screens has no terrors.

The Mah-pe this year has the distinction of being a boat with a college-bred Corinthian crew. Most all of the crew members belong to the University Club and among them are Chester Moore, Tim Horan, Harold Haver, Donald Armstrong, Dick Clapp, Jack McFarland and Philo Lindley. With the whole aggregation in white sweaters, handsome and affable, they form a clean-cut lot of yachtsmen.

HAULING STEEL TRUSSES.

The Baker Iron Works will use huge auto trucks in hauling their structural iron from the works to the various parts of the city. The auto trucks are found to answer the purpose far better than any other means of transportation because of the enormous loads that they are capable of handling at one time, and the ease in which they can be handled. At present three ton trucks are being used, and it is expected from the satisfactory results attained, that several more will be ordered.

any heavyweight champion that ever lived. He has really trained for but two great battles. These were with Tommy Burns and Jim Jeffries. Then in each Jack really took no beating to speak of. He whipped both men by using his head.

THE PRIMROSE PATH.

But Johnson is living a fast life now and time will soon bring about his end. The first really hard fight he has will show how the sythe swinger has been getting in his work.

Abe Attell is really the greatest exception the fighting game has ever known. He has been before the public for nearly twenty years. For the past fourteen years Abe has occupied a position of prominence and has been regarded as the cleverest ring general that ever donned a glove. Practically all of his battles, and especially his hard ones, have been won through his superior brain work. Abe beat George Dixon back in the '90s by outguessing him, and so far he has never met any one that showed him the way, unless it was Jem Driscoll.

In the lightweight division of fighters the champions come and go about every two years. Since Kid Lavigne held the title a little over ten years ago, there have been no less than seven champions. Ad Wolgast will probably stay at the top longer than any of his predecessors, because he is younger and sturdier than any of the boys that went before him.

I might go on indefinitely naming the whole bunch of fighters that have held titles and recall their reigns as champions, but time and space prevents it. No better illustration is needed as to the work of father time than the list of names he has already signaled out for oblivion in 1911. The year will probably see the end of Beer Unholtz, Abe Attell, Dave Deschler, Matty Baldwin, Battling Nelson, Al Kubiak, Jimmy Walsh, Harry Forbes, Dick Nelson, Danny Webster, Al Delmont, Biz Mackey, Mike ("Twin") Sullivan, the Dixie Kid, and both the Lewis boys. Others will be added to this list, while some of these lads may be able to tide over another cycle of time.

In this long list there is but one champion, Abe Attell, and his name would not be there were it not for the fact that he has been injured beyond repair. Abe may climb into the ring again, but he will never be the great little fighter that he once was.

He's the First.

FILLMORE STARTS ON LONG TRIP OVER NEW BOUTETO PHOENIX.

EYLAR FILLMORE of the Standard Motor Car Company will be the first Los Angeles man to go over the Phoenix race course this season. Yesterday, accompanied by a party of friends, the energetic auto man began the four-day trip.

San Diego will be the first stopping place, and from there the Ford will hie across the desert to El Centro. Beyond El Centro, the ties will be bumped for fifty or sixty miles over the Southern Pacific Railroad on the way to Yuma.

One of the most interesting features of the trip will be a sojourn into the rebel territory across the international boundary. As conditions are still in a very unsettled state on the other side of the line, the party may have an opportunity to see a little of the "real thing" before getting back on American soil.

From Yuma the route to Phoenix will be quickly covered and on arriving in the Arizona city, Mr. Fillmore will take the train back to Los Angeles expecting to reach here by Wednesday night.

Fillmore stated before leaving that he would take his time on the trip and make a careful study of the route. As the Ford people will enter a car in the big race, the data gathered on this pathfinding trip will undoubtedly be of considerable value in planning out the coming race.

BATTLE ENDS IN RIOT.

But Tommy lost his audience at this point; a riot broke out in the audience.

A fierce free fight was on in the galleries. As the crowd broke right and left to give the brawlers space, a man in tan-colored clothing was seen lying on his face on the upper seats. Two ruffians were on top of him, beating him furiously and kicking him. He was trying to cover up his face from their brutal boots.

With a furious gust, the ring about them broke and another big burly ruffian came tearing through to the rescue of the prostrate man.

With the sudden fury of a hurricane, he flung the two men aside and the man in yellow crawled feebly and dazedly to his feet.

There was an instant of quiet; then every one in that part of the gallery seemed flying at every one else. In a fierce free fight. Most of the men on one side seemed to be Mexicans. Mostly it was a furious indescribable mix-up. Men flung their arms like flails. One fellow was hurled all the way from the top tier of seats to the gallery rail. His body bumped and slid like an old sack of grain.

Finally the Vernon police—who seem to hold all world's records for stupid inefficiency—managed to get there and stopped the fight.

By the time it was over, the turmoil in the ring had quieted down and both Dixon and Rivers had gone.

It was a curious sight to see that strange mixed crowd standing in the ring to watch the fight in the gallery. There were seconds in their blood-flecked shirt sleeves, newspaper men, professional men, hoodlums; and—until they led him away—Tommy Dixon, divided between his own troubles and a lively interest in the fight.

All in all, it was about the worst thing that ever happened at Vernon.

TRAIN SCHEDULES.

A critical examination of a railroad time-card will reveal to Mr. Dixon the fact that a fast overland train leaves for the distant East early this morning; the best thing he can do is to climb on board.

If, as he says, his foot slipped, why, Mr. Dixon's feet are altogether too slippery for ordinary boxing.

The slippery condition of his feet caused him to strike Rivers foul blows in such number that I lost count. In the ninth round, he fouled the Mexican boy three times in a most flagrant manner by hitting low. Time and again, he was warned by the referee.

It seemed to me that Eyton spent most of the time saying "Get those blows up, Tommy; quit hitting low there, Tommy."

There is not a decent person who saw the fight but will agree that Eyton was patient to the last degree with a dirty fighter.

I sat at the ring-side next Earl Rogers. Just before the blow was struck, he said to me, "This fight worries me. They are planning to stop the Moran-Wolgast fight on July 4 in San Francisco and it is up to us to be careful. This kind of thing can't go on. This boy is trying to foul Rivers in every round. I am going to ask Eyton to stop the fight. This will hurt us in court if it goes on."

He was about to say something else when Referee Eyton stopped the contest.

NATURE STORIES.

Cat Mothers a Rabbit.

Charles Key, a farmer living near Paoli, Ind., has a domesticated rabbit that is living harmoniously with a mother cat and her family of little kittens. The mother cat went to the fields some few weeks ago and caught a small rabbit and conveyed it to the barn loft, where her family of kittens were housed. Instead of the kittens eating the rabbit, it was allowed to nestle in the straw with them and soon became a playful companion. It takes nourishment from the mother cat every time the kittens suckle and is growing rapidly. It seems perfectly contented with its foster mother and her tribe of kittens.—[Indianapolis News.

Hen Catches Fish.

A hen that can swim like a duck, that's exactly what Henry Ude of No. 401 South Fair street, Belleville, Ill., has in his possession. It is a wonderful hen, according to Mr. Ude, whose veracity is strictly vouched for. It not only can swim, but also is some diver, going under for fish being one of its peculiar hobbies.

Mr. Ude says that recently the hen caught a first-class mess of fish, large enough for the main course at the Ude family dinner.

The hen is of the Indian game bird variety. Mr. Ude trained it for ten months. He will use it for a decoy for ducks on shooting trips.—[Washington Star.

Cat Adopts a Squirrel.

Edgar Little, a farmer of Darlington, Ind., is the owner of a cat that has taken a fancy to a little squirrel. The cat fondles, cares for and carries its squirrel in the same manner as it does its one small kitten. A short time ago, while Mr. Little was cutting down a tree, he found a squirrel's nest. In felling the tree the mother squirrel was killed, but a baby squirrel remained uninjured. Mr. Little took it to his home and put it with the cat and little kitten. The cat at once began to mother the squirrel, and Tabby now watches over it fully. Many persons visit the little home daily to see this cat with its strange family.—[Indianapolis News.

How to Get Industries.

Nearly one-sixth of the manufacturing capital of the country is invested in Pennsylvania, and the value of the products of its factories is about one-seventh of the total value of the country's manufactured products. But Pennsylvania is not satisfied with what it is already doing. It wants to do more, and the spirit which has made it great in industry is manifested in the efforts being made by a number of its smaller communities to attract industries. The latest on this list is Butler, where, according to the Pittsburgh Dispatch, the Chamber of Commerce has raised an industrial guarantee fund of more than $600,000, of which $500,000 were raised in ten days, ten individuals and corporations subscribing $20,000 each. The plan of the guarantee seems to be that signers become liable for a certain sum, and this liability is accepted at the banks as a basis of loans to amply secure industries. Men and corporations, who subscribed $20,000 each to this guarantee fund, evidently recognized in the plan a strictly business proposition, and not merely silly "boom" talk, of advantage only to the talkers.—[Manufacturers' Record.

CRICKET RIVALS PLAY AT VINEYARD.

Southpaw Tomkins May Find Concrete Deadly.

Yorston of Australia Is As Keen as Mustard.

Local Eleven Strengthened by Addition of Stars.

BY MARSHAL D. TAYLOR.

The first of a series of five cricket matches, between the rival elevens of Los Angeles and Santa Monica, will be played today at Vineyard. Wickets will be pitched at 1 o'clock.

With Williamson and Hutcheons on the team, the local club has an aggregation of which they feel proud. Los Angeles is particularly strong this year in every department of the game. In F. Bamford and J. E. Heavens they possess two sterling fielders, so that keenly contested games are expected.

Santa Monica will not have the walk-over it has enjoyed for the past two years, although on paper they are stronger than ever. Two new members are to be tried out today. C. G. Cotton, the Harrow blue, is to play, also A. Deane, the New South Wales wicket-keeper. Both men have international reputations for first-class cricket.

The beach eleven has never played on concrete so that their bowlers may not be able to get a twist on the ball. Again, their batsmen may experience considerable trouble in playing Meggett, Barnes and Maddock, the crack local trundlers.

P. J. Tomkins, however, is expected to shine in this match, as he is in fine fettle. Like Pat Higgins, Tomkins hails from the land of the kangaroo and is a crickster of the first water. He is one of the most difficult bowlers to bat, as he hides behind the umpire before making his appearance at the popping crease. Then, like a flash, he whips his left arm over and sends down a leg breaker or a yorker.

No two balls alike does Tomkins bowl in succession. By varying his pace he tempts the unwary batsman with a delivery that looks easy, but which in reality is a "shooter." Nothing delights this Australian trundler so much as to see his opponents' wickets "spread-eagled" by one of his pet deliveries. As a left-hand bowler, Tomkins has no equal in Southern California.

To give an instance of what Tomkins can do with the ball on a grass pitch: At Coronado three weeks ago in a match against San Diego he bowled seven overs, four of which were maidens, and dismissed five batsmen for only four runs.

A. R. Yorston has been receiving careful coaching from E. H. Wilkes during the last few weeks, so that now he has developed a capital defense and a very punishing drive. Yorston also is an Australian. Like all Antipodeans he is as keen as mustard when in the field.

A championship match between San Diego and Santa Monica is being arranged for July 4 at the old polo grounds. H. W. Martin, the ex-Burmah cricketer and one of the star players on the border eleven, in a letter to The Times yesterday, says that San Diego is keen to play this match on fireworks day and expects to retrieve her lost laurels.

With Los Angeles going strong this year and Santa Monica stronger than they have ever been, some excellent cricket will be witnessed between now and the fall.

The following named Santa Monica players have been selected to represent the beach club today: P. J. Higgins, captain; T. H. Wilkes, H. F. Elliot, A. R. Mitchell, J. M. Fletcher, D. B. Jamieson, P. J. Tomkins, A. R. Yorston, W. Hunt, J. F. W. Allan, C. G. Cotton.

LOCAL FIRM SIGNS FOR ANOTHER YEAR.

After having covered practically all the western territory in the last six weeks, John Becker, Jr., secretary of the Grabowsky Truck Company, visited the local agency, Hawley, King & Co., last week, on his annual inspection tour of the agencies. Before leaving for Salt Lake he signed up Hawley, King & Co. as agents for the coming year. Becker has been in Portland, Spokane, Seattle and other coast cities.

"Grabowsky agencies are in a flourishing condition," says Becker, "and the Pacific Coast cities will be among the largest users of this class of cars this year. One of the features of the Grabowsky truck, which will appeal to the commercial users, is that the agents will carry several surplus power plants, so that none of their customers need lose the use of their truck if anything should go wrong with the car."

Recent sales of Grabowsky trucks include a two-ton vehicle to the United Phosphate Company of this city, and a truck to the Pioneer Paper Company. This is the second to be purchased by this firm, the first having successfully demonstrated its utility and ability to perform the heavy tasks without strain on the motor and at a great saving over the horse-propelled vehicle.

TRUCK'S LONG TRIP.

A Dayton three-ton auto truck, carrying a load of 6000 pounds, recently made the trip from Chicago to New York. The truck was equipped with 36x4 Diamond demountable spliceless wire mesh base tires. The vehicle left Chicago May 15 and delivered its freight in New York May 27, lessening the scheduled time by three days. In the main the roads were in poor condition, and were full of ruts, and crushed rock was frequently encountered. In spite of this, in one day the truck covered the distance of 132 miles.

Horseless.

ADAPTING TRUCK IS BIG FACTOR.

BUSINESS DEVELOPES TYPES FOR PECULIAR NEEDS.

Special Bodies Required for Various Uses In Hauling—Langhorne of the Packard Explains the Situation as Found in the Market.

In adapting the motor truck to the different lines of trade the biggest factor is in the building of special body designs. By new forms of equipment the field of motor transportation is constantly being extended. J. T. Langhorne, manager of the truck department of the Packard Motor Car Company, believes the truck could be adapted to almost any need in the commercial field.

"Many lines of business have developed a type of body that meets the peculiar needs of that business, and with more or less alteration in detail nearly all of the types are adaptable to the motor chassis," said Langhorne. "The development of the motor truck is shown by the fact that a single make in three standard lengths of wheel base is now being used in 123 different lines of trade.

"A field which at present is almost untouched, but which eventually will be very large, is in the service of contractors. The R. T. Ford Company of Rochester, N. Y., is using three three-ton trucks, equipped with dump bodies, in its work on the New York State education buildings at Albany. The loading is done with a steam shovel and it is estimated that each truck does the work of eight teams.

"Many other interesting types of special bodies have been developed by a study of economy in motor delivery. John Wanamaker of New York and Philadelphia was the first motor truck user to adopt the removable inner nest or crate. The Kaufmann Bros. in Pittsburgh have gone further and use two nest bodies with each truck chassis. While a truck is out making deliveries the second nest body is being packed, so when the truck returns there is no delay at the warehouse.

"Retail coal merchants are adopting the motor truck, loading from overhead chutes and unloading by elevating the special body in such a way that the coal runs through an opening at the side or end. The Wilson & Adams Company of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., are using a removable stake body for hauling lumber.

"I have mentioned only a few types in a long line of special bodies. The field of public service, which takes in the fire and police patrols, is one that is being developed at the present time."

TAFT ON GOLF.

President Taft, according to Maj. Butts, has been playing golf since 1896. The President usually plays a splendid games, but this year, perhaps because of lack of practice, has not equalled his small scores of former years. His average of 5 is his best score. In a letter to a prominent golfer President Taft recently said:

"There are many who have deprecated my fondness for golf, because it is supposed to be a rich man's game. There is nothing that furnishes a greater test of character and self-restraint, nothing which puts one more on equality with one's fellows, or, I may say, puts one lower than one's fellows, than the game of golf."

The Tire Man.

FIRESTONE BELIEVES IN RACING TO DEVELOP THE AUTO INDUSTRY.

H. S. FIRESTONE, donor of the "Speed King Crown," believes that although motor racing is very dangerous, it is one of the best aids in the development and perfection of the motor car. Not being an automobile manufacturer, Firestone, when asked at the finish of the Indianapolis Speedway race, his opinion on this subject, spoke of the great improvement in tire durability. The tire man takes issue with an eastern critic of motor racing.

"It is claimed," said Mr. Firestone, "that motor racing is no longer necessary to aid in the development and perfection of the motor car. I am not an automobile manufacturer, but I doubt if absolute perfection has been reached in cars any more than in tires, or any other part that is subjected to wear and tear.

"We never expect to stop trying to make rubber and fabric stronger, more durable and more economical in the finished tire. On the contrary, we are annually spending many thousands of dollars in various ways to bring about a greater tire efficiency at a less mileage cost. Motor car racing is by all odds the severest test a tire can have, as it is a scientific fact that high speed shows up all the strength or weakness of a tire. This is especially true of track and speedway racing, on account of tread wear in rounding curves.

"Every additional five miles of speed, after a car exceeds forty miles an hour, cuts down the possible mileage anywhere between 20 and 40 per cent., so that by the time the car reaches seventy-five miles an hour, as did Ray Harroun's winning Marmon, the tires can be reasonably expected to give about 4 per cent. of the actual mileage they would show in good fast every-day service. From this you can judge the remarkable durability of his three Firestone regular stock tires that covered the entire 500 miles.

"This shows that the lessons of former races in tire making have not been forgotten, and that regular stock tires are being made to withstand any condition of speed or road surface. It justifies our position since 1908 in refusing to make any racing tires, and in giving to the man who buys his tires from his dealer just the same quality and durability as the race driver; no more and no less.

"Motor racing is still altogether too dangerous to personal safety, and I sincerely trust that in the future some means will be devised to eliminate this element of danger. There can be no doubt, however, that speed contests prove the severest of all tests on tires and the tire battle just ended has furnished a remarkable demonstration of tire improvement and tire durability."

CRICKET.

By Captain Leslie T. Peacocke.

Now, to play the game of cricket you must learn to guard your wicket,
With a bat against the bowler with the ball,
And to field the ball and stop it, and to catch and never drop it;
If you drop it you will never do, at all.
You must learn to drive a yorker, and to block a breaking corker,
Or else send it to the boundary with a cut,
And if you're a wicket-keeper you must never be a sleeper,
Or you're bound to get a crack upon the nut.

You must wear white pants and sweater, or a shirt, or something better,
With a sash around your waist of fancy hue,
And a coat and cap to match it, or you're sometimes apt to catch it
From the captain of your team—which doesn't do.
Then you take the place directed, when the players are collected,
And prepare to wallop well the other bunch;
You must keep your wits about you, if you don't they're sure to rout you,
And you must not be too thirsty at your lunch.

When you take your place at batting with your feet upon the matting,
Hold straight your bat and cover well the stumps;
Keep your eye upon the leather and then lift it like a feather,
And if you're hit, don't grumble at the bumps.
If the ball is coming slowly, not too straight and not too lowly,
With a pitch about six inches from your leg,
Make a mighty swipe and get it to the boundary, don't forget it;
You must never miss a chance like that, I beg.

It's a game that suits the masses, old and young and upper classes,
But it isn't quite so easy as it seems;
It is played the wide world over, by the stay-at-home and rover,
And wherever you can raise two rival teams.
It is not so fast as rounders—that's a game for silly bounders—
But it's good enough for any decent soul;
So, we'll drink a toast to cricket, to the ball and bat and wicket,
And we'll drown all merry scoffers in the bowl.

How It is Done.

PROPER CARE OF TIRES NECESSARY TO PRESERVE LIFE OF RUBBER.

THE PROPER care of tires and rims is one of the most important cares of a motorist. According to the Michelin Tire Company of Millstown, N. J., nothing is of greater importance in the care of tires than the prompt repairing of small cuts in the treads. As small stones and other sharp objects are bound to come in contact with the tread, it is impossible to avoid these cuts. Sometimes they are small and seem insignificant, but damage results from neglecting them and unless repaired immediately they eventually bring about the complete destruction of the envelope.

Dust and dirt sometimes work in under, the dirt raising blisters and separating the rubber from the canvas. Moisture also gets in and rots the fabric. Immediately on discovery of cuts the edges should be thoroughly cleaned with gasoline, separating them with a small stick to expose the inside.

When the cut is perfectly cleaned of all foreign matter, the edges should be coated with cement. The first coat being allowed to dry, another should be applied, and while still moist, knead with the fingers sufficient mastic and force it firmly into every crevice. When the cut is properly filled hold the edges together until the mastic sets. The tire should then be allowed to stand for six hours, or more. Mastic is a plastic cement, and a very useful article for the tool box.

The rims on the wheels should also be kept free from dust. It will pay the motorist to occasionally inspect these rims especially if the outer surfaces of the envelopes near the beads look rusty. This discoloration is rust caused by rusted rims, and if not arrested will gradually eat through the rubber.

To remove rust from the rims the tire should be taken off, and the rusty parts cleaned with emery paper. Then smooth the surface with finer emery paper and rejapan the rim, applying one coat to the outside and two to the inside. When the edge of the rim is too rough for the use of emery paper first use a file, after which use an emery paper for finishing.

Instead of Railroads.

MOTOR CAR TAKES THE PLACE OF BUCKBOARDS AND SADDLE HORSES.

TIME was when a theatrical company going from one town to another had to be satisfied with almost any old kind of transportation—buckboards and saddle horses often being called into requisition.

As the railways grew more frequent transportation became easier, but the principals of the Idora Comic Opera Company made the jump from Oakland to Los Angeles last week in the most thoroughly de luxe fashion yet—they took three days and came in automobiles.

As there were several days intervening between the close of the engagement at Idora Park and the opening at the Majestic Theater here, a big automobile party was organized. W. H. Halliwell, Jr., of the Warner Instrument Company, happened to be in Oakland with his Cadillac "Forty" and Harry Girard was there with his Hudson, and both were returning to Los Angeles, so they volunteered the use of their cars. Halliwell was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Halliwell and Mrs. W. H. Halliwell, Sr. Others in the party were Agnes Cain-Brown, Aileen Flaven and E. P. Norwood of the Idora Company.

The party reports conditions ideal for touring, both as to roads and accommodations, and after a thoroughly pleasant trip, extending over three days, they arrived in the city Thursday.

BASEBALL IN JAIL.

A baseball league has been formed among the 500 prisoners in the Rhode Island state prison and games are played in the prison yard every Saturday afternoon during the summer. In a recent game, a car barn robber played behind the bat, a postoffice robber covered first base, and a man convicted of manslaughter was in the box for one of the teams. Those who did not play were supplied with pipes and tobacco and rooted for their favorites during the game.

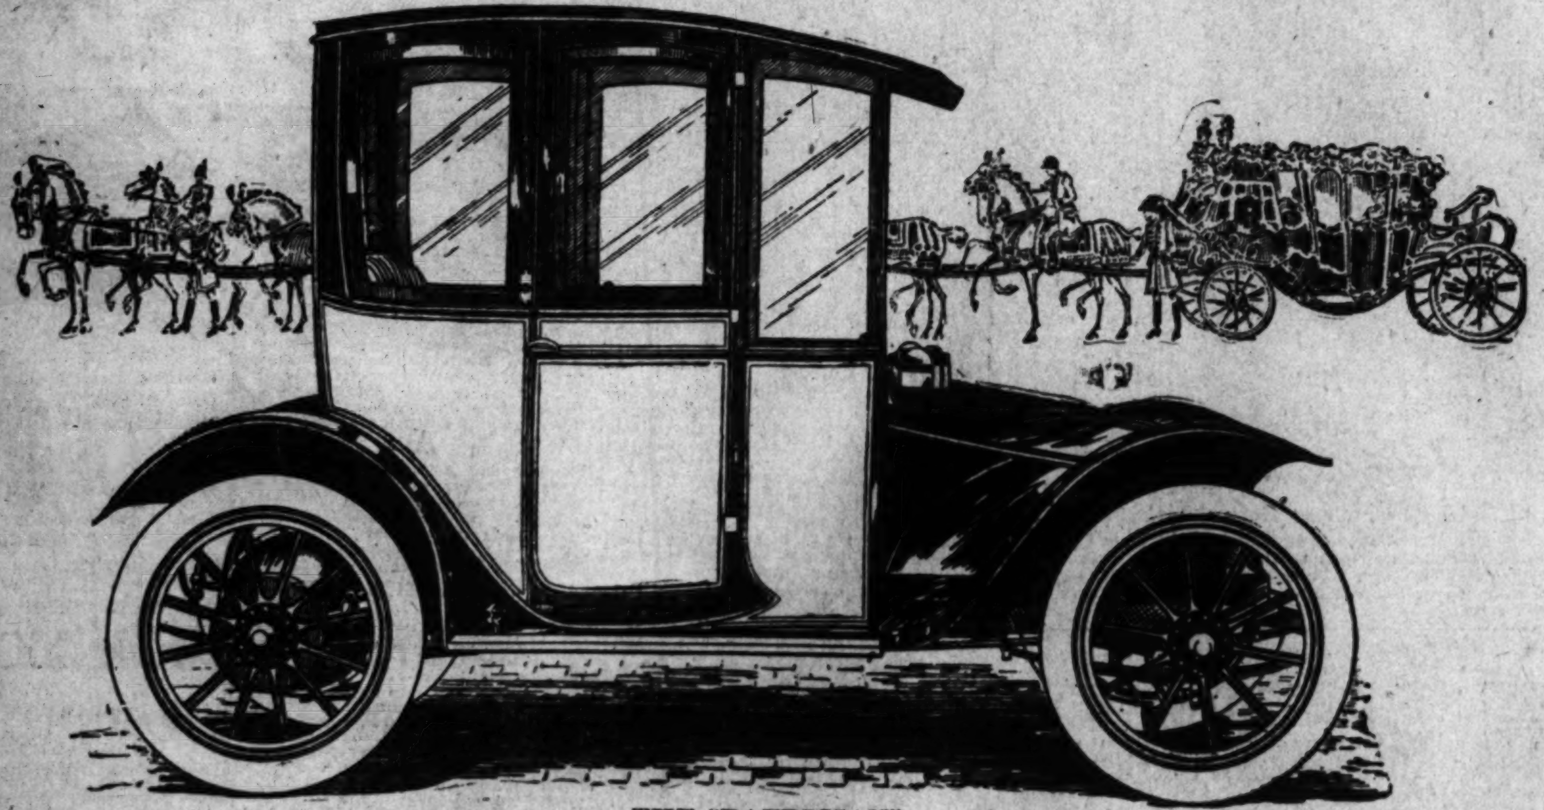
First View of the New and Larger Hupp-Yeats



THE "PATRICIAN"
100-inch wheel-base; 30 cell, 18-plate battery. Price $2150.

A Coach of Kingly Origin Whose Exquisite Design Sounds the Knell of the High-Hung Electric Carriage

Men and women of discernment, everywhere, welcomed the first Hupp-Yeats for its delightful departure from the unlovely design of the high-hung electric carriage.

They recognized in the first Hupp-Yeats a renaissance of the golden age of coach building—when the designer catered to kings and was knighted for perfection of form, or guillotined, perhaps, for failure.

It is our pleasure to supplement this first marked success with a second and a larger coach, more striking still in its adaptation of ancient ideas to modern needs.

We believe that the Hupp-Yeats coach, by virtue of its beauty, and the increased utility that results therefrom, is destined to supersede the high-hung electric carriage as the "safety" superseded the old high-wheeled bicycle.

HUPP-YEATS
ELECTRIC COACH

Guaranteed for life. Design protected by letters patent.

The old royal coach—that distinguished ancestor of the twentieth century Hupp-Yeats—was constructed so as to assure the huge element of safety to the royal person.

With electricity as the motive-power, the danger of overturning in a carriage hung high in the air is much greater; as is the menace of skidding.

For relief from the potential perils of a slipping, sliding electric, susceptible to the terrible possibility of overturning on a wet asphalt pavement, you have the Hupp-Yeats to thank.

The Hupp-Yeats cannot overturn and it will not skid unless it is fairly driven to do so by carelessness.

So you see, the low-hung body borrowed from our French and British forebears and modernized to meet American conditions is a thing of practical utility as well as beauty.

The addition of the curved roof and sloping hood; the perfect balance of all the parts; and the elimination of several hundred pounds of useless weight; so reduces the wind-resistance that a Hupp-Yeats will travel of its own momentum for an incredible distance on the gentlest sort of down grade.

These same factors give it very much more power and utilize much less current under adverse conditions, on the upgrade, or against a stiff breeze.

News Notes About the New Hupp-Yeats

The new Hupp-Yeats coach has a wheel-base of 100 inches.

This is longer than the wheel-base of any other electric carriage.

The purpose is to secure the luxurious riding qualities peculiar to the largest and longest gas cars and impossible in the average short and "bunty" electric.

The Exide Hycap battery with which the new Hupp-Yeats coach is equipped contains 30 cells, of 18 plates each.

One hundred miles on a single charge is no unusual performance for this car under normal conditions, will be good for 115 miles on a charge.

The motor is the famous Westinghouse.

It drives the car in the direct motor-to-axle system that originated with the Hupp-Yeats—without reduction gears or chains and through but one set of gears.

The bearings throughout are of an imported ball type, still further promoting easy running and economy of power.

The chassis frame is of pressed steel, tremendously strong, though light, and the weight of the car is 500 to 600 pounds under that of any other of approximate size.

RAINBOW TROUT REWARD ANGLERS.

Big Fellows Are Dragged Out of Bear Creek.

Several Are More Than Two Feet in Length.

Deer Signs Indicate Hunting Will be Good.

Ten rainbow and steelhead trout, from twenty-five to thirty inches in length and weighing from seven to eight and a half pounds, were landed in Big Bear Valley creek one morning last week by a party of anglers from this city, including Ed Mitchell, Gus Knight, Hanson Moore, Irving Ingraham, Adolph Schwartz and Ernest Klokky. The big fellows formed the headliners in a mess that also included many smaller fry.

The catch was the biggest that has been made in Bear Valley this year and has not been surpassed in the South for some time. One twenty-five or thirty-inch fish is usually about as much as the best fisherman's luck can bring to the surface in one session and at that it is usually a long time between drinks.

The party went into the mountains early in the week and stayed several days. Their fish were caught in the creek below the dam, where the pools are well stocked with the finsters. The anglers did not cast their lines in the lake but were satisfied with what they could yank out of the creek. All the members of the party say the fishing in Bear Creek is just as good as it ever was and that the fish are larger than they have been for many years. Mitchell, who has fished in nearly every mountain stream in the South, says there is not a better place for trout in the hills.

Gus Knight asserts that the deer signs in the Big Bear Valley country indicate that hunting will be good when the season opens August 15.

Louis Breer and Lou Guernsey struck out for the tall and uncut Friday morning and showed up again the same night with several good-sized trout. They went in an automobile and refused to reveal the name of the place where they fished, saying they had discovered a good place that apparently has been overlooked by others.

GOOD HAULS MADE IN MATILIJA CANYON.

The fact that the Los Angeles business man is able to take a day off on occasions and enjoy a little real sport was shown last week, when H. Lord and P. A. Lord, distributors of the Chalmers cars here, took a three-day fishing trip in Matilija Canyon.

The two followers of Walton packed the necessary camping outfits in their machine Thursday night, and hit the road for Ventura county. After scouting around for a likely place they picked Mililija Canyon as the best spot and prepared to make record catches. That they accomplished their mission might me judged from the big strings of brook trout which were brought back. The anglers say the Ventura streams were full of trout, but that large fish were scarce. With the advent of good roads the chances of Southern California trout fishing becoming one of the most attractive features of auto touring is quite probable.

ANGLERS TO HOLD BARBECUE TODAY.

Members of the Southern California Rod and Reel Club expect to have a large time at Anaheim Landing today. a barbecue, along with which casting contests are to be held, will be the magnet that will draw the fishermen to the beach. It is probable that there will be very little doing in the fishing line as the waves are still running high.

The first casting event is to be held at 9:30 o'clock and another at 2 o'clock. Some of the anglers are real nifty in tossing the light weights on land. It is expected that whoever wins the trophy will have to make a mark of at least 300 feet with the two-and-a half-ounce weight today.

BOXING NOTES.

Joe Coster is to box at Memphis on June 19 and immediately after that fight is to start for this city to get into shape for whatever turns up in the way of a fight.

Jack Caress is anxious for a bout with the winner of the Davies-Kaufman fight and may be put on later. He will be remembered as the tall, lanky fellow who fought Dick Allen here some months ago and floored Allen, only to be stopped later on by Dick. Dick, by the way, was the pride of the Los Angeles Athletic Club. Caress fought a fellow at Bakersfield several months ago and knocked him out in two rounds.

Alex. Greggains, the old time fighter, has a son in the lightweight class whom he is very sweet on and wants McCarey to give the boy a chance here. The kid has done a little good work up north.

The proposed double bill for June 24 that McCarey had up his sleeve part way, has been called off and there will be no scrap until July 4.

Jimmy Austin, the local bantam, made the trip to Taft in Kern county this week and trained two days. He was to have met little Campi on Saturday but Campi ran out, not being satisfied with the money offered him. Consequently Jimmy returned to this city.

Freddie Welsh was due to reach San Francisco last night, where he has a fight the latter part of this month. He did intend to come by way of Los Angeles, but evidently thought he would not waste the time that would be lost in coming here.

Frank Roman, brother of the local boxer, Paul Roman, is anxious to get on with some 133 pound novice out at Vernon. He won his first fight here about six months ago and thinks he can become a real fighter.

When Carl Morris and Jim Flynn fight in Oklahoma on July 4 the semi-final is to be furnished by Paul Roman and a pug named Pete Shaughenessy. Paul is a husky scrapper and will doubtless be able to take care of himself.

The Swimming Raft at Catalina.

This is the capital city of Summerland. This old raft has been the scene of more summer romances than the famous Lovers' Walk. It is also the first stage of the summer girl's progress. When she can swim to the raft, the summer girl is considered to have passed the probation stage of her athletic career.

To Begin Anew.

VETERAN "CY" YOUNG INTENDS TO CHANGE STYLE OF DELIVERY.

CLEVELAND, June 10.—The more one sees of "Cy" Young the more he realizes why "Cy" is so justly termed the "Grand Old Man" of baseball, why he is beloved by all, whether actively engaged as players or spectators. Cy, just recovering from a long illness, is back in harness again.

Baseball never did have a man who was a greater credit to it than this same "Cy." Big, brawny and powerful, accustomed to the warfare of the diamond, to pitting his strength of mind and body against that of other men of power, to being the hero of a wildly frantic populace, a big, huge strong man among men. "Cy" has never lost that modesty which marked him the day he entered baseball over two-score years ago.

His heart has ever been tender and easily touched. Today his heart is just as big, yes, bigger, than his body. He is big in all the term implies, in everything. An act which could be termed "small" never was, nor never could be charged against the "Grand Old Man."

Every day he shows those sterling qualities of the broad individual that he is. Never did a young fellow enter baseball who had reason to fear old "Cy." Always does he hold out the helping hand to the recruits. His fame hasn't lessened that broad sensible view of life which he brought from the farm in Tuscarawas county twenty-four years ago.

LETTER TOUCHES "CY."

A sample of the wholesome tenderheartedness of the big fellow was exhibited by the sentiment which he showed over a letter received today from a newsboys' club in Boston.

"Cy" is human. He likes appreciation. But only too well has he learned the fickleness of the crowd. Perhaps that was one of the reasons why he appreciated so thoroughly the letter mentioned. It was sent by the secretary of the Boston Newsboys' Club. That letter is now prized as one of the most sacred of Young's belongings.

There was no formality about the letter. It started out "Dear Cy," and that was the first thing which touched the veteran's tender chord. The letter requested a short message from Cy for use in the Boston Newsboys' Magazine called the Hustler. A reproduction of the final paragraph reads good to one who has seen much of the rough stuff in this old world.

"Many a time," it says, "have we sat in the bleachers cheering our on to victory, but those good old times are gone, never to return again. But there is one way to recall old remembrances, and that is by a few cheery words. You will write, I am sure you will. for the newsboys anyway, won't you, Cy?"

There's the part which touched the old boy.

"I tell you there's a letter which I wouldn't lose for anything," declared "Cy." "The boys surely will get a few words from me. I don't recall anything that ever made me feel better than that little letter."

That's all about "Cy" Young the man. Now for "Cy" Young, the pitcher.

TO CHANGE PITCHING TACTICS.

Would you believe it if any one told you that "Cy," after twenty-two years' service as a major league pitcher, is planning to start anew, to adopt a new system? It doesn't seem reasonable, does it? Well, it is.

Speed is the thing which has carried "Cy" through all these years. Blessed with abnormal power in his good right arm, filled with the good common sense which taught him that only good living would enable him to preserve that strength, "Cy" is going to start over, or, rather, to add other things to go with that speed.

During every game in which he has pitched in the past, "Cy's" main thought has been to keep the ball over the corners of the plate. Heretofore, he has been contended to cut the plate, trusting in his speed to get away. Realizing his perfect control, even the most timid batters had no fears about going to the plate when "Cy" was pitching. They could feel almost certain that either a straight one or a charp curve was sailing up.

Too Early.

FEW SOUTHERNERS TO PLAY IN NORTH.

Tennis Players Too Busy to Make Santa Cruz Trip.

May Sutton and Mary Browne to Play Together.

Coast Championships Will be Decided for Year.

The South, from present indications, will not have a very big representation, numerically, at the tennis tourney for the Pacific Coast championships that is to be held at Santa Cruz next week, as nearly all the veteran players say they are too deeply engrossed in business to take a week off this month.

"It would be different if the tourney occurred next month," said Hal Braly yesterday, "but it is probable that not more than one or two of the boys will be able to go North."

However, Miss May Sutton and Miss Mary Browne intend to play in the women's events, which means that this section of the State will grab some of the honors that are to be won.

Nat Browne and Winnie Mace are thinking seriously of playing at Santa Cruz, but Tom Bundy, Hal Braly, A. V. Duncan and T. W. Hendricks assert that they won't be able to make it this year.

The whole idea of holding the tournament so early in the season was to attract the strongest players, who would otherwise have gone East for the national tournaments, and Casa del Rey was selecetd in preference to Del Monte as being a much larger town, but the plan didn't work out as it was expected to do.

The most careful programme has been arranged by the committee, comprising men's singles, women's doubles, junior singles, junior doubles, and consolation doubles. And a particularly handsome championship cup, to be known as the Casa del Rey trophy, is being offered, besides many other generous prizes.

Entries will be accepted up to June 15, so there is yet time for the southern forces to muster. There is still hope that Mrs. Bruce will be able to go, but many circumstances prevent her being able to decide for the next few days.

Miss Mary Browne is certainly in splendid form this year, and doing her duty right royally. She represented the South at Stockton, giving Miss Hazel Hotchkiss a very close fight. Miss Browne is a fervent Suttonite, and would have enjoyed beating Hazel Hotchkiss as much as anything that could happen. She maintains firmly that Miss Hotchkiss could never beat May Sutton again. It is to be hoped they will meet at Long Beach July 4, and settle the matter once and for all.

If May Sutton and Mary Browne really are to be the only southern representatives at Santa Cruz, at least we have the satisfaction of knowing they are particularly capable ones.

MANY AGENTS VISIT CITY.

Western Rubber & Supply Company Headquarters for Dealers Who Desire More Goods.

The greatest activity has been shown among the out-of-town garage men and agents during the past week, more than ever visiting the Western Rubber and Supply Company and many big orders being placed.

C. E. Coggins was one of the most distant visitors. He came from Imperial and says things are booming in that section. The roads are better than ever and will be improved greatly during the next year. The Imperial country, according to Coggins, is enthusiastic over the new route of the Phoenix race.

Ed Priest of the Motor Supply Company drove up from San Diego. His company is doing a good business.

Other out-of-town visitors are as follows: E. W. Davis, Pomona; C. E. Lush, Orange; Charles Dundas, Riverside; E. A. Evans, Highlands; Charles Davis, Oakland; F. H. Osler, Pomona; Mr. Holsworth, Monrovia; E. L. Mathews, Santa Ana; E. Angel, Anaheim; W. H. White, Glendora; F. H. McHugh, Covina; A. A. True, Highland; C. E. Jackson, Courtland, Ariz.; Roy Creighton; Upland; Howard Miller, Pasadena; Mr. Miller, Whittier.

Frank Klienfelter made the "Kite" for the Western Rubber and Supply Company, and found business conditions good. He reports considerable touring in all sections.

Jess Brown visited the new San Diego branch and is enthusiastic over conditions in the South. He says the new store is doing more than was expected of it and that the people there have given it a generous welcome.

According to Brown the motor business is blooming in San Diego and every firm there is doing a good business.

The Western Rubber and Supply Company has had a big run on G. and J. tires. Acting on the belief that the price of tires is going up many garage keepers are getting a supply to last during the summer.

"PAJAMA PICNIC" FOR THESE GIRLS.

A group of business girls who tire of nothing so much as the eternal grind of getting dressed promptly each morning and remaining clad in regulation attire until closing of business hours at night; and then perhaps dressing again for some entertainment in the evening, have decided upon a complete change during the two week's vacation which they plan to take.

A dear old lady in the suburbs—and they refuse to tell their best friends in which direction from the city, has agreed to take them in and do for them during their summer's rest. She has a cosy place and a walled-in back yard with cool pergolas and vine-covered porches.

"We mean to just spend the entire time in that delightful back yard," said one of the number to her most intimate friend, who is going away. "We shall not take a single gown besides the ones we wear out there; but we shall live in our pajamas from morning until night—and, of course, from night until morning. Oh, yes, we shall take several suits; but we shall emancipate ourselves from dress. We all agree that there can be no more complete rest than this.

"There will be no hurrying to get on the collar and pin on the jabot—(to say nothing of the puffs)—no hustling to hook and eye the blouse that will not hook or eye owing to the depravity of the laundry. We shall spend our time in reading, doing fancy work, chatting or merely lying idly at ease. We may have a little music and perhaps a few games of one sort or another; but we shall not dress. Oh, it will be glorious!" and she emphasized her statement with a merry clapping of her hands.

"Not at all," she said, in quick deprecation, when asked if she were an advanced woman and would like to reform women's dress. "On the contrary, we all of us like good clothes; and the fact that we look forward to this "Pajama Picnic" with so much pleasure, does not mean at all that we would like always to dress in such garb. It simply means that it is to us a lark, a change; and that is what a vacation should be, don't you think?"

HONOLULU'S CHARM LURES.

BY MRS. D. C. M'CAN.

President of the Friday Morning Club.

MRS. D. C. M'CAN, newly-named president of the Friday Morning Club, when asked for one of the most pleasant of her many trips for relaxation, instantly replied:

"I believe as I think of it now, perhaps because it is a trip so accessible and possible from here, I think the trip to Honolulu one of the most completely restful. The ocean voyage upon the Pacific, which is as truly peaceful as its name implies, is absolutely without incident. Not an island, not an iceberg, not even a bird is hailed during the entire journey. There is nothing to distract the mind from perfect quietude. You are out of reach of telephones, away from newspapers and mail, cut as completely off from the cares of every day as though you were in the Arctic Circle, or had journeyed to the moon.

"I think California business men should make this trip more often. I think it their duty to their families as well as to themselves, to slip away from the cares of life and to allow their families to become acquainted with them. It would prolong the lives of all to do this; and I know of no better playground than Honolulu and its vicinity. The change of climate from that of Southern California to that of Hawaii is sufficient to prove beneficial and the atmosphere there is one of romance and indolence.

"The hotels are good, both in the city and at the popular seaside resort, Wikiki, which is reached via a beautiful beach drive. There is a hunting preserve at the edge of a great sugar plantation, which is a charming spot to visit. The native feast, a sort of barbecue, an outdoor feast, which is most interesting to witness. It is called the 'luau.' Here you are initiated into the mysteries of cocoanut as a food and of the native 'poi,' which is in no way related to the New England 'pie,' but is compounded from the paro root ounded fine and allowed to ferment. This is the staff of life to the island, much as rice is to Japan.

"One of the greatest benefits from foreign fare is the pleasure of returning to our own. A pretty custom of Hawaii is that of placing upon the back of the visitor's chair a wreath of native flowers called the 'leis.' This wreath also forms an important part of all festal occasions, when the natives toss it around each other's necks and use it much after the playful manner of confetti. Those people know how to play, and it is a lesson which we should go to them to learn, and as I have said, we should go more frequently."

HOGAN AT THE BAT.

By Del Reynolds.

There were signs of chastened spirits in the way that Hogan walked
There was milk of human kindness in the way that Hogan talked
A smile of Christian charity spread o'er his classic phiz
When Hap came back from 'Frisco where the President gave him his.

Gone the pride in Hogan's manner, as he passed the umpire by Gone the chip from off his shoulder, gone the blood from Hogan's eye
The said umpire, as he watched him, marveled much at what he saw
For a large and useful muzzle decorated Happy's jaw.

Ten thousand eyes were on him as he ambled to the plate,
Five thousand tongues were silent as we mused on Happy's fate,
Five thousand mouths dropped open when the umpire yelled, "Strike one,"
As we waited for a ruction, and the ruction didn't come.

The bleachers sat in silence, and the grand stand bowed its head
As they marveled at the silence and the things Hap hadn't said.

ACT II.

(Shaky lights and soft music.)

The smile is gone from Hogan's lips, his teeth are clenched with hate
And though he cannot say a word, he CAN gesticulate.

With a smile of conscious dignity, the umpire's visage shone,
He stilled the rising tumult and the hammer fest went on.
He signaled to the pitcher and when the play was through,
Dallied with his life insurance by bawling, "Ten for you."

Meanwhile a crazy Irishman was dancing on the plate
Biting mouthfuls from that muzzle with every word he ate,
The nigger on Hap's safety valve had a written guarantee,
But it busted all to pieces when the umpire fined Happy.

Somewhere in this favored world, that umpire's roaring yet,
Somewhere harsh words pursue him that he never can forget,
But wherever fans are gathered, roasting umpires, smoking ropes,
Wherever crowds are happy, counting on their pennant hopes,
To cap the tales of epic play and fill the baseball cup,
Some fan will quote what Hogan said when Graham's gag blew up.

Perfection Attained.

LIMIT IN BASE STEALING HAS BEEN REACHED, SAYS HAMILTON.

"BASE stealing has reached its limit," says Billy Hamilton, the famous old ball player.

"In my opinion base stealing has reached perfection so far as one man annexing an extra bag is concerned. New tricks are possible in the double steal or any other combination, depending largely on the character of the defense or where the ball is in play. Development must come in the defensive work, in breaking up these complicated steals. But it is now largely a case of arm and eye against the legs and dash of the runner.

"Worrying the pitcher, getting the lead off first, the quick start and slide into the second bag—all these things were pretty well doped out during the twelve-club National League—in fact, away back in that organization's infancy. Every year some chap bobs up who is more or less of a phenom in stealing, but it is fleetness and not anything new that makes him shine on the paths."

Deacon Phillippi, the veteran Pittsburgh pitcher, disagrees with Clark Griffith of Cincinnati, who declares batters can be "made" if they aren't "born." "Managers," confides the deacon, "can often help players to hit the ball better by offering suggestions relative to their position at the plate and their methods of swinging at the ball. Batsmen who draw away from the plate may learn to advance toward the ball and others who try to knock the cover off every time they swing may make more hits and assist their teams more in run getting by learning to just meet the ball. These things a manager can teach a player, but as a general proposition no system of instruction can make a good hitter out of a poor one.

"Good batters are like poets; they are born, not made. You can teach a man to field, but it is next to impossible to teach him how to bat, and there are times when a man's efforts to comply with instructions from his manager as to his style of hitting prove a detriment rather than a benefit. The average hitter does more effective work with the stick if he bats in a natural way, without any attempt to comply with any fixed rule as to how he shall stand and how he shall swing."

Can't Help It.

SOME HITTERS ARE UNABLE TO DODGE WHEN BALL APPROACHES.

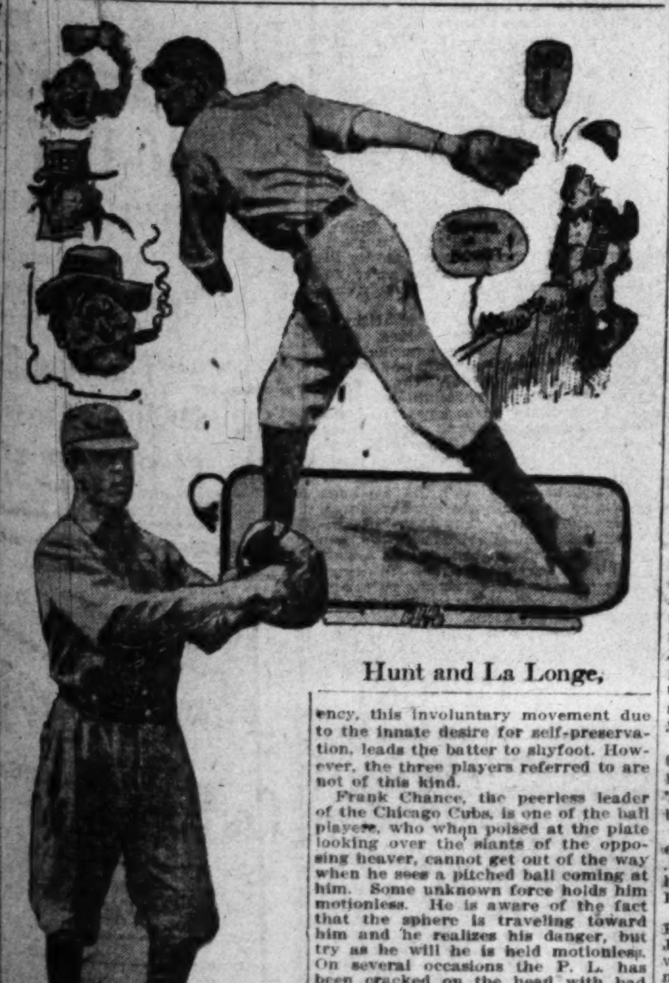
WHY is it that some people are so constituted that, when standing on a high building or at an upper story window, it is with only the greatest restraint that they keep themselves from jumping? Why this desire to fling one's self to certain destruction? There are other similar elements in other makeups that are no less certain to bring dire results.

One of these comes in baseball and no less than three of the real stars of the two major leagues are victims of a strange force that may ultimately lead them out of baseball forever.

Ordinarily when a batsman grabs up a bingle-getter and steps to the plate he is cautious about getting hit by one of the shoots that are served up to him. One that looks too close for comfort causes him to fall back and in hundreds of players this tendency, this involuntary movement due to the innate desire for self-preservation, leads the batter to shyfoot. However, the three players referred to are not of this kind.

Frank Chance, the peerless leader of the Chicago Cubs, is one of the ball players, who when poised at the plate looking over the slants of the opposing heaver, cannot get out of the way when he sees a pitched ball coming at him. Some unknown force holds him motionless. He is aware of the fact that the sphere is traveling toward him and he realizes his danger, but try as he will he is held motionless. On several occasions the P. L. has been cracked on the head with bad results.

Jake Stahl, the Boston American first sacker, has a stripe of the same whatever-it-is in his system. He is glued to the spot when the ball starts for him. He, too, feels chained to the exact position in which he stands, and several times he has suffered in consequence of this strange mesmerizing power the approaching ball has over him.



Hunt and La Longe,

Ouch!

SCORNFUL ENGLISH WOMAN TAKES AN AWFUL WALLOP AT AMERICA'S GAME.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

NOT long ago, I read in The Times the suggestion of some flippant young person who wanted to change, revise and generally muss up our revered game of cricket.

He intimated that baseball was such a paragon of a game that we ought to try to make cricket like it. He didn't hold out much encouragement that we would ever succeed; but he seemed to think it would be to us a spiritual uplift to strive, in our feeble insufficient way, to even stagger along the athletic by-path where once baseball had trod.

Well, since then, I have seen this subtle, fascinating, scientific game of baseball. I have seen just one game and it struck me as being about the most inane and ridiculous game that ever answered to the name of sport.

If I had not a lady-like reputation to sustain I should sum it all up in that all-embracing American word "Bum!"

Yes, my English brethren, it is just simply "bum." It can't hold a candle to cricket and before they talk of reforming cricket, (REFORMING CRICKET—YE GODS!) let them turn their irreverent attention nearer home and try to make baseball into a real game, inject a little dignified sport into it.

It is all noise and bluster. What astonished me was the nice intelligent crowd that went to witness and applaud such violent nothingness. I came to the conclusion that they just went to let off steam, for it appears that one can behave like gabbering lunatic on the grand stand and still be considered normal.

SUCH A PITY.

I was taken by an American friend who thinks baseball the be-all and end-all of the world. Directly he learned that I had never seen a baseball match his kind heart overflowed with pity. It was like never having seen Roosevelt, or never having tasted cantaloupes or something terrific like that.

All the way out he was telling me what an awfully scientific game it was, so scientific that none but highly trained and highly paid professionals can play it now with any degree of skill. He assurred me with shining eyes that I should be so enthusiastic that I should stand on my chair and wave my hat frantically and want to see baseball every day for ever after.

Well, first of all there is a ring marked off like hopscotch on a large scale. One man stands in the middle and does a Ruth St. Denis spring song dance, clasping the ball to his bosom, holding it at arm's length, caressing it and then hurling it from him in pretty petulance, the while he wears an expression of tense religious feeling, important arrogance and petty spite by turns.

Another man stands on a spot in a corner, weilding a funny looking weapon, a cross between an Indian club and a rolling pin. Just behind this one, a gorilla sort of creature in a muzzle crouches ready to snatch the ball away just when the man with the rolling pin thinks he is going to hit it. The man in the middle is called a pitcher. There are several other men dotted round the hopscotch ring, and the pitcher has the option of playing cockshy at any one of them, when he doesn't happen to be teasing the rolling pin.

Another personage, whom I shall call Radamanthus (the crowd called him all sorts of things,) and who also wears a muzzle, hovers round, and does funny little runs like the fairy in the pantomime, shouting ambiguous comments. My American friend says he is a most important part of the game, in fast, nothing is anything if he doesn't say so, and if he catches anyone putting their tongue out at him he can fine them five dollars. That's such a funny thing about Americans, they set up little tin despots in every community, and go out of their way to endow him with autocratic powers in their national game. Now in poor King-ridden England it is not a person, but the rules of the game that embody the highest authority.

From what I could gather this is where some of the science comes in. Radamanthus shouts "ball" after the gorilla has snatched it away from the rolling pin, or "strike" after the rolling pin has hit it, or at least tried to. Then whatever happens the crowd groans or roars. If the rolling pin hits the ball, which is evidently pretty rare, everybody gets so excited, and all the other men start running madly round the ring.

Over on one side there is a magic line drawn—and subtle witchcraft lingers here. A harmless looking man tands there and strikes attitudes. My American friend says it is awfully scientific and intricate. I should just think it is. Why, if that man scratches his nose, or twirls his moustache, or balances on one toe, or wiggles his third finger, it means—well, it means the whole jolly game! I remember doing a great conjuring trick with cards when I was about seven or thereabouts. I laid three cards on the table and then went out of the room, while somebody chose one of them. When I came back I looked at father, and if he wiggled the little finger on the right hand—yes, you've guessed it. Well, baseball is very much like that. A pretty game for the long winter evenings, if a little of the bluster could be left out.

HOW DISGUSTING.

A great feature of the game—more science—is for the man who wields the rolling pin to spit on his hands, then rub them in the dust—two rubs to one spit. This counts five and three over. Then he wipes them on his harem skirt and starts sawing the air with the rolling pin.

Oh, I nearly forgot the broom. I'm afraid I'm a little confused on this point, but I think my American friend said the broom was a mascot to help Radamanthus to know who had won.

A great hero seems to be one Hap Hogan. This is because he thoughtfully provides a little side show and brings a poor patient goat with him who never did any harm to any one. This ekes out the interest wonderfully.

I culled a few of the technical expressions, which are very illuminating. "Gee!" Oh, Gee Whiz!" "My, what a peach of a hit!" "An nobuddy ther ter catch it!" "A cracking good stop!" "Run, kid, oh, run!" "Where's the goat?" "Gee!" and so on, ad infinitum.

But the most preposterous thing of all—I can hardly bear to write it—there was no TEA. Can anybody imagine any decent, self-respecting game that leaves out an interval for tea? I thought it was coming when they changed sides, and began to furbish up my pretty tea-table talk. Instead—oh, oh, oh—they went right on playing, and my American friend stood me a bag of peanuts. You know those funny little nuts we take with us to the zoo at home for the monkeys and squirrels. Well, anyway, I ate some, I was so dangerously hungry, I had to.

Did we finish up at the Copper Kettle when we got back to town? No, my dear, we did not. My American friend never even thought of such a thing, but he knows I shall like baseball "real well" when I have mastered the scholarly science of the game.

Carolie Peale,

Wants Sluggers.

PITCHERS WHO CANNOT BAT PROVOKE CLARK GRIFFITH.

BROOKLYN (N. Y.) May 25.—"Give me pitchers who can hit the ball instead of fanning out weakly," says Clark Griffith, manager of the Cincinnati Reds. "I wish there were a few more pitchers available like the top notchers of twenty years ago. In those days a pitcher believed that he was hired to soak the ball as well as curve it, and he always did his best to get a hit.

"Pitchers who were weak hitters then were feeble simply because they didn't know how to swing the ash and connect, not because they didn't try to slam the pellet with all their might. Keefe, Welch, Ramsay and Jim Galvin were among the old-time pitchers who could not bat, but they tried all the time, and if one of them got a hit he was as proud as a kid just breaking into the big league.

"Pop Anson wouldn't hire a pitcher if the man couldn't hit, and some of his old pitchers—Luby, Gumbert, Thornton and Van Haltren—were bear cats with the stick.

"The old guide book will show that even your humble servant hit over .300 for Anson. John Clarkson could hit fairly well and so could Old Hoss Radbourne and Charley Ferguson.

"Then, too, Bobby Carruthers, Dave Foutz, Adonis Terry, Scott Stratton, Jack Stivetts, Ed. Crane and Al Maul were all there when it came to hammering the leather where the fielders weren't.

"The team that has a hard-hitting pitcher and a slugging catcher possesses a big advantage over its opponents. It is sending up nine wallopers to seven for the other side, which is hampered by two dead sure outs.

"The weak hitting of the average pitcher is due to the fact that in spending all his time developing his curves he usually neglects practice with the bat until it is too late. The pitcher, too, seems to think that when he is delivering the goods in the box nothing more is required of him. Hence his careless, indifferent air when he goes to the plate to bat."

CHANCE HOPES TO REGAIN OVERALL.

Orvill Overall probably will join the Cubs and pitch for them within the next month. Negotiations are now under way that may bring the big pitcher back to the team. Overall has announced that he will go East within a short ime and that he will make a visit with his old team mates. Beyond that, he said he had pitched two games of ball for a team at Angels' Camp, Cal., this season, and that his arm is better than it has been since the first of last June. Orvill claims that his curve ball is breaking as well as it ever did.

Overall did not intimate that he intends to return to the team to play, but the moment that Manager Chance heard that he was coming East negotiations were opened to get him back to the club. The chances are they will succeed.

The news came in a letter to Mordecai Brown announcing that the gold mine in which he and Overall are interested is panning out even better than was expected. Overall stayed in California this spring chiefly to see that the mining machinery was properly installed, and to aid in the opening of the vein and the financing of the company. Now the mill has sixty stamps working, and his presence is not vitally necessary, so he has decided to take a vacation and to go to Chicago with Mrs. Overall.

GREAT CROWD SEES MISS CAMPBELL WIN

Violet Hezlet Defeated in Semi-Finals.

Inhabitants are Startled by Strange Garb.

Champion to Play for Title of Scotland.

BY MURRAY FULLFORD.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

DUBLIN (Ireland) June 1.—Nearly 4000 spectators formed the gallery that followed Miss Dorothy Campbell and Miss Violet Hezlet in the final round of the nineteenth ladies' open championship golf tourney at Portrush, Ireland, in which Miss Campbell added the title of champion of Great Britain to that of champion of Canada and the United States. They were the most interesting figures, but Miss Cecil Leith (Carlisle) and Miss Mather (Tyneside,) ran them very close. Miss Dorothy Campbell is good looking in a very determined sort of way, but Miss Leith is downright pretty, and therefore secured a good deal of interest and applause that she barely deserved.

There were fifty competitors from all parts of the world, and the local inhabitants gazed in wonderment at the strange women in odd clothes and peculiar manners, with such strange speech, and above all with such strange and varied styles of play.

The games extended over a week, the curtain being rung up on the morning of the 15th, when the stroke competition preceding the championship took place. For a long time Miss Mather's steady score of 78 was the best in, but later Miss Cecil Leith made the remarkable return of 74. Seventy-eight was considered a fair par of the green.

The next morning the first round took place, the only sensations being the defeats of Mrs. Ross by Miss M. Temple, Miss D. Chambers by Mrs. Carrington Smith and Miss May Ormsby, the ex-Irish champion, by Miss L. Jackson, and Mrs. F. W. Brown by Miss Martin, as all of these ladies had been regarded as invulnerable.

The second and third rounds were played on Wednesday. The principal attraction of the second round was the match in which Miss Leith and Miss Gladys Ravenscourt, both splendid players, were pitted against each other. Their style is so much the same that it made the contest the more keen, and they played neck and neck all the way. They were even at the fourteenth, but Miss Leith gained the lead at the seventeenth, by holing her putt from the edge of the green, giving her 2. Miss Ravenscroft then ran down an eight-foot putt for three and the hole at the eighteenth, and so halved the round. Miss Leith unluckily missed a four-foot putt at the nineteenth, and she again made a weak putt at the twentieth, which was also halved. Still another half followed, and then Miss Leith, missing her drive from the twenty-second tee, Miss Ravenscroft won the hole and match.

In this match also Miss Elsie Suttee, the holder of the championship, had to meet Miss K. Stuart, the Scottish international, who started well by taking the lead at the third hole, after halving the first two. After that, however, the champion made the running all the way and won by 5 and 3.

THIRD ROUND.

Sixteen couples went out for the third round, and in this heat some splendid play was witnessed. Miss Pooley from British Columbia, whose style won much admiration, beat Miss Steele, 4 and 3.

Miss Bertha Thompson beat young Miss Vida Collins of New Zealand and Miss Mather (Tyneside) demonstrated her 'metal by beating Scotland's third player, Miss Neill Fraser.

The fourth and fifth rounds were played on Thursday, a sensation being caused in the match between the ex-champion, Miss Bertha Thompson, and Miss Pooley; Miss Pooley being in brilliant form, except at the second hole, where she took eight. She was out in 42 and stood 5 up; another win at the tenth, and the game seemed over. She made a mistake at the eleventh, found the big bunker and lost the hole. Then a faulty approach at the next further reduced her score. At the next two holes, Miss Thompson took only one putt and won seven holes in succession, finally entering the fifth round by 1 up.

A curious coincidence was that Miss Dorothy Campbell and Mrs. Martin opposed one another in these two met in the finals at Chicago last autumn. Miss Campbell began the competition upon her arrivad with her weakest play, and fears were expressed on all sides that she would be a comparative failure, but her play steadily improved from day to day, until she succeeded in playing herself into such remarkably good form that it amazed the gallery.

In the fifth round Miss Hezlet beat Miss Thompson by 3 and 4, Miss Mather beat Miss Boyd at the nineteenth hole, Miss Campbell beat Miss Grant Suttee (the holder) by 2 and 1, and Mrs. Bourne beat Miss Barry by 2 and 1. The most exciting feature of this round was Miss Campbell's win, which was wrenched from the holder by steady and resourceful play. Both are probably the most finished lady golfers of the day, and the large gallery was delighted with the fine display of skill. Both were out in 42, Miss Campbell turning 1 up. Miss Suttee was stymied at the tenth and lost a hole, but squared the match at the twelfth.

The totals of the match were: Miss Campbell, out 42, home 35; Miss Suttee, out 42, home 36. Miss Hezlet created surprise by beating Miss Thompson, and Miss Mather, who made such remarkable strides to begin with, finished up by only beating Miss Boyd at the nineteenth hole.

SEMI-FINALS.

The day for the semi-finals was bright, but windy. Miss Hezlet beat Miss Mather 2 and 1, and Miss Campbell beat Mrs. Bourne 2 and 1.

Both matches attracted extremely large crowds, Miss Hezlet and Miss Mather being first out. Miss Mather's long game is exceptionally fine but she is weak on the greens, and on more than one occasion wasted her opportunities. She improved somewhat in the homeward half, gaining a brilliant four in the eleventh, lost the twelfth but a couple of fours gave her the next two holes. A half followed, leaving 1 down and 3 to play. Then again her weakness on the green became apparent, a missed putt for half at the sixteenth, and half at the next, gave Miss Hezlet the game 2 and 1. The homeward scores were: Miss Hezlet 35, Miss Mather 34.

The other match between Miss Campbell and Mrs. Bourne seemed a foregone conclusion, Mrs. Bourne being a very indifferent putter. Miss Campbell, who had distinctly found herself by then, stood 4 up at the ninth.

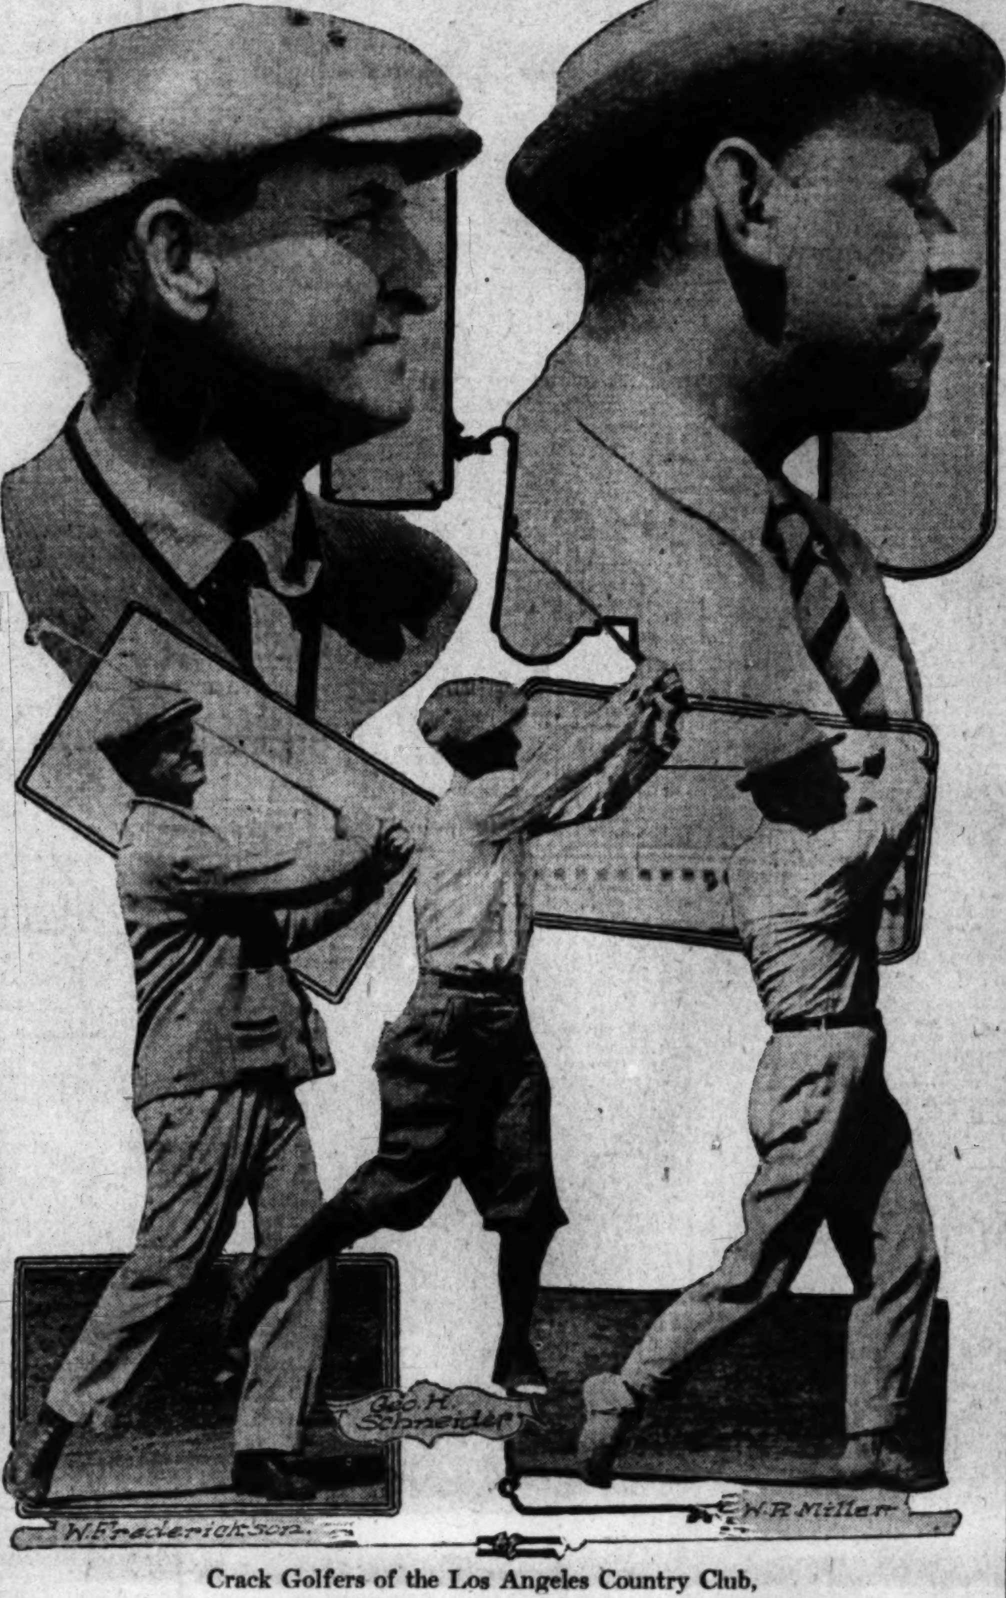
The out scores were: Miss Campbell 43, Mrs. Bourne 49.

The homeward play was, however, more even. Miss Campbell was 5 up at the tenth with a good four, but after halving the eleventh, she lost the twelfth through a bad shot from the tee. Another shot was followed by a further lost hole at the fourteenth, where she topped her second. At the next hole Mrs. Bourne robbed Miss Campbell of what appeared to be a certain half, by running down a twenty-yard putt for the hole, reducing her deficit by 2. Mrs. Bourne placed her tee shot within five feet of the pin in the seventeenth, and narrowly missed her put, a half giving Miss Campbell the game by 2 to 1. The home scores were, Miss Campbell 38, Mrs. Bourne 37.

In the final, Miss Campbell beat Miss Hezlet by 3 and 2. Nearly 4000 spectators followed this match and excitement was intense. Local sympathies were with Miss Hezlet, who for a time looked like capturing the day. It was even play, until a missed second at the fourth hole by Miss Campbell gave Miss Hezlet the lead, and Miss Campbell lost a chance at the fifth by failing with a yard putt for 3. The sixth was halved in 4, but Miss Campbell unexpectedly squared at the seventh. She took the eighth in 4, where Miss Hezlett putted to strongly, but the match was again square at the turn. Miss Campbell assumed the lead at the tenth, and increased it at the eleventh, was 3 up at the fourteenth, where after halving, she stood dormy. In playing the odd at the seventh she laid her opponent a dead stymie, which gave her the necessary half and the championship.

She now holds the championships for Great Britain, United States and Canada, and she will compete for the Scottish next week on the famous St. Andrew's links.

The trophies were afterwards presented by Col. McCalmont, and his speech wound up by asking for three cheers for the over-seas visitors, which was most cordially responded to by the immense crowd.



Crack Golfers of the Los Angeles Country Club, who are to be found on the links almost every Saturday and sometimes in between.

CRACK DISTANCE RUNNERS MATCHED.

Hans Holmer, the conqueror of Gusta Ljungstrom, the great little Swedish runner, in their fifteen-mile race, and Billy Queal, who beat the wonderful Alfred Shrubb of England over the same course, are matched to go fifteen miles at Madison Square Garden, New York, for the middle-long-distance championship of the world.

The date of their abbreviated Marathon has not yet been set, but it will take place within the next few weeks, it is said.

Holmer and Queal were formerly paired in the international team races. Each man assisted the other in his training. But now it is different. Each man maintains his own training quarters and has his own band of camp followers. The two are so evenly matched that it would be vain to attempt a prediction as to the result of their forthcoming match race.

Give 'Em Time.

AMERICAN GOLFERS ARE GRADUALLY OVERTAKING CROSS-POND RIVALS.

SINCE Willie Dunn secured the honor of winning the first open golf championship of the United States at St. Andrew's links in 1894, eighteen tournaments for the title have been held, resulting in an unbroken string of successes for foreign-born professionals.

Ten years of play for the western open championship found British-born professionals monopolizing the top position and it was not until Charles Evans, Jr., of the Edgewater Club of Chicago, won the event at the Beverly Country Club last year that the long string of successes scored by the experts from over the pond was broken. Evans, however, is an amateur and the chance for some homebred professional to be the first to cross the championship threshold in either the national, western or metropolitan events still is open.

It was not to be expected that the native sons could cope with those from the cradle of the game during the early stages of the sport in this country, but from the thousands of youngsters who "toted" clubs it was only fair to expect some would develop into players of championship class.

NEW PLAYERS PROMISING.

Last year in the national event at Philadelphia, Jack McDermott, a 19-year-old player from Merchantville, N. J., stepped at a bound into fame by finishing second after a playoff of a triple tie with Alec Smith of Wykagyl, and his brother, MacDonald Smith, of the Claremont Club, Cal., Alec winning the title. McDermott played wonderful golf, his rounds being 74, 74, 75 and 75. A little later, in the Metropolitan championship, McDermott again finished second to Alec Smith, being beaten by two strokes, Smith having 301. In this event McNamara had 315.

Jack Croke, a New Yorker by birth, but then with the Kent Country Club of Grand Rapids, finished third in the western championship held at the Skokie Country Club in 1909. Willie Anderson, the North Berwick Scotchman, winning with his record-breaking score of 288, the best ever made over a 6000-yard course. Stewart Gardner, the veteran Scot, was third, with 297, three strokes ahead of Croke.

All of these performances were accomplished in fields containing many fine players and serve to demonstrate that the day of the American-born player is coming.

Other American professionals of note are George O'Neil of the Beverly Country Club of Chicago and Walter Fovargue of the Skokie Country Club, both former pupils of Joe Mitchell, the Cleveland Scotchman. In addition to being fine players both these men are rated as among the leading instructors of the country.

Thirty-two thousand three hundred and fifty is the mileage of the thirty-five-horse-power Mitchell touring car which B. A. Haraszthy of Colegrove has just driven back from San Diego. According to Haraszthy, this is his twenty-first round trip to San Diego in this car, besides several round trips to San Francisco.

Although very little of this mileage has been made on the city streets, Haraszthy has never had any serious trouble, and over the country roads has never had a breakdown or had to be towed.

ONE ON FIELDING STILSON.

Fielding J. Stilson, broker, member of the City Board of Education and golf player, was short-changed out of a round of refreshments at the Los Angeles Country Club yesterday afternoon by L. T. Bradford. It was so easy that Bradford says he was almost ashamed to do it. It happened this way.

Stilson has been breaking into the golk game during the last year. He is very enthusiastic over the sport and when he puts up an unusually good game or pulls off anything that even approaches fancy work, he is not at all backward about letting his friends know how well he is getting along.

Yesterday afternoon Stilson started about the course. He was feeling fine and was in rare form. He made the first hole, which is a difficult bogey five, in four strokes. That was enough to tickle Norman Macbeth or Sir Henry Newton. But wait! The second hole he negotiated in three strokes, one less than Col. Bogey's mark, which itself is hard. It doesn't make any difference what Stilson did in getting around the remainder of the course. Seven strokes for the first two holes were a good afternoon's work in themselves.

Stilson was elated when he reached the dressing room and with both feet on the loud pedal announced that he would buy refreshments for the crowd if any member of it would equal his scores that afternoon for the first two holes. Then Bradford butted in!

"Can you beat seven?" he asked.

Stilson was non-plussed to learn that anybody had equalled his record. But he was game and the bunch trotted to the dispensary where Stilson came through in regulation style.

After everybody had had enough, from Stilson's standpoint, Bradford said:

"You know I didn't say I made seven; I merely wanted to know if you could beat it."

Stilson tried to say something—but curtain!

NEW LOCOMOBILE MODELS COMING.

STYLISH NINETEEN-TWELVE CARS SOON TO ARRIVE.

Manager Cotton Leaves for the Factory to Help Start the Cars Toward Los Angeles—Designs Are Handsome and Stylish and Plans Are Ornate.

Charles M. Cotton, manager for the Los Angeles Motor Car Company, makes the announcement that the first of the new 1912 Locomobile models is on the market, and that a demonstrator is on the way to Los Angeles. Manager Cotton left last week for the factory, but will return in time to show the new demonstrator not later than June 15.

This is to be the most luxurious and serviceable motor in the higher-priced cars ever turned out, according to a factory letter to the local agent. "Our aim in 1912," the manufacturers wrote, "is to make the Locomobile the most comfortable and the best finished car in America, and for this reason we are putting forth every effort to make our cars as luxurious and as perfect in detail as possible."

A number of alterations have been made in the motor to increase the quiet operation of the timing gears. The crank case is new in design and extends farther forward to permit of a new method of carrying the gears. The radiators are enameled to match the bonnet, and by a new process that is intended to preserve the high luster and polish.

The rear seat cushions and back are covered with upholstering ten inches thick, making them as restful and soft as the easiest library chair. The seats are so arranged that the passengers sit low in the car, the high seat and back producing a feeling of security as well as security. The tonneau doors are in tufted leather. The woodwork near the bottom of the tonneau is covered with carpet to prevent scratching. The front seat panel is flush with the side of the body. This makes the body smooth from end to end and increases the beauty of line, and also gives a greater capacity to the gasoline tank. The weight of the car, finished, ready for the road, is only 4000 pounds.

A sole leather magneto cover is part of the regular equipment. The front and rear fenders are two inches wider, giving greater protection. The running boards are also two inches wider. The spring chairs are now clamped to the rear axle tube instead of being fitted with lubricated bearings.

Besides the seven-passenger touring car, the five-passenger torpedo, the four-passenger torpedo, the seven-passenger limousine and the seven-passenger landaulet, there has been added a seven-passenger berline model. Besides the "48" six-cylinder, the company is ready with its "30" four-cylinder cars for 1912. These latter are also made in six styles.

INTERNATIONAL GOLF UNION IS IN SIGHT.

A step that is bound to come in time, that is a union between the golf authorities of this country and Great Britain is heralded by the motion to be put before the meeting of the Golfing Union of Ireland at Portsmouth June 14. It is worded thus:

"That, in view of the recent action of the so-called Championship Green Selection Committee with regard to Ireland, and that of the Royal and Ancient Club's Rules Committee as regards America on the Schenectady question, the Irish Union approach the Welsh Union with the object of considering the desirability of forming an international board for the arrangement of championships and the regulation of the rules of golf."

This is most desirable, and will in all probability mean that America will be included in the International Board. As the game grows in popularity on this side of the water, and more and more good golfers go to the expense of traveling to England to compete for the championship, it stands to reason that if the royal and ancient game is to be kept within its traditions, there must be a union between the countries.

It will not be long before an international cup will be presented by some enthusiast, and then it will be necessary for an arrangement whereby home-and-home matches will be played, one each year in each country. For the good of the game an international fixture would be important, for it would mean greater keenness and therefore better golf.

LYNCH PRAISES COLLEGE PLAYERS.

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) June 8.—President Thomas J. Lynch, of the National League of Baseball Clubs, believes that the college baseball player who demonstrates his ability to play fast ball is a valuable asset to such league, and in an interview in the Yale News gives his reasons.

Lynch says, among other things, that the college players "bring with them from the college campus that spirit of true sportsmanship and determination to win which they have earned in college. Through discipline and educational advantages they are particularly amenable to suggestions and easy to manage. As a rule they come to the clubs in excellent physical condition and understand thoroughly both the necessity and the methods necessary to maintain such form. Their whole career has been of instruction, which enables them to grasp the finer points in baseball as played in the big leagues and the futility of attempting to transgress the rules and regulations laid down to preserve the integrity of the game."

The Fleetest Miler.

JOHN PAUL JONES, STUDENT AND ATHLETE, FADES FAME OF SEAMAN.

ITHACA (N. Y.) June 10.—Another John Paul Jones has written his name in letters of gold on history's pages—John Paul Jones, student and athlete of Cornell College, Ithaca, N. Y.

The Jones of today has proved himself the premier mile runner of the world and his name has become a household byword wherever the great American press has entry.

John Paul Jones is a mere youth, just turned twenty years. He weighs 148 pounds. It is not so many years ago that his family physician in Washington, his home town, looked at him sorrowfully, felt his pulse, tested his lungs and shook his head hopelessly. "He hasn't many month of life," was the doctor's verdict. An athletic course of treatment was suggested and this peerless athlete of today bears little resemblance to the stoopedover, hollow-cheeked weakling of a short time ago.

At home he was always an excellent student. He prepared for college at Exeter, where he established an enviable reputation as a middle-distance runner. Despite the fact that both the Harvard and Yale scouts had their weather eye out for the lad he headed for the college on the shores of Lake Cayuga.

He has been entered in three intercollegiate contests this season and has won the mile in each affair.

In the big meeting at Cambridge recently he established a new amateur world's record for the mile. His time was 4:15 2-5, a fifth of a second faster than that made by Tom Conneff at Travers Island, N. Y., in August, 1895. When Conneff ran the mile in 4:15 3-5 he ran his first half in 2:08 flat. The speed of Jones can best be appreciated when it is realized that he ran the last 440 yards of his mile in 1:00 1-5. The professional record for a mile is 4:12¾, made by W. G. George in England over five years ago.

Jones is the only man in the world today that looms up as having a possible chance to lower this professional record. After doing his record-breaking mile stunt the Ithacan admitted that he felt very tired, and his half-mile epoch-making victory which followed was truly remarkable.

Ending Easy Money Concerns.

In the last year the Postoffice Department has run to earth and put out of business over eighty get-rich-quick concerns and these eighty concerns fleeced the American public out of $100,000,000. It is probable that the government can accomplish a great deal more; but the work done by the Postal Department is necessarily restricted t a fraudulent usage of the mails. There are other pitfalls from which you must protect yourself.

Today little advertising is done and the sucker lists are almost always used. The mails are not used nearly so much as formerly and agents, sent from town to town, are the means of separating the innocent victim from his hoard. Men of standing and responsibility are made use of in many towns and they can often be depended upon to help fleece their neighbors for a commission of 25 per cent. In many cases, however, they are themselves the innocent victims of some master agent who has been sent to appoint them.—[Metropolitan Magazine.

Ryan Skies Ball Against Right Field Wall.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) June 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Stung by two successive defeats handed them by the Angels, McCredie's Beavers went after Elmer Thorsen from the start of a beautiful bang affair at the Vaughn-street lot today and defeated the visitors, 8 to 2.

It was a game brimful of heavy hitting, and the extra base hits in the summary do not indicate all of the long clouts scored by the batsmen, for Buddy Ryan almost duplicated Pete Daley's homer by lacing one high against the right-field wall, which would have gone over had the ball raised a foot higher in its flight This happened in the eighth inning and scored Rodgers, who had tripled to left, but netted Ryan only one base, as Bernard took the ball on the rebound and held the batter at the first sack.

Portland got busy with Thorsen in the first inning, though it was his own wild heave of a bunt in the effort to catch Rodgers at third which allowed that worthy and Ryan to tally in the opening inning. With two out in the second inning Chadbourne drove a pretty safety to center, sending in Koestner, who had forced Murray at second and then stole third. In the fifth Krueger and Rapps doubled after two men were out, and Sheehan's single combined to register two more runs for the Beavers.

In the sixth singles by Murray and Chadbourne, followed by Rodgers's two-bagger, tallied two more runs and the final ace acquired by Portland came in the eighth as detailed.

Pete Daley, first man up in the fourth, homered for the Angels, and in the fifth the visitors landed on Koestner for three hits and another run, whereupon McCredie removed Koestner and substituted Seaton, which ended the run getting for the visiting bunch. At the time the Angels were only one run behind.

When Ceaton went on the hill there were two out and two on the sacks, and Koestner had pitched three balls to Daley. Seaton failed to get the first one over, and Daley walked, filling the bases, but Howard missed a chance to be a hero for the visiting nine when his pop fly to Rogers, ending the inning. After that Seaton was invincible, though when Metzger opened the sixth with a hit McCredie sent Ferd Hinkle and Bill Steen to warm up. Hinkle has been secured from the Seattle club in exchange for Fullerton, McCredie completing the deal with Dugdale yesterday. Hinkle is left-handed and will be used in his first game against Vernon at Los Angeles next week.

GERMAN AVIATORS FALL TO DEATH.

[Associated Press, Night Report.]

JOHANNISTHAL (Germany) June 9.—Herr Schendel, who on Tuesday established a German altitude record of 6594 feet in an aeroplane, fell this evening with his mechanician, Voss, and both were instantly killed. Schendel was trying to eclipse the world's altitude record with a passenger.

The aviator, who was practically a beginner, rose in a Dorner monoplane and had reached a height of 6650 feet when the monoplane assumed a vertical position and it is believed that Schendel was trying to glide to earth with his motor shut off.

So great was the velocity of the fall that the prow of the machine was buried in the earth. The bodies of Schendel and Voss were frightfully mangled.

Nothing to It.

QUAKERS FAIL TO GET A HIT.

MIDDOUGH OF LONG BEACH HAS OPPONENTS AT HIS MERCY.

Contest for the Championship of County League Is One-sided Affair in Which Beach Town Pitcher Is the Whole Show—Whittier Puts Up Poor Game in Field.

Lorin Middough, the star twirler of the Long Beach High School, pitched a no-hit, no-run game against Whittier High at Baer Park yesterday afternoon. Not satisfied with this remarkable performance, he swung the "willow" for four hits out of six times at the bat, one of which, in the first inning, was for three bags and scored three runs. Long Beach won, 16 to 0, and took the championship of the city section of the County League.

Oliver, who was in the box for the Quaker City aggregation, was given miserable support at critical periods of the game, and this took the heart out of him. He fanned nine men, but his infield played rotten ball and threw the game away with their errors.

The victory places Long Beach one peg nearer the championship of Southern California. Manager Darby of the beach team is trying to arrange a game with Santa Ana for the Southern California championship. This game will probably be pulled off in the near future. Score:

FRANCE THE MECCA OF MEN WHO FLY.

Nearly Million Dollars Offered in Prizes for Flights.

Some of Feats Required Uncommonly Difficult.

Good Money to be Picked Up In England and Russia.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PARIS, May 31.—It is in France that the airman will have to look for the big prizes this year. No less than $850,000 has already been offered here by private individuals interested in the problem of the flying machine and by the French government for flights during the next few months.

Never before has such an alluring prospect opened up before the air pilots and it is probable that as the season advances and enthusiasm grows added sums will be forthcoming.

On the whole the summer should go a long way toward removing the grounds for the oft-repeated assertion that, large as the prizes have been in the past, few if any of the more prominent pioneers in the sport have recovered the money they sunk in experiments.

Of the enormous total that awaits the coming of the man bird in this country, $240,000 is ogered by the French government. This seems to be the one country that is fully alive to the possibilities of the heavier-than-air machine in warfare and it is losing no time in establishing a useful lead in the knowledge that is gained only by incessant experience.

Unfortunate accidents, like the death of Maurice Berteaux, the late Minister of War, and the serious injury of the Premier do not seem to dampen the ardor of the government or of the people.

In no other country in the world is the public at large so "aeroplane mad" as it is in France. The 160,000 persons who gathered at Issy-les-Moulineaux to watch the start of the recent Paris-Madrid aeroplane race furnish an evidence of the popular interest. If further evidence were needed it is but necessary to turn to the enormous sums of money that are offered by private individuals for races of various descriptions.

OPEN TO ALL.

The $240,000 offered by the government is open only to military aeroplanes but papers like Le Petite Parisien" and Le Journal" are okering equally large sums that are open to the world. Nor is the prize giving confined to these papers; fully a dozen have hung up rich purses. A total of $205,000 is offered by newspapers alone in France. Private enthusiasts and firms interested in the science of aviation, not to be outdone by the newspapers and the government, have offered as much as both together.

It is a healthy sign of the times that a large proportion of this money is offered for races that will demonstrate the reliability of engine and aeroplane. Long distance races are attracting by far the greatest attention. The most important of those planned is the race around the capitals of Western Europe. A start is to be made from Paris and the competitors will try to fly to Brussels, thence to London and back to this city.

It was at first intended to take in Berlin but public opinion in France opposed it and that item of the arrangements was omitted. It is difficult to see how such an extensive journey can be made by an aeroplane in the present stage of the development of the science of flight, but the experiment, with its bare possibility of a successful conclusion, has many of the elements of good sportsmanship.

COMES IN HANDY.

Although England does not offer much in the way of money prizes when compared with the open-handed generosity of France, still there are some useful sums to be picked up across the channel during the coming summer. A bag of $50,000 has been offered by the Daily Mail for a 1000-mile circuit of Great Britain. Competitors are to start from Brooklands, near London, on Saturday, July 22, and the contest comes to a close on August 5.

The course is from Brooklands to Hendon, 20 miles; from Hendon to Edinburgh, 343 miles; from Edinburgh to Bristol, 283 miles; from Bristol to Brighton, 214 miles; and from Brighton to London, 40 miles. This race probably will bring out a strong contingent of English pilots as well as many of the continental celebrities, attracted by the big purse.

It is only necessary to remember the excitement aroused by the Daily Mail London-to-Manchester race, a couple of years ago, in which Grahame White, although a loser, first came to the front, to be sure that there will be plenty of enthusiasm.

England is to be the scene of the race for the Gordon Bennett Cup this year. As it was carried off by Grahame White last year, England holds the cup for the time being. There should be a strong international flavor to this race, and as it is to be held on July 1, only three weeks before the 1000-mile circuit race, many of the competitors will probably stay over for the latter event.

Although the event starts in France and the prizes are being put up in this country, England can claim a considerable part in the over-sea circuit race. The contestants will attempt to fly from Calais to Dover, then to Folkestone and back to this country, landing at Boulogne.

AERIAL TOURING.

In Russia an aerial touring race is being organized and the fortunate man who completes it and wins will carry off a prize of $100,000. Germany is more modest in her encouragement of aeroplaning, preferring her Zeppelins, despite their unfortunate history. A comparatively small prize of $40,000 has been offered for the winner of an aeroplane touring race.

Minor prizes are offered all over the continent, and the airmen on this side of the Atlantic, both native and visiting, can be busy from May to October. On the continent and in Great Britain, almost $1,250,000 in prizes already has been hung up, and although a large part of it is offered for feats that look well-nigh impossible, aviators should be considerably richer than they are now when next autumn rolls around.

But with the enormous increase in the value of the prizes that are being offered, aeroplane manufacturing companies are going in for racing to an extent that almost excludes the bona-fide amateur. Most of the well-known pilots are in the employ of these firms, and really get but a [illegible] perecntage of the purses they win, in addition to a regular weekly salary. A real amateur has to have a good-sized bank account to compete successfully with the big companies that are out to gobble all the prizes in sight. It is only men like Armstrong Drexel who can do so, and the true amateur has almost disappeared from first-class prize competitions.

For the Year.

HARRISON APPOINTS COMMITTEES FOR AERO CLUB OF CALIFORNIA.

GREAT preparations are being made by George B. Harrison, the newly-elected president of the Aero Club of California, for aviation advances in the year 1911-12. Harrison, who has been a member of the Executive Committee of the National Council of the Aero clubs of America for the last year and is considered one of the best authorities on aeronautics in the West, has several plans up his sleeve which, when completed and put into use, will advance the science here.

The following committees were appointed yesterday by President Harrison, for the ensuing twelve months:

Membership—Raymond I. Blakeslee, Los Angeles; E. Roger Stearns, Los Angeles; Ed R. Maier, Los Angeles; Leon Escallier, Los Angeles; William Stevens, Los Angeles; Glenn L. Martin, Santa Ana; Frank T. Searight, San Diego; E. H. Earle, Pomona; James R. Ricketts, Long Beach; Harvey H. Hinde, Riverside; Louis Mortimer, Los Angeles; James R. Townsend, Los Angeles; E. J. Campbell, Pasadena.

House—Charles F. Walsh, M. C. Tunison, Mrs. H. LaV. Twining, R. S. Stratton, Charles Forman.

Entertainment—L. P. Barrett, Earle Remington, C. H. Temple, L. K. Freeman, F. G. Calkins.

Technical and Contest — H. LaV. Twining, H. S. Dosh, W. S. Eaton, Charles E. Rilliet, Buel H. Green.

Financial and Auditing—J. J. Slavin, W. H. Leonard, M. H. Gallegher, Charles Skoglund.

Investigating—R. C. Hamlin, C. H. Day, W. B. Cannon, W. H. Killner, Alfred Solano.

Member National Council of Aero Clubs of America—Earle Remington; alternate member, Ernest La Rue Jones.

New York Representative Committee—E. L. Jones, T. A. Hill, F. E. Moskovics.

Foreign Representatives — London, R. J. H. Hope; Paris, Louis Paulhan.

PART OF PLANS.

In aviation meets many accidents have been caused by gusts of wind forcing the aeroplanes against pylons when the operators have tried to cut sharp corners. According to the latest reports from France, soldiers were stationed about the course instead of the former markings, and the results have been most satisfactory.

It being impossible to obtain soldiers to act as observers for the meets held here, Secretary Van M. Griffith of the Aero Club of California has been selected to form a signal company for the local club and make a specialty of this part of the work.

The following rules have been drawn up and over a dozen applications have already been received by the secretary for membership in the company.

The signal company is to consist of at least sixteen men, divided up into four squads of four men each.

All work shall be done under the supervision of a captain, who shall be elected annually.

The captain shall appoint his officers, which will consist of two lieutenants and two sergeants. These officers will work with their respective squads and shall be held responsible for the actions of those under them. The complete company will be divided into two parts of two squads each under the direction of lieutenants.

The two most efficient squads will be directed by lieutenants, while the less efficient teams will come under the direction of the sergeants.

The Meyer system of signaling used by the United States army and navy will be used for the alphabet, numerals, abbreviations and conventional signals. If it is found necessary several other conventional signals pertaining to this line of work may be added.

Practice of at least two hours each month will be expected of the members.

All members will be expected to do actual service from five to ten days each year.

It is planned to camp at intervals during the summer months at any place that shall be decided upon by a vote of the members.

TOM MORRIS GOLF TOURNEY THIS WEEK.

Thursday will be a big day at golf clubs of the Western Gold Association, which includes about one hundred and fifty clubs west of New York. The annual play for the Tom Morris trophy is to be held, and it is expected that nearly every member will put an eight-man team in the field to do honor to the memory of the grand old man of St. Andrew's.

The Los Angeles Country Club has sent in a list of sixteen players, from whom the team will be chosen, as required by the rules that govern the play. The team is not to be chosen until Wednesday.

Last year the Los Angeles club finished first with 34 down on par, but was disqualified on account of not having conformed to certain preliminary requirements. As a result of the disqualification, the Oakmont Club of Pittsburgh, the team of which finished with 41 down, was awarded the splendid trophy.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Freddie Welsh, the one-time holder of the English lightweight title, who turned that honor over to Matt Wells after their match in London several months ago, arrived tonight on the Santa Fe Overland. Freddie looks fit to box within a few days, if the match had to be set for an early date.

Not only has he been doing considerable work in New York since he came across from England two months ago, but he met a friend in the shape of a Welsh baggage-master aboard the train, and one end of the baggage car was turned into temporary training quarters, where he worked the pulleys, used the dumb bells, shadow boxed and did floor exercises to his heart's content.

The work shows in his face, for he is well down to weight and unquestionably close to the 134 pounds that he claims for himself.

While Welsh is primarily here to box Matty Baldwin, he has an eye on the lightweight throne, and announced tonight he is prepared to post $5000 to go as a side bet that he can beat Ad Wolgast or the winner of the Wolgast-Moran match on the Fourth of July.

It is possible that Welsh, after beating Baldwin will go to Los Angeles to meet Johnny McCarthy of San Francisco, before McCarey's club. McCarey has suggested June 27 for the bout, but, as that will only be a few days after the San Francisco match on the 23rd, Welsh is anxious to have the Los Angeles date postponed until the Fourth of July. If that is done, he will accept.

He will open his camp at the beach tomorrow, and will start boxing just as soon as he can pick up a couple of likely partners to help him out.

JAPANESE TREE THAT GROWS

Is Several Hundred Years Old and Emits Nightly Sounds That Resemble Human Tones.

New York Herald:] Another of the many etxraordinary stories with which the vernacular newspapers fill their columns daily has just found its way into print. It is about the discovery of a tree which nightly emits sounds resembling human groans.

The account is quite circumstantial. It is to the effect that the tree is an enoki, something akin to the oak, this particular specimen standing in the garden of one Mr. Osawa at Nishiyashiro.

The tree is several hundred years old and so large that it requires the outstretched arms of five adults completely to embrace its trunk.

In the last few years this tree has acquired the habit of groaning at night for a certain stated season, i. e., from the beginning of winter till the cuckoo begins to make itself heard. The same phenomenon has been noted this year, the ancient tree having groand regularly every evening since early in December. Crowds are said to assemble nightly

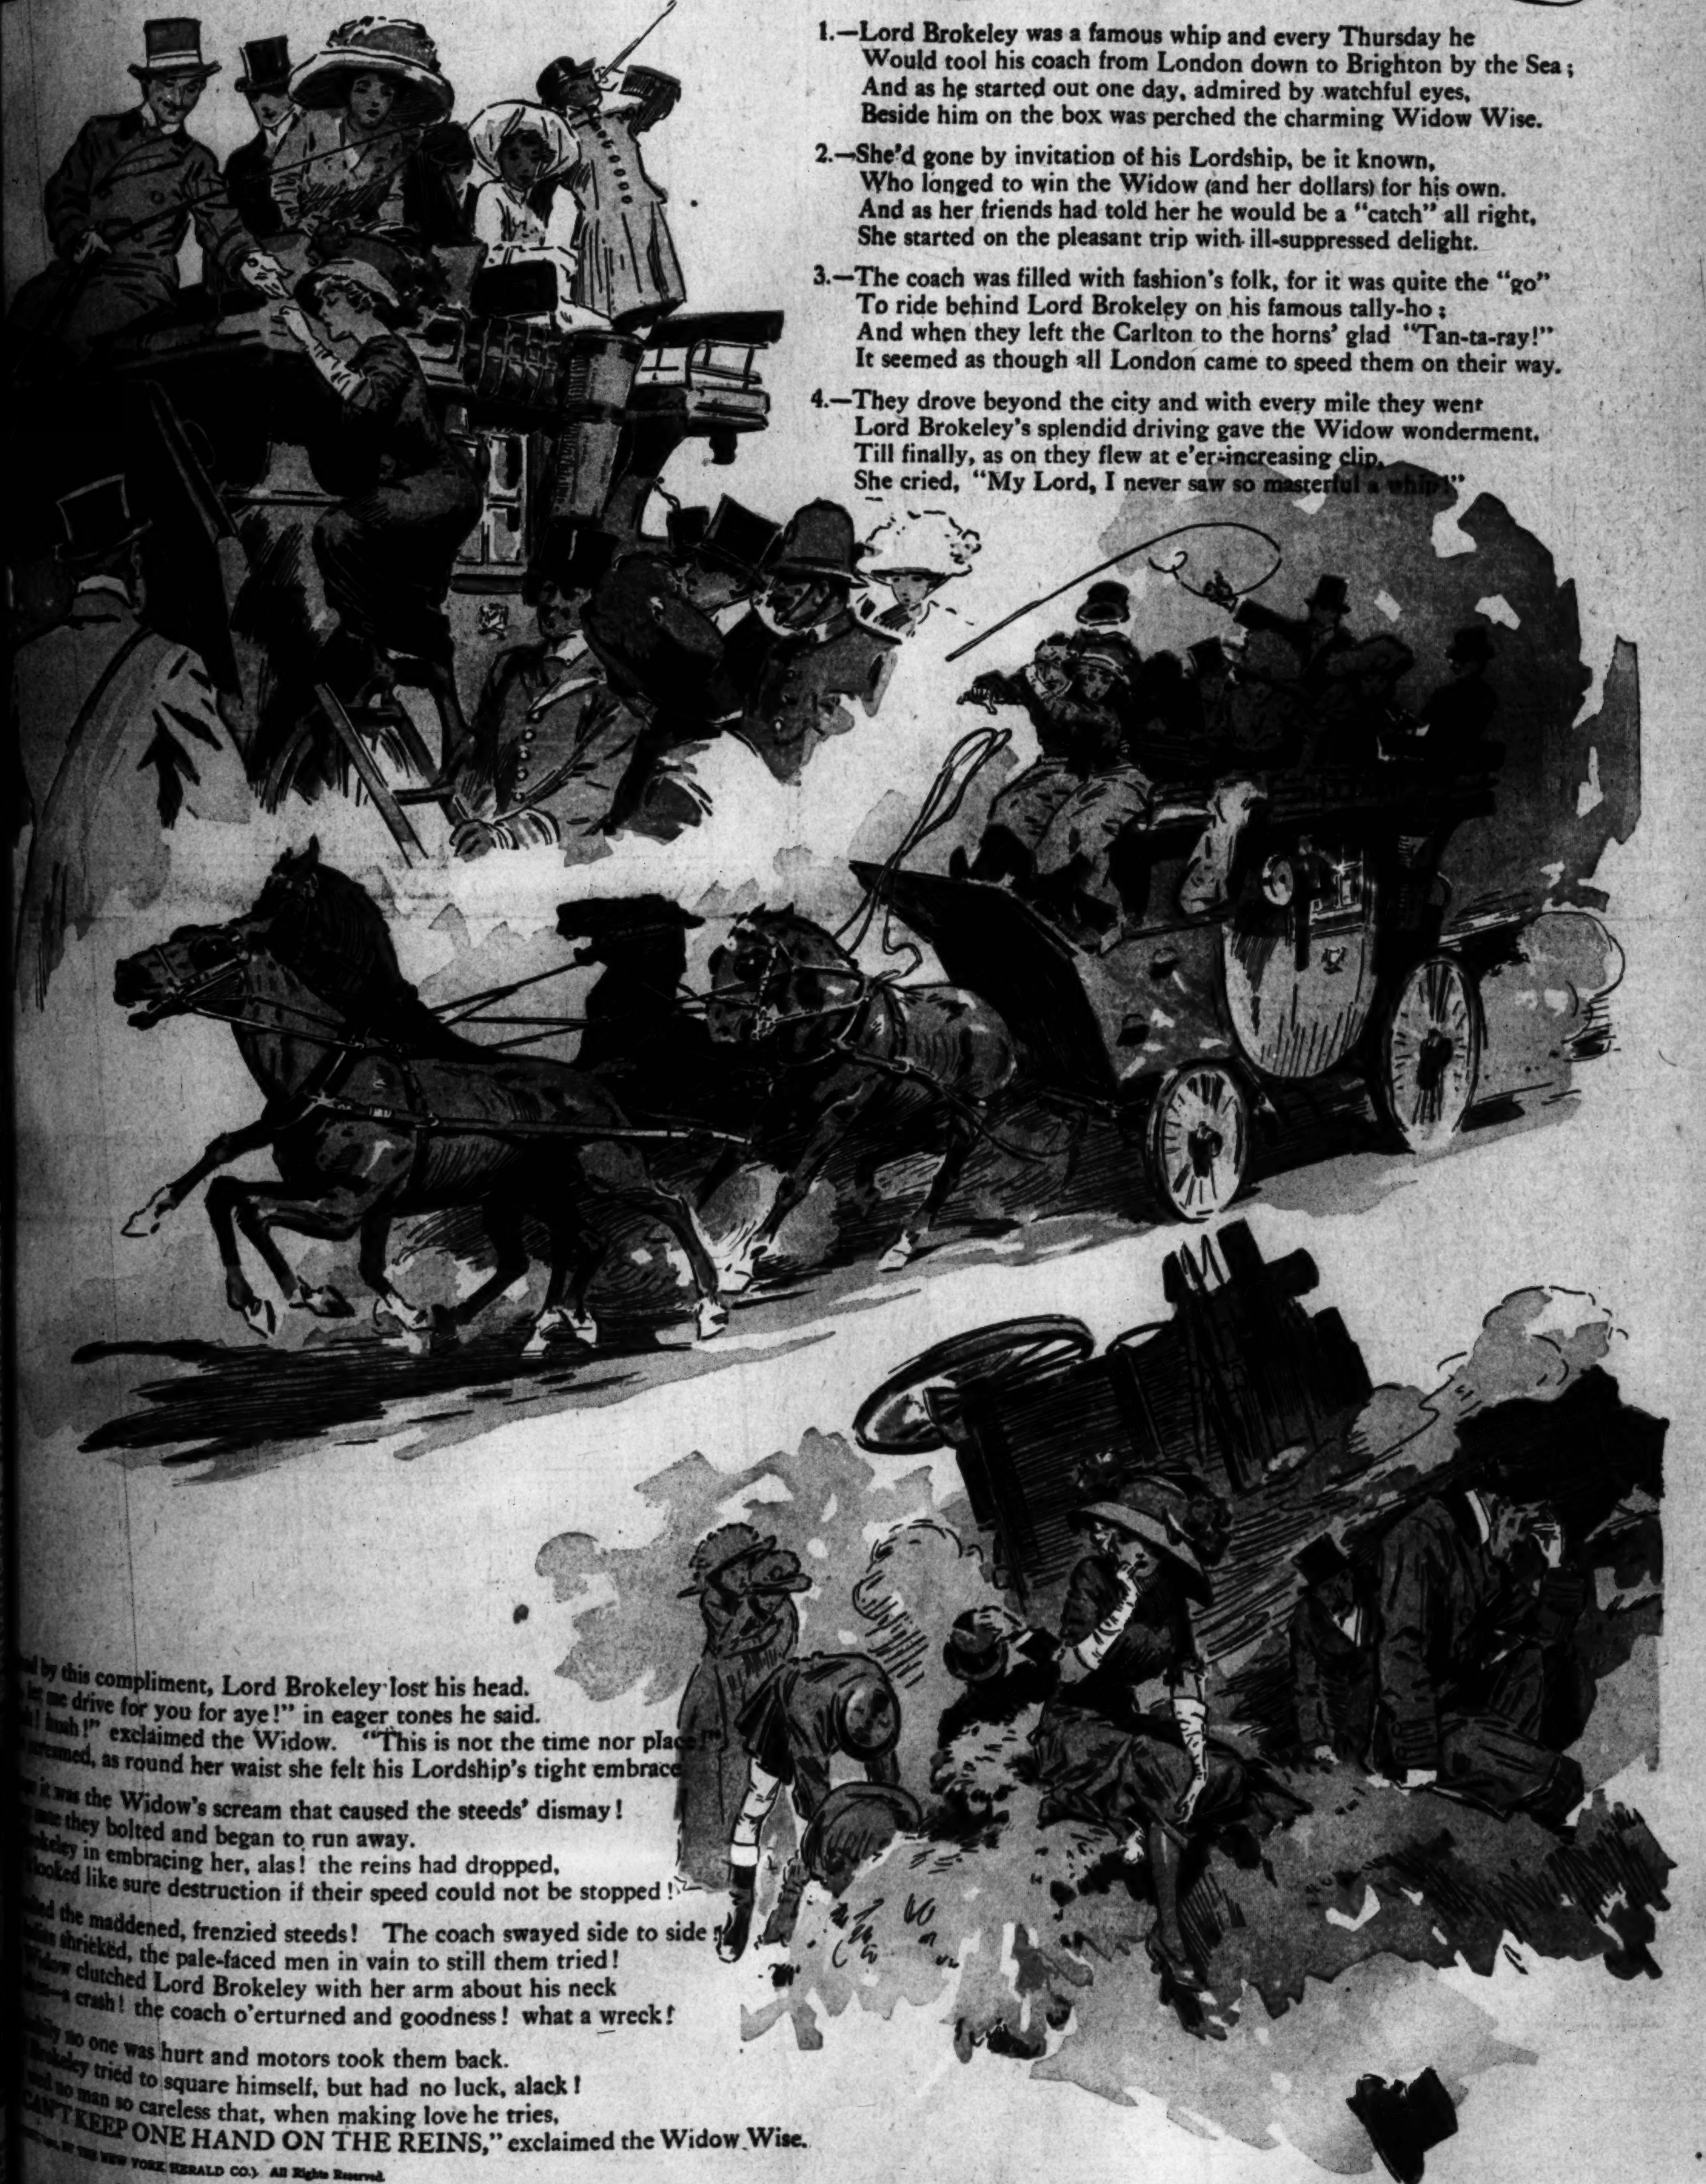
HE WIDOW WISE

Verses by Paul West • Drawings by W. H. Loomis



1.—Lord Brokeley was a famous whip and every Thursday he Would tool his coach from London down to Brighton by the Sea;
And as he started out one day, admired by watchful eyes,
Beside him on the box was perched the charming Widow Wise.

2.—She'd gone by invitation of his Lordship, be it known,
Who longed to win the Widow (and her dollars) for his own.
And as her friends had told her he would be a "catch" all right,
She started on the pleasant trip with ill-suppressed delight.

3.—The coach was filled with fashion's folk, for it was quite the "go"
To ride behind Lord Brokeley on his famous tally-ho;
And when they left the Carlton to the horns' glad "Tan-ta-ray!"
It seemed as though all London came to speed them on their way.

4.—They drove beyond the city and with every mile they went
Lord Brokeley's splendid driving gave the Widow wonderment.
Till finally, as on they flew at e'er-increasing clip,
She cried, "My Lord, I never saw so masterful a whip!"

ed by this compliment, Lord Brokeley lost his head.
let me drive for you for aye!" in eager tones he said.
h! hush!" exclaimed the Widow. "This is not the time nor place!"
screamed, as round her waist she felt his Lordship's tight embrace.

it was the Widow's scream that caused the steeds' dismay!
once they bolted and began to run away.
okeley in embracing her, alas! the reins had dropped, looked like sure destruction if their speed could not be stopped!

ed the maddened, frenzied steeds! The coach swayed side to side!
shrieked, the pale-faced men in vain to still them tried!
Widow clutched Lord Brokeley with her arm about his neck
—a crash! the coach o'erturned and goodness! what a wreck!

no one was hurt and motors took them back.
Brokeley tried to square himself, but had no luck, alack!
no man so careless that, when making love he tries,
CAN'T KEEP ONE HAND ON THE REINS," exclaimed the Widow Wise.

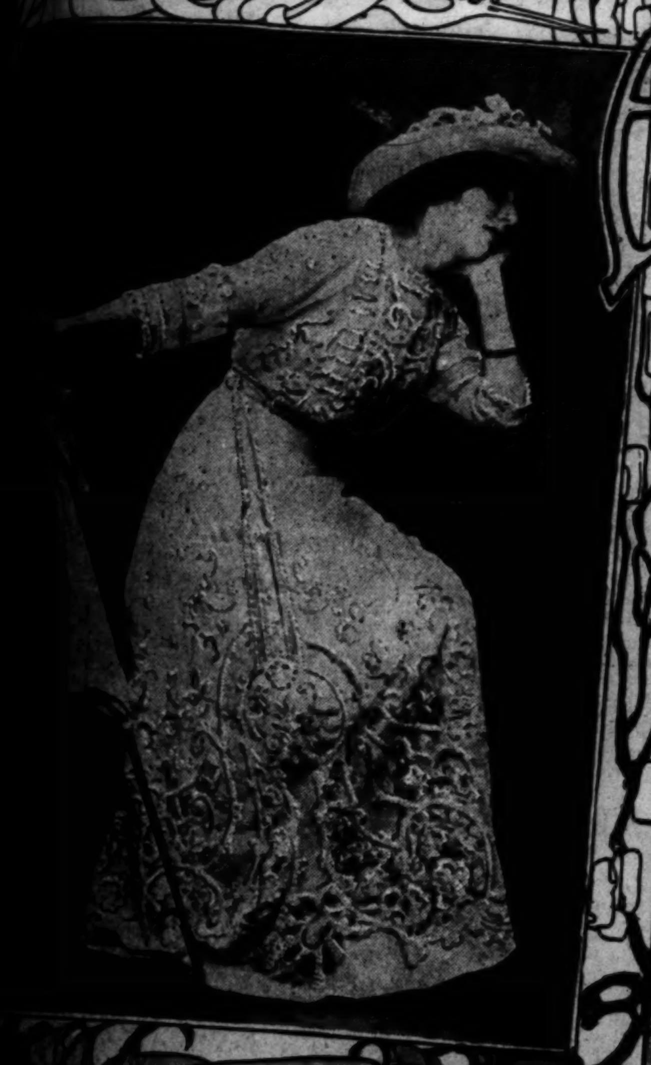
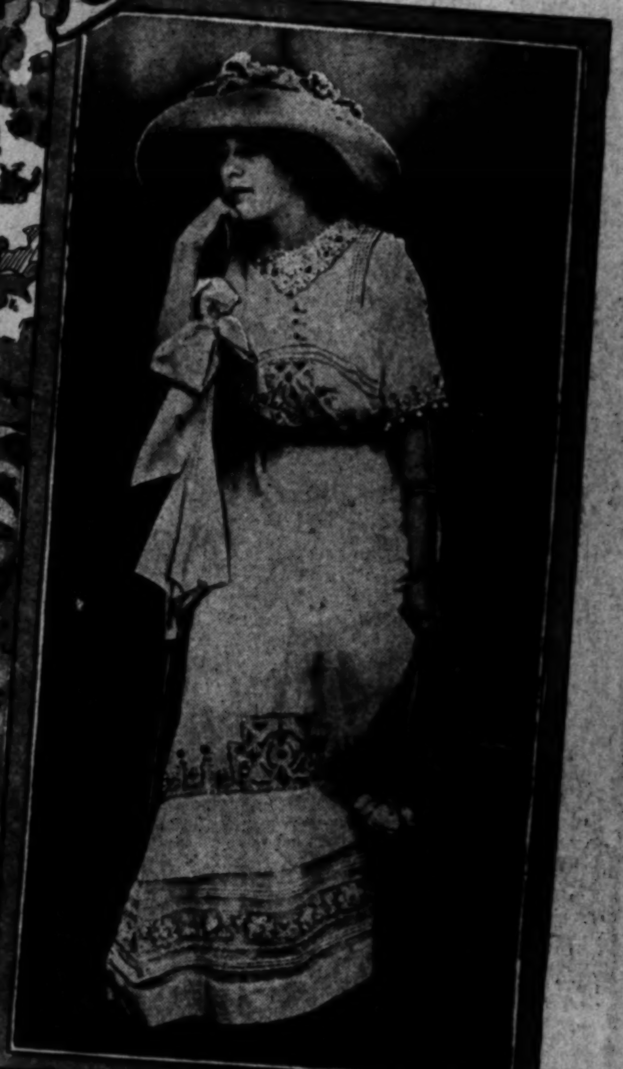
ANOTHER CHAPTER OF THE EMBROIDERED DRESS





With Heavy Embroidery in Color

[illegible] Embroidery [illegible]

[illegible] that this season's fabric [illegible]. The story of the [illegible] inexpensive light[illegible] is a welcome one to [illegible]. It is here in another [illegible] but a glance at the [illegible] convince you of the [illegible] that it has won.

The [illegible] serpentine lines on the [illegible] in solid stitches and [illegible] used for the main deco[illegible] bodice a straight piece of [illegible] is used. On each side are crocheted buttons with a little embroidery.

Back to the simpler forms is the next frock of blue-and-white voile. The upper part of each sleeve is of blue and is in one piece with part of the bodice. A yoke of blue voile is quite shallow. It is embroidered in white, collarless, and edged with picot. A touch of blue-and-white embroidery is shown on the front. Over the blue skirt hangs a divided tunic of white voile. It is another phase of the hanging panel and extremely becoming. This two-color idea in the voile dress is a great opportunity for remnants.

The voile dress with the broad band on the skirt is simple and convincing in style. It shows the vogue of cerise on white, for the embroidered yoke, girdle and hem are in cerise worked up on a conventional scroll pattern. Fine stripes are in chainstitch—an excellent idea if you wish to change a plain fabric to striped.

Cool gray voile is trimmed with touches of blue in the next frock. The round yoke is defined by blue soutache and embroidery in coarse thread; the bands of tucks are piped with blue silk. On the skirt there is an elaborate hem of embroidery, but in these days of narrow skirts the task of hand embroidery is not appalling.

Eyelet work in color on the last model speaks for itself. It is applied in bands on the skirt and on the upper part of the bodice. The elbow sleeves are edged with fringe, and a girdle to match the colored trimming heads the skirt, that is tucked around the hips. A deep insertion of lace hangs under the eyelet band on the skirt. Two wide tucks finish the skirt.

The embroidered dress is here to stay in an assured successful place. And the story bids fair to be continued in our next season.

SCHOOL for HOUSEWIVES
By MARION HARLAND

JAMS and JELLIES

"Engage the children of the family to help."

I FANCY there is scarcely a housewife who does not, in midsummer, gaze upon the embarrassment of riches in the way of fruits, and say aloud, or to herself, "Oh, how I wish I might have some of these in midwinter!"

But when winter comes, such fresh fruits as may be bought, if one has the money, do not taste as do those of the warm season. They have been brought from great distances and, to insure their keeping until the journey's end, have been picked before they are ripe. Or, if they are hothouse products, they are, at best, but poor substitutes for the summer fruit. In many homes, however, an obstacle quite as great and tangible as distance and cold weather is lack of means with which to purchase such delicacies as appear only on rich men's tables. One housewife declares that "winter strawberries taste too much of gold" for her to enjoy them.

But in the summer, when the fruit is in its prime, it can be preserved and made into jams and jellies that will stand one in good stead when the barren season comes.

There has been much argument as to whether there is economy in "putting up" fruit in one's own home when one can purchase from her grocer such really excellent canned articles as are now for sale. Years ago, no "canned goods" prepared in factories equaled the home product. Now canning has been perfected to such an extent that she must be an excellent cook who dares assert that her kitchen can "turn out" vegetables and fruits as good as those preserved by trustworthy manufacturers. And if one must buy her own fruits at market prices, there is little, if any, economy in doing her own preserving, jellying and jamming, especially if she takes into account the fuel she must use in the process and the value of her time, if it is of any financial worth. Each of these factors must be considered in counting the cost of home-cooked sweets and those bought from a reputable concern.

Let us suppose, however, that our housewife raises in her own garden her berries of various kinds, that she has her own apple, peach and plum trees, and that from her own vines she plucks the grapes she uses. Under these conditions she may congratulate herself that in making her own conserves she is saving money.

In planning for this work try to arrange to put up several kinds of fruit at once. This is economy of labor and time, as it takes no more heat to cook three articles on a hot day than one. Moreover, as one must be in the kitchen, one may as well "kill two birds with one stone," or put up several varieties of fruit over one fire.

To facilitate matters, have all ingredients and utensils ready beforehand. If the fruit must be peeled, do this, if possible, early in the morning, or even on the afternoon before, dropping each piece in cold water as soon as the skin is removed. If berries must be hulled, hull them the day before. As to the tedious business of "topping and tailing" gooseberries, engage the children in the family to do this a day ahead of time, paying them a few pennies for the task.

See to it that glasses and jars are scalded and rinsed out in cold water and ready to be filled. Be sure that the jar lids fit tightly and that the rubbers are new and unbroken. A defective rubber will cause the fermentation of an entire jar of perfect fruit. A pair of kitchen scales is an important article at preserving time.

Use agate or porcelain-lined kettles for preserving and jelly-making. Have a spoon with such a long handle that the steam from the contents of the kettle will not scald your wrist and hand as you stir them. A wooden spoon, or agate, is better than one of metal, upon which the acid of the fruit may cause a chemical action which will affect the taste or color of the fruit it touches.

Of all jams, that made of strawberries is perhaps the most popular; but gooseberry and currant are so good when served with crackers and cream cheese that the housekeeper will do well to lay in a generous supply of each.

"A pair of scales is necessary."

"Don't forget the long-handled spoon."

Strawberry Jam

Hull the berries and weigh them. Allow as much granulated sugar as you have berries. Wash the berries quickly and drain immediately. Put into the preserving kettle with the moisture clinging to them, and as they heat mash them. Add the sugar and bring to a boil, skimming the scum off as it rises to the surface. Take from the fire and boil until quite thick. Put the berries back into the juice, boil up once and pour into jars. If there is too much juice, dip out some of it and make into strawberry jelly.

Gooseberry Jam

Top and tail and weigh the berries. For every pound of fruit allow three-quarters of a pound of granulated sugar. Wash the berries and put them, with the water clinging to them, into the preserving kettle, and set them where they will heat slowly, stirring them up from the bottom often. When enough juice has exuded from the fruit to prevent scorching, boil gently for an hour, still stirring every five minutes. At the end of an hour add the sugar and cook gently for an hour or more, or until the jam is thick.

Currant Jam

This is made like gooseberry, but one must allow a pound of sugar to a pound of fruit.

Preserved Strawberries

For these, select as many boxes of small berries as you have boxes of large, firm fruit. Cap the berries, keeping the large ones separated from those of inferior size. Mash the small fruit and pour them into a jellybag, draining off all the juice. Measure this liquid, and to every quart of it allow two pounds of sugar. Put the sugar and juice into the preserving kettle and boil until a little poured upon a chilled plate begins to "jelly." Meanwhile, weigh the large berries, and allow a pound of sugar to each pound of fruit. Turn the sugar and the fruit into the strawberry juice, that has been cooked as directed, and simmer gently. The mixture should soon become thick, when it must be removed and, while hot, poured into jelly glasses or small jars.

Preserved Peaches

Peel the peaches and, after removing the pits, weigh the fruit. To each pound of this allow a pound of sugar. Put the fruit into the kettle in layers, covering each layer with sugar. Simmer gently for a half hour after the boil begins, then remove the peaches and spread them on a platter. Boil the syrup until thick, skimming often. Pack the peaches into jars, fill these to overflowing with the boiling syrup and seal.

Gingered-Pear Conserve

Have ready a quarter peck of green pears, 2 lemons, 2 oranges, 4 pounds of granulated sugar, 2 ounces of green ginger root and a gill of water. Cut the pears into quarters, peeling them, removing the cores and dropping into cold water. Grate the rind from the 2 lemons; scrape the rind from the ginger root. Put through the food chopper the drained pears and the ginger root; add to them the sugar, the grated lemon rind, the juice of the lemons and oranges and the gill of cold water. Boil all together 2½ hours and pour into jelly glasses.

"See to it that the glass

Quince Honey

Wash and wipe hard 3 very large quinces; grate them, skin and all, down to the core. Add a quart of water and 3 pounds of sugar and boil until as thick as honey, then pour into glasses.

Fruit Conserve

Scrape and cut small enough pieplant to make a quart; stem a pint of red currants; pick over carefully a pint of red raspberries; cut fine a pound of walnuts and a pound of seeded raisins; cut up 3 oranges; grate the rind and squeeze the juice from 2 lemons. Weigh all; add an equal weight of sugar and boil until thick. Put into jars and seal.

Peach and Orange Marmalade

Peel enough peaches to make 6 pounds after the pits have been removed. Crack 20 peach-pits and remove the kernels. Chop the kernels and add them to the peaches; add the juice and pulp of 4 large oranges, and stir in 4 pounds of sugar. Boil, stirring often, until thick and clear. Put

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

> IMPORTANT NOTICE
>
> BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the Exchange, I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to print many more letters.
> Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them.

MOST of our space today will be devoted to recipes, solicited or contributed. They have accumulated upon my hands until a general clearance day has become a necessity. As one of the principal objects of the Exchange is—as the title denotes—mutual helpfulness by means of a comparison of housewifely means and methods, an occasional grouping of recipes tried by the donors and recommended to their sister housemothers cannot but be useful and encouraging to those who are reaching after the best things in the practice of their profession.

"F. G. M." (Dakota) asks for recipes for "Bar-le-Duc" and "Lady Souffle Pickles." I imagine she means "Lady Soffle," and I risk sending one for that condiment.

Lady Soffle Pickles

Three dozen medium-sized green cucumbers, sliced thin; 1 pound of seeded raisins, 1 teaspoonful of whole allspice; 1 ounce of stick cinnamon, 1 grated nutmeg.

Put all the ingredients into a porcelain-lined kettle and cover with cider vinegar. Boil half an hour.

When the pickle is cold add ½ ounce of celery seed. Put into small jars and keep tightly closed. It is not necessary to seal the tops.

Bar-le-Duc

Stem large, ripe currants carefully. Weigh them and allow 3 pounds of sugar to each pound of fruit. Get 2 more cupfuls of juice from a reserved supply of currants. Put a cupful of this into a preserving kettle with 3 pounds of sugar and cook 5 minutes, skimming closely. Then add 1 pound of whole currants and cook 5 minutes longer after the boil is reached. Strain the juice from the currants into a bowl. Turn the juice back into the kettle and boil until it is thick and clear. Skim clean of scum and strain through a cheesecloth bag upon the fruit. Put all into the kettle and boil hard for 1 minute, removing the scum as it rises. Fill jelly glasses with the preserves, stirring it up from the bottom as you do this, that both fruit and syrup may go into each glass.

Let the glasses get cold before covering with paraffine.

Mrs. C. O. G. (Geneva, Ill.).

The imported bar-le-duc has no seeds in it. They are removed from the currants with a large needle, and most carefully, not to mangle the berries. As each currant must be treated in this manner, the process is delicate and tedious in the extreme. Few American cooks can afford to expend time and labor upon it.

Therefore we take the conserve with the seeds.

Prune and Apple Filling for Turkey

For a turkey weighing about 12 pounds you will need 1 pound of prunes and the same in bulk of good cooking apples. Wash and clean the prunes well. Pare and quarter the apples. Cook apples and prunes together with barely enough water to keep them from burning. Cook about 5 minutes after the boil begins, stirring to prevent scorching. Let the fruit get cold before stuffing the turkey. Before putting it in, rub the inside of the body with salt and pepper.

Bind a few slices of fat salt pork over the breast of the turkey while it is roasting.

It is not necessary to use the finest quality of prunes for this purpose.

G. J. (Chicago).

If you can use these recipes in the Exchange, I shall be glad that I have sent them. They have all been tested and found faithful in my own kitchen.

Almond Cakes

One-quarter pound of the very sweetest butter you can get; ¼ pound of pulverized sugar, sifted.

Beat these together to a hard sauce. Add the yolks of 3 well-beaten eggs. When you have a smooth cream, add 4 ounces of blanched and sliced almonds and 4 ounces of flour in which has been sifted a scant teaspoonful of baking-powder.

Stir with a wooden spoon until you have a smooth paste of the consistency of biscuit dough. Use sugar in making the dough into balls. Set these an inch apart in a greased pan; wet the tops lightly; sprinkle sugar over them and set half an almond in the center of each ball.

Bake to a delicate straw color.

They will cost a cent apiece, but they are worth it.

Pepper Nuts

Beat the whites of 4 eggs to a stiff froth; add the beaten yolks and stir in a pound of pulverized sugar. Beat all together 15 minutes. Then add a pinch of hartshorn; a grated nutmeg; lastly, ½ teaspoonful of mixed spices—cloves, allspice and black pepper. Cut out with a tin tube (or the top of a pepper cruet).

Set the nuts away in a cold place for a few hours before baking them. This recipe will require 1 pound of flour, worked in lightly after the spices go in. Roll out the dough less than half an inch thick.

When the nuts are cold they will be very hard, and will keep for months. To soften them, hold over the heater for a few minutes.

Fruit Cake

Cream together a cupful of sugar and half as much butter. Add 2 beaten eggs, a cupful of molasses and ½ a cupful of strong, cold coffee in which you have dissolved a scant teaspoonful of baking soda.

Have ready 3 cupfuls of sifted flour; 1 cup of mixed raisins, figs and dates, chopped fine; 1 cupful of cleaned dried currants; ½ pound of citron, cut very fine, and the same of blanched and shredded almonds and a teaspoonful of mixed spices—cinnamon, cloves, mace, nutmeg and ginger.

When the batter is mixed, flavor with the strained juice of a lemon. Bake in a moderate oven 1 hour. Line the baking-pan with buttered paper.

This cake will keep moist for some months, if kept in a tin box.

Springlies

Four eggs; 1 pound of powdered sugar; 1 teaspoonful of baking-powder (or a small pinch of hartshorn); 2 quarts of flour, sifted three times; 1 teaspoonful of vanilla extract.

Beat whites and yolks separately; mix smoothly with the sifted sugar. Beat long and well. Add flour, folding it in lightly. Have ready 2 floured biscuit boards. Roll out the dough half an inch thick and cut into shapes. Arrange these upon a second board and leave them there in a cold place overnight to stiffen into shape. Bake the springlies next morning. Grease and flour the pans lightly; sprinkle anise seed all over the bottom and lay in the cakes an inch apart. Bake in a moderate oven to a fine straw color.

They will keep for a year.

PRACTICAL HOUSEWIFE (Buffalo).

I hope some of these are what your correspondents are looking for. My mother was born at the south and cooked in the old southern way. Some day I may send you some more of her favorite recipes.

Blackberry Cobbler

(This is a southern dish, sometimes called "family pie.") Line a pudding dish with pastry and fill it with ripe, luscious blackberries. Sprinkle liberally with sugar and cover with a top crust which has been rolled thin, doubled together and gashed with a knife. Open it and spread over the berries and press the edges down with a fork.

Bake slowly for half an hour. Serve with cream or with butter and sugar.

In the winter use canned berries.

Peach Potpie

Fill a bowl or basin or pudding mold one-third full of peaches, pared and stoned and quartered. Pour a cup of boiling water over them and set upon the stove to cook. When they begin to boil, lay over them a crust made as for biscuit. Cover closely and bake 20 minutes.

Serve with sugar and cream or with hard sauce.

A FARMER'S WIFE (Trempealeau, Wis.).

When I was a child, in old Virginia, your peach potpie was known as "Valley Pie"—the Valley being what is now known as West Virginia, and peopled principally by the descendants of German and Scotch-Irish immigrants.

Let us have more of your mother's pet recipes.

The Housemother's Exchange may be interested in a recipe over 100 years old. Here it is:

Sugar Cookies

Two cups of sugar and 1 of shortening (mingled lard and butter), 1 egg, 1 cup of sweet milk, 1 teaspoonful of saleratus dissolved in milk, a pinch of salt, 1-3 of a grated nutmeg, 1 quart of sifted flour.

Sift the flour into a bowl, rub sugar and shortening well through the flour and add the egg without beating, then the other ingredients. Stir long and well. Mix in flour for a good dough that will roll out easily. Cut into shapes and bake in a quick oven. You may strew sugar over them or stick a raisin in the middle.

These are lovely cookies. How well I recollect how, as a child, I stood over the board and begged for one hot from the oven!

I am now 15 years old.

LORRAINE B. (Ionia, Mich.).

An old friend and correspondent, although but 15.

Fish Sauces

Will you tell us of a few sauces to be eaten with fried or baked fish? I sometimes see "Serve with cream sauce" or "with white sauce." Also I read of "Fish a la Maryland."

Could you give me any of these?

I send herewith recipes for cold icing for cake. I never have luck with boiled icings.

Mrs. I. L. K. (Reading, Pa.).

An especially nice sauce to be eaten with fish is, likewise, a handsome garnish:

Hard Lemon Sauce for Fish

Stir to a cream 2 tablespoonfuls of butter with the juice of a lemon. Beat it until you have a smooth white mass; then stir into it a heaping tablespoonful of finely minced parsley. Have ready several halves of lemons from which the sides have been scraped, leaving them whole and clean. Fill these with the creamy sauce and lay about the fish when served. Or, if the fish be served upon individual plates, as at a luncheon or dinner party, lay one of the lemon "cups" full of sauce upon each plate. I give here the proportions for the mixture. You may increase the quantity at pleasure.

White Sauce or "Drawn Butter"

Bring to a bubble 2 tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan. Stir in 2 tablespoonfuls of flour and work it into the butter from the sides toward the center of the pan. Have heated in a saucepan a cupful of milk; add this gradually to the roux in the frying pan and beat smooth. Season with a dash of strained onion juice and white pepper, with salt to taste.

Egg Sauce

Make as directed above, and beat in at the last a little minced parsley and 1 or more hard-boiled eggs, chopped very fine.

Sauce Tartare

Make a good drawn butter as directed, but substitute boiling water for the hot milk. This done and the mixture creamed, beat in a teaspoonful of French mustard, ½ teaspoonful of strained onion juice, a dash of cayenne, a little salt, a heaping teaspoonful of minced cucumber or gherkin pickle and, at the very last, the beaten yolk of an egg. Stir just half a minute after the egg goes into the boiling mixture.

Bechamel Sauce for Fish

Put the bones, the head and a few ounces of the fish meat into a saucepan with 2 tablespoonfuls of carrot cubes and half as much minced onion, also a bayleaf. Pour over all 2 cupfuls of cold water; cover closely and simmer down to a cupful of liquid. Strain and season with paprika and salt. Have ready a cup of cream (or half milk, half cream), heated with a pinch of soda. Put the fish stock back over the fire, stir into it a roux of flour and water made as directed and, when this has thickened, add the hot cream and take at once from the fire.

Your request for "Fish a la Maryland" is referred. I have no recipe bearing the name.

You may invent for yourself numerous variations based upon the formulas for sauces. The same general rules apply to them all.

I name one more that deserves noting for its simplicity, and because it is an admirable adjunct to beef in several forms—roast, boiled, braised or broiled.

Horseradish Sauce

Wet a great spoonful of grated horseradish with the juice of ½ a lemon and beat it into a cupful of white sauce (butter drawn with milk). Work into creamy whiteness and it is ready for use. As an adjunct to corned beef it has no equal.

Pimentos

You will do me a great kindness by publishing in the Exchange a recipe for preparing pimentos. I have sought in vain for this through my cook books.

MAUD C. (Alpharetta, Ga.).

Referred. The pimentos, which come to us in cans, are a tropical growth. I have never seen them growing in the United States, or in our markets. Information upon this subject will be gratefully received.

For Perspiration Stains

Will you tell me what to do for an amethyst lansdowne dress that has become discolored across the shoulders by perspiration?

I am afraid to touch it until I hear from you.

ANNOYED (Arcola, Ill.).

Two correspondents have assured us confidently that white vinegar will rectify mischief done to colored fabrics by perspiration. Try it upon a bit of the gown first, if you chance to have it.

Some lovely lingerie blouses have yokes and collars of fine blonde or net, on which handwork is applied. The small dots would be very effective on a yoke of this fabric. The buttonholing should be worked on the lawn or linen through the net also.

Add a spray on each back width, and if you have time, trea. the upper part of each sleeve to a few leaves and blossoms.

I am going to stop now, for you are probably lost in admiration, anyhow.

French Knots

FRENCH knots are quite taking the place of the fashionable beading. The latest thing is to buy a voile or marquisette blouse pattern marked for beading, and to make a French knot instead at each place for a bead. The effect is soft and extremely pleasing.

Most of us know how to make French knots, but instructions to the others may not come amiss. Briefly, they are as follows:

To make a French knot, draw the needle through the upper side of the fabric. Hold it in the right hand and with the left hand take hold of the silk at a point near the fabric and twist it two or three times around the needle. Then put the point of the needle through the fabric again, very close to the point at which you brought it up; draw the twisted silk closely around it and push the needle through. Hold the twist tight against the goods with your left hand while you draw the length of silk through, so as to keep it from uncoiling. When the silk has been drawn quite through, it holds the knot.

How to Hang a Skirt

HOME dressmakers sometimes experience great difficulty in fitting a skirt on themselves so that it will hang properly when finished. Here is an ingenious method which the woman who thought of it says is infallible.

Slip on the skirt you are making, and over it another skirt which hangs very well. Stand on a chair and have some one (even a child can do this) put pins in the new skirt at the exact bottom of the old one. When you have pins all around the bottom, turn up the hem at the row of pins. Your skirt will thus hang perfectly without wasting your time or labor.

Three Ways to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. This latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked. This method is successful on heavy material.

The last way is also easy. On wax paper or ordinary tissue paper trace the pattern before you. When the design is completed, turn over the paper and outline the pattern with a heavy lead pencil. Then place the design down on the fabric and redraw the outline, pressing hard with the pencil. The pattern will be transferred without difficulty.

Surely the way is easy.

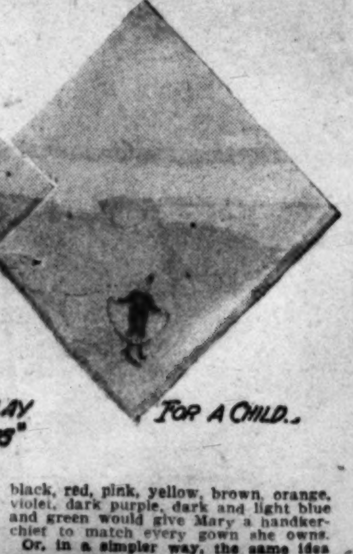
"LET'S PLAY SOLDIERS"



FOR A CHILD.

...profusion of colored and embroidered handkerchiefs, ranging from the circus effects cherished by the children to big sister's filmy bit of sheer linen.

Naturally, one pays a pretty penny for most of these exclusive and novel designs, but here is a secret to whisper in your ear: They are easy to do by hand! Instead of embroidering a dozen "M's" in a tiny wreath for Mary to take to Europe or on her honeymoon, give her a dozen, all alike, and yet each with some little difference.

To illustrate what I mean, one of these handkerchiefs has a butterfly embroidered in color on dimity and fastened to the plain white kerchief only by his tiny body, leaving his starched wings free and extending a little, as if he were in flight. One of these each in white, black, red, pink, yellow, brown, orange, violet, dark purple, dark and light blue and green would give Mary a handkerchief to match every gown she owns.

Or, in a simpler way, the same idea might be carried out by buying wh handkerchiefs in children's size, he stitching a narrow colored border each and embroidering a monogram match. And, by the way, even bett than the initials in the corner is t whole name, done in outlining, in t center of the handkerchief. Then the is no trouble about the laundry, but t marking is less conspicuous.

The scattered violet leaves in th handkerchief pictured here are done white or color, the border being white also. Draw them first in penc then outline and whip with the need between the overlapped parts of th stitches. Do this in white thread fo the outer edge of the leaves, the stem and the veins, and then fill in with seed stitch. This is easy work, but very e fective, and more than dainty.

If you possess the skill and patience this handkerchief might be worked ou in sheer white linen, with the leave appliqued in the same, and outlined an whipped as before. The border woul then be simply a double one.

The stirrup design, just the gift fo the enthusiastic horsewoman, has it foundation in a white handkerchief wit a colored edge and border stripe. Th stirrups are then outlined in white, an filled in with seedstitch of the sam color as the border.

Exactly the same thing is done i the horseshoe and riding-whip pattern which may or may not be a message o good fortune as well. The cord part o the whip is done in stemstitch, the hea being done in over-and-over.

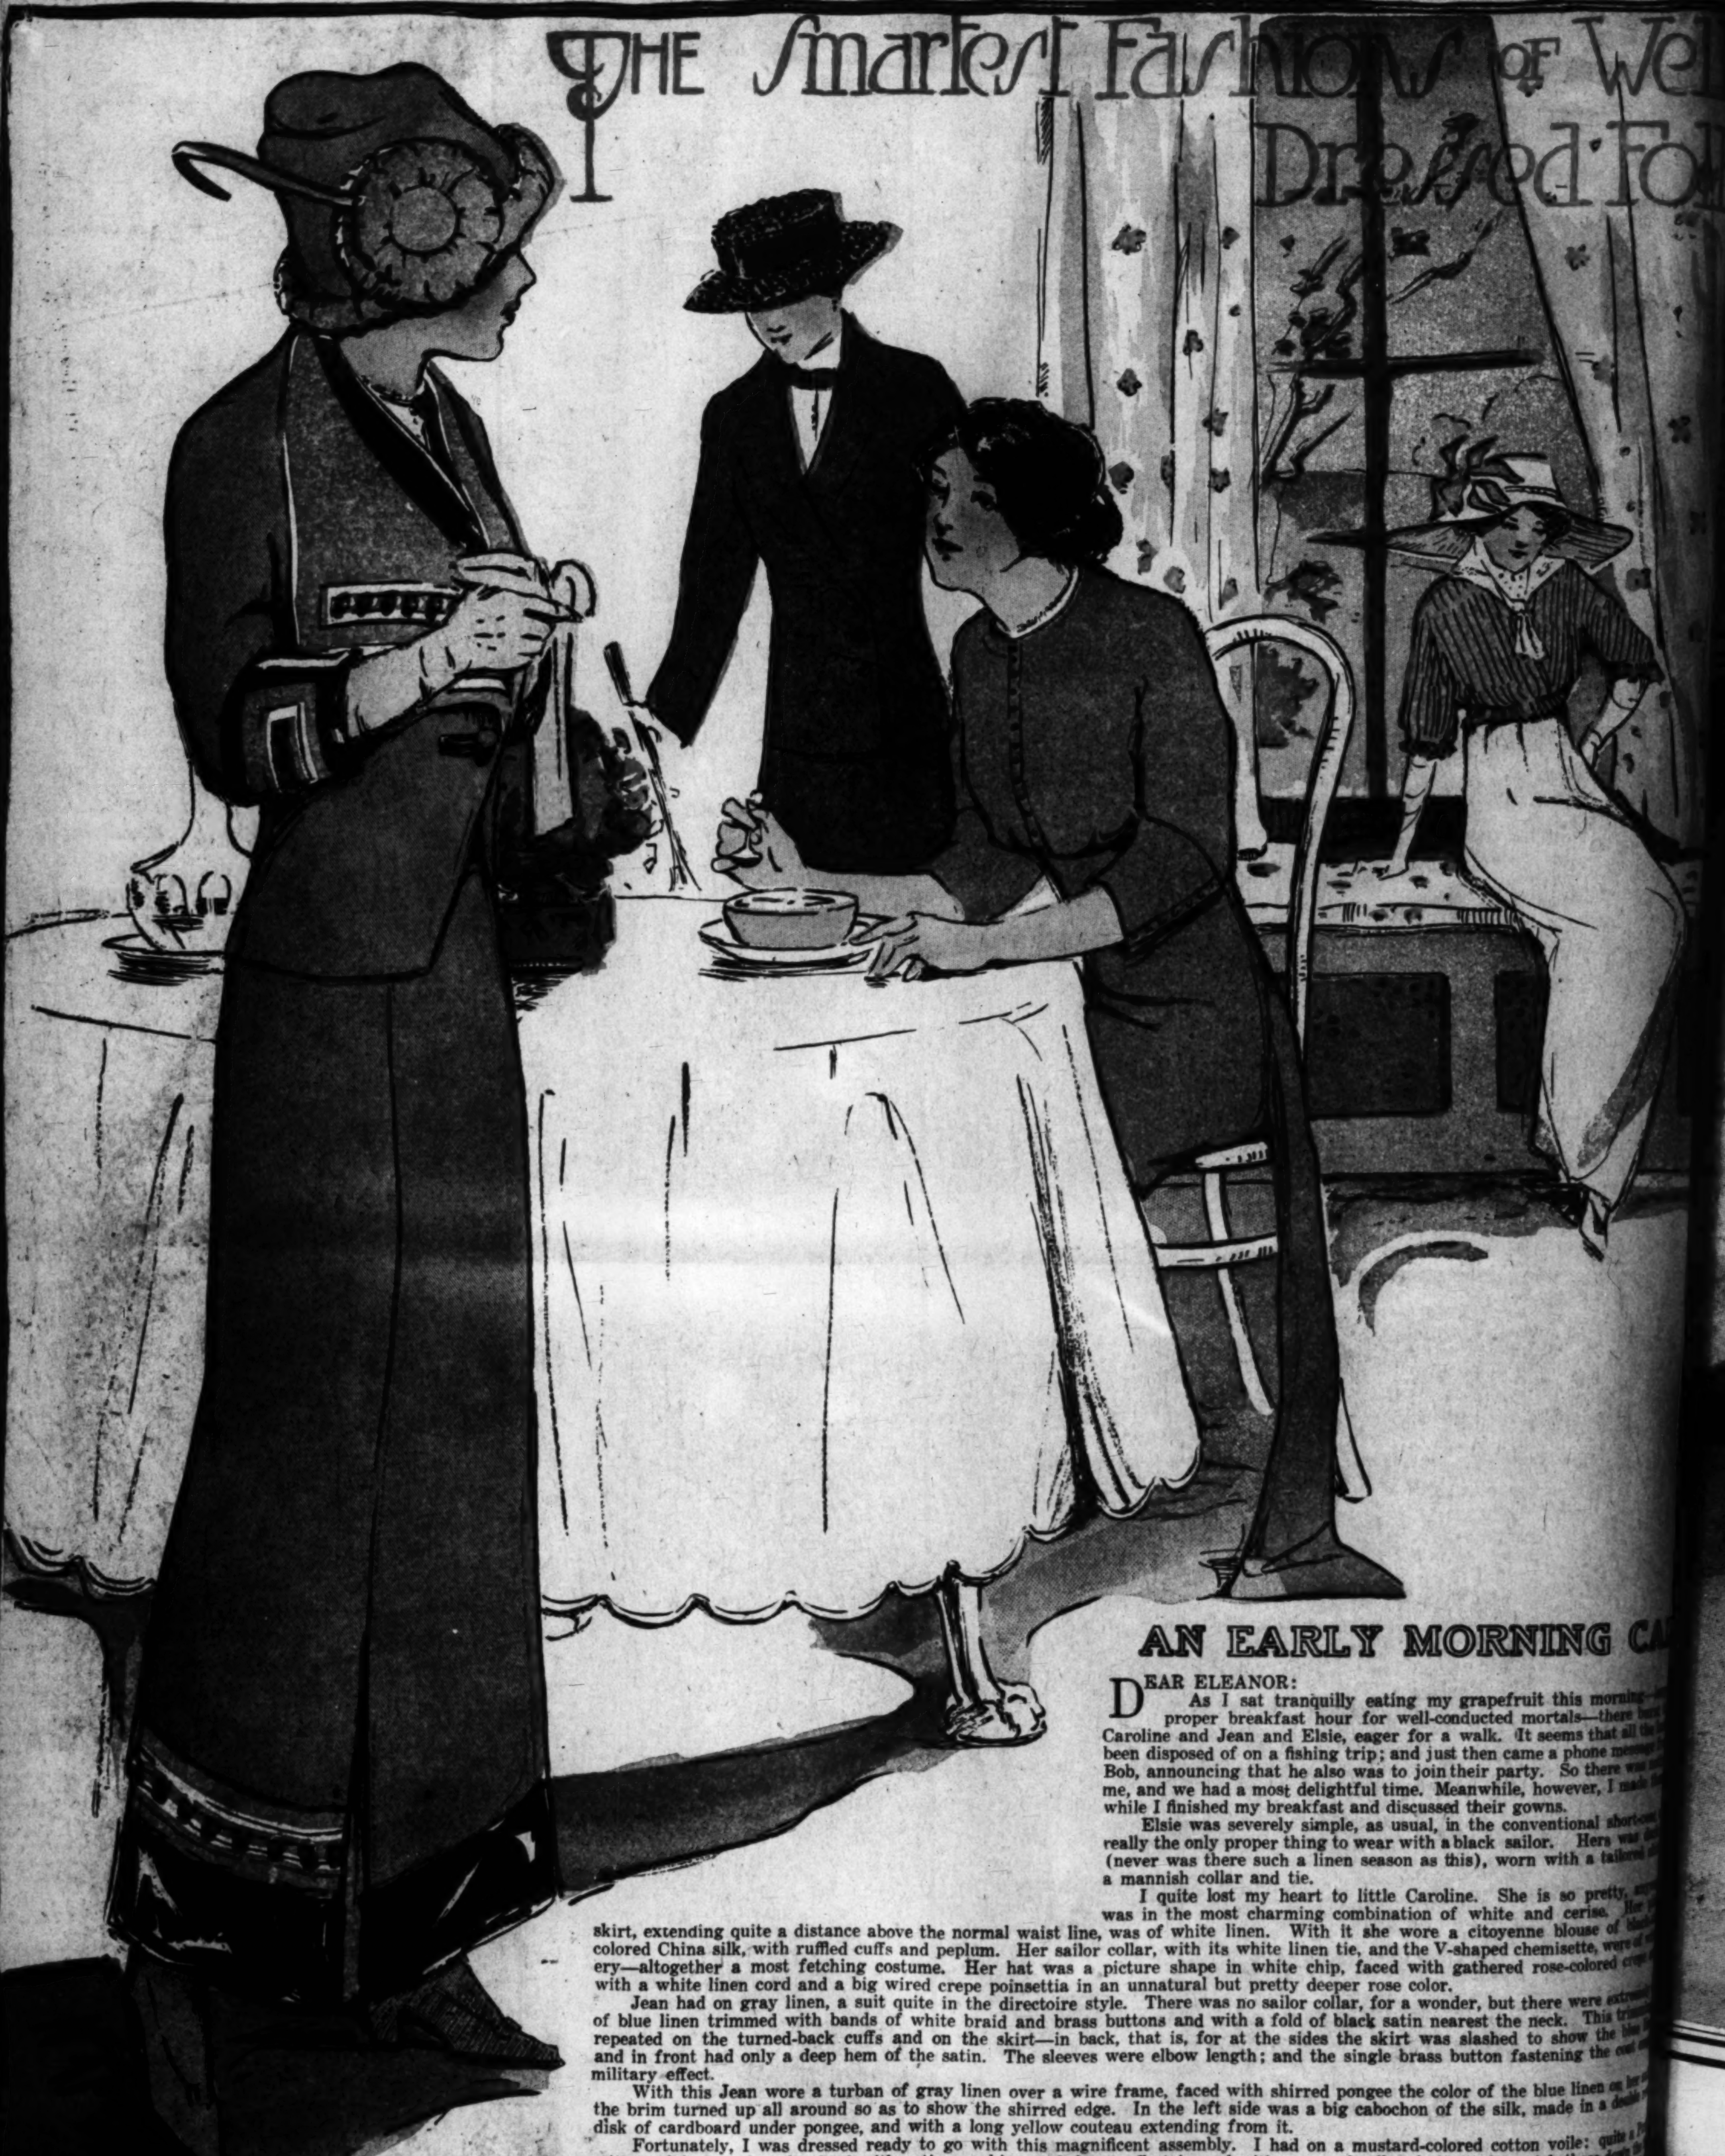
Finally, as a last example of thi seedstitching to match the border, there is the jockey's cap and whip; here the whole whip handle, except the head, is done in over-and-over in silk or thread, the same shade as that i which the seedstitching is done.

The children must not be forgotten and there are two designs for them, to be done solid in colored silks, with the lines drawn in by outlining over them. The clown's whip is done in the whipped outline stitch; the shadow behind the soldier, in plain outline.

Dress the clown in a color to match the handkerchief border, and do not forget the red and white of his face. By drawing both him and the soldier first in pencil, you will get the fine details correctly, though, of course, absolute accuracy is not necessary. Since, by his hat, he is a soldier under Napoleon, you must dress him in the Bonaparte uniform of dark blue, with lines and piping of red.

It needs only a little ingenuity to think of still other designs which will be really and absolutely exclusive—crests, college emblems, etc. You can spend the summer not unprofitably to yourself and your friends if you take away with you no other embroidery than a goodly supply of linen handkerchiefs.

THE Smartest Fashions of Wel Dressed Fol



AN EARLY MORNING CA

DEAR ELEANOR:

As I sat tranquilly eating my grapefruit this morning proper breakfast hour for well-conducted mortals—there Caroline and Jean and Elsie, eager for a walk. It seems that all been disposed of on a fishing trip; and just then came a phone Bob, announcing that he also was to join their party. So there me, and we had a most delightful time. Meanwhile, however, I while I finished my breakfast and discussed their gowns.

Elsie was severely simple, as usual, in the conventional really the only proper thing to wear with a black sailor. Hers (never was there such a linen season as this), worn with a a mannish collar and tie.

I quite lost my heart to little Caroline. She is so pretty, was in the most charming combination of white and cerise. skirt, extending quite a distance above the normal waist line, was of white linen. With it she wore a citoyenne blouse of colored China silk, with ruffled cuffs and peplum. Her sailor collar, with its white linen tie, and the V-shaped chemisette, ery—altogether a most fetching costume. Her hat was a picture shape in white chip, faced with gathered rose-colored with a white linen cord and a big wired crepe poinsettia in an unnatural but pretty deeper rose color.

Jean had on gray linen, a suit quite in the directoire style. There was no sailor collar, for a wonder, but there were of blue linen trimmed with bands of white braid and brass buttons and with a fold of black satin nearest the neck. This repeated on the turned-back cuffs and on the skirt—in back, that is, for at the sides the skirt was slashed to show the and in front had only a deep hem of the satin. The sleeves were elbow length; and the single brass button fastening the military effect.

With this Jean wore a turban of gray linen over a wire frame, faced with shirred pongee the color of the blue linen the brim turned up all around so as to show the shirred edge. In the left side was a big cabochon of the silk, made in a disk of cardboard under pongee, and with a long yellow couteau extending from it.

Fortunately, I was dressed ready to go with this magnificent assembly. I had on a mustard-colored cotton voile: with a plain round neck edged with a tiny ruching and deep cuffs trimmed with a row of yellow buttons, to match those blouse. Bob says Oliver Cromwell himself might have worn it—but not the skirt, for that has a long hanging panel which tripped up the great Oliver when he started to do battle. I'm getting frivolous; I'd better stop! Your affectionate the Lake," "Marmion," and other works in verse, Byron burst into the intellectual firmament like an unexpected comet and paled with his weird but astonishing brilliancy Scott's "ineffectual fires." The Scot was canny after his kind and recognized the fact that a poet had made his appearance of too transcending genius for him to compete with. And so he turned his mind to those wonderful tales which delighted the refined world for two generations, and are still read by many, who prefer them to the semi-materialistic stories of our day. Scott's stories embody all the elements of human interest which for ages have enchanted the minds and hearts of men. Love as the great motive, home and kindred as only secondary to the tender passion, war and heroism, patriotism and self-sacrifice for the sake of those we love or for our country, are the full round of motives that have ruled literature since the Hebrew's time who wrote Esther and Ruth, since the Greek's day who sang of Troy and its downfall, since the Roman's who told the people of his day of the founding of their city.

Dumas was a great admirer of both Scott and Byron. They introduced no new motives in their art, but were content to deal with affairs of the heart, of the affections, of the sentiments, and of all these old motives which have held the world so long. But Scott's art was a new application of the old material. As for Byron, while he built with the same bricks as did the captive Hebrew at Babylon, and as Homer, his way of arranging the matter was absolutely new. Fielding and Richardson had been great story tellers in their day, and their way was held in esteem by their contemporaries. Scott marked out a plan of his own for his edifice of story building. He was a sharp transition in the art of novel writing. Byron's verse had no resemblance to anything in English from the days of Chaucer to his own. It was not in any point comparable to Keats's verse. The architects who built the cathedral at Cologne, Westminster Abbey, the cathedral at Toledo and that at Sevilla, all used similar material. Wood and stone were all they sought for. They all built after the Gothic style, but each used his material, arranged his naves and aisles, his columns and buttresses, in his own way. Each was a genius in his art, an adventurer along new paths, confident in his own ability to chart his territory and find a safe way out. So it was with the literary genius who made the first half of the nineteenth century ever memorable in many tongues. Wordsworth is deeply religious, but his vein is different in color, in texture and in effect from that of George Herbert.

Dumas caught perfectly the inspiration of the new method which was to mark so sharp a contrast from the old literary cult in prose and verse. The new technique came to him as natural as the art of breathing. The modernism of his day fitted his mind far better than the styles in dress of his time fitted his bodily frame. For he was always most bizarre in his costume. He often appeared at social functions in fashion as out of place as if he had been a wild Indian, or even something not quite human.

There was one element in Dumas's novels quite like Scott's, and more like Shakespeare's plays. The Scotch wizard seldom took the trouble to plan out a plot for any of his stories. He preferred to take the old chronicles of his own people or those of England, and out of the mere skeleton presented by the annalist to create breathing men and women. His art was like that of Pygmalion and his love whom he cut out of the roughest marble in such perfect form that life had to come into so charming an abode. The mere dry bones and grinning skulls of history Sir Walter Scott transformed into the living characters which seem to us all like actual friends or enemies. Before the wizard of Abbottsford, a greater one on Avon had done the same thing. The stories of dead kings of England or Scotland, the tales of Boccaccio, or even older legend going back to the remotest days of Greece or Rome, were the dead material out of which we have "Macbeth," "Coriolanus," and "Timon of Athens." Even in his verse Scott was content to take the legends of his people and sing as one of the bards of the Highlands might have done in far-past days.

Dumas followed the example set in this respect. They were all like architects who do not seek to invent or discover a new material, who do not care what forest their timber comes from, nor what quarry they draw on for granite, marble or sandstone. So that the oak be sound at heart, or the stone firm and capable of taking a form and finish which it will keep, is all they seek for. Dumas had no farther to seek for his material than Shakespeare or Scott. The annals of France were full of the best. The Revolution was not quite accomplished in his early years. Back of that lay the spectacular history of Henry of Navarre, the Bartholomew massacre, the long contests between the rival houses, heirs to the throne of France, the days of dying chivalry, of kings' jesters, of retainers of this faction or that, all swashbucklers ever ready to cut some one's throat and not over-careful whether or not they offered the opportunity to have their own cut. And if the motives of war and of country were here in rich abundance, so was the root material of love in still more prolific supply. The soldier might be always ready for an adventure, but for none more so than that in which the hand of a lady love or the fate of the love of a rival was at stake. Henry of Navarre played his game well for a crown and risked much on his way to the throne. It was often a question whether the next step along the perilous path was to end at the palace or at the tomb. But the hero of Ivry never risked half so much for a crown as he did for the smile of a lady fair. The mine in which Dumas found his material was inexhaustible, and no better quality ever tempted an architect to take it in hand and work it into a form of such uncommon beauty that men would see that it should not fall into ruin nor perish from the earth.

So we are to have put out a century after Alexander Dumas was born, and a generation after his death, a collection of his writings in a sumptuous edition of 200 volumes. Incidentally to giving these stories to the world on twentieth-century paper and in new binding we have some thousands of people still making a livelihood in the reproduction of the work of the remarkable genius. It is claimed by the French critics that "The Three Musketeers" and "Monte Cristo" have been translated into more tongues, printed and sold in more editions and copies, than any other stories ever written. Is it not a great record for a man to leave? These stories so magically told have delighted millions of men and women of the highest intelligence, refinement and culture. At the same time for nearly a century they have been giving young persons and old ones an opportunity to earn their daily bread in a useful and honorable way, and keeping money in general circulation as actively as if Dumas had been a master mechanic who had built a factory and founded a firm to be run a hundred years after its corner stone was laid.

We laud heroes in war, and do honor to great admirals who have destroyed cities or sunk fleets beneath the waves. We celebrate the memory of great iron masters or those who have opened mines. Shall we withhold our measure of praise from the wizard who at once enthralls the minds of millions and creates opportunity for work for thousands? Shall not we be loudest in praise of the literary genius who like Homer or David is still affording the world pleasure in reading his works and profit in supplying the books? Is he not the greatest of all the great?

SERMONS IN SONG.

THE DREAM ROAD.

BY WILBUR D. NESBIT.

As a dream when one awaketh.—[Psalm lxxiii, 2.

Ho, there are a hundred ways
To the long-lost yesterdays!
Some go trudging through the rain,
Through the fog of wasted tears
That has hid the hills of pain
On the borders of the years;
Some go by the laughing streams
Down and down the road of dreams.

You and I and all must know
Bypaths to the long ago;
Now that we are old and wise
We cling to each treasured sign
That will show to us where lies
The old land of song and wine—
The old land of field and tree
That we know as Used-to-Be.

Ho, day dreamers are we all
And oft on our ears will fall
Half-forgotten songs we sang
When we had no thought of care,
And we hear the bells that rang
Ever softly, sweetly, there—
Then before our eyes, in sooth,
Stretch the fair, wide fields of youth.

And we hear as spoken words
All the chantings of the birds,
And with half-closed eyes we see
Hills that rise in living green,
Rustling grass and swaying tree,
And the sky, blue and serene,
And again in dreams we rest
In the land we loved the best

So there are a hundred ways
To the long-lost yesterdays;
Ways that lure us on and on,
Back and back the endless miles
That our lagging feet have gone,
Into all the other whiles
Where our youth forever gleams—
Down and down the road of dreams.

NEW CIRCULATING LIBRARY SCHEME.

The following scheme is about to be set on foot in Brussels for the diffusion of enlightening literature. A central library consisting at the outset of 10,000 choice volumes is, the Telegraph says, to be created there, and any inhabitant of any part of Belgium owning a savings bank book will be entitled to borrow from it and receive by post any book for a period of a fortnight on checking a penny off his savings bank book at at the postoffice, his money at the bank serving as a guarantee for payment for books not returned.

As there are about 1500 postoffices in Belgium this will amount to the creation of a circulating library with 1500 branches whose risks will be more than covered by the deposits in the savings banks.—[London Evening Standard.

Uncle Sam and the Big Red Apples. By Frank G. Carp

BIG MONEY IN FRUIT.

GREAT DEVELOPMENT IN ORCHARDS PUSHED BY THE GOVERNMENT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON (D.C.)—I write of the Big Red Apple. It is creating almost as much trouble for us as did that into which Mother Eve, at the advice of the snake, sank her pearly teeth when she lost us the Garden of Eden. It is more precious than the three golden apples which grew in the garden of Hesperides, and for which Hercules upheld the globe on his shoulders when he sent old Atlas to get them.

A winesap tree of the Yakima Valley

These 5 apples weighed over 10 pounds. They came from Chelan County, Washington.

New orchards

That was the second time that the apple upset the world. A third was when Juno, Venus and Minerva contended as to their beauty for the golden apple offered by Paris, the grafter, who, being bribed by Venus with Helen of Troy, thus brought about the long ten-year war which laid that city in ashes.

Even the Bible speaks of apples of gold in pitchers of silver. Well, that is what we are having in some parts of our country. The apple crop is revolutionizing whole districts. It has lifted the prices of lands to the clouds and has made it possible for the clodhopper to walk upon velvet.

What would you think of a country where nearly every farmer owns his automobile, where his house is lighted by electricity and he has water on tap, where scores of families go every year to Southern California to get away from the cold, and where you cannot throw a stone without striking a man who has money in the bank? That, I am told at the Department of Agriculture, is the condition of a half-dozen different districts in the Pacific Northwest.

Take the Hood River Valley, in Oregon, where the apples and pumpkins are of about the same size! Orchard land there is worth from $500 to $1000 an acre, and orchards already set out will bring $3000 and upward per acre. Said one of the department officials to me:

"I was recently talking with an orchardist who had ten acres of bearing trees in one of the best districts of Washington. I asked him what his land was worth. He replied:

"'It ought to bring me in at least $10,000.'

"'Well,' said I, after thinking a moment, 'I don't know that that is too much. You have ten acres, and that would be just $1000 per acre.'

"'But I mean $10,000 per acre,' said the man. 'It will bring a good income on that and leave a fair sinking fund.' And thereupon he took out his pencil and showed me that he was making a big percentage on his own valuation."

A Farmer's Utopia.

"The Pacific Northwest is the Utopia of the farmer," said another of the agricultural explorers. "The apple growers are mostly educated men and the social conditions are high. In Hood River, which is a town of 5000, there is a university club to which belong 150 college graduates. North Yakima looks for all the world like a New England city, and its houses are more artistic than those of the East. The Wenatchee Valley is a great farm town covering thousands of acres, divided up into patches of five and ten acres of orchards. Each patch has its house, which is equipped with electricity and lighted by a common plant. Every home has running water and a telephone, and scores of the farmers own their own motor cars.

"The bare land in the Wenatchee Valley is worth $500 and upward per acre, and the orchards in bearing yield $500 or more to the acre a year.

"Near Southern Washington a crop of eight acres was sold on the trees for $15,000, and the purchaser did the picking and marketing. They had an apple show at Spokane last fall where they gave away prizes which aggregated $20,000, the first prize being a sweepstake of $1000. At that show there were displays from thirty-six different districts in Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho and Montana, and the apples were shown in all sorts of packages, from the carload to the box. They sent one trainload of the exhibits from there to Chicago. It went by express and it carried just 1,000,000 apples."

Our Best Apple Lands.

Where are our best apple lands?

I have asked this question of several of the leading pomologists of the Agricultural Department, and we have gone over the country with a map laid before us. Take first the Pacific Northwest. The most famous regions are pockets such as the Wenatchee Valley and Hood River country. They have not a large area, but the land has been divided up into small patches, ten acres being enough for any one Yakima region is larger, and the sive tracts in Idaho, Oregon and is a big apple country in Californ San Francisco, from whose port, shipped more apples than from any world. The most of the northwes to Chicago, New York and New few are sent across the continent by steamer to London.

Many ment clerks at Washington are investing schemes. Some of the fruit experts of the Department have their independent or- and not a few of Uncle Sam's employees have the business and are making good. me time apple lands are being exploited, as were some years ago, and syndicates are manage orchards at a fixed price per acre The planting is very extensive, and this is in the Pacific Northwest and in Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland. It is also true of the other apple regions, although to a minor extent.

Last year, I am told, the shipments of apples from the Washington, Oregon and Idaho regions amounted to 10,000 carloads, and moreover when the trees that are now being planted come into bearing, say ten years from now, there will be from that region more than 100,000 carloads. The most of these shipments go in boxes, but I venture a carload of barrels would contain about the same number of apples. At 200 barrels to the car, which is an average shipment in the East—I have myself shipped 300 barrels in one car—this 100,000 carloads would equal 20,000,000 barrels of apples. This is the potential product ten years from now of the Pacific Northwest and that part of the country produces a comparatively small portion of our total crop.

Now, within the past ten years the apple crop of the United States has ranged from 22,000,000 to 69,000,000 barrels. We had 22,000,000 barrels in 1909, and during the past five years the average has been about 28,000,000 barrels. The big yields were all during the earlier part of the decennial period the statistics of which the Department of Agriculture considers unreliable.

At the estimate I have given for the Pacific Northwest the crop of that region in 1921 would be almost equal to the total crop of the United States for 1909, and if a proportionate increase goes on in the other known apple regions there may be an enormous glut in the market. This is a possible situation which the present investor in apple lands should consider. Even if the 60,000,000 barrels were correct, the product ten years from now, supposing the orchards just planted to come into bearing, will probably be far in excess of that figure.

Co-operation and Advertising.

On the other hand, by co-operation and advertising and the proper handling of the crop there is no doubt that the United States will consume or export all the apples that are now being planted. This is one of the big works which Uncle Sam is doing. One branch of the Bureau of Pomology is devoted to it. It has its agents at home and abroad, and its inspectors are instructing the people. Our export of apples has already reached 1,000,000 barrels, and at reduced prices and with more care in packing it can be greatly increased. What we need is the same kind of work that has been done by Southern California as to its orange crop. The organizations there have so systematized the shipping and marketing that oranges are cheaper than apples in most parts of the United States. I dropped into the Center Market, here in Washington, yesterday, and asked the price of some No. 1 Wenatchee apples. I was told that they were 75 cents a dozen, or more than 6 cents apiece. I then picked up a navel orange which was larger than any of the apples, and was told that it was selling for 35 cents a dozen, or less than 3 cents apiece. One can buy oranges and bananas in any town and in almost every grocery store in the country, and there are many regions where oranges are sold and apples are not. This is merely a matter of prices, handling and marketing. The apple will keep longer than the orange, the latter being a perishable fruit. Nevertheless, the apple is the dearer and the harder to get.

Said one of Uncle Sam's fruit experts:

"When every family in the United States classes the baked apple as one of its breakfast dishes, and lets it crowd out some of the cereals, there will be no trouble about the consumption of the apple crop."

Grading and Foreign Competition.

"If our apple industry is to be permanently successful," continued this man, "we must have rigid inspection and absolute honesty as to grading and marketing. As it is now, there are too many tricks in the trade. In the Northwest this is prevented largely by co-operation and State inspection. If a man ships poor apples or grades poor ones as good ones, his apples are thrown out by the shippers and he may lose a whole carload by a bad box or so. In Canada the government inspects all the fruit, not only that which goes abroad, but that which is sold in the local markets, and the man who sells No. 2s as No. 1s or culls as good apples is liable to a fine. There are fixed ways of packing and grading, and the inspectors go from orchard to orchard and report.

Stovepipe Packing.

"Have you ever heard of stovepipe packing?" this man went on. "That has been done with some of our apples which have been shipped to England and Germany, and has greatly injured the trade. It has also hurt the sale of our apples at home."

"What do you mean by that?" I asked.

"I mean the laying three or four rows of fine red or yellow apples on the bottom of the barrel, fitting them in so that they look like fancy No. 1s, and then placing inside the barrel a pasteboard cylinder, which would hold about a bushel or one-third of the barrel. This is so set that good apples can be fitted in around it and when that is done the cylinder is filled with culls. It does not come within five or six inches of the top of the barrel. After filling, the pasteboard is pulled out and the top is faced up with fine apples. In other words you have a barrel of what corresponds to the quotation.

"'A goodly apple rotten at the core.'

"And moreover the rot cannot be discovered without emptying the barrel. I would say that there is no use in attempting to play such tricks upon the London market as it is now constituted, for the British pour out a sample barrel from every shipment before any bids are made."

WHY CHRIS CARSON LEFT THE LITTLE TOWN OF UTOPIA.

By Smith D. Fry.

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS CARSON was a bright fellow, and fond of practical joking. He was a quipper, ready in repartee, and was somewhat of a social lion. He was a genial spirit, forever saying unusual things; by many regarded as the most entertaining fellow in our town. He was called by sane women "a great catch."

His one misfortune was that he had a wealthy and indulgent father. Consequently he had been denied the educational luxury of supporting himself. He had been deprived of the keen pleasure of eagerly eating a ham sandwich during working hours. He had never listened to the dulcet tones of a foreman warbling a tune concerning more work and better work, or immediate discharge.

In those days Kate Parry was a patrician beauty. She also was a natural-born spirit of humor and fun. Quite naturally Chris and Kate were good friends, and there were folks who predicted things for and about them. But they were both lovers of the liberty of maidenhood and bachelorhood, and were not in a hurry to settle down to the cares and fetters of married life. Yet neither one of them had ever declared for everlasting single blessedness.

One evening Chris had several young fellows at his home, and they played cards until a rather late hour. Because his father placed no restrictions on his purse nor upon his habits, Chris entertained the boys lavishly. They played to the rhythmically-inspirational accompaniment of fizzing and wheezing wine and the popgun-like reports from numberless corks. While they were playing cards and listening to the music of the pops the room was hazed with the glimmering gloom of smoke which arose from expensive cigars. Hilarity was constantly augmented while the care-free young fellows were enjoying this card-in-decks system of pleasure.

About midnight a couple of the boys began to complain of chilblains, and so the game came to an end; but the pops and smoke continued. There was the usual result; in vino veritas. The wine began to loosen their tongues. Of course all of their talk was about the girls, and each fellow championed a separate girl as his ideal. Chris Carson had the last word, and broke up the game of gabble with one of his quips. He said:

"Boys, Kate Parry is an entertainer that frazzles all of 'em. She is the most beautiful girl in town, has more brains than any other two, and she has Helen of Troy backed off of the board for queenly beauty. Her sister Mazie is a pretty girl and a good girl, too. Why, boys, for Kate Parry's ever-ready wit and humor, her splendid singing and playing, and to sit an evening in her parlor as her guest, I'd rather give $100 than I would give 15 cents for the best evening's entertainment any other girl in town can offer. She frazzles all of 'em."

Now, it happened in our town that some of the boys had sisters. All of those sisters were girls, and while all of them could purr, they could, on occasion, do some little scratching. Girls who can be kittenish can also be cattish. Furthermore, the purveyors of news in our town had no need of Jack Binns, nor his kind of machinery. When Mazie Parry heard about Chris Carson's quip, she sent to every home in our town the "C.Q.D." trouble sign.

Handsome and popular Christopher Columbus Carson did not know how many claws were scratching at him, nor how many tongues were spitefully and cattishly spitting at him, nor how many eyes were flashing fire about him, until he found himself in the midst of an unquenchable conflagration of feminine fury.

On the morning of the second day as he walked down Main street bowing, smiling, and lifting his hat to the ladies, who did not see him, Chris woke up. Born and bred in our nice little town of Utopia, Chris suddenly found himself alone and friendless in a land of strangers. Nobody knew him.

All of the girls in town had gone on a strike. They had taken in their fathers and mothers and brothers, too, into the Anti-Chris Carson Union. Mazie's "C.Q.D." trouble sign had worked wonders in a few hours.

Quipping is a pleasant exercise, a most jovial pastime, to the quipper. Sometimes, however, a quipper may overquip himself. That's the reason why Chris Carson went away from our little town of Utopia, and never came back any more.

AN IOWA SCHOOL CHICKEN ROAST.

It is as true as it is strange that city boys are sent out of the city to attend the rural school. I know one country school in which there are six children from city schools. A "chicken roast" is the latest school attraction that I have known. A teacher is making the schoolhouse the center of social life for the district. She does not like the idea of having a dance in the school, and she will not have kissing fracases, so she plans various social functions with stunts and games that have abundance of life, that are new, that are harmless. She does quite a little along the line of refreshments, and every one takes a part in the preparation as well as in disposing of the feast. The greatest success she has ever had was a chicken roast. It was in the autumn, and was in the school yard. It was a close approach to a barbecue. Every man, woman and child in the district was there. Nothing else has ever aroused such an interest in the Kile district.—[Journal of Education.

The Temperate Spaniard. By George W. Burton

WINE AS DIET.

MUCH USED IN SPAIN BUT FEW CASES OF INTOXICATION RESULT.

By a Staff Writer.

I WAS young and now am old and have seen a good deal of the world, but I had to come to Spain to learn how cheap and how common wine might be and yet meet with the most temperate people I had ever been among. To get the full force of this statement take a story of conditions in the Spanish wine trade of about six or seven years ago. The crop was so large and the demand so small that prices would not pay for freight charges to market. The new crop of grapes was coming on and the vintners had to have the casks to hold the new wine. In most countries the spigots would have been opened and the wine let run where it might. The Spanish people are too kindly for this. The casks were hauled into the high road and left there for any one who would to help himself. All along the railroads leading to Madrid and from other cities to those near and far were seen casks of fine wine to which the public helped themselves freely. I asked the Vice-Consul, a man who has been in Spain over twenty years, who told this, if all Spain was not full of drunken people and if the public peace were not endangered. He replied by asking me how long I had been in the country and how many intoxicated persons I had seen in seventeen weeks. When I replied not over three, he said: "So it would have been then. Wine at all times is so cheap that no one need go without it who can buy bread." Wine is cheaper than bread, and is a part of the daily ration of all but the poorest. It is served with all midday and evening meals at all hotels and lodging-houses, and there is no more limit to your wine than to your bread. The waiter always approaches a table where a wine bottle is empty with a second ready to draw the cork at a nod. When a party of two or three persons limit themselves to a single bottle, he shrugs his shoulders in continental fashion, as much as to say you are not fond of wine. One may occasionally see a man drink a full quart with his dinner. The beverage is light, not carrying more than 5 or 6 degrees of alcohol, so that it has less effect on the person accustomed to its use than coffee or tea. Those who use it daily are no more tempted to excess than those who use the other beverages just named, and in spite of the adage about the "cup that cheers" I doubt if the health of the Spaniard is impaired by the use of wine as much as that of the Englishman by tea or the American by coffee. As to women, one never sees one of Spanish origin indulge in too much wine—not one in a million. This is a well-known fact in California, where the women with Spanish blood in their veins are proverbially temperate in their use of wine.

Prices of Wine.

Well, how cheap is wine in Spain? Let us begin at the point of greatest interest where we all may find something personal. What is wine worth at retail, by the bottle, or for family use by the demijohn or dozen bottles? I have before me a price list of a wine merchant in Madrid where wine is not made and where it is therefore dearer than in cities near the wineries. For a single bottle the wine is 25 to 30 centimos, or 4½ to 5½ cents. Is that cheap enough? The bottle must be returned, as it is worth to the merchant 2 cents. Will you have a case of twenty-two quarts sent to your domicile and send the bottles back when you get your next case? Then the price will be 5 pesetas, or 90 cents for the lot. Is that cheap enough? It is only 4 cents, and you get back 2 cents each for the bottles when they are returned, making your price 2 cents per quart of wine. Vinegar? The price of this product is 4 pesetas a dozen. If you get your wine in a barrel the price will be 9 cents less, making your beverage still cheaper. For a finer quality in the barrel you must pay 18 cents more for about two dozen bottles. The same in bottles cost 6 pesetas for twenty-two bottles, with the rebate when the bottles come back. For white wine the price is 4 pesetas, 72 cents, per dozen bottles. This is 6 cents a quart, with rebate for bottles. Sauterne types of the best wine cost as high as $2.70 per dozen bottles, or a trifle more than 10 cents a quart.

This is in a small shop where the priest of the church near by or the laboring man from the street, the tourist, or the tea merchant next door, come in and drink a bottle (large or small) and where all the neighborhood get their table wine. It is a good sound wine, perfectly honest, and not only made of the juice of the grape, but brought to perfection without sophistication. It is a simple wine made not for connoisseurs, but for everyday people and everyday use.

I have now replaced the retail card of the Madrid purveyor of beverage with one of a great firm in Bilbao. This Bilbao man took many prizes at many expositions. His wines are of the first quality. For twelve bottles of fine red wine he asks us 1 peseta a quart for three-year-old wine up to 20 pesetas a dozen for six-year-old. This is 18 cents for white wines by the quart, and up to $9 a dozen for six-year-old goods. By wholesale his wines are less. If you take a cask ready for export holding 224 quarts the price will be 150 pesetas for three-year-old and twice as much for that kept six years. In a retail way he will make a rebate of about 2 cents a bottle for the returns. Now the wholesale price per quart in our money is $27 for 224 quarts, or not quite 12 cents for each bottle. For the six-year-old goods the price will be about 23 cents a quart. He has red wine, charged with carbonic acid gas (champagne he calls it,) at 40 pesetas per dozen, or $7.20 per dozen, 60 cents a bottle. These are all carefully cured wines and as good as any in Spain (or out of it, for that matter.) Should a buyer go to this winemaker for a cargo of any kind he could supply the demand and probably at about 50 per cent. of the prices quoted. I am dealing here with table wines such as the plain people and the hidalgos use day by day at their meals. The prices are about one-third to one-fifth or less those paid in American cities along the Pacific Coast near where wine is made, and at the East the prices are twice as high as on the Coast. They are the types of wine produced all through Northern California in abundance and which might be produced all through Oregon, Washington and Idaho. The climate of north Spain is about the same as in the Willamette Valley. Spain has all varieties of soil and climate, and her vintages embrace wines of all types. Let us now look into those which more closely resemble the vintages of Southern California and the San Joaquin Valley. These grow in the south of the peninsula.

Prices of Northern California Types.

I shall look into them from the consumer's point of view as I did the others. Anywhere in Spain one may buy a quart of the best wine, "sherry" we call it, at from 1½ to 8 pesetas. In American money this is from 22½ cents to $1.44 per bottle. The usual run of prices in cities far away from Jerez-de-la-Frontera is 2 to 3 pesetas for a single bottle of good "sherry," 2 cents returned when the bottle is brought back. In our money this would be 36 to 54 cents. T

Queue-Cutting in China.

ORIENTALS PART WITH PIGTAILS WITH LITTLE REGRET.

By Lewis R. Freeman.

THE Chinese as a nation have worn the queue for several centuries, and most of the nation's old men have worn it all their lives. Considering this, the lack of sentiment which many of the latter have displayed on parting with that one-time indispensable appendage has been rather remarkable.

One evening last January I had dinner with His Excellency Wu-Ting-Fang at his red brick palace in Shanghai. I mentioned queue cutting, and Wu dismissed it as a subject of no importance, holding the conversation to the abuse of its freedom by the press and vegetarianism, principally the latter, his pet hobby. Two days later I read in the paper that he had been the first of several dozen prominent Chinese who had publicly parted with their queues in Chang-Su-Ho's garden. Meeting him the following afternoon in one of the hotels, I asked him why he had not told me of the important step he was about to take when I had brought up the question of queue cutting at his house.

"Important step," he said. "Why, it is nothing. During my early years of service in Peking I lived for so long in the fear of losing my whole head, that the loss of a little hair from the top of it seems of no moment. Why, you've had your hair cut yourself since I saw you, and you didn't tell me what you had in mind."

STREET BARBER OF THE OLD REGIME.

Of course there was no use saying that the cases were not parallel. Wu and the rest of the high officials who have discarded their queues seem determined to treat the matter as an incident, however they may feel at heart about it.

It is worthy of note, however, that this same attitude seems to prevail among those of the middle and lower classes who have had their queues removed. I spent a quarter of an hour in a shop in Shanghai which was opened exclusively for queue cutting, has operated at full capacity ever since, and is now looking for larger quarters. A throng of from three or four to several dozen coolies were always crowding about the door for a "look—see," and through these would come elbowing a youth of the student or clerk class, these being the ones who have entered into the movement most seriously. Unruffled and unself-conscious before the gaping, grinning coolies and the unexpected foreigner, he seats himself in the chair and—"Snip!" A a big pair of shears has flashed and the insignia of Manchu domination has been tossed carelessly onto the shelf by the active little barber. The rest is just an ordinary foreign hair-cut. If the hair on the fore part of the head has been allowed to grow in preparation for the event, the hirsute growth is trimmed close behind and left long in front for parting in the usual manner; if the forehead is still bare, the rest of the head is shaved to give all of the hair an even start. The ten or fifteen-minute trimming operation finished, the barber wraps up the severed queue in a piece of rice paper, bows his customer out of the door and shouts the Chinese word for "Next!" And rarely indeed is it that there is not another waiting his turn.

An amusing incident in connection with queue cutting and the athletic sports of the Chinese students is recalled by a photograph which was given me the other day. The photograph is of one of the Hongkong University representatives who, but for the possession of a queue, would have taken first prize in the high-jumping competition at the Nanking sports. Like all the rest of his fellow-athletes, he had worn his queue with the end tucked inside of his belt, where it gave him no trouble until the crucial moment of the test arrived.

The high jump resolved itself into a contest between the Hongkong student in question and a Tientsin entrant. The latter set a mark of five feet four as his best endeavor, and with the bar at this height the Hongkong man, as far as his feet, hands, or any other part of his body which an Occidental athlete would have to reckon with, were concerned, sailed gracefully over. It was at this important juncture that the hitherto securely-stowed queue broke loose and, throwing a double wrap around the poised bar, brought it to the ground. Probably chagrin and the banter of the other students had as much as anything to do with the fact that the unlucky athlete failed in both of his remaining attempts to clear the bar, thereby being forced to content himself with second place. This incident was directly responsible for the fact that, not only the beaten high jumper, but all of his team mates as well, appeared the next day with close-cropped hair.

It is now about three months since queue cutting got under way in earnest, and in that time it is estimated that between 20,000 and 30,000 pigtails have fallen, most of these being in Canton, Shanghai and Tientsin. This appears a small item out of a total population of 400,000,000; and yet, in the light of the fact that it was but a few years ago that the removal of the queue was punishable by death, not so poor a showing after all.

Speaking of the huge population of China in connection with queue cutting recalls the ingenious project advanced by a Kwangsi patriot. The latter, an official in that notoriously anti-foreign province, hearing that the hair buyers were paying $2.50 per queue in Hongkong, suggested that every man, woman and child in the empire should have his or her pigtail cut off and sold to provide a fund for equipping an army large enough to wipe all the hated foreigners off the face of the earth. The "bear" effect of the 400,000,000 queues all being thrown upon the market at once would probably have to have a good deal of providing against.

One of the most sweeping queue-cutting campaigns was carried on in the town of Chan Chuen, which is about two hours' journey by launch from Canton. In this place an anti-queue association was formed last November, members joining it from all classes of society. Early in December a great ceremony was held, in which all the members of the association had their queues cut off. The severed pigtails were then tied end to end and draped artistically round and round a huge carabao, that animal then being led through the streets at the head of a shouting procession of the queueless ones. Later in the day speeches were made by eloquent orators on the uselessness of the queue, and by evening the only long-haired people left in the city were women and officials. Many of the latter were deterred from similar action only under the threat from Peking of instant dismissal in the event of their queues being cut.

Queue cutting from now on, with the start that it has, will undoubtedly continue after the cumulative manner of the rolled snowball. The cutting of his queue by one man leads to similar action on the part of his friends; in turn the latters' friends are influenced, and so the circle widens. Probably the coolies will be the last to fall into line, just as they, who were the most inconvenienced by it, have been the last to discourage foot-binding by their women. Practically all of the native papers are coming out point blank in favor of the movement, and are urging that the leaders of opinion shall set the example for the others to follow.

There are four classes of men in the empire who should be willing to dispense with the queue. One section feels the queue to be a badge of servility to the reigning dynasty, and on this account would gladly cut it off and cast it from them. As a native paper puts it, "They feel the humiliation of going to meet their ancestors in the lower world with the badge of servitude upon their heads; and so they are perfectly willing, nay more, even anxious, to remove it."

Then there is another class which feels acutely the scorn that foreigners have been accustomed to feel, and express, for the queue. When a Chinaman commits an offense and makes himself amenable to law, he carries upon his head the very means of his own destruction. It is the joke of foreigners that when a policeman arrests a Chinese he need not carry handcuffs in his pocket, for the queue is a most convenient and efficacious means of tying the hands of the prisoner behind his back, thus transforming it from a symbol of bondage to an instrument of bondage.

There is a third class which will follow the crowd, but will not do any "pioneering." They are waiting for the others to get the movement well under way, when they will scamper, sheep-like, along in their wake. Lastly, there are those who still profess to be subjects of the reigningdynasty, and who say they will take the step when orders to that effect are issued from Peking. The members of this class, apostrophized in a recent editorial in a Canton paper, are asked whether they are the masters of their own hair, or whether they have handed it over to the keeping of the Manchus.

Active opposition to the removal of the queue is found among the Manchus themselves, and in a by no means small class who have expressed the fear that a change of the reigning dynasty, and who say they will take the serious industrial depression will be precipitated through a falling-off in the demand for Chinese-made dress goods. From present indications, however, no change in the dress will be made, save that a cap of foreign design but native manufacture will be worn by men who formerly went bareheaded.

One native paper makes a strong point of the fact that during the last ten years foot binding has practically been discontinued, and that public opinion on that subject has absolutely veered. If the women, it is urged, have been willing to face a great change in this way, and discard a custom to which neither shame or disgrace was attached, then surely the men of the race of Han are able to rise to the occasion and take the matter in hand with resolution and energy.

Caring for the Lepers.

GREAT PHILANTHROPIC WORK BY UNCLE SAM IN THE ORIENT.

By William L. Altdorfer.

ONE of the most beautiful places in the world is the island of Culion, one of the Philippines. It is because of its magnificent tropical beauty and its peculiarly soothing and healthful climate that Uncle Sam has selected it as a suitable location for one of the greatest benefits to mankind he has yet undertaken in the Orient.

It is on this island that he has decided to attempt the care and cure of the lepers in the Philippine Islands. While the island in its virgin beauty was magnificent in itself, the many things that Uncle Sam has done within the past two years has only served to enhance its natural beauty and to make it one of the most healthful and ideal places for the purpose, not only in the Orient, but in the world.

Here on the island of Culion, hundreds of miles out of the beaten track of commerce, is a little colony of some 3000 souls, practically a little republic all by itself. They have their own Mayor or Presidente as he is called in the Philippines, and councillors, who are elected by the colonists, and who meet and pass laws for the government of the island. They have a police force made up of their own people to enforce these laws, and offenders are haled before the Mayor and punished for any infraction of the law.

In addition to the Presidente and councillors with their backers, the police force, they have a municipal band of forty pieces. This band is the pride of the colony. Every evening the band assembles on the Luneta—similar to a public waterside park in this country—when the people all gather around or stroll about to the strains of the excellent band music.

To any one who has seen these poor outcasts begging on the streets all through the Orient, or driven half-naked from the towns and obliged to inhabit inaccessible places and eke out a wretched existence as best they may, it is a positive pleasure to see them comfortably housed, well fed, well clothed, and leading a normal and happy existence. They are free to come and go as they will. They bathe and fish in the sea and enjoy privileges of which they have heretofore hardly dreamed.

For the past several hundred years the care of those who were unfortunate enough to contract leprosy has received considerable attention in the Philippines, but the work was more or less of a charitable nature, and was not carried out in such a way that the ultimate disappearance of the disease could be hoped for.

It was with this purpose in view that almost at the inception of the present civil government in the islands, plans were made to set aside an island for this purpose, but it was not until 1906 that the plans had advanced sufficiently so a start could be made toward assembling the patients at Culion.

The colony now consists of about 700 new nipa houses, each of which is large enough to accommodate from five to seven patients. These houses have been built on regular street lines, so that a regular and beautifully-laid-out town has resulted. The site of the town is located on the highest point of the island, which slopes in nearly all directions to the sea, the highest portions being about 150 feet above sea level.

An immense reservoir is located at a height of more than 230 feet above sea level, and clear, pure water from a large spring is pumped up to it by a gasoline water pump. From there the water flows to all parts of the new town through a system of pipes which has just been completed. A complete sewerage system has been installed. In fact, the place has been made as complete and up-to-date as any of our large cities in this country.

The old town of Culion, founded by the Spanish away back in the seventeenth century, still contains a large number of good houses which were purchased from former residents by the government. These buildings were converted into a presidencia, or Town Hall, and also as places of residence for the Presidente and consejales or councillors. There is a magnificent old stone church, a relic of the sixteenth century, still in good repair, which is used by the colonists for religious worship.

Last year Uncle Sam built a new hospital at Culion. This building is one of the most complete of its kind in the world. It is about 230 feet long and was constructed as a double hospital, a wing for each sex, with all of the latest ideas in the way of operating-rooms, sterilizing-rooms, kitchens and baths.

A tenement-house is another new idea for the comfort of the patients on the island. This house is about 75 feet long by 30 feet wide, and is made entirely of concrete. It was built for the care of those patients unable to get around.

The great majority of the members of the colony are able and willing to work, so Uncle Sam tried the experiment of furnishing them with small plots of ground for gardens, one or two farm animals and agricultural tools, with the hope that the place would eventually become self-supporting. The patients took to the idea at once, and now small farms dot the landscape in all directions, giving the appearance not of a charity colony, but of a prosperous, well-fed, farming community.

of this disease, Dean C. Worcester, Secretary or for the Philippines, says several remedies have been given a thorough trial during the year, but the use of chaulmoogra oil and the X-ray are the two procedures which have given the best results. At Culion there are two cases from whom all external evidences of the disease have disappeared. At San Lazaro hospital five cases have shown great improvement and one is apparently cured.

Shortly before this report was forwarded to Washington it was reported in Manila that a drug firm had been successful in extracting the essential substance from crude chaulmoogra oil, and that this substance can now be taken internally without causing nausea. The Philippine authorities ordered a supply of this new product at once, and it will be thoroughly tested as soon as received.

A LOVER'S MEETING AFTER A THOUSAND YEARS.

By Corinne Rockwell Swain.

THE rest of the party had gone on, to examine some ruins close at hand. Doris Osborn declared herself too tired to follow, and announced her intention of resting in a lovely spot in the edge of the forest, where a solitary burial mound commanded a view of the fjord.

"Go with the others, Will," she told her brother, "and you can come back for me in half an hour. I shall be perfectly safe here, in the shade of the late lamented warrior, and I can sketch and enjoy the view until you get back."

Left alone, Doris sat down and leaned against the cool green slope with a sigh of content, making no move to open her sketch book. The air was full of the scent of resinous trees, and a white gull drifted over the water in a desultory way, as if it knew its own value in the picture. She felt fully in harmony with the scene, for she had loved and studied northern folk lore since her childhood, and had long looked forward to the present trip to the Swedish coast. She was humming a quaint little folk song, and moving her hand idly back and forth in the grass beside her, when it touched a half-buried stone, one of those in the circle at the base of the mound. Brushing away the leaves and earth, she saw that it bore an inscription, but she could distinguish only four runic letters, and some symbols which were strange to her.

"L, E, I, F," she translated the runic characters. "Well, it's nice to know whose hospitality I'm enjoying beside this comfy mound, at any rate. Leif who, I wonder? What was he like? Here goes for an imaginary portrait: Tall, and supple and powerful, of course, and a tremendous fighter, like the rest of the race; but I'll make him a gentle giant, for I like 'em that way, and this is my own particular hero. He shall have good, steady, sailory gray eyes, that can soften suddenly when he looks at some one he cares for; mouth and chin firm and strong, with a fascinating hint of tenderness—oh, pshaw! Too much study of Sigurds and Frithjofs and Olafs hath made me mad. I'll be falling in love with the creature next! How dazzling the sun on the water is! I'd better shut my eyes a moment to rest them."

Smiling at her fancies, she laid her head back against the mound and closed her eyes, when a sudden feeling that she was not alone made her open them again; she shivered a little, with a strange consciousness of some hypnotic influence which she could not resist. She raised her head slowly, and her eyes met those of a young man who stood before her. His finely-proportioned figure was clothed in chain mail, with a cloak of bearskin; a winged silver helmet crowned the long fair hair, and as he leaned easily upon his spear, he looked as though he had stepped bodily from the Nibelungen legends. But his face was the face she had pictured to herself, and gave her a puzzled sense that she was renewing an experience once known and forgotten.

Her strange visitor spoke. "Dear one," he said gently, "didst thou call?"

The language in which he spoke sounded strangely to her ears, like a half-forgotten tune; but though the meaning of the words came clearly, she could not answer. He came nearer, looking at her anxiously.

"Evil hath been spoken of me," he said slowly, "but thou—thou wilt believe me. In fair fight did I conquer Bjorn and made him vow he would no more trouble thee and me, and so I spared his life. But as I rested a moment, being very weary, suddenly he crept behind me and smote me, so that I lay as one dead; and thus have I lain till now. But when I heard thee speak my name, my strength returned. Now in thy heart thou knowest this is the truth, despite thy silence. But tell me once more of thy love."

He knelt beside her, smiling, the handsome head close to her own, and as she smiled back, fearlessly into his eyes, she saw them fill with joy at the mute response. With an effort she threw off the spell of silence. "Truly, Leif, I love thee," she whispered.

But at the sound of her voice, a subtle change came over him. It was as though a mist drifted between them, and she saw him more and more dimly, and at last not at all. She could still hear a voice faintly calling her name, and looking about her in bewilderment saw—her brother Will, who stood looking down at her and laughing.

"Why, sis," he exclaimed, "I didn't mean to scare you with my shouting. Poor old girl, you were tired, weren't you? What makes you look so dazed? Aren't you awake yet?"

She was still looking beyond him with troubled eyes, as though seeking for something, but gradually the humor of the situation came to her and she laughed as she sprang to her feet.

"Rather an exciting dream, that's all," she replied. "I was all tangled up in some romance of the Dark Ages. I'm ready to go now."

As her brother turned away, she stood for a moment looking at the runic stone, and with a smile half-ironical, half-tender, she stooped to gather a few stalks of the long grass about it, and slipped them between the leaves of her sketch-book.

. . . .

About a year later, Doris was enjoying camp life in one of the big Canadian forests with some former college mates. Late one afternoon, as they were returning from a fishing trip, one of the party suddenly exclaimed: "Hurrah! Here comes Anderson! I didn't think he'd get here before evening." They shouted and waved in a manner which testified that the newcomer was a general favorite, and from a distance he returned their greetings. Doris watched the approaching figure with interest, for she had heard much of Eric Anderson, though they had never met. As he drew near, something in the tall, athletic personality seemed familiar, and as her puzzled gaze sought his face she felt a thrill of surprise and almost of alarm, it was so strongly suggestive of the face she had seen in her vivid dream beside the Swedish burial mound. She was annoyed to feel that she was blushing, though in a few moments she had regained her composure. She was glad, however, when the introduction was over, for even dream emotions have a force of their own, and it was hard to meet the direct gaze of his deep-set gray eyes without a certain embarrassment.

Anderson was a thoroughly good fellow, a master of woodcraft and nature lore, and his coming put new life into the camping party. Doris and he proved congenial in many tastes and interests, and exchanged pleasant notes of travel, for his work as a geologist had led him into many strange places. One day, just before the camp broke up, she told him of her trip to Scandinavia, bringing out her old sketch-book to illustrate some points of interest.

"I've never seen that part of the world yet, though I mean to go, some day, for my ancestors hailed from somewhere in Sweden, I believe," said Anderson, who had listened with close attention. He stretched himself more comfortably on the grass, and after a moment of thought, went on with lazy good humor: "I can 'fess up to you, for you're a legend lover yourself, and will understand. Do you know, something in me responds so strongly to the northern life and traditions that if I was superstitious—or transmigratious, you might say—I'd believe I belonged back in the Viking age in some of my existences."

Doris held her breath involuntarily, as he looked at her with his boyish smile; and feeling her sympathy with his mood, he continued:

"Don't you tell; but sometimes I even dream prehistoric adventures—regular epics. If I could only write 'em up properly, I could do a beautiful saga, all about me." He laughed, and clasping his hands under his head, looked up into the over-arching trees with an air of great enjoyment. The lazy charm of the warm, pine-scented air and the sun-sprinkled lake was over them both.

"Tell me some of your epics," said Doris in a low voice, as if she was afraid of breaking the spell.

"Oh, they're all rather misty when you try to put them into words," he answered; "but there's a general sense of all-out-doors, and the sea, and armor and spears and fights—I'm always having fights. One dream is almost always the same. It's in a forest, near the sea, and I have an awful scrap with a big, black-haired brute, all rigged up in old Norse hardware. I always down him, and stop to rest a moment. Then he sneaks up behind me, and I know he's going to strike, but I'm too weak to stop him—and then I wake up with a jump. I never get beyond that point in the dream."

With growing interest in his story, he sat up; the movement dislodged the sketch-book from the stump where it lay, and from its fluttering leaves a few dried grasses fell into the hand which he stretched out to save it. He righted the book, and sat silent for a moment, mechanically fingering the bits of grass, his brows bent in thought.

"Hold on, though!" he exclaimed. "I did dream more, just once; strange, I had forgotten it until this minute. It was about a year ago. Then I thought I lay in the woods alone all night, after this other chap had finished me; and the next day She came—this big scrap is about Her, you know. She called me, and I managed to struggle along to where she was and tell her about it, and I think we made up, after some misunderstanding—it gets misty again after that. Is anything the matter, Miss Osborn? You look startled."

"No—no," she stammered, fanning herself vigorously with a large leaf. "I was just—surprised to see the girls coming back so soon from the canoeing trip. Go on with the story."

"Well, that's about all there is to it. I'm afraid I've bored you awfully," he said apologetically. "I don't know why I should tell you all this stuff; I've never mentioned it to any one else. Somehow you—you reminded me of it." He spoke slowly, as if groping for some clew, and regarded her with a new intentness.

Doris tried to assure him that she had not been bored; but in the midst of her speech she faltered with sudden shyness, as she met his eyes. The wonder in them changed, as she looked, to conviction, and once again she saw them deepen and glow with a sudden joy at the response in her own.

"Why, you're Her—of course!" he said, ungrammatically, but with quiet certainty; "and we belong—don't we?"

At St. Bernard.

A VISIT AT THE FAMOUS HOSPICE BY THREE CALIFORNIANS.

By Nellie Blessing Eyster.

THE celebrated passage of the Alps by Napoleon the Great was begun May 16, 1800, and occupied four days. The St. Bernard Pass had been reported by Marescot, chief of engineers, as "barely passable" for artillery. "It is POSSIBLE. Then let us start," was Napoleon's energetic reply.

The part which most severely tried the troops was from St. Pierre—at the mouth of the Valsorey Valley—to the summit, the pass being still covered with snow. The artillery carriages were taken to pieces and packed on mules, the ammunition was transported in the same way, while the guns were placed on sleds and dragged over the snow by the soldiers, who received 1200 francs for each cannon. This feat has long since passed into history.

Monks of St. Bernard

We, namely, Grandpa, Alice and I, 108 years later were traveling over the same tortuous, rugged path en route for the Hospice of St. Bernard, Switzerland. We had left old Martigny, in the Valley of the Rhone, at an early morning hour, and at the close of the memorable day were slowly climbing, round and round, ever up, up, up, along seemingly the most zigzag road on the earth to our destination among the eternal ice and snow. We were, literally, in the footsteps of Napoleon. The month was that of August and the day had been full of bracing sweetness. We had been in sight of Mont Blanc, roaring cataracts, densely-wooded ravines and towering crags, but now, in the gloom of the solemn sunset which was closing around us, we had grown strangely quiet, all exclamations of wonder and delight had ceased and the only sound that broke the stillness was the "tintinnabulations of the bells, bells, bells," upon the necks of our mules.

All my life long I had a strong, almost feverish, desire to see the renowned monastery with, as I had preconceived, its venerable monks and their half-human, wonderful dogs. Our altitude was nearly 9000 feet, and we were approaching the highest winter habitation in the Alps, when, soon rounding the final curve, our muleteer stopped before the bare, bleak-looking walls of the loftiest house of charity in the world.

The rumble of our wheels was the only sound which broke the stillness as we stopped in front of a low stone porch, above which, from a projecting tile, hung a dimly-lit lantern. No living creature was visible, nor was there a single dog to bark us a welcome. On either side stretched an immensity of snow-clad peaks, which, in the fading light, seemed to reach into infinity.

Climbing the steps with our wraps and furs around us we entered a bare hall and knocked timidly upon a door upon which was painted the word "Salle-a-manger." Instantly it was opened by a young priest, revealing a dining-room full of people and a blazing wood fire upon the ample hearth. Being in the advance, I handed him my card. He glanced at it, then, with a quick bow, said in good English: "Cal-for-nia; the land of sunshine, fruit and flowers. Madam, you and yours are welcome." The room looked wonderfully cheery. Pictures hung upon the walls; alpenstocks caught my eye in every direction, and soon conversation in French and German was resumed. The priest, who seemed ubiquitous, was not, apparently, more than 23 years old, with a round boyish face, beaming with benevolence and sunshine. His very black hair was cropped closely to his head except a spot upon the crown, about the circumference of a dollar, which was shaven bare. His costume was a robe of heavy blue cloth belted with white cord from which depended a bunch of keys and a crucifix. His whole attire was scrupulously clean and neat. At the long, narrow table in the center of the room were seated numerous men who, like ourselves, had sought shelter there for the night. All were talking merrily. We were soon seated at one end of the table, feeling as hungry as wolves. Alas! the menu consisted of thin barley soup, black bread, sour wine of uncertain vintage, with a dessert of boiled rice and raisins.

"Did you expect nectar and ambrosia because you are among the clouds, girls?" asked grandpa, who had quietly eaten without comment this Brobdignagdian feast. Before we could reply, Father Victor Malloy—as the young priest was called—appeared, holding, in a brass candlestick, a lighted candle, to conduct us to our rooms. Following him, we passed, on our way to the foot of the stairway, a large, black tablet on the wall upon which was inscribed, in excellent Latin, the fact that here Napoleon and some of his officers had rested for three days and partaken of the hospitality of the

When The Masks Fell.

SOME MIDNIGHT BURGLARS ENCOUNTER A REAL LADY.

By Kenneth Carlyle Beatson.

IN the luxuriantly furnished dining-room of a large suburban residence, a shaded light, turned low, cast grotesque shadows about and the oppressive stillness was made all the more so by the leisurely ticking of the great clock

Presently, the clock buzzed for a moment and then tolled off the hour of 3. As if that had been the signal for action, a young lady in night robe and bearing a great candlestick, entered through the heavy portieres at one end of the room. Setting her burden upon the mantlepiece, she began, hurriedly, but with a certain air of stealth, to examine all of the drawers and closets about the room.

One after another she opened, and, after a short but keen scrutiny, closed, until something seemed to suddenly startle her and she stopped short with a little upward jerk of the head. For a short moment she stood thus, and then hurriedly picked up the candle and went out by the same way she had entered.

Presently the cause of her fright appeared. Two masked men, one large and slightly inclined to be portly; the other, small and nervous, came in from another entrance. The former, whose dense black mustache protruded a little from beneath his mask, produced a dark lantern and sent a tiny circle of light flitting about the room.

Presently he turned to his companion and said: "Go upstairs, Jimmie. There ougat to be only a young girl here. Lock her room, and make it fast, too. Understand?"

"Sure, Moike. Just leave it t' me," answered the little fellow, and went stealthily from the room.

The other now began a careful examination, similar to the one made by the girl, a few minutes before.

Presently the smaller one returned and reported. "Everyt'ing's all t' de candy, Nifty. She couldn't git ou fr'm dat room wit' dinimite. How's de layout?"

"Looks like we might make quite a haul here," answered Nifty. "Let's get to business. There's two more houses tonight, before we complete our list. These rich men's rural homes are easy pickings for us. Get out your bag, and we'll begin on de drawers."

For a while they worked in silence, removing silver from the numerous drawers and closets. Then, each started up suddenly, and, with a common accord, drew their guns.

A light appeared behind the drawn portieres. Jimmie faded into a dark corner, and Nifty stepped forward, with gun leveled, and stood waiting. The bearer of the light had evidently hesitated for a moment, but now boldly drew back the curtains and entered.

A low, sharp, exclamation escaped Nifty as he found himself staring into the face of a young woman, in night robe and bedroom slippers, and bearing a long candlestick in her hand.

A startled little cry had come from her upon first perceiving the man in front of her, and she had started back, clutching at her breast, but she recovered in a moment and broke into a little laugh.

"W-well!" she exclaimed, "this IS a surprise party. Why didn't you let me know you were coming? I might have been better prepared for you."

"I'll be damned!" exclaimed Nifty, and then: "Ye-es, you might have been better prepared for us—that's the reason we didn't send you our calling cards."

"But I'll do the best I can," she volunteered cheerfully. "Let me get you something to eat and drink. A person must get hungry sometimes—even one in your—profession. Besides, we nave a reputation of giving every tramp that calls a meal—which shows you that our hospitable record must be sustained."

In a moment she added: "But why on earth do you wear that funny little mask? You look so—so ridiculous. Anyway, even if I was ugly, I wouldn't be so awfully ashamed of it."

"Say, you rum," a hard voice cut in, "get yer ropes. Tie her up. Wot d'youse tink dis is—a party?"

"Oh!" The girl turned with a little gasp to the corner which nearly concealed Jimmie, and from where that person's evil-looking gun protruded into the light. "Put down that silly thing. It might—go off. And—pardon me, I can't see you very well back there—but, aren't you rather young to be out after curfew?"

"It might go off, sure t'ing," answered Jimmie, ignoring the 'atter part of her speech; "dat is, if youse moves yer top piece."

Here Nifty commenced to laugh. "Put up your gun, Jimmie. Can't you see that she is just a young girl, and couldn't hurt anybody? Come to think about it, a little bite wouldn't hurt us any. It will give us spirit for the rest of our work tonight—eh, Jimmie?"

Jimmie lowered his gun, with reluctance, saying as he did so: "Just de samee, dis ain't no call. We got de goods, an' we oughta beat it while our shoes is good."

"Beat what, pray?" asked the girl.

Jimmie looked at her in open-eyed amazement for a moment, and then burst out: "Well, of all de noive! Wot d'youse intend ter do, Nifty?"

"Come, now," coaxed the girl, "don't be cranky. I like my guests to be pleasant. Of course you'll have something to eat and drink, before you go. I knew you would. I will set the table for you if you will—lend me a few of our knives and forks."

"Come on, Jimmie," urged Nifty, "what's the diff? You know you're hungry. Get her some knives and forks."

"You'll end wit' us in de pen yet," muttered Jimmie, but nevertheless he did as he had been told to, taking particular care to pick out the lightest of the silverware.

The girl snapped on the lights and proceeded to set the table with a delicious and inviting array of eatables. The three then sat down to the table. Every minute or so, however, Jimmie would get up and walk nervously up and down the floor, sometimes stepping to the curtained entrance to listen.

"Pray, what is the matter?" asked the girl finally. "Are you afraid that some one will come and take off that mask? Please don't let that worry you, for I'll look the other way if that happens. Besides, I wouldn't be so vain for anything."

Jimmie turned to Nifty and said decisively: "Youse can stay here if youse wants to, but I'm goin' t' beat it. Where did youse put dat bag?"

The girl glanced quickly up at Nifty, who arose with an evident intention of complying, although reluctantly, with the wish of his companion. For a moment a scarcely perceptible look of dismay clouded her face.

For a moment all were silent. Then, the distinct "Honk, honk" of an automobile on the street below was heard by all.

The girl, with a queer little cry sprang up.

"They have come. At last they have come!" she cried.

Nifty was before her in a moment. "What does this mean?" he asked fiercely.

"It means that that horn we just heard was of an automobile that has brought officers here to arrest you. I heard you trying to get in, and telephoned the police. Then I made it my business to keep you here until they came."

"What did I tell youse?" muttered Jimmie.

"We ain't caught yet. Get the bag. It's under that little table." The words fairly jumped from Nifty's mouth. "Hurry!"

"No, de bag ain't dere. She hid it, of course. We'll do good t' get away wit' our hides. Come on."

The instant that the two men were out of the room, a sudden change came over the girl. With a quick little jerk she slipped the night robe from her and stood in a plain traveling suit. Next, she kicked off the slippers. Her face had become hard and white.

She sprang to a drawer and pulled out the canvas bag from where she had hidden it and started for the door.

"The boobs!" she said out loud. "They were too easy."

"Is that so?" inquired a cold voice, and the portieres parted suddenly, revealing the form of Nifty, and without his mask. A gun was held firmly in his right hand and leveled at her head.

"I've got you at last, Rose Allaway," he smiled. "I had a hard time doing it, though. I guess there are few places in this State or any other that you are not wanted. And I've got Jimmie, too, that pal of mine. Maybe you want to know how I turned the trick? Well, listen. In the first place, I'm Jem Maxwell, detective. I caught the real pal of Jimmie's just as he was going to join our little friend for the night's work. I promised him immunity if he confessed, and he did. I'm about his build, and so I put on his mask and impersonated him. The rest of it you know. I guess this is a pretty good night's work, eh?"

BRITONS GROWING TEMPERATE.

"It looks as if the younger generation would soon become altogether given up to temperance," says a writer in the English Gentlewoman. "Not only at clubs and places where men most do congregate does one remark this, but even at dinner parties and balls, where lemonade and barley water are far more in demand than the alcoholic beverages without which our fathers and grandfathers never thought of eating a meal.

"I hear, for instance, that a dinner party to a dozen guests was given by a very exalted couple indeed a week or two ago, and no champagne at all was provided, because experience had shown that hardly a glass would be consumed. Such a state of things would certainly make hosts and hostesses of the Victorian era rub their eyes in astonishment, and it remains to be seen what effest it will have on the coming generation; whether the boys and girls of the future will be stronger and better or per contra with much less grit and stamina."

English society is witnessing other significant changes, like the advancement of the dinner hour, and now it is declared that social celebrities are not seen as much at restaurant suppers as they were. The change is said to be so noticeable that it is concluded that supper parties may become bohemian again instead of smart, as they have been for a number of years.

BREAD CAST ON THE WATERS.

When the conductor came to collect the young lady's fare she discovered that she had left her pocketbook at the office where she works as stenographer. It is a predicament not uncommon with city dwellers, but the rest of the story as told takes a new and agreeable turn.

"Why, I'm afraid I haven't any money with me," she said, looking very much embarrassed.

The conductor said nothing, but stood there and waited.

"I guess I'll have to get off," said the girl. "I have left my pocketbook at the office."

"Here, lady," said a boyish voice coming from across the aisle. "I got a nickel I'll lend you."

She looked at the boy and took the nickel. "Thank you," she said. "I'll pay you back if you'll give me your name."

"Don't worry 'bout that," he replied. "I'm the kid you give the half-dollar to las' Christmas when you seen me sellin' papers down by the Savoy. I ain't forgot you. I'm sellin' papers there yet."

She smiled at him when he left the car and he was about the proudest boy in town.—[Denver Times.

A Glimpse of Porto Rico.

PLACES OF HISTORIC AS WELL AS OF MODERN INTEREST.

By Edith Mary Irvine-Rivera.

WE sighted land at sundown on our fifth day out from New York, and went on upper deck to get a good view of Morro Castle, an old fort, low-lying and stern, at the entrance of San Juan Harbor, and in the lights and shadows of a setting sun it made a magnificent scene, its lichen-covered walls bathed in the soft light of a glowing west, its light tower burnished with the halo of the last departing rays. This fort boasts over 300 years, having been built by the Spaniards in the year 1539. Long and strenuous has been its history. The Dutch, English and French have all made attacks upon it, but to no effect, and the only time that it has sustained injuries was when Admiral Sampson's fleet bombarded San Juan to test her fortifications and ascertain if any warships were in her harbor. On this occasion, May 12, 1898, one of its walls was slightly damaged, and the scar remains just as it was made some thirteen years ago. Its haunted sentry box is an interesting little place. Here, an old legend has it that a sentinel stood guard one night when the devil appeared to him, and the next morning the sentinel did not report, nor has he been heard of since. The Spaniards named it "La garita del diablo" (the devil's garret,) but it has in late years been popularly known as the "haunted sentry box." Morro Castle is now used as quarters for a company of the Porto Rico regiment, and it is also the San Juan lighthouse.

A glimpse at San Juan Harbor from the steamer shows us that the old city shuts in the harbor on the north side, and is built upon a small independent island. Its Marina is inviting, but the narrow streets give one a suffocated feeling just for the moment. Here are heat and noise and confusion; here is a unique mixture of things Spanish and things American, of conditions old and conditions new. A fine American trolley line spins in and about the little capital, but the width of the car line and the narrowness of the streets make a striking contrast. Moving vans seem to be unknown, for men trudge the streets with heavy trunks upon their heads, and it is nothing unusual to see three or four peons carrying a heavy piece of furniture from one side of the city to the other, yet automobiles of every description whiz about in uncommon number. In the central part of the city we find the spacious plaza which is typical of all cities in the tropics, and about which are usually grouped important houses, hotels and stores, which make of the square a bustling spot. Here we note a friendly, hail-fellow-well-met attitude among the passers-by, or especially among the natives. The sun may scorch with all its might or a shower may pelt suddenly as the pedestrian saunters down street in spotless white, but there is always time for a hearty handshake, a pleasant chat, or kind inquiry. Soon we learn that politeness is the order of the day in this little land of care-freeness and suave breezes, and he who is not "simpatica" is of all beings most unpopular.

San Juan is the rendezvous for the Americans, and so we brush elbows with about as many of our own countrymen as of natives. Fort San Cristobal is another historic point of interest, built by the Spaniards in 1639 and preserved by the Americans as a relic of the past. And it is well deserving of preservation with its grewsome passageways and moss-grown stair flights. We went all through the old place. In some parts by candlelight and again by the faint streak of day which glimmered through the ancient walls of the dark subways. We would no sooner pass through one and skip down some quaint old stairway than we would be confronted by another tunnel-like opening, each one arousing our curiosity more and more and seemingly leading us into the very bowels of the earth. We lingered a moment at the entrance to a mysterious passageway, for it is the dingiest of all, and we were informed that in Spanish times this was a secret underground subway which connected Fort San Cristobal with Morro Castle, and that since the American occupation it had been condemned. So after creeping along with bent backs and candlelight some 200 feet, we turned back reluctantly, our guide not being willing to let us penetrate farther.

The Governor's palace also attracted us. Central, yet overlooking the sea, it makes an ideal executive mansion. We are told that it is a remodeled fort, the first one built by the Spaniards at the time of founding the city and called in those days "La Forteleza." When the Morro Castle was built later "La Forteleza" was used as the residence for the Governor, and now being remodeled and modern in all its appointments it makes quite a palatial dwelling and is known as the "Government House." Gov. Colton's offices are on the first floor, followed by a finely-appointed suite. One of Miss Margery Colton's apartments is an exquisite little library, a dream of pink and white overlooking the sea from one window and the garden from another. There are other places of interest in the little capital which have their history, the "Casa Blanca," once occupied by Luis Ponce de Leon, the son of the great discoverer, Juan Ponce de Leon, and the old Convent of Santo Domingo, now occupied by the Supreme Court, and built in the year 1523. There is, too, a sign of aggressiveness about the city which promised

OMEDY OF LOVE ON THE COAST OF BOHEMIA.

She was invariably gently reproachful when he praised her work extravagantly, with quick flashes of intensity when some thought from him coincided with an idea of her own.

"If he wasn't so old, I'd say the Scribbler was in love with Cicely Scott," said the Critic one day to young Norris, as he glanced at the pair bending over a collection of her sketches and discussing effects heatedly.

"More crazy things have been known to happen," rejoined the other.

"Yes, I know, but he has seen too much. The love game is old to him. He is blase. She has seen too little. The love game is new—frightfully new—to her, and she still has ideals."

"She is the sort his kind always chooses," Norris insisted.

"She is the sort, I must admit, and he is the kind that measures the virtues of the woman he loves by the scale of his own shortcomings in the past, and chooses accordingly. That is the perversity of the sex. To be sure, he takes her to luncheon; he takes her to the theater; he walks home with her after work. Why? Because he realizes that for once he can talk to his callous old heart's content, and some one will believe him. It flatters his vanity."

"But the Scribbler is not very old," said Norris.

"In years, no. In wisdom, yes indeed. But Cicely is by far too fine a girl to be submerged into a character like Albright's. With her pure transparency she would soon reflect his very image."

"Unless she could succeed in bringing him up to her level."

"Girls still in their teens don't make levels, but find them," returned the Critic a trifle bitterly. "Water does not run uphill."

"Oh, people!" shrilled Annette Gray from the other side of the room. "Remember you are all coming up to the studio tonight."

"Am I included, please?" asked the Scribbler plaintively.

"Surely, stupid," she answered gaily.

"You are awfully sweet to an outsider," he murmured, and Cicely, glancing up quickly, saw that he was smiling at Annette and that the smile was returned.

For a long minute the old work loft grew suddenly dim and cold. It occurred to Cicely for the first time just how much she had grown to depend on the Scribbler to brighten up the weary tedium of the days. She glanced at Annette again, and realized how startlingly pretty the girl was in a vivid way. It had been rumored about the art store that the Scribbler was moderately well-to-do, and he could afford to travel about wherever his fancy dictated. Then, too, Annette was the type of woman that would grace any man's fireside, and it would be only natural that one accustomed to the life that throbs with vitality and pleasures should choose a girl like vivacious Annette Gray.

The Scribbler had strolled toward the door, and turning before he passed from view, he called back that he would see them later. Was it merely a trick of imagination, or did he pause and gaze with a world of longing in his eyes at Annette's dark head? At any rate, the sketching did not proceed so smoothly, and it resulted in Cicely's spoiling two colonial figures completely, and as it was a very important order, she was kept long after the others had gone, doing them anew. When finally she put her work away, pinned her hat on a weary little head and hurried down the narrow stairs that led into the spacious display-room on the ground floor, she encountered the Scribbler wandering about in an aimless fashion. The Critic was intent over his ledger as she passed his desk at the back part of the room, but he smiled knowingly as the Scribbler joined Cicely at the door.

"We had better take a car tonight, or you will be late to the affair at Annette's studio," he suggested, falling in step.

"I would rather miss the musicale than the walk," she returned wearily, "for I am sadly in need of the cool air after a stifling day. But please do not feel that you must see me home. Annette will be vexed if you are not on hand."

"What difference will I make to Annette?" he questioned.

"You wish to make a difference, do you not?" she said, wondering at her own daring.

Whatever his thoughts may have been, the Scribbler was too well used to the world to show any sign of emotion one way or the other. Still, as he looked down into the girl's upturned face, in which there was all purity, he was strangely moved. There was nothing of curiosity nor even a pin-point glimmer of jealousy in Cicely's eyes. In all the months of their acquaintance there had been scarcely a word of personalities passed between them. Of the two, perhaps, he knew less of the girl's past than did she of his, as he had disclosed bits from time to time in his talks at the work loft.

It was the first time the Scribbler had ever seen her in this mood. She was robbed of her peculiar little air of independence that had made her appear aloof. The uncertain twilight cast a shadow over her profile that brought out the gentle pathos of her expression, and suddenly she appealed to him as pathetically childish as she walked along beside him on the crowded thoroughfare.

"I had a dream of you last night," he said, evading her question, "and it seemed as though you and I were very far away from here, and I was visiting all of the places anew, seeing all the sights I have seen so many times through your eyes as though for the first time—and we were both very happy."

"Do not attempt to take me away from my workaday life, even in fancy," she said. "I do not allow myself the luxury of pretending, you know."

"I do not care about the unreality of the idea myself," he replied gravely. "And I could not help wishing that it was all so."

"I thought only girls had daydreams," she said.

"Oh, no, I indulge in dreams, nor are my thoughts all idle ones. I shall have little time for idleness in the next few months, however, as it happens my leisure hours will end at midnight."

"Then you are going away?" she questioned, vainly trying to keep the quaver out of her voice.

"Yes, I leave for Frisco tonight, and thence to the Australasias, and on to Japan. I wanted to tell you, Cicely, because—I rather hoped that I might take your good wishes with me on my journey."

"Oh, yes," she began breathlessly. "I have enjoyed knowing you so much. You see, you are so very—well, so sort of nice."

"I would like to write a book, with you as my heroine," he said as he turned away to hide a smile that played on his lips at her naive little answer. "You are the most refreshing 'different from other girls' of any I have ever met."

"You would have rather a hard time in interesting the majority of the fiction-reading public, I am afraid. In the end you would succeed in making me only a drab-colored heroine, as there is nothing very thrilling in a working girl's life."

"You are a strange little Cicely tonight," he said. They had left behind them the city with its noise, and were walking along the quiet and almost deserted streets in the residence district.

"I am a strangely out-of-sorts little Cicely. It seems so queer, too, for other times no matter how badly I am affected with this out-of-sorts malady, a walk under the dear blue skies, faintly alight with the first stars that peep through its velvety curtain, always puts me to rights with myself and the world."

"I only wish that I had it in my power to see things as you do, Cicely," he said. "If only I might take you to other lands with me—see the skies as something more potent than a blue dome to which we look for sun and rain—find consolation for all ills in the twinkling stars. Can't you show me, dear, just where you found the charm that unlocked the door leading into all the sweet little mysteries in this queer old world?"

"Why—I don't know, I always thought that you were so dreadfully clever that ou knew all these things. Is just to love to live such a very great charm?" and in her eagerness on slim hand stole up to his arm.

"It all combines to make you the most-to-be-desired thing in all the world, dear," he said as he captured the little hand. "You are all that is worth while to me. You are the sweet little oasis in the parched desert of my past life that separates it from the future. All that my future is depends on you, Cicely, and it begins tonight at midnight. Can you be ready to start out on the first lap? Yes, yes, dear, I know it is sudden, but I'll try to make up to you in the future all that we are leaving out of the present."

"You are a very wonderful person," she breathed softly, as he took her in his arms.

. . . .

In a snug little studio, some two hours later, a very anxious group awaited the arrival of two of the guests.

"Where is the Scribbler?" wailed Annette.

"Where is Cicely?" croaked the Critic.

"Here they come!" cried every one in a breath, as a very loud stamping proclaimed the arrival of some one. But alas! it was only the diminutive Tommy, puffed to twice his natural size by the vast importance of his mission.

"Why, Tommy," Annette began, "this is only for grown-ups tonight."

"Aw, pipe the freeze-out!" scoffed the youthful gentleman. "I ain't a-fergittin' me manners none. I don't butt in on no private parties. I got a date, an' only stopped ter deliver a message from a perticular friend of the bunch, an' ter tell yer the news."

"What news?" they all cried in unison. For once in his young life Tommy had them all "on the run," as he expressed it later, and he was bent on making the most of a very gratifying situation.

"Yep, the news about the weddin'," he said, edging toward the door.

"Whose wedding?" they screamed breathlessly, crowding him into the hall in their eagerness.

"Why, the Scribbler's an' Cicely's, of course. I bumps into 'em 'way out by Westlake Park, an' it was up to me to help 'em scare up the City Clerk and chase up the license. Gee! Cicely is so happy she's a-walkin' in clouds, an' has pulled the Scribbler up beside her in her smiles."

In the babble that followed this electrifying statement, Tommy bolted, yelling back something about being "in on a weddin' feed."

"Who said water couldn't run uphill?" asked young Norris of the Critic, when he could make himself heard.

"The treat is on me," said the Critic dolefully. "She is the sort that stops at nothing. She'll make the Scribbler believe in himself, if no one else does. They will be happy no matter what level they strike, and say! she wasn't so blamed transparent as she looked. Just take that from me."

THE ANNUAL QUESTION.

"Well, Hawkins, old man," said Witherbee, "has your wife decided where she will spend the summer?"

"Yep," said Hawkins. "She's going abroad."

"And how about you?"

"Well, I don't know yet," sighed Hawkins. "I haven't decided whether to stay in town or go into bankruptcy."—[Harper's Weekly.

"At the present stage of the game," returned the aviator, tenderly rubbing a bump, "the hardest thing we encounter is the earth."—[Puck.

The Art of Mrs. Perry.

HOW THE REJUVENATION OF DODSON CAME TO PASS.

By Frances M. Elliott.

THE dinner bell had long since clamored its warning to the retainers of Mrs. Perry's board. The ebon-hued Hulda had roused up from a half-doze semi-occasionally to obey its strident voice. She slouched in and out with soup, roast beef and tepid accessories.

Mrs. Perry faced her tableful of boarders from behind the big coffee pot, held in reserve against the weakness of Jenkins, who had been known to negotiate the fourth cup. Even now he was starting his cup and saucer on a long slide down the table.

Mrs. Perry eyed him coldly. "Where, may I ask, is Mr. Dodson?" she queried.

"Ah—er—hard to say," answered Jenkins vaguely, his gimlet eyes fixed on the cup. Bartlett had given it a final shove, and it landed cheek by jowl with the big coffee pot. A rival emporium was busy squeezing the life blood out of Jenkins, and he had no regrets to waste on Dodson.

Mrs. Perry was not to be diverted, however. She leaned her fat elbows on the table and transfixed the sallow Jenkins with a frigid stare. "Where, I repeat, is Mr. Dodson?"

Jenkins looked appealingly at his right-hand neighbor, Mrs. Hawkins, who was mincing daintily at her roast beef. That lady lifted her eyebrows nonchalantly. A Dodson more or less in the world was immaterial to her. Jenkins looked across at Tom Bartlett and Violet Perry. Bartlett hitched up his chair awkwardly and cleared his throat.

"Dodson had to work tonight, Mrs. Perry," he volunteered.

Mrs. Perry drew out a bald-faced watch from her bosom. It was close on 7 o'clock.

"Are you aware, Mr. Bartlett, that this is the first time in years that Mr. Dodson has failed his dinner?" she asked.

"The fact is, Dodson has a new position, and he's busy getting straightened out," answered Bartlett uncomfortably.

"Ah, indeed," replied Mrs. Perry, turning her shrewd blue eyes toward Rose Danvers, who sat at the foot of the table. "A raise for Mr. Dodson. How nice that will be, to be sure."

Rose choked in her pudding and rose hastily. "Excuse me, please."

"Certainly, my dear," replied Mrs. Perry sweetly. "No doubt you are well informed as to Mr. Dodson's good fortunes."

"You can't call it a raise," continued Bartlett, as Rose Danvers disappeared up the stairs. "The fact is, Dodson's getting old, Mrs. Perry. The old man's treated him white, and all that. He's put him in as second assistant. It's a good thing for all concerned."

Mrs. Perry's eyes flamed vindictively. "Twenty years Dodson's stood by old man Calvert and watched his grocery store grow. First it was a little two-by-four, Calvert out with a market basket doing his own delivering. You all know what Calvert & Co. is now."

"Times will change," interposed Mrs. Hawkins, patting her burnished locks as she rose from the table.

"And hair, too, sometimes," retorted Mrs. Perry, watching unmoved nature's red struggle with the delicate pink of Mrs. Hawkins's cheeks.

Jenkins had trusted his fortunes to cherry pie, but his thirst was still unquenched. "Now—er—a second cup——" he began.

Mrs. Perry brushed him out of her mind as she might have slapped a gnat off her chubby arm. "Old man Calvert's methods haven't changed any in twenty years," she continued. "It's been scrooge and pinch from the first nickel he salted down in his jeans until now his broadcloths are full of bank notes."

Jenkins pushed his plate resignedly and followed the svelte Mrs. Hawkins from the room. Mrs. Perry eyed them speculatively.

"What Jenkins wants to make such a fool of himself over an old grass widow, I can't see," she remarked.

"You don't know that she's grass," laughed Violet.

"She has all the trade marks," sniffed Mrs. Perry. "Who, may I ask, is going to step into Mr. Dodson's shoes?" she continued sarcastically.

"Tom has been appointed head book-keeper," answered Violet, unable to repress her exultation.

"Violet and I won't have to wait so long now," began Tom.

Mrs. Perry arose with a jerk. "You may have to wait longer than you think, Tom Bartlett, stepping into another man's shoes like that. Countermand my order at Calvert's," she said, turning to Hulda, who was eyeing the remnants of the feast voraciously.

The object of all this solicitude had tiptoed up the back stairs and into his room unnoticed. As he passed Rose Danvers's door, through which a light gleamed, he half-paused, and then took up his inaudible tread once more.

Dodson in his youth had been short and rubicund; middle age found him still short, not so rubicund, and a mild, highly ineffectual failure in life. Twenty years ago David Calvert had opened his tiny grocery and notion store. Looking about for a book-keeper—there were not many accounts, to be sure, but Calvert's eagle eye pierced the future—he fell inadvertently on Dodson.

The incubus of being a "gentleman" and wearing a boiled shirt ate deep into Dodson's soul. He turned his back on rough lusty work in the open, where his honest Irish blood had a ready outlet, and cooped himself up in Calvert's office. For twenty years he had kept the books, never rising above the dead level of mediocrity. Calvert lay awake nights wondering how to dispose of him. New men and new methods came up None knew better than David Calvert that "business is business," yet it was a full six months after he had decided to let Dodson down easy before he called him in to the desk.

When Rose Danvers's mother died and left her an orphan with nothing to fall back on, she turned her slender knowledge of stenography to account, and was soon thumping on an ancient typewriter for Bond & Co., a couple of impecunious lawyers. Rose was tall and slight, and "30, if she's a day," according to Mrs. Perry. She possessed a pair of wide gray eyes and a wan, rose-leaf beauty that set Dodson's susceptible heart to thumping the first day she took her place at Mrs. Perry's table.

But typewriting was as distasteful to Rose Danvers as book-keeping to Dodson. As he longed for the cool, odorous out of doors so Rose longed for an artistic career. She would rush home between the intervals of dictation, and paint feverishly at tiny pastels and warm, angry oils. She would scarcely have swallowed her meals had not Mrs. Perry made comments on the folly of those dieting that already had a "clothespin for a figure."

At first Rose's little sketches, masterpieces in her eyes, thrown confidently into the seething maelstrom, brought forth only derision, or worse, neglect. But her frail body held a tenacious will, and the gray eyes worked steadily on, until now, her fifth year at Mrs. Perry's, she had gained some slight recognition.

Dodson had wooed Rose Danvers with all the arduous endeavor of the shy man, while Mrs. Perry looked on wrathfully. He was too short, alas! to act as a model, and his profile too commonplace to paint, so Rose's enthusiasm for him was necessarily circumscribed.

Dodson thought of all this dully, as he sat in the dark chilly room alone with his hurt and chagrin. He arose and crossed the room stiffly. He opened the bureau drawer and peered in. The package of white powders lay there. Why not end it? Who would care? He put his hand cautiously into the drawer, and then pulled it out with a jerk. A knock had shaken the door; not the timid, self-absorbed knock of Rose Danvers come to thank him for the crayons, but the prompt, decisive knock of Mrs. Perry. He knew it well.

He closed the drawer hastily, switched on the light and opened the door. A tray of mammoth proportions preceded Mrs. Perry, while the protesting Hulda brought up the rear with a steaming teapot.

"Mahomet refuses to come to the mountain, so the mountain comes to Mahomet; by which I mean nobody is going to bed supperless in this house," said Mrs. Perry dramatically, plumping down the tray.

"I have a headache," apologized Dodson abjectly.

"And small wonder," ejaculated Mrs. Perry. "Hulda, bring the tea."

Dodson drew up and ate a little. Mrs. Perry sat down sociably and helped herself to a piece of seed cake.

"This is so good of you," murmured Dodson.

"Don't mention it," she answered. "It's more than some would do for you, not mentioning any names."

Dodson blushed. "Has Bartlett told you?" he asked miserably.

"Yes, he's told us," rejoined Mrs. Perry shortly.

"Did he tell it before the tableful?" asked Dodson tremulously.

"All but Miss Danvers. I've informed her, however," she said.

"What did she say?" asked Dodson eagerly.

"She was so sorry, but that her career interested her to the exclusion of all else," mimicked Mrs. Dodson.

Dodson sighed deeply, while Mrs. Perry's ample bosom rose and fell as she leaned toward him.

"You're wasting your time on that girl," she ventured, rising and taking up her tray. "There's those that do appreciate you, Mr. Dodson, but you won't see it," she called back softly.

No one mentioned the fall in Dodson's fortunes. One evening, several weeks later, Rose Danvers leaned forward between dinner and dessert. "Friends, I'm going to the city," she announced eagerly.

"To the city!" echoed Mrs. Perry, dropping a saucer with a crash.

"To the city!" echoed Dodson faintly.

"I have had an offer by one of the magazines to try my hand at illustrating. It means a career for me."

"I think the best career for a self-respecting woman is in managing a home and children," said Mrs. Perry acridly.

Dodson took this blow quietly, and worked on doggedly through the long, cold winter. Rose wrote him infrequent post cards enthusing over her work and the big, startling city.

It was in the early spring, when one morning Hulda was beating on doors as usual, arousing the sticky-eyed bread winners. No response came from Dodson, although he was the soul of punctuality. Trying his door, she found it unlocked, and entered. Dodson was rolling and tossing in delirium.

The doctor, when summoned, looked grave. It had been years since Dodson had had a vacation outside a meager two weeks' fishing in midsummer. Close confinement had told heavily on him. His eyes were bad, etc.

To say that Mrs. Perry was an angel of devotion in the weeks that followed is putting it mildly. "There's more ways than one to kill a cat," she chuckled to herself. She removed the ban from Bartlett, and allowed him and Violet to supervise the boarding-house.

One afternoon during Dodson's convalescence, when the fresh spring winds were blowing, Mrs. Perry had opened the windows and placed the scarlet geraniums in the sunshine. Dodson was seated in a big armchair braced up with pillows.

"You're looking more like yourself, Mr. Dodson," said Mrs. Perry briskly.

"I'll be out in a day or two," said Dodson in a lifeless tone.

"What are your plans?" she

Etherington," I began, having sought him exceedingly pleased to see you." (Recognition was finally dawning in his eyes.) "Rumor says that you're an authority on the schools of painting. Could you recommend any work on the Barbizon? I'm to give a paper on it before our City Women's Club." (For all any one knew, I did belong to the aforesaid club. My weekly city journeyings had been a master stroke. My "beau" resided there, some said, and that accounted for my new regalia. What an "old maid" must smilingly endure!)

Darrel courteously aided me; nor do I believe it occurred to him to question why I hadn't asked the librarian's assistance. We were undisturbed for a blissful half-hour, and then I left, knowing that I must not stay longer nor hazard the experiment too often.

Every dog has his day, they say—had I had mine? Continuing to garden, market, library, I was unrewarded by a sight of Darrel. Was he ill—or worse yet, had some stray gossip reached the faithful Eliza's ear, and had he been spirited away from temptation in the person of myself? Guardedly inquiring, I learned that he had been away and but recently returned; moreover, my conjectures as to the cause of his departure were only too pointedly proved one disastrous morning.

I was bending over a flower bed when I heard a soft footfall. (Spine-saving rubber heels for Darrel—French for me!) Tossing my golden curls, coyly I looked up, but oh!—Miss Eliza, carrying the market basket, eyed me witheringly, and, bowing stiffly, marched on.

I rushed in, tore off my gewgaws, flung myself on the couch, and wept—for the first time since I began operations. "But, no, I won't be downed!" I determined. "I—love him too much!"

Reasoning that Eliza could hardly go to the library for her brother, I went over that same afternoon. She could go with him, though; and there she was patiently waiting while he mooned about as usual. Pretending not to have seen her, I quickly deposited my book and left.

"Well, what next?" I pondered long, at last concluding that my sole chance lay in cultivating Miss Eliza Etherington—poor me!

Some days later, appearing unconscious of her icy greeting, I walked with her to the market—secretly wretched all the way. Clothes again! I had strangled every desire for one redeeming feature, being my old-time, dingy-bonneted, screwed-up-haired, baggily-dressed, slouchy-shod self. Eliza could scarcely imagine such a harpy was a-courting bent! And wasn't I meek at the market! What was her opinion of this?—did she think it worth 5 cents a pound?—etc.; and at length I partially battered down her wall of reserve.

For a season I led a gray existence, staying almost strictly at home, lying in wait in my sack-cloth-and-ashes rigging for Eliza to stalk along. My finery I indulged in only when departing on periodical city junketings, which, of course, I continued.

How I longed for a sight of Darrel!—and then, early on a Monday I spied him, coming slowly toward me. Snatching a white rose and loosening my hair, I hastened in, fastened on the rose with a bunch of curls, and otherwise decked out in white (over my rags!) On the porch I sat demurely, my heart racing however, when Darrel drew near

"How do you do, Miss Lily?" (speaking first!) "It has just occurred to me that I have seen you seldom of late. Indeed——" perplexedly, as if wondering at the cause—dear innocent!—"I have been abroad but little even when I was able to be"

Her sister couldn't have played into my hands thus early. "I hope Miss Eliza is well today?"

"No, these fogs have aggravated her rheumatism. Ah, how forgetful I am! She told me to leave a prescription order at the druggist's as I went downtown, and get it on my way back. Oh, well, I can yet turn about."

"Trying to keep him from the 'old maid's' path!" thought I bitterly. But hold!—what I'd labored to implant had survived, his steps had been instinctively directed here! This was my opportunity, also; and speedily divesting myself of my fancy garb, I prepared to start for Miss Eliza's. Poor Cinderella!—how she must have felt, continually changing from regal robes to rusty rags!

My knock on the Etheringtons' kitchen door secured a peremptory "Come in" from Eliza, who undoubtedly thought a tradesman without. She was greatly surprised at my entrance, rarely having visitors, and certainly not myself.

"My dear Miss Etherington, I came to ask for a recipe—why, how ill you look!" I commenced effusively. "You'd not be sitting there with your work half-done if you were not. I shall go right on with the dishes." And I did, regardless of her dignified though weak remonstrance.

Luckily there was a convenient window from which I could watch for Darrel, for I intended leaving on the shallowest pretext rather than have him see me looking so. But I had time to do and say all I wished, finally departing with the precious (?) recipe—and still he had not come.

For three successive forenoons thereafter I waited, prinked and girdled, should Darrel appear, but all in vain; and on the fourth day, was just going in when, wonder of wonders, he rushed into my yard.

"Miss Lily, Eliza is ill in bed! The doctor is with her, and she told me to try to get Mrs. Skelton to come, but if I could not—why, anybody. When Mrs. Skelton was unable to, peculiarly enough I immediately thought of you!"

Ah, yes, I would soon be there!—yet to wear or not to wear my oldest clothes! In seeking to propitiate Eliza, would I lose Darrel forever? At least I'd lose my self-respect; hence I took with me some of my neatest, but not my prettiest things (with only an emergency precaution—my white robes,) arranging my hair plainly yet becomingly.

My arrival merely elicited a querulous "You!—well, it can't be helped," from Eliza.

Being housekeeper and nurse, I had little liberty, even eating with the invalid—she had no appetite whatever when she ate alone! What with humoring her many whims, she left me no time to cultivate her brother's acquaintance! At the end of a week, however, Darrel sought me. How handsome he was!—actually blossoming out, free from restraint.

"Miss—er—Lily," he began embarrassedly, and I was thankful I'd been so circumspect, being much preoccupied or leaving the room when he visited Eliza. Maybe an inadvertent use of my name had first started her suspicions. "Miss Lily, I asked you to come here, but we must settle on some—ah—stated remuneration."

My cheeks burned—accept money under such circumstances! But I must calm down; it was not "such circumstances" with him. "Oh, Dar—Mr. Etherington," I floundered; then: "Let's decide on that when Miss Eliza is better."

"Just as you desire," assented he. And did I or did I not care because he gave no sign of having heard his loved name slip out unawares?

Undoubtedly I was staying indoors too much; Darrel nearly always took an after-supper promenade. Thus one evening, quite by accident (really,) I started out for a turn in the yard as he came from the library.

"This is right, Miss Lily. I fancied you were growing pale." "Pale!" Abruptly I faced about, feeling a richer color mounting, and blindly took the path next the house.

"Please," whispered he, "let us—not walk that way. Eliza might hear our voices; and—well, she does not approve of my being out after sundown."

I smiled up at him, and there was actually a twinkle in his eye. I'm sure I had no desire that Eliza hear me talking to Darrel! So, like guilty children we stole back to the front of the house, and an hour had sped away before I bethought me I ought to go in. I have only a hazy recollection of our conversation, other than that he was describing an ancient statue as we passed on the threshold.

"Come into the library; I have a picture of it."

Unutterably happy, I followed. Lighting a lamp, he went directly to the shelves, while I picked up from the table a brass vase of peculiar design and began examining it.

"Ah, this picture——" He stopped short and regarded me with staring eyes. "Why, you might have been the model for it!" (I had ventured to don my emergency robes.) "I bought that vase because it resembled this Grecian one. Would you——" he hesitated, "would you—object to my posing you by the dark portieres? Thus I might fairly behold my favorite reproduced!"

Would I! Joyfully I stood in high relief against the heavy curtains. With deft fingers he arranged my draperies, adjusted the vase, and stepped away to gain the effect. In his admiring, though impersonal gaze, alas! I had no cause for embarrassment; but when he drew near again, gently moved my hand and smoothed back a lock of my hair, my heart leaped. Aye, I was like a certain mythical statue by Pygmalion, developing life, waking even as the inspired ivory to the fullness of love.

Again he retreated. "Look up!" he commanded; but I could not. "Please do, it lacks the open eyes."

I dared not; yet he must soon read the meaning of my downcast lids. With difficulty I raised them, shot a fleeting glance at his face, and—oh!—my eyes now grew fixed with terror.

In the doorway stood Eliza, supported by Jane and Anne. Evidently the travelers had come in through the side entrance, and having secured Eliza's presence, had bent their steps hither; while Darrel and I in our absorption, were unaware of their approach.

"Darrel Mortimer Etherington!" came Miss Eliza's tremulous tones. "It's well your sisters are here to care for both of us!"

How terrible my position!—and Darrel, glared at by the three Fates, as it were, lapsing into his old downtrodden self!

"Have you no decency?" demanded Jane. "When you wrote that Eliza was ill and Miss Dale here, we canceled our engagements and came home, ready to snatch you like a brand from the burning. She is shamelessly pursuing you! Should a nurse be togged out in that scandalous contraption?"

He gazed at me dully, uncomprehendingly. All hope fled; the brass vase dropped from my nerveless grasp; I clutched the portieres for support. If he would not defend me I could urge nothing for myself, nor did it matter—my heart was broken.

"Stolen visits with an employer! Happily I shall need your services no longer. I will pay you immediately, and you may leave as soon as you wish," said Eliza bitingly.

"Is it possible, Eliza"—Darrel spoke slowly, with apparent effort—"that you thus reward one who has befriended you? Perhaps my imploringly expectant expression added to his courage; for straightening his tall figure and deliberately laying aside his army cape, verily a badge of serfdom, he continued:

"I dislike to say it; nevertheless, if each of you had been as daintily feminine you might have found favor—— Oh, my sisters! forgive me for wounding you. I——" he faltered, completely overcome by emotion.

"Darrel, can it be that you will let yourself be fooled by that creature?" asked Jane fiercely.

At this juncture I could not repress a low moan. He was defending me, but to what end? Then, my con-

Baking the War Bread.

LESSONS IN THE ART LEARNED AT SAN ANTONIO MANEUVERS.

By Rene Bache.

THE recent "maneuvers" in Texas, if they should have no other usefulness, will at least have yielded some knowledge of great value in regard to methods of furnishing our army with supplies of bread while in the field. This was a problem which had not hitherto been satisfactorily solved.

The War Department, however, has taken advantage of the opportunity to make the most practical kind of experiments with apparatus of a wholly novel character for the making of "war bread" in immense quantities for a great many thousands of soldiers living and subsisting under actual service conditions—the most essential part of the transportable outfit employed being an oven of peculiar pattern, invented jointly by an officer, Capt. Lucius R. Holbrook, and a sergeant, Patrick Dunne.

One of these ovens can produce "war bread" for 1700 men, or at a pinch for more than 3000. It is made of sheet iron, with a double coat and asbestos between for insulation (to economize heat,) and can be put together and set up in twenty-two minutes by the watch, including the digging of a square hole in the ground, over which it stands when in use. The hole is to contain the fire.

The affair, only about four feet high, is, strictly speaking, three ovens, one above another—an important feature of the contrivance being the flue, carrying hot air, which twists back and forth beneath and around the individual ovens in such a way that all three receive an equal amount of heat. When the hot air has been thus economically used, it escapes, with the smoke, through a chimney pipe.

The apparatus described can be taken to pieces in a few moments, and loaded upon a single wagon, together with all of the supplementary furniture, including tubs for mixing dough, a long table for kneading (with its trestles,) a dozen metal buckets for incidental employment, and an arrangement of collapsible shelves, likewise of metal, for drying loaves—this last being a rather particular feature of the manufacture of "war bread."

If it be true, as has often been said, that an army "travels on its stomach," it must be admitted that bread is the chief essential to its welfare. Hence it is that the various European governments, especially Germany and France, have made great efforts during recent years to develop and systematize methods whereby good bread and plenty of it shall be supplied, as fresh as possible, to troops in the field. With this idea in view, so-called "field bakeries" have been evolved on various plans, the latest German contrivance for the purpose being what is known as the "rolling oven"—that is to say, a sort of bakery on wheels.

When possible, bread is supplied fresh to troops every day. But this is not practicable when an army is engaged in active service in the field. Whence the necessity of a "war bread," which shall remain appetizing and palatable for at least a week. The "war bread" furnished to our own soldiers in Texas during the recent "maneuvers" remains in satisfactory condition for from ten days to two weeks, or even longer, depending upon the weather. The dryer the atmosphere, the longer and better it keeps.

This "war bread," developed by our own army bakers, and otherwise known as "field bread," may be described as a type of fresh bread with a very fine cellular structure and a thick crust. Being of dense consistency, it stands transportation well, and the thick crust helps its keeping quality. Experience has shown that the less moisture there is in bread, the longer it will keep, and hence it is that the loaves, after baking, are dried for several hours on skeleton racks.

It is not intended that the field bakeries shall follow close on the heels of troops on the march. They are to be operated at the nearest convenient base, the "war bread" being forwarded in wagons. Twelve of the new ovens compose what is called a "divisional bakery," and are capable of turning out all of the bread required for a full army division of 20,000 men. Such a divisional bakery has been doing duty during the recent military movements in Texas, and its work has been satisfactory in the highest degree.

A single oven in twelve hours will turn out seven batches of bread, of 216 pounds each, or a total of 1512 pounds. This, however, is only the normal output. Under emergency conditions two shifts of bakers can be used, a day shift and a night shift, so as to double the product. Each oven, with its appurtenances aforementioned, is a complete "bakery unit," and, operated only in the daytime, can turn out more than enough bread for any regiment of war strength, less than one pound for each man being usually enough. Indeed, the ordinary consumption is at the rate of about three-quarters of a pound for each soldier.

Mention has been made already of the "rolling oven" used by the German army. It is nothing more nor less than a huge oven on wheels, with a lower compartment into which the fuel is put. The contrivance is fairly satisfactory, but cumbersome, and impossible to take apart. One of the greatest advantages of our new military oven lies in its "knock-down" character, the whole affair being so light and easily transportable. To be able to carry the entire baking outfit for a division of 20,000 men on a dozen ordinary wagons—to pull it to pieces in a few minutes, and set it up offhand in another place, many miles away, perhaps—is a most important and obvious advantage.

Nevertheless, it was the "rolling oven" that furnished the idea from which the apparatus here described was developed. By giving the latter a "knock-down" character, and placing its compartments

There is also a black kauri gum which is rated as second class. Very artistic are the ornaments, and jewelry made from kauri gum of the first quality, while from the very large lumps pictures and statuettes, etc., are carved by hand, the gum lending itself to this sort of thing very readily.

"ON THE CARPET."

The primary use of carpets in Europe was to cover tables. The first of these so-called carpets were embroidered—not woven—fabrics, and were made in French cloisters about a thousand years ago. The manufacture of carpets in Europe did not begin until the reign of Henry IV of France. In England the industry was established about 1750 by a French artisan who, being at odds with his own country, fled thither.

Carpet-making, as a modern industry, was first developed in France. That country had large factories and a monopoly in Europe of the art of carpet weaving when a rush-strewn floor was the rule even in the royal palaces of Britain. But the Edict of Nantes, that great disperser of French artisans and artistry, caused many of the carpet craftsmen to cross the channel. They settled at Bristol, Axminster, and other places in the southwest of England. From there the secrets of the industry spread to Glasgow, Kidderminster, and the towns of Yorkshire. These places are still the great carpet-weaving centers of Great Britain.

The first carpet mill in America was not established until after the close of the Revolution. It was in 1791, at Philadelphia, that carpet-making as an industry was born in the United States. Since then, however, this country has become pre-eminent in carpet-making, for the same reason that it has won first rank in all the other textile arts and other industries, not through devising new weaves, but by the invention of numberless time and labor-saving devices in carpet looms.—[Henry Patterson Waldo, in Harper's Weekly.

A man named Wheeler was presiding over the lower house of the Montana Legislature when a lawmaker named McNally arose to make a speech.

"For what purpose does the gentleman rise?" asked Wheeler, with an air of great dignity.

He obtained recognition in no uncertain terms.

"Dig in!" replied Wheeler, and turned to his newspaper with a bored air.—[Popular Magazine.

TRYING FOR THE PRIZES.

HUMORS OF A SHORT STORY CONTEST THAT BROUGHT 15,000 MSS.

A man who waded through the flood of 15,000 MSS. submitted in a recent prize story contest reveals in the Bookman some of the secrets of the charnel-house, to mix metaphors in true contest fashion.

"Of the titles selected," he says, "a careful estimate showed that the one in highest favor was 'The Awakening,' with 'A Little Child Shall Lead Them' a close second. Titles like 'The Subjugation of Polly,' 'The Recrudescence of Billy,' 'The Winning of Marjory'—the thoroughly bromidic titles—were very popular.

"As for themes, stories of shipwrecks and other appalling disasters were often seized upon as especially worthy of telling. No doubt many of these tales were true, which made them seem, in the minds of the tellers, particularly desirable.

"Then there were the so-called imaginative tales of haunted houses, demented women who carved their husbands and families into bits, and stories of nurses and keepers who had frightful experiences with lunatics who were trying to escape from asylums.

"There were hundreds of stories (I was about to say thousands) which began thus, with a heavenly bit of description:

"'As the last rays of the setting sun tinged the world with scarlet beauty,' or 'The dying sun had just sunk behind the beautiful hills when Alice Marchmont, accompanied by her favorite greyhound, walked slowly forth upon the veranda of her gorgeous old Southern home in Virginia.'

"Two days after the announcement of the contest a story of 248 words arrived, ignorantly written in pencil on a bit of brown paper, entitled 'My Ride with Mamma,' and accompanied by this startling communication:

"'Send the $7000 by registered male, as need it to rase morgage.

"'MRS. J. H. SCHULTZ.'

"Then a woman, who wrote as if she ought to know better, sent this:

"'I write to ask a number of questions regarding your contest. First: Can I submit a story? Second: Will it make any difference if my brother does the typewriting?'

"For once the editor's sense of humor got the better of his manners, and he replied:

"'It won't make any difference to us, but will probably make a lot of difference to brother.'

"Although it had been plainly stipulated that no stories over 5000 words would be considered, a doctor in Colorado (why do so many doctors, lawyers and clergymen try to write fiction?) sent in seven novels, badly written but beautifully typewritten, not one of which was less than 180,000 words in length.

"Not only did novels come to this short-story contest, but poems galore, in every known and unknown variety of meter. And plays were offered in profusion, one of which began: "Scene: A winter day in January."

"Just before the date of closing a telegram from Toronto came to the editors. They had been wondering why they had been feeling so uneasy during the last days of the competition; but their fears were set at rest when they opened the night message, which read as follows:

"'Severe illness, ptomaine poisoning, prevents mailing story until last moment. It will go in postoffice before midnight of January 1.'

"It was signed by a lady of whom the editors had never by any chance heard.

"Next day came another night message from the South, which also dispelled any further fears the editors might have had that a fine story would not come into the office:

"'Have tragic story based on real incident in my husband's life, but no time for typewriting. Powerful plot. Shall I send it? Answer immediately.'"

—[Regimental ditty.

From which it will be gathered that the regiment was distinctly Irish, with a predilection in favor of intoxicating liquor. And so it was, but it was at this moment a long way removed from the land of the potato and "stirabout," having landed that very morning from the troopship Himalaya, at the port of Calcutta, in British Ind.

How it was that George Hogan, mail carrier in the United States postal service, happened to find himself in the uniform of this regiment on that same afternoon will have to be explained, and the telling thereof will carry us all the way to the city of Los Angeles, in Southern California.

George Hogan was a well-set-up Irish-American with a rich, inherited brogue, and was highly thought of by his superiors in the postal service.

He had been assigned to a rural route, and had captured many friends whilst making his daily rounds in his little mail cart.

Now, temptation lurks in the path of the mail carrier and is invariably resisted and overthrown; postmen being, as we all know, chosen from among their fellows as being of unimpeachable character and tried honesty, in so much so that any package that is registered through the mail, no matter how valuable, is rightfully supposed to be as safe as the proverbial church. Joshua Pim thought so, at any rate, as he did of every governmental institution of his glorious country, and was ready to back his faith and convictions to the extent of his whole fortune.

It was on the eve of her departure that his sister Martha expressed her fears as to the advisability of entrusting such a large sum of money to even such a reliable mode of transit as the United States mail.

"Well, what do you want me to do?" demanded Joshua, flinging his knife and fork noisily on to his plate, his meal finished. "Carry it with me and get held up in the train, or something?"

"Sure not," replied Martha, gathering the soiled crockery in a pile, preparatory to a washing. "I never meant you to be so foolish as that. Couldn't you get a draft from a bank and send it that way? That's the way Annie Redinger gets the money her brother sends her from New York. In a draft."

Joshua looked disgustedly and pityingly at his sister. "Have some sense," he said. "Don't you know we've never had any use for banks? I've never trusted any of 'em, and I ain't going to begin now!" And Joshua spoke truly, for the only bank he had ever favored—and that was of his own conception—was a flagstone at the farm, beneath which he had, for nearly forty years, deposited their yearly savings, where, though they did not yield interest, they enjoyed the protection of his personal supervision, and could always be easily handled and lovingly counted without resorting to red tape.

"Well, it's a mighty big sum of money to be sending clear across the United States, postoffice or no postoffice," reiterated Martha, scraping some disused particles of meat to a clean platter. "A nice way we'd be, with me in California and you on the railroad, maybe, and the place sold. If anything happened to the money, Joshua, where would we be? Los Angeles ain't Iowa."

They argued the point till bedtime, but old Joshua was obdurate, and next morning Martha started for Los Angeles, where she settled herself comfortably in a small hotel in the suburbs, leaving Joshua to complete the sale of the farm, on which they had toiled together for many long, weary years.

They had, at last, come to the sensible conclusion that they had earned the right to spend their declining days in ease and comfort, and in the most salubrious climate in the world, and Martha was to go ahead and select a suitable and comfortable home, preferably, Joshua had suggested, at one of the beaches near Los Angeles, as, never having been out of the State of Iowa, they would assuredly experience some novelty in gazing at the sea.

In due course the sale of the farm was consummated, and deducting sufficient for his journey and expenses, Joshua changed his hard-earned savings and the purchaser's check into a great number of $100 bills and formed them into a bulky roll, round which he placed some wrapping paper and string and carried it to the postoffice.

He registered it carefully and placed the receipt, which the local postmistress handed to him, inside the lining of his shoe, and did not experience a single qualm of doubt when she assured him that the package would be safely and duly delivered to his sister, Martha, in the City of the Angels, Southern California.

Now, $50,000 is quite a sum of money, and makes a very comfortable wad, and merits ample protection in the way of wrapping, which, I am sorry to say, it had not received [illegible], with the result that when it fell into the hands of our friend, George Hogan, on the last stage of its journey, its contents were ruthlessly exposed to his observing eye.

There is a well-known adage, and it is universal "Money talks."

It spoke to George Hogan, and it spoke big; in fact, it fairly shouted at him. A big round sum of money like that can talk loudly and appealingly to the best of men and to the most reliable of mail carriers, and it spoke with conviction.

He drove quickly to his lodging, changed into a suit of plain clothes, and without loss of time boarded a train for San Francisco, as he well knew that the hue and cry after him would be hot, and that the arm of Uncle Sam is long; but he had great faith in his own powers, and an unlimited amount of patience.

He reckoned that it would be some years before he could hope to begin safely to enjoy the tidy windfall, and that his only course lay in effacing himself completely in some unlikely quarter of the globe and in some occupation where the arm of the law would be least likely to probe.

He hurried to the docks at San Francisco, and by supreme good luck managed to engage himself as stoker on a steamer that was leaving for the Orient that very day, and after some weeks of torture and discomfort, found himself at that city by the mouth of the Ganges which has been made more or less notorious through grewsome tales of a certain Black Hole; while the unfortunate victims of his lapse from honesty, thus suddenly bereft of the fruits of their years of earnest work, were constrained to seek the uncertain comforts which an old people's home but grudgingly afforded.

To say that the great faith of old Joshua Pim was utterly destroyed would be wrong, for the faith of a lifetime is deeply rooted, and though Martha grumbled and wept unceasingly at the loss of their treasure, her brother bore up bravely and hugged all the closer his faith in the institutions of the government.

Now, when Hogan found himself in the port of Calcutta, he realized that the sooner he left the steamer the better, and the more effectually he effaced himself the better, and where can a man efface himself better than in the ranks of the British army?

This struck Hogan, as it has struck many another man, and the regiment disembarking from the troopship close beside him put the idea into his head. He sought the adjutant of the regiment and expressed his desire to enlist.

"Well, you're a well-set-up and a likely-looking man, so if the medical officer passes you as physically fit, we shall be very glad to enlist you," said the working head of the regiment, after sundry pointed questions had been asked and untruthfully answered by the mail carrier. "What part of Ireland are you from?"

"Wicklow," replied Hogan, who had a more or less secondary acquaintance with that county, from which his parents had both hailed. "I left there when I was a boy and ran away to sea. I've been at sea most of my life, but I'm Irish all right."

"Well, that's all the better," said the adjutant. "We haven't a man in the ranks who isn't, but most of them hail from Connaught. If the medical officer passes you, you're in luck, as we start at once for Burmah, and you're likely to get some rough-and-tumble fighting before you've mastered the recruit drill." And dismissing Hogan by turning him over to a sergeant, he flicked his leg with his "swagger cane" and strode off to cope with regimental duties.

The doctor put our friend through a brief examination and promptly declared him to be sound in wind and limb; and that is how George Hogan, mail carrier in the United States postal service, came to find himself in the uniform of a British regiment of the line in the city of Calcutta, in the land of Ind.

The adjutant had spoken rightly, for the regiment, which formed part of the expedition which was being dispatched to punish the Dacoits for their aggressive depredations and drive them from their fastnesses, was well on its way to Mandalay ere the week was out, and losing a number of its mess each night through the "sniping" tactics of the wily brown men of the hills, who, carefully eluding an open encounter with the British and nimble Goorkah regiments in open day, harassed them from behind the boulders on the hills above, by keeping up a desultory fire all night, at long range.

By express command, the striking of lights was strictly forbidden, though many a poor fellow, seeking the consolation of a pipe, suffered for his disobedience by being neatly "sniped" by the ever-watchful Burman, so it will be readily understood that George Hogan was not sleeping on a bed of roses, nor enjoying, under the protection afforded by the British army, the immunity from danger to which he had been accustomed when wearing the uniform of an honest postman in the land of the brave and free.

Many a night and oft did he long for the cooling breeze which wafts from the Pacific and stirs the pepper trees, and gathers perfume from the orange groves, to the delight of the dwellers of Los Angeles, and oh, how often did he wish himself back in his little mail cart, and how his heart did yearn for the cheery words of greeting from the old and young who used to watch so eagerly for his coming!

When such fits of despondency seized him he would slip his hand beneath his tunic and lovingly caress the wad of currency, which he had stitched cunningly inside his shirt over the region of his heart, and console himself with the thought of the riotous years of good living he would enjoy, when it would be safe for him to enter the realms of civilization in some delightful country where the arm of his Uncle Sam would not be stretched toward him.

He thought of Ireland, and decided that some years might be spent profitably there, and of the gaieties of Paris and the flesh pots of London, and, mayhap, when time had mellowed his offense White Way of Broadway might

A Double April Fool.

STORY OF THE PICTURE-PLAY HEROINE AND THE REAL ONE.

By Addison Howard Gibson.

BERT SPENCER and Kate Patterson had been playmates from childhood. Their parents lived on adjoining farms in the Middle West, and a warm friendship existed between the two families. It was only natural that when Bert became 21 and possessor of some brown down on his upper lip he should propose to and be accepted by Kate, who was about two years his junior.

The course of love ran very smoothly them until Bert took Kate, on March 30, to a picture show at Centerfield. On the way home they quarreled over a photoplay which they had watched in the showhouse.

"That woman was a fool to risk so much to trap the burglar," declared Bert. "She'd better let him carried on the place than to risk being shot or treated worse."

"I'd do just like her if I ever had a chance—if a burglar broke into her house when I was alone," said Kate, defending the picture-play heroine.

"Yes, I have a picture of you trapping a burglar in the cellar, then coolly going to the 'phone and calling a policeman," derisively laughed Bert. "You'd lose your nerve and go screaming for help and tumble all over yourself in getting out of his way."

"Oh, would I?" Kate jerked out the words in a way that showed the blood of her Dutch grandfather was warming in her arteries. Bert saw this, but paid no attention to the danger signals flashed him from the girl's blue eyes. In fact he enjoyed making Kate angry. She always looked so bewitchingly piquant when he could bring the blood of aroused indignation surging to her smooth cheeks, and the parrying of opinions that was sure to follow such an occasion gave him as much amusement as following some ridiculous dissertation by Bill Nye.

He continued to tease Kate by antagonizing her views, until she began to quarrel with him in earnest. When they reached the Patterson home, Kate was boiling over, and when the young man would have drawn her to him and kissed away her anger, she repulsed him hotly.

"Don't you touch me, Bert Spencer," she flashed, thrusting something into his palm. "I'd never marry a man I'd have to fuss with all the time. It's all over between us."

Without another word Kate slammed the door between them, and Bert was left to wander home cogitating bitterly over the result of their first real quarrel.

"My ring!" he whistled, pressing the circlet of gold in his palm. "I didn't think she'd go that far. Oh, well," trying to console himself, "if she's going to be such a Tartar I'd best get along without her."

With this newly-formed suggestion distracting his brain, Bert went to bed only to toss restlessly from side to side all night long.

On the morning of March 31 he arose with the assurance in his heart that Kate Patterson was the only girl in the world for him.

"Who'd want a wife without spirit enough to defend her views?" he communed with himself, as he fed and curried the horses. "I'll go over and beg Kate's pardon and we'll make it up."

Immediately after breakfast the young man very contritely presented himself at the Patterson farmhouse and asked for Kate.

"She drove her mother over to Brookdale this morning," informed Kate's father. "My wife's sister, Mrs. Sparks, who lives there, is down with the grip, and she's gone over to stay a few days. Kate will be back this evening."

But he was not destined to see Kate that evening, for when he called after supper it was to learn she had gone with a wagon-load of her young friends to a surprise party and would not return till late.

It was not till the first of April that Bert was able to see Kate again. That morning as Mr. Patterson and his hired man were on their way to Centerfield they stopped a few minutes to chat with Bert. In this way he discovered that she was alone at the farmhouse.

His first impulse was to rush right over and beg her to make up. Then he changed his mind.

"No," he said, as he leaned over the barn-lot gate and watched Kate whisk in and out of the screen porch in the performance of her household duties, "she went off last night to have a good time and never cared how miserable she made me. I won't be in a rush. The chances are the harder I'd try to make up the cooler she'd remain. I wish I could think of some way to make her laugh and put her in a good humor. I could make it up with her then easy, for Kate enjoys a joke. By George!" he ejaculated, striding toward the woodshed, "I have it. Kate has always boasted that I could never April-fool her. I'll rig myself up, then slip up to the back door through the orchard. I'll fool her and make her laugh in spite of herself."

Kate had gone off the night before with the merrymakers just to forget that she did care because she had quarreled with Bert. But the party had been a drag to her, and she was glad to get back to the privacy of her own room, where she could fight it out with herself.

"Well," she said impatiently as she glanced across the twenty-acre field which separated the two farmhouses, and saw Bert leaning mopishly on the gate, "if he doesn't think enough of me to come over the third time, he can stay away. I won't coax him!"

With a much-elevated head she flounced into the kitchen and began vigorously wielding a broom in the direction of the ceiling where no vestige of dust or a cobweb was allowed an hour's lodgment.

She had almost finished her morning work in the kitchen, when she heard the sound of shuffling feet at the back door.

"Who can that be?" she thought. "Father and Jake won't be back from Centerfield till the middle of the afternoon."

Peeping from a window she saw standing outside the back door the most disreputably-clad tramp she had ever beheld. A slouch hat came down over the fellow's eyes, almost concealing his entire face. The parts that could be seen were repellantly grimy. He gave the impression of having just emerged from somebody's coal house, where he had stolen a night's berth.

The fellow's appearance made her shrink back with repulsion. She quickly decided to lock the door and pay no attention to his knocking.

She was turning the key in the lock when the door was flung violently open in her face, and without a word the tramp pushed rudely past her and entered the kitchen.

Kate did not scream as she drew quickly back from him, while he closed the door with a slam.

"Now, me purty, ye'll be afther gittin' me a square feed," ordered the fellow with a broad Irish accent.

Kate made no move to obey the command. She stood by the table staring almost helplessly at the rude intruder.

"What ye's be kapin' in that closet?" he demanded, pointing to a door that stood ajar, revealing shelves where a plate of cake and some jars of jam could be temptingly seen.

Still the girl did not answer. She seemed to be petrified with fright. The tramp looked at her, chuckling to himself.

"Now," he said, shaking a dirty hand at her, "ye's be afther behavin' dacent, and ye's will be safe. I'll jest be lookin' afther me own interests, sure!"

With this announcement he grabbed up the silver spoons, where Kate had left them on the corner of the table. Thrusting them into the pocket of his tattered coat, he stepped boldly into the closet and began rummaging among the liberally-filled shelves.

In a second the fear-haunted expression vanished from Kate's face, and with daring purpose in every movement of her lithe body, she sprang noiselessly toward the closet. With a quick slam the door went tight shut. There was a surprised struggle on the part of the trapped tramp, but Kate's sure fingers securely slipped the strong bolt in place before he was aware of her motive.

There was the sound of falling tinware from their nails within the closet, followed by ejaculations that smacked of swearing. But Kate waited not to hear either. She ran to the telephone in the dining-room, jerked out the receiver, and called up the Police Station at Centerfield.

"All right, Miss Patterson," came back the comforting answer. "Hold him, if you can, and we'll have two men there as quick as an auto can carry them."

Despite the smothered appeals for release emanating from the closet, Kate speedily locked both the doors leading into the kitchen. This precaution taken, she armed herself with her father's shotgun and went out on the lawn, where the early plum blossoms were just beginning to whiten the trees and perfume the fresh spring air. An occasional sound reached her from the closet, as if a flour barrel had been turned over or the potato masher might have been dislodged from its hook and whacked the captive on his defenceless pate. But without a twinge of compunction the girl paced up and down the path patrolling the house and keeping an eye on the road for the auto with the officer from Centerfield.

Even sooner than she expected the auto came purring over the hill and came to a churning stop before the Patterson farmhouse.

"Where is he?" cried the officer, glancing at Kate's formidable weapon.

"He's still trapped in the closet," answered Kate, unlocking the door and ushering the officer into the kitchen.

"Let me out!" demanded the tramp, pounding vigorously on the bolted door. "Don't you know me?"

"Oh, yes, I knows ye," called the officer, approaching the closet. "Yer the slippery-fingered gink that's been fakin' silverware over at Centerfield. I don't need a introduction. I'm wise to you, all right."

As the officer shot back the bolt, the closet door banged open, revealing a hatless, disreputable-looking individual covered with flour, the contents of an overturned preserve jar rakishly dribbling down his nose.

"Bert Spencer!" cried Kate, with a start of surprise, recognizing him in spite of disfiguring rags, flour, and preserves.

"What does this mean, Spencer?" harshly demanded the officer, inclined to be angry.

"Just an April fool, McBurney," grinned Bert. "Kate has always boasted I could never fool her and also what she'd do if a burglar got into the house."

"Well, you found out, didn't ye?" returned the officer drily.

"That's what I did. Gee! She fooled me. She's more grit than I ever imagined," agreed Bert. "But here, McBurney," reaching a bottle from the closet, "I found some of the best home-made wine I ever tasted in my jail."

While McBurney was testing Bert's judgment of wines, the quondam tramp turned a somewhat crestfallen face to Kate and said pleadingly:

"Can you ever forgive me, Kate?"

For answer she brought the clothes brush and breaking into an amused laugh began brushing the liberal patches of flour from his coat.

"We're even now," she said, wiping the preserves from his face." You did fool me, and—well, I guess I fooled you a little bit, too, didn't I?"

"'Marriage,' said this man, 'is a mistake.'

"'It's worse,' said his wife. 'It's a crime.'

"'Why should a chap marry,' the man cried, 'when, by jingo! he can buy a talking parrot for $5?'

"'Five dollars!' exclaimed his wife. 'Well, that is another example of the eternal inequality of the sexes.'

"'Inequality of the sexes? How so?' said he.

"'You men,' she replied, 'can buy a parrot for $5, while we women can't get a bear anywhere for less than a hundred or more.'"

His First.

OLIVER H. CURTISS, the well-known sociologist of Omaha, said in a recent lecture:

"But our slums are much cleaner than the old, old slums of Europe. Our slum denizens are cleaner, too.

"Among us it is unusual to sew up children in woollen underwear for the winter—not so abroad—and I once heard in Hungary of a case that you will hardly credit.

"A man was arrested for stealing a pig, and they told him that he must take a bath before entering his cell.

"'What! Take a bath?' the man cried, in a horrified voice.

"'Yes,' said the jailer. 'How long is it since you've had a bath?'

"'So help me,' said the prisoner solemnly, 'I never was arrested before—never.'"

An Irritating Male Failing.

MRS. WILLIAM LEEDS, who has taken Mrs. George Keppel's house in London for the coronation season, came from New York with forty huge trunks, all the same size, all mounted with shining brass, all claret-colored, and all as lustrous as the body of a motor car.

Mrs. Leeds, as her forty trunks imply, dresses very beautifully. She spends a large amount upon her wardrobe, and at a dinner at the Plaza, discussing the fact that woman's dress is so much more expensive and so much less durable than man's, she once said:

"We women dresses foolishly, and we will continue to do so till men disapprove; but——"

She smiled upon the men seated at the table.

"No man in the world ever disapproved of dress extravagance in a woman unless she happened to be his wife."

Not His Cue.

GEORGE L. SHRONK, one of Atlantic City's champion life guards, was discussing his profession.

"Funny things happen to us guards sometimes," said Mr. Shronk. "A funny thing happened to my friend Tim lat week.

"A society belle from Spruce street went in the water wearing one of those fashionable transformations or wigs. A big wave went over her, and when she came up the transformation was floating out to sea. She turned and ran to Tim.

"'Oh, save my hair!' she yelled. 'Save my hair!'

"'Pardon me, lady,' says Tim. 'I'm a life saver, not a hair restorer.'"

"Like Sample."

JAMES WILSON, the Secretary of Agriculture, ended a recent address in Washington on the autumn crops with a crop story.

"A commission agent," he said, "looked carefully at a handful of wheat that had been brought him by a farmer's boy, and then inquired:

"'How much more has your master got of this, my lad?'

"'He ain't got no more of it,' said the boy. 'It took him all the mornin' to pick that out'"

Our Millionaire Book Buyers.

DR. L. A. BAER, the Frankfort expert, questions the genuineness of many of the books that brought such fabulous prices at the Hoe sale in New York.

"The millionaire buyers at this sale amused me," said Dr. Baer at the Grolier Club. "Before the Hoe incunabula, the Caxtons and Wynkyn de Wordes, the millionaire buyers were like Hans Doodle before the modern street car.

"Hans Doodle, a farmer from the interior, paid a visit to Frankfort, and was much impressed by the electric cars. On his return home he said.

"'In the '90s I saw them drive the cars with an engine; back in 1904 they drove them with an iron rope under the street; but not till last week did I believe that it would ever be possible to whizz them along with a fishing rod.'"

Revenge.

A MAGAZINE editor, having been cut on the Atlantic City beach by a plain little man with enormously padded shoulders, said to his wife in explanation:

"'Well, why shouldn't he cut me? He has produced a best seller, and all great men are vain. Look at Gibbon.

"Gibbon, you know, wrote in his diary: 'I am the greatest historian that ever lived. No one can equal me in this direction.'

"Victor Hugo wrote to Bismarck: 'The giant greets the giant; the foe the foe; the friend the friend. I hate thee furiously because thou hast humbled France. I love thee because I am greater than thou art.'

"And Wordsworth said of the Swan of Avon: 'There is an immensity of trick in all he wrote. If I had a mind, I could write exactly like Shakespeare.'

"No wonder, then, the weedy little chap cut me," the editor concluded. "But I'll get even with him. I'll snapshot him in his bathing suit and send the picture to the Ladies' Illustrated. This will cause his sales to fall off at least 80 per cent."

The Trouble With Arbitration.

"ARBITRATION as a substitute for warfare will do excellently," said Gen. F. D. Grant, at a banquet at West Point, "provided the contending nations don't show the spirit of Commodore Vanderbilt's tenant.

"Commodore Vanderbilt used often to arbitrate his tenants' disputes, and one day two farmers called on him in his function of arbitrator.

"The commodore, before consenting to act, put to the first tenant the necessary question:

"'Now, Henry, if I consent to arbitrate, will you abide by my decision?'

"'The farmer, a hard-headed old fellow, answered thoughtfully:

"'Well, commodore, I'd like to know what it is first.'"

The Lady Financier.

MRS. O. H. P. BELMONT, apropos of the establishment of a new women's bank in Berlin, said in a recent interview in New York:

"In Berlin, too, women will now become as clever about money matters as they are here. There will now be no more Berlin women like the one I heard of recently.

"This lady's first bank account was opened for her by her husband last year, and she dispensed checks so freely that the cashier had to write to her that she had overdrawn. She replied:

"'Gentlemen: I cannot understand how there can be no more money at the bank, as I have several more checks left in my book. However, as you say so, I suppose it is true, and inclosed herewith you will find a check for the amount overdrawn.'"

The Bright Side.

"BUT we must always look on the bright side," said Mayor Grice of Fort Wayne, discussing a party setback. 'We must all take a lesson from Hiram Husk.

"Hi Husk, you know, visited Long Island last week, and had his pocket picked at a side show.

"'I should think,' his wife sneered, on his return home, 'that you'd have a purty poor opinion of Coney arter bein' robbed of your purse like that!'

"'Yes, that's right,' said Husk; 'but I come out better'n some folks did. Why, Maria, the old banker's ward in the piece, beautiful Thais, had all her jools swiped, and the banker's wife throwed vitrol in his face durin' the same act I had my wallet stolen.'"

The Road to Matrimony.

MISS ELISABETH MARBURY, the dramatic agent, was talking at the Colony Club in New York about beauty doctors.

"The papers and magazines are full of their advertisements," she said. "They must make a great deal of money."

"But, Miss Marbury," said a young woman lawyer, "I have heard that beauty treatments are dangerous."

"Well, you might call them dangerous in a way," Miss Marbury agreed. "I know, for example, a very rich widow of 62 years. She took a course of ten beauty treatments, and last month married her boy chauffeur."

Vaulting Ambition.

NORMAN SELBY ("KID McCOY") was being commiserated with by a New York reporter on his bankruptcy.

"It was my too elaborate cafe that did it," Mr. Selby sighed. "I was, it is now clear, too ambitious."

He shook his head and sighed again.

"How true it is," he remarked, "that some men start out to rise in the world and land in the attic."

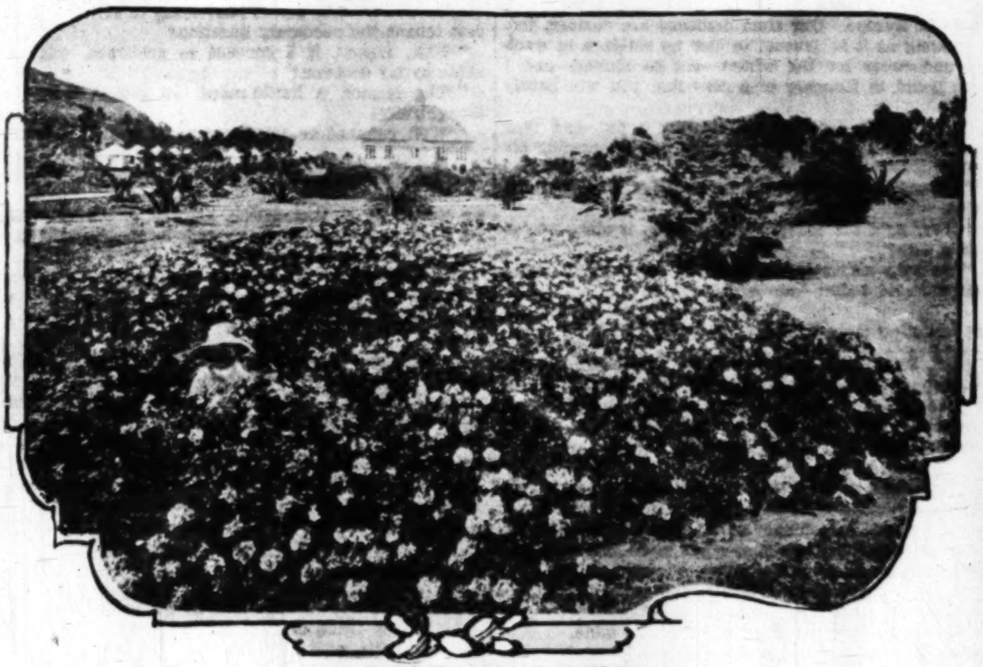
POISON IVY

HOW TO COUNTERACT ITS BANEFUL EFFECTS ON THE PERSON.

By Ernest Braunton.

THIS department has been used, in the past, to sing the praises of plants attractive to man, those of undoubted economic or ornamental value. Today we will consider a plant which nearly all shun, though one from the evil effects of which many of us are immune. "Poison ivy" and "poison oak" are misleading terms. The first was given merely because of the climbing habit of the plant, and the reason for the second is not clear, for it in no wise resembles an oak. Its proper name is poison sumach, and to the botanist it is Rhus diversiloba. Ours differs but little in general appearance from the "poison ivy" of the eastern States, which is known as Rhus taxicodendron, the latter name meaning "poison tree." The Rhus belong to the order Anacardiaeae, and are closely allied to the pepper tree.

The poison from these plants is a non-volatile oil found in all parts of the plant and remaining in the wood for a long time after drying. Like all oils, it cannot be washed off by water alone, but is easily removed by alcohol. Its dangerous properties are effectively destroyed by an alcoholic solution of sugar of lead, chemically known as lead acetate. It is not believed by experts that a person may be poisoned without direct contact with the plant, yet many are certain that pollen from the flowers contains the poisonous oil, which is quite probable; while some think dust lodging upon the leaves will absorb the oil and, blowing upon a person's skin, infect him. This may also be true. It is equally true that some are little harmed by contact and still others are immune. The writer has literally waded through acres of it, without harm, and yet avoids it whenever possible without too great inconvenience.



CATALINA ISLAND GARDEN.

So common is this plant that plenty may be found within the limits of the city o fLos Angeles, and that without going to any of the large parks. Being so common, it is well to know how to counteract its vicious influence. One coming in contact with the plant should lose no time in thoroughly washing all exposed surfaces and also all parts touched by the hands. The greatest harm is usually done by scratching one's self with finger nails on which the oil is present. If possible wash the exposed parts with alcohol, not in a quantity, as that would spread the poison, but in a little at a time, taking care that no drippings are used the second time. Washing within an hour of contact is generally safe enough, and if alcohol is not available use soap and water, lots of it, and many washings with fresh material each time. After the poison is in the skin the sugar of lead treatment must be given. Strong alcohol need not be used, diluted at least one-fourth is sufficient strength. To this should be added all the powdered sugar of lead that will easily dissolve. This gives a milky fluid which should be rubbed into the affected skin. The itching is at once relieved and the further spread of the eruption checked. The remedy is itself poisonous if taken internally, and should be kept from children.

Aside from our "poison oak" we have four other species of Rhus growing near Los Angeles. No other closely-related plants grow in our wilds, but many fine garden plants, especially trees, belong to the same family, Rhus trilobata (three-lobed leaves) most nearly resembles the poisonous species in that the latter also has three-lobed leaves, but R. trilobata is a low shrub and has a very strong aroma, very quickly noticed when one comes in contact with it. R. laurina is a noble shrub of attractive appearance sometimes nearly approaching the dignity and stature of a tree, as does another, R. ovata. Along our coast one may occasionally find another species, R. integrifolia, closely allied to the preceding species. The three species last named are all worthy of a place in parks or very large gardens, being attractive evergreens.

Wild Flowers Blooming.

THOSE who love to see wild flowers on their native heath should not forego excursions to the country by reason of experiencing a little warm weather. At no time of the year are our wild flowers more lovely than now. True it is, that many spring beauties are "faded and gone," but they were "flowers of a day" comparatively. Those requiring a season of maturity and greater heat usually take on the brightest hues and remain longer with us. There is no month in the year but numbers of wild flowers may not be found in full bloom.

Home Ground Arrangement.

WHEN the arrangement of the home ground is undertaken, be it small or large, the landscape effect and final results must first be fully considered, and, however small the plot, you have the sky, the ground and the residence as a basis to work on. To take advantage of the full beauty of Nature should be the real objective, so as to reveal from natural subjects all the many beautiful sensations a perfect plan has in store. It is well to remember that all good arrangements reveal the character of Nature, and it is this revelation of character that produces the impression we desire. It is in the endeavor to avoid ultimate dissatisfaction, and to promote harmony and natural beauty from the outset, that we enter so minutely into details in all the ground arrangements we recommend to our readers.

There are innumerable ways of arranging even small lots, but the salient points should ever remain the same, viz.: the long and broad views, the principal sites of observation and completed effects; for a long view is a long view, and a broad view is a broad view, and when you attempt to make them otherwise you are working against a development. The art of arrangement is to develop these views so they will give the required impressions. A knowledge of character enables the arranger to produce these desirable results. Look back on any pleasing results you may remember, and you will note they were not produced by the mere planting of trees and shrubs, but by the character developed, each individual plant performing its part in the completed harmony. Whenever you walk through a properly-arranged ground, beautiful views meet your eye in every direction, for the salient points have been properly followed, all objectionable features are planted out of view, and innumerable minor views are produced, many of value nearly equal to the principal. Perfection comes when cultivation and good arrangement join hands.

The principles of cultivation and natural beauty are radically different; the first is the production of material; the second is the production of sensation. The power of beauty sways mankind by sight and sound, and both go beyond the material; thus any attempt to materialize beauty results in injury or destruction. All natural effects are ever infinite and never limited in any of their impressions, and a garden arrangement should not aim to do less; each development should ever imperceptibly vary; each successional plant effect should unite lovingly in harmony with the curvature of nature, so as to produce a year of garden beauty.

ERE PEPPERS THRIVE.

ADAPTED TO LOCATION NEAR THE COAST.

es for street and roadside planting, the most beloved and most desired, yet it be planted without judgment, for it does e thrive. Down at Del Mar, a little north , are some now twenty-five years of age r eight feet high. It is known that the ot thrive near the coast as it does far inwriter would strongly favor restricting its e territory on the inland side of Los An t the coast the black scale also thrives ere well to plant in such district trees not pest. Where pepper trees are properly well cared for, they are seldom much black. That some in Los Angeles are a ace to all concerned the writer is willing, admit, for thereby hangs a moral.

l if a single pepper now standing in this erly planted. The writer has never seen tree well planted within the city except on Elgin street under his direction. This ther strong as a claim, but the average nurseryman has much to learn concern ng. To illustrate, the following account g was given by Mrs. S. P. Rhoades of ard of Forestry. About three years ago to the South Hollywood Improvement reet Tree Planting," and as a result a e made for co-operative planting. It was

e first street to be planted should be given over to two residents, neither of to know anything about the matter y general way.

d of the street was taken in charge by and, wishing to have the work properly e contract to a local nurseryman who sh and plant the street at a stated price trees were three to four feet high and holes made just large enough to take h. The lower blocks were given to Dr. e confessed ignorance of planting meth g well the writer's directions, he hired holes three feet square and of a like the soil before replacing with some d manure, settling with water and in nted small trees costing about 10 cents e now large trees of luxuriant growth, a planter and the neighborhood. The oth n size, poor in health, only half as large, ping up the struggle for existence. The y holes and small trees," rather than small holes. Were pepper trees planted d these acacias planted, and no imper hardpan existed below, they would flour y without being seriously infested with buckling curb or sidewalk, though the ill be cut off at the end of the first the main of the "wattle" section of the ing a recent captious criticism of the e veteran tree warden writes: "Our knock at the pepper tree last week was ill will to harm. By neglect, or per planting he may have allowed the n his frontage to have become disreputable, but he has no right to judge others from them. Not 1 per cent. of our pepper trees comes under his description. His claim that they are universally scale breeders is bosh. One thing—your uniform, judicious, constant plea for the tree will render his tirade of little influence."

As before stated, trees should be properly planted and well cared for in youth if good results are to be had. The pepper trees above noted were set out some years before the present owner acquired the property and were owned, so the writer is informed, by one noted for his closeness, so that no proper care has ever been given. For their age they are the smallest and most disreputable pepper trees the writer knows of, and should either be taken out or given some drastic treatment below ground, for that is where the trouble lies. Nevertheless, let us not sprinkle pepper trees all over our sunny south. They are grand at Redlands and Riverside, but coastal sections would do well to avoid them. Every city should "play its own game," not that of some other place. Long Beach, Santa Monica, and other coast cities now about to take up official street planting should choose a list found by experience to be suited to their needs. Alhambra is an example of a city choosing unwisely, for they have the magnolia on their official list, a tree seldom found satisfactory under the best conditions anywhere south of Sacramento, and certainly illy adapted to street conditions anywhere. All places contemplating planting extensively should seek expert advice. Still, let us keep the pepper inland and where the soil is loose to a considerable depth.

Monotonous Street Planting.

WHEN shall we get down to a sensible system on wide streets and avenues and obtain parkways of sufficient width so that we may avoid straight lines of trees and have real parkways filled with groups of trees and masses of shrubbery. Some of our streets, thickly planted to tall, strict-growing trees, afford one no broader views than obtainable in a deep canyon. There is no question but we plant street trees too thickly and too often gain, after a lapse of years, a roofless tunnel of green. Such streets shut out lovely rural views, mountain views or coastal outlooks that should constitute the chief attractions of the district. Street planting, like garden planting, should always be done with the outlook in view, the distant prospect of earth, sky, mountain, or sea. With wide parkways we may have our walks in long, sweeping, slight but graceful curves passing first to the right and then to the left of tree clumps or shrubbery. They would then be narrow parks or parkings. We would in this manner overcome the harsh, monotonous street lines and both driver and pedestrian be treated to an ever-changing scene instead of living tenpin alleys. All residence sites abutting would be enhanced in value if we followed this natural method of street planting, never an exact duplication to be found in any single mile of it. Then indeed would art prevail.

Narrow Drives and Wide Parkings.

AT our late Street Tree Conference William M. Humphreys, of the Board of Public Works, told us something of the enormous expense of the upkeep of useless street surfaces. We have streets with drives measuring fifty or sixty feet from curb to curb, where the traffic is confined to a few delivery wagons passing over the middle twelve feet. Suppose these were narrowed to twenty or thirty feet, the remainder thrown into parkways planted to groups of trees and shrubs; the residents would virtually live in a park, for that would be the effect when looking across the two parkways to the opposite houses. Mr. Humphreys made a plea for the reduction of street surfaces merely on the ground of economy, the lessened first cost and maintenance; but it would also allow us to make a beautiful city in sections whereby otherwise we cannot.

The Arroyo Seco Park.

AFTER long years of labor by many people and many organizations, the scheme of converting the great Arroyo Seco into a public park seems near fruition. For more than twenty years the people of Garvanza have been laboring toward this end, but time was not ripe, and such a small number of people was impotent to impress the city as a whole. Now that the matter has been under consideration by the Park Commission, we may hope for satisfactory results. Some of the loveliest scenes in Southern California are to be met with in a trip up this wonderful natural chasm.

Deciduous Trees for Cities.

AN exhaustive investigation in many large eastern cities has shown that many beautiful deciduous trees that thrive in town, village and country will not endure the hard conditions to be found in all large centers of population.

The trees recommended for planting in large cities are: Red oak (Quercus rubra,) pin oak (Q. palustris,) scarlet oak (Q. coccinea,) black oak (Q. velutina,) shingle oak (Q. imbricaria,) willow oak (Q. phellos,) Oriental sycamore (Platanus orientalis,) American sycamore (Platanus occidentalis,) Aoilanthus glandulosa, Norway maple (Acer platanoides,) maidenhair tree (Ginkgo biloba,) American ash (Fraxinus Americana,) sweet gum (Liquidamber styraciflua,) Kentucky coffee tree (Gymnocladus dioica.)

Those found to perish in the midst of smoke, dust, gas, and the other hard conditions the city affords, but which will thrive in villages if given proper care, are: American elm (Ulmus Americana,) silver maple (Acer saccharinum,) horse chestnut (Aesculus Hippocaslanum,) American linden or basswood (Tilia Americana,) tulip tree (Liriodendron tulipifera,) black locust (Robinia pseudacacia,) weeping willow (Salix Babylonica.) All of these species will grow in California where conditions are made as good as possible for them and frequent summer waterings are not overlooked.

A Local Botanic Garden.

WHEN our park department shall have somewhat caught up with propositions now on foot we shall expect them to lay the foundations for an adequate botanic garden, where may be assembled the vegetation of the whole world if we except the strictly tropical belt. Such a collection, aside from making us famous throughout the earth, would serve as a valuable object lesson to intending planters and park and garden builders. In a few years it would extend our garden planting list a hundred fold and thereby relieve us of much of the present-day monotony and sameness to be seen in both park and garden. We are now overdone with palms, araucarias, etc., and need a few new and suitable additions to our plant collections.

THE BANGOR ELMS.

Over eighty magnificent elm trees were sacrificed in the recent Bangor fire. Only such trees as were entirely girdled by the fire and of which there can be no possible hope of saving are being taken down. Others where the trees have budded or there is enough bark left to allow the circulation of the sap are to remain until it is definitely known whether or not they will survive the damages of the flames.

The loss to the city in its splendid shade trees cannot be estimated in money, and it will be years before some of them are replaced. The park commissioners plan to set out trees to replace the loss whenever an appropriation is available for such purpose. Some of the wood from the trees is being sold and the money is being turned over to the City Treasurer to be devoted to the use of the Park Commission in carrying on its work.—[Lewiston Journal.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

EXPERIMENT AND PRACTICE.

DRY HOPPER FEEDING AND EGG-PRODUCTION DISCUSSED.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

IN the following timely correspondence on the question, "Does Dry-hopper Feeding Lead to the Highest Egg Production?" Joseph Guidinger, one of the most advanced poultry breeders in Los Angeles county, gives some suggestions and conclusions based on personal experiences and careful observation:

"I note your encomiums on dry-hopper feeding method as practiced in this State, and also the summary of results of an experiment by the Virginia Experiment Station, reported in Bulletin 130, which does not of itself prove that the hopper system is the best way to feed, but only proves that it is better than the wet-mash system it was compared with. If my memory serves me right, it was through the poultry literature so generously distributed by the Maine Experiment Station that this dry-hopper feeding system came into wide use, and its popular approval is probably mostly due to the fact that it apparently saves some labor. Now, in this connection it is also of more than passing interest to know that it is the Maine Experiment Station that has made some very extensive experiments and studies on the particular subject of egg production, which were considered of sufficient importance to be published in minute detail by the United States Department of Agriculture, Bulletin 110, Parts I and II.

"On Page 12 of Part I, I find that all birds in hand at the beginning of the breeding experiment in 1898 had been pure-bred for some years by Prof. Gilbert M. Gowell, and that in breeding the birds from 1898 down to the close of the experiment in 1907 the practice has been to use each year, as mothers of the stock produced in that year, only hens which have in their pullet year laid 160 or more eggs; and that the fathers of all stock raised were the sons of hens which in their pullet year laid 200 eggs or more. According to all data and theory on the subject, such breeding programme should result in high egg records being maintained or even surpassed from year to year until the limit of production had been arrived at; providing the other factors in the equation were of an equally high order of excellence for egg production. However, on Page 74 of Part I, in Paragraph 3 of summary of results we find that during the years of the breeding experiment 1899-1907 there has been a steady decrease in the average annual egg production.

A FINE FLOCK OF WHITE PEKING DUCKS.

"On Pages 58-63 of Part I and Pages 112-122 of Part II we find that the station has given considerable attention to the factor of housing; but we do not find that any special knowledge was sought on the factor of food and method of feeding. I am of the firm belief that if the station had used only fifty-bird flocks and fed them in a better way than the dry-hopper method they would not have arrived at the discouraging conclusion that 'there is no evidence that the selective breeding practiced has improved the strain in respect to egg production,' the production having steadily decreased.

"To give you my arguments in extenso on this subject of feed hoppers I cannot do better than quote from some correspondence I had with the director of the Maine station, Prof. Charles D. Woods, who makes no attempt to defend the hopper method of feeding. In a letter from the poultry expert of the South Australia Poultry Experiment Station at Roseworthy, D. F. Laurie says he used these hoppers twenty years ago; that he has no use for them now, and that the system is that of the lazy man. These comments by Mr. Laurie should be of particular interest to us, because when we are discussing the subject of egg production we must take off our hats to our friends at the antipodes, as witness what the Maine station people say in regard to them (Page 54 of Part I, Bulletin 110:)

"'To be able to select from a flock of pullets which have not yet begun laying a pen of individuals capable of making an annual average such as those we find in these Australian statistics would certainly seem indicative of high laying capacity in the general flock. In the second Rockdale competition the highest single pen of six White Leghorns laid 1473 eggs in the year, an average of 245 eggs per bird. Now, if we select the six best laying birds which have been found in the whole eight years covered by our statistics we get a total of 1439 eggs, an average of 239 eggs per bird.'

"And Mr. Laurie made even a better record than that at the Roseworthy station, namely: 1531 eggs by a pen of six White Leghorns, an average of 255 eggs per bird, in the year 1909-10.

"For those who are engaged only in the fancy department of the poultry business, the hopper system of feeding will no doubt give entirely satisfactory results, as the birds to score high and win at the shows do not require food in excess of body maintenance. But for those who are in the game for the production of eggs and meat, particularly if heavy egg production is desired, the hoppers must be relegated to the limbo of forgotten things, and a high-quality feeding system adopted whereby the birds will eat and digest the maximum amount of food that they may have the requisite quantity of material to fill the egg baskets to overflowing."

Now will some of the other breeders tell us of their experiences with the system?

The Poultry Industry in Russia.

In a way, for want of wider reading and observation, we are apt to come to the opinion that the United States leads all other nations in the production of hen fruit, and the growing of domesticated fowl; but in the language of the street, "There are others." For instance, the town of Odessa, situated on the Black Sea in Russia (with a population of about 500,000 people,) has made an enviable record as a poultry export shipping point. From a summary of articles appearing in the local paper the following particulars are gleaned:

"Poultry farming has made the greatest progress in the more thickly populated parts, and the export of eggs has increased from 1,686,000,000, valued at £3,023,000 in 1899, to 2,845,000,000, worth £6,566,000, in 1909. The increase in value is far greater than in quantity, and it is ascribed rather to the improved quality of the produce than to the general rise in food prices, though doubtless the latter is partly responsible.

"Besides eggs there is a considerable export of dead fowls, the value of which rose from £834,000 to £1,509,000. In addition, feathers and down of the value of £190,000 are exported, so that the value of all poultry products amounts to £8,265,831, as against £3,857,008 in the year 1899. In spite of the increasing export and of the rising prices of poultry products, the consumption within the country increases, not only among well-to-do customers, but also among the producing peasant farmers themselves."

If the reader will multiply the sums given in English money by $4.86, the equivalent of the pound sterling in American money, he will readily see that the poultry industry of that faraway section amounts to millions of dollars annually.

The Fowl Tick.

This pest of the domesticated hen is not unknown in Southern California, though not so common as the lice and mites proper. It is, however, more difficult to combat with either insect powder and liquid lice killers. There are those who advance the opinion that its presence in great numbers may transmit a specific disease to poultry, though up to the present time no evidence of such consequences has come to the writer's attention. In Brazil, the Soudan, India and South Australia, it has been demonstrated that such is really the case.

This tick can be easily identified. The engorged adult is about one-third of an inch in length, of a bluish or almost blackish color, a conspicuous, and a feature is its flattened form and the rough or pitted appearance of the skin. The unengorged tick is smaller, flat and of a brownish-yellow color. The eggs are deposited in cracks and crevices of the poultry-house; when hatched the tick is ready to attach itself to the bird, and in from three to eight days engorges and drops. In a week's time it sheds its skin, becomes a nymph, and is ready to attach again, but only for a few hours, which operation is repeated a second time, when the adult tick emerges. After engorgement and mating, the deposition of eggs takes place, the female attaches to the host and fills with blood, secretes itself, again deposits eggs, which may be repeated as many as six times.

This pest is nocturnal in its habits; it is also a "tough customer." The writer kept a specimen fully three months, when it still showed motion; the government entomologist reports instances of it being kept alive without nourishment for a period extending over a year. Remedial measures act purely as preventives, consisting of hanging perches from suspended wires, so arranged that the ticks are unable to reach the birds. In the case of sitting hens the same immunity may be secured by providing nest boxes on legs placed in vats or cups of crude oil.

Citrus Fruits and Hen Fruit.

Before an orange or lemon grove attains maturity it affords ideal conditions for poultry-houses and runs; after the trees attain size it is apt to be too shady and damp during the rainy winter months—conditions which are apt to engender colds and more serious ailments. In the warm dry summer weather, however, Biddy is not adverse to the environment of an orange grove.

d Farrars receive so much for each e guaranteed so many appearances in the season. Some of them also have clauses in their contracts forbidding the impresario to compel them to sing more than three times in one week. The girl with the monthly salary has no guarantee of appearances. She may walk around for six months without being heard once in this city or she may have to sing seven times in eight days. She has no choice in the matter.

It may be taken for granted that to the best of his ability the impresario will utilize the young singer to the best advantage. But he cannot always do so. Not infrequently the exigencies of occasions will force him to cast her for roles unsuited to her voice, and the young woman who fondly hoped at some not too distant day to get her chance as Gilda may find herself shrieking the velvet off her voice in the wild "Hojotoho" of Rossweise.

All this refers to the passionately-sought American engagement. Now let us look at it from the other side of the bright blue sea. Let us take first the case of a young woman who has gone to Berlin to study piano. What has she to do with opera? Altogether too much. Five out of eight of them find that studying piano is not child's play. They discover that no amount of labor will transform them into Aus der Ohes or Zeislers, and the studio of the master is not like Gabor Arany's. Their money runs low. Their ambition sinks. They are thinking of giving up in despair and returning home, when suddenly some friend says: "But you have a voice!"

Then follows the advice to study singing, and the next thing we know the young woman has rushed off to Herr Lautgeschrei to study "voice." But her money was exhausted? Oh, yes, dear reader, but there are ways of adjusting such difficulties, and they are practised so assiduously in Berlin that American women have a most unenviable reputation there. But of course all the young women who seek the operatic career in Europe do not begin as students of piano. Certainly not. There is the great and glorious operatic land of Italy. Thousands of them go there year after year, not only young girls, but women who possess honest and devoted husbands struggling along in this country and vainly hoping that their wives may recover from the operatic hallucination.

To be sure you can understand that there must be soem little trouble in getting a first hearing. There is no trouble at all. The student goes to Italy and places herself under some well-known master. The rest is easy. He procures her a hearing before an impresario. Then comes the business proposition. "The signorina understands, does she not, that it is very costly to conduct operahouses?" Of a certainty the signorina has guessed this. She waits to hear an offer of 25 lire a week. Nothing of the kind. The amiable impresario suggests to the signorina that an appearance can be arranged not by his paying her but by her paying him. And much! The signorina is staggered. It is impossible. Then, sighs the impresario, he does not know how she will ever obtain a debut, for it it must be on the same terms anywhere else in Italy.

Then the signorina looks sadly at the carpet and the impresario pensively pats his own knee. At length in a most gentle and insinuating voice he remarks: "But doubtless the signorina has some good friend who would be glad——?"

He pauses with an interrogatory inflection, and the signorina slowly gathers in the meaning of his suggestion. And this, dear reader, is a business proposition which is often made. Sometimes the money for the debut is procured in a manner not to be criticised, but it must be procured. Unless, as is sometimes the case, the impresario is willing to be the friend himself. There are many kind impresarios in Europe.

But Italy is not the only country in Europe, is it? Certainly not. One may elect to begin in Germany. Well, even in the land of Martin Luther there is still room for reformation. Sometimes by the use of political or social influence the young singer can break into a German operahouse, but she is not wanted there and is admitted only under pressure.

Once upon a time something was accomplished in a European operahouse of Teutonic origin by the exercise throughout a period of two years of influence emanating from England. A titled personage in Britain kept hard at a titled personage in this Teutonic town till the latter in self-defence pestered the monarch and the thing was finally accomplished.

Few singers can pull such a heavy wire as this, but sometimes the American Consul-General or an embassy attache may manage to do something. Quite as often the young aspirant has to pay, or at best to sing year after year for almost nothing.

There are in Europe today American singers who have held leading positions for several years and who are still dependent on funds supplied by American backers. These singers get excellent criticisms and are continually making successes, but they cannot make a living. Neither can they get engagements at the Metropolitan Operahouse, although they are all trying.

fused faculties failed to grasp how such conduct on the part of these whom he had looked up to for years, had hurt him cruelly and that at present he could think of nothing besides. My cry partially aroused him from his pain, and he regarded me as if I were but a figure, flitting through a sorrowful dream. Forlornly returning his gaze, I saw his expression gradually change—into wondering joy!

With two steps he was by my side. "Lily, Lily, I love you!" he said, gathering me into his arms. Oh! the bliss of a long-deferred, almost lost hope, suddenly realized!

Presently ɪ heard him say firmly, not unkindly:

"Eliza, Jane, Anne, hereafter with a new mistress in the house, things will not be quite the same. You yourselves, as you so unfeelingly told my Lily, 'may leave as soon as you wish.'"

"Lily!" they muttered scornfully, as they filed out. His kiss on my lips, however, was proof positive that more words would be wasted; he had chosen me unalterably for time and eternity.

we passed, indicating that at present the manufacturing of sugar is the leading enterprise in the island.

The railway belts the seacoast, so that from San Juan to Mayaguez, the third city of importance in the island, and the point which makes a good stop-over when one is bound for Ponce, we had the fathomless blue with its lovely breezes, and ever and anon the sight of a schooner or steamer far out at sea. Mayaguez is, to say the least, a much more comfortable town than San Juan. Its streets are wide and residences more roomy, and, being a seacoast town, a deliciously cool breeze sweeps over it. Vast cane fields hem it in, and just beyond a rollicking chain of undulating hills overshadows it. There is almost nothing modern to be found here except the general spirit of push and progress in business lines which the American occupation has brought about in the island. A funny little tramway runs down the main street and out to the little bathing resort where cottages skirt the beach, and make inviting homes for those who enjoy the free-and-easy life.

About a mile out of the city lies the Agricultural Experiment Station. We reach it by coach and find a delightful country seat with artistically-cultivated grounds, and a fine office building as well as the residence of Dr. D. W. May, special agent in charge of the station. This is one of the many enterprises which belong to the United States Agricultural Department, and which is doing a specific and valuable work in the island. It is teaching the farmer how best he can improve his crops, and introducing to him the use of modern farm implements, few of which have been in use heretofore, and it is proving also the fertility of the soil, and its rich producing qualities, for after experimenting with products from all lands it has been discovered that anything which does not need frost will thrive here, so fine are the climatic and agricultural conditions.

Now en route to Ponce we catch a birdseye view of the old Hormigueros Church, a famous shrine of pilgrimage to which all devout Catholics flock in a crusade once a year. The historic old temple crowns a hill and commands the surrounding country for miles. Standing out prominently is its long flight of steps up which we are told that even today people go on bared knee, and in different modes of suffering try to show their devotion to the saints.

A little later we pass through San German, the second oldest city in the island, a picturesque place situated on three hills, and hence named "La Ciudad de las Lomas" (the city of the hills.) This place is of interest because of its beautiful cathedral and its convent. Here we spy also an ancient convent built over 300 years ago, which now stands idle but safely guards images, crucifixes, miniature limbs and objects of gold, silver and ivory that devotees have taken there as trophies or penance. The cathedral in this town is one of the finest in the island and, situated in the highest part of the little city, seems to keep constant vigil over its large constituency.

Ponce, the southern metropolis, and by far the most modern-appearing of all the places we visited, is a large and scattered populace. Portions of the city are really inviting and beautiful. There is Abolition Park down in the central part of the city where children may play and enjoy cool shade. Its stores and hotels are quite up-to-date. Its trolley line gives good service and runs out to Ponce Playa (the seashore) about two miles from the city proper, and its residences are newer and more artistic than those of the majority of Porto Rican towns. There are a goodly number of Americans here, and everything which speaks of progress is paramount. There are some delightful drives in the outskirts of the city so that horseback riding is one of the popular pastimes. From here we would go to Aibonito, the town situated on the highest point of the island, but we must stay by the main road and look forward with eager anticipation to a trip through the coffee hills and orange groves over the trail in the future.

Crossing the island by the military road is another fascinating trip. A perfect dream of magnificent panorama through the very heart of the island, which awaits the tourist who has time at his disposal.

Farming in California—The Land and Its Produc

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, STATE COMMISSIONER OF HORTICULTURE.

FIELD NOTES.

That Minimum Load.

I RECENTLY witnessed a very warm debate between an assemblage of fruit growers and a half-dozen railroad men upon the subject of the increased minimum load for deciduous fruits. Some weeks ago the transcontinental lines announced that they would reduce the freight rates on deciduous fruits to Chicago and eastern points, to $1.15 per hundred. At the same time the roads increased the carload by 2000 pounds, making it 26,000 pounds instead of 24,000. At first the growers were inclined to rejoice at the concession, but upon more careful consideration they concluded that the concession with its conditions did not amount to much in the proper marketing of their fruits. And so they met at Lodi to thresh it out in public. The decision of the meeting was to take the controversy to the Interstate Commission to see if the minimum load could not be restored to its former heft.

Nearly the whole range of railroading as it affected fruit growing and fruit growing as it affected railroading, was covered in the discussion. The growers were unanimous in the belief that the greater minimum would hinder the opening of new markets, and prevent the safe carriage of the fruit in transit. It did not matter so much about the citrus minimum remaining at the greater figure, for citrus fruits were less perishable than deciduous. Nor did the growers at Lodi think they had sufficient distributive facilities to take a chance at increasing the carload weight. At Lodi and other table-grape centers there will be produced this season about 7500 carloads of grapes, and the far-seeing growers and shippers realize that the very life of the business may turn pretty soon upon the ability to open new markets and supply the old with the least decay of fruit. However, the railroads have promised to restore the minimum to 24,000 pounds if the new plan does not work well. It is the time that will be consumed in making the trial that is alarming the deciduous fruit growers of the State.

Plowing With Dynamite.

THE people of Orangeville, Sacramento county, are arranging for an exhibition that will be unique, instructive and practically helpful, as soon as the details of the scheme can be worked out. It is to be a public demonstration upon a large scale of the value of explosives in preparing virgin soil for tree planting, the renovating of old citrus groves, ditch digging and stump pulling by the same means. The people of the district are to have a picnic that day and make the occasion memorable in every way. Incidentally they are to have a meeting to advance the fruit standards of the locality.

If this event proves successful other localities should try the plan. A certain powder company is willing to bear all the expense of the trial, prepare the soil, set the "mines" and make the demonstration of practical worth to the farmers. The trial will also teach the fruit growers to use dynamite and black powder to the best advantage themselves in the new "fad," or, I believe the new and valuable practice of using explosives in the reduction of contrary but fertile soils to workable and productive conditions. Some of our growers claim that they have greatly improved the growth of old trees by gently lifting them up bodily with black powder and letting them settle back again without injury to the root system. There may be some trees in the older orchards of Southern California which would be given new life by the application of this process. Try it upon some antiquated tree that you do not care much about anyway.

Orange Leaf Chlorosis.

THE month of May has contributed largely to a better understanding of the leaf trouble of citrus fruits through the contributions of Prof. R. E. Smith of the Whittier Laboratory and Prof. C. B. Lipman of the soil department of the University. I consider these scientists high authority upon the two subjects involved in the solution of plant d[illegible]ses, and we may now consider the points set at rest until some one can prove that these investigators are wrong in their conclusions.

It appears from the evidence now at hand that chlorosis is found most abundant in coarse or sandy subsoils, or affected with plowsole, or underlaid with hardpan. Prof. Smith finds that neighboring, unaffected groves of the same combination of variety and stock as those affected with the trouble, sometimes only a few yards away, were underlaid with a heavier, better-retaining subsoil, or were free from plowsole or hardpan. In groves where a certain area or streak of mottled leaf ran through the grove, this corresponds to an area where the subsoil was different, and usually where it was coarser. These conditions interfere with proper irrigation, and the result was that only the surface layers of the soil were saturated, while between irrigations the soil dried out much more than commonly. Prof. Smith does not believe that withertip is an infectious disease, calls its origin a "largely imaginary parasite" and discourages the use of [illegible] in its attempted control. He has found it absolutely impossible to infect a healthy tree with the withertip fungus, but found the fungus an inhabitant only of diseased or injured trees. He attributes the trouble to the subsoil drouths of 1910.

Prof. Lipman's investigations lead him to the conclusion that mottled leaf is not a subject for the soil chemist, but rather a question of the physical condition of the soil. Anything that will make an abnormal condition of soil may produce chlorosis. Lack of moisture or its proper distribution may be responsible for the bad condition of the soil that may bring about etiolation. One of the strange results of the general discussion of this troublesome malady has been the utter confusion of the public. Long articles and arguments have been produced to prove that chlorosis of the citrus foliage is due to the improper distribution of certain soil elements, especially that of magnesia and lime, or their improper proportion. This confusion seems inseparable from an obscure question when we attack it in earnest and go about its solution in a determined way. If the Pomona convention held last September had no other mission than the introduction of chlorosis to the public attention, that convention was worth while. What we need now in furtherance of controlling mottled leaf is that our plant pathologists and soil chemists continue their investigations till the fruit growers are convinced that the remedy for this disease or condition is within their reach. If our scientists are correct it will be far easier to irrigate more thoroughly, generally, and to destroy the physical impediments of the soil than to change the ration of magnesia and lime. And while the orchardists are improving their soils in this way they will be assured of better and longer-keeping fruit.

Valuable Documents.

UNDER the date of May 13, 1911, the Bureau of Entomology has issued the now completed set of bulletins on the fumigation of orchards. The set consists of the following publications: "Fumigation Investigations in California," Bulletin No. 79; "Fumigation of Citrus Trees," Bulletin No. 90, Part I; "The Value of Sodium Cyanide for Fumigation Purposes," Bulletin No. 90, Part II; "Chemistry of Fumigation with Hydrocyanic Acid Gas," Part III. The author of the three first named is R. S. Woglum, special field agent, and of the last, C. C. McConnell, chief, insecticide and fungicide laboratory, Bureau Chemistry. These bulletins may be secured from the Department of Agriculture, Washington City. A normal price, I believe, is attached to the publications, but I have not seen the amount required.

One cannot be over-enthusiastic in looking over these bulletins. I have never seen anything more complete in this line, and the works should be in the library of every progressive citrus-fruit grower. The movement to bring about the investigation of the use of cyanide originated in the Los Angeles County Horticultural Commission early in the year 1907. Dr. Howard, with his usual foresight and enterprise, saw the necessity of placing fumigation upon a more scientific and workable basis and readily engaged in organizing the investigation. Prof. C. L. Marlatt made a special trip to this State to look into the preliminaries of the campaign, and the work was soon under way. In June, 1907, Prof. Woglum appeared in the field as the chief of the research work, and by October had begun the actual work of experimentation associated with Fred Maskew, who was at that time engaged in the white-fly extermination for the State at Oroville. Mr. Woglum began with no knowledge of fumigation, but with a mind able to grasp the essential points of the investigation, as results have since so signally shown. His writings upon the subject are now available to the fruit grower in a form at once readable, not hampered with technical and obscure phraseology and altogether acceptable to the practical man.

Concerted Attacks Upon Scale.

SEVERAL communities in San Bernardino county are holding conference upon the subject of fumigation. At a late meeting held at Redlands the growers were urged to organize a company to attack the scale upon a basis of mutual operation, similar, perhaps to the plan adopted by a large company of growers at Pomona. For a number of years San Bernardino county conducted these fumigating enterprises under the direct supervision of the County Horticultural Commissioner, and if this plan could have been made successful anywhere in the State that county would have demonstrated it. During the administration of Mr. Pease the work has been done faithfully, without waste of funds or hint of dishonesty, and when the growers decided to return to their own methods of conducting the work we may take it as settled that "county fumigation" cannot be profitably maintained.

Scale fighting is now universally recognized as one of the elements of citrus-fruit growing, and no community attempts to avoid the issue. In conducting the work efficiently and economically much progress has been made, the chief of which is the recognition of cyanide as the only poison that will effectively control the scale pests. Six or eight years ago a royal battle was raging between the advocates of spraying and fumigating. I remember how fiercely the

So far our only recourse has been to pick the intruders, dropping them into a vessel containing kerosene and water, keeping the soil stirred in the hope of interfering with eggs and pupae. It appears, however, from experiments described in "A Preliminary Report on Grape Insects," Bulletin No. 331, issued by the Geneva (N. Y.) Experiment Station, that a poisoned spray proved very effectual in controlling this insect in vineyards. It is very destructive to grape bloom, and the use of the poison resulted in a net gain per acre over the unsprayed grapes of $61.84. This spray mixture consisted of ten pounds of arsenate of lead, twenty-five pounds of glucose, and 100 gallons of water. It should be applied, very liberally, just as soon as the beetles appear. While it is suggested that this spray would destroy the insects on roses and ornamental shrubs, it must be borne in mind that vineyard conditions are quite different, inasmuch as the ornamental side is not considered; the aim is to preserve the blossoms from injury, for the sake of future fruit. We do not know whether the arsenate of lead would deface the rose blossoms, or whether the spray dries off without leaving any trace, but a poisonous spray upon plants that are handled, where the flowers are plucked for decoration, and inhaled for their fragrance, suggests disadvantages that prevent unqualified recommendation. We should like to learn more about this from the scientists who are using it.—[Rural New Yorker.

Bulb Industry of the Netherlands.

THE following information concerning the bulb industry of the Netherlands is taken from an article entitled "Market Gardening in Holland," published in the Department of Agriculture Journal for Ireland.

"Since 1750 the cultivation and export of bulbs has been regularly carried on in Holland, though the trade only reached its present enormous proportions during the last decades of the nineteenth century.

"The bulb-growing industry was first confined to Haarlem and its vicinity, but has gradually extended wherever a suitable piece of land was available. In order to grow bulbs, meadows have been transformed and sand dunes leveled. The preparation of land for this purpose is often very costly, and the value of the best plots varies from £320 to £500 ($1557 to $2433) an acre.

"The export statistics of the industry, which have been carefully kept since 1897, show that the total export has very largely increased in the last ten years. The value of this export cannot now be less than £800,000 ($3,893,200.)

"England is still Holland's best customer for bulbs, taking nearly 40 per cent of the total export. The number of bulb-exporting firms in Holland is about 200; there are also over 2500 growers who do not export directly, but send their produce through the larger firms. The number of persons employed in the bulb industry is estimated at 4000.

"The Dutch bulb growers are organized into a general federation which now numbers nearly 3000 members, and is divided into thirty-seven local groups. A paper is published twice a week, weekly exchanges are held during the trade season, novelties are examined and reported upon by a committee of judges, and a trade council inquires into and decides all trade differences. Many exhibitions have been organized by the federation, and of late exhibits have also been sent to foreign countries. In addition to the general federation, there are two special societies, one to protect the interests of bulb exporters and the other to protect those of growers who do not export."

Seed Crops and Values.

THE variance in the amount of seeds produced to the acre by different plants is very great, as some vegetables will give 200 pounds to the acre and others 2000 or 3000 pounds to the acre. Flowers run to the most remarkable extremes in this yield. Sweet peas, which seed more freely than any flower, sometimes produce 3000 pounds to the acre—a ton and a half of seeds. The double petunia, which is known to seed growers as the "shyest seeder," will sometimes fail to yield a pound to the acre.

This inability of the double petunia to hold its seed makes it very valuable. Its retail price is $70 an ounce, or $1120 a pound. It is worth more than ten times its weight in gold. This seed is much finer than gunpowder and almost as fine as cooking flour. It is almost impossible to distinguish the separate seeds, and is the most expensive kind handled by any dealer. The cheapest seeds sold by the pound are those of the beet and mustard, which cost only 5 cents a pound. In plentiful seasons sweet peas sometimes sell for 7 cents a pound.

There is a great difference in price between the seeds of an unnamed variety of flower, or vegetable, and some so-called "novelty" which growers have produced from the generic plant. These "novelties" are produced in various ways, by selection, by crossing the seeds, and they are sometimes developed into distinct varieties. There are only forty-two original, distinct vegetable families, though 838 varieties of vegetable seed are now sold by retail dealers.

Each grower produces his own variations on the original forty-two vegetables, and the number of new varieties is constantly increasing. With flowers the work is easier and the scope wider. There are 107 generic families to start with, and enterprising growers have rung the changes on their seed until the number of flower varieties now sold is incalculable.

Some vegetables lend themselves to variations more readily than others. There are seventy-four varieties of lettuce and thirty-five kinds of onions. Beans, cabbage, corn and tomatoes appear in the catalogues under twenty-five and thirty different names. Mustard is about the only vegetable that has remained untouched by the ambitious seed growers. Up to the present time one kind of mustard has sufficed for all our needs.

Sweet peas have eighty-six divisions and more than 300 subdivisions. In California, where almost all the flower seeds are grown, one farm of 500 acres is given up to the production of sweet peas alone. The total production yearly is about 350,000 pounds, and even when this amount is augmented by the yield from smaller farms it is almost impossible to meet the demand. Sweet peas are the most popular flowers in America for home gardens, except the nasturtiums, and even these cannot always compete with the sweet peas. Where country air and sunshine abound sweet peas hold unrivaled supremacy and nasturtiums are in use for window boxes and scant little city gardens where a small back yard must do duty for the flower lover.

Pansies are also a popular favorite, though their price is sometimes high enough to be prohibitive. The ordinary varieties, well selected, are not more than $25 a pound, but some of the big velvety ones, rarely colored, sell for $50 a pound. Most of the flowers which are produced from seed are sold in little 5-cent packages, the amounts varying with the value of the seed. There are about 8,000,000 of these sold in the United States every year.—[American Cultivator.

MADE HIS "NERVE" COUNT.

Joseph H. Choate, who has not yet gone out to Stockbridge, Mass., for the summer, was recalling to an acquaintance an episode of the last coronation when Mr. Choate was Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

"It was the night before the day of the coronation," said Mr. Choate, "and I thought the last American who intended to witness the ceremony had about arrived, when a cab laden with luggage stopped in front of my house in Carlton House Terrace and a man jumped out and rang the bell. He entered, leaving his wife in the vehicle. It was Joe Chapple.

"He said he had come over to attend the coronation. I was thunderstruck.

"'But, man, that is impossible,' I argued. 'There has been a tremendous rush for seats and they have all been allotted.'

"'But I represent an American newspaper,' he insisted. 'I think he said it was the Oshkosh Observer. I told him all the press seats had been allotted long ago and that there was no chance of his getting one.

"'Well, I've come here to attend that coronation, and I'm just going to do it,' he said. 'Why, I've got a letter from Roosevelt.'

"I asked to see it, and it turned out to be not a letter from Roosevelt, but one from Chapple's Congressman to the President. But the latter had written on the back: 'I know Joe Chapple, and he is all right,' or words to that effect. Well, to make a long story short, Chapple did see the coronation. With the aid of that letter he actually got into the Abbey, and the fact is he got a much better seat than I had."—[New York Sun.

GIRL HOMESTEADER'S WORK.

Frankie Tatum left Greeley this morning for a thirty-five mile horseback ride cross-country to her homestead claim northeast of Greeley. The girl is 20 years old, and two years ago filed on a dry-farm claim.

She has done all the work required by the government up to date, and will put in this summer in fencing her farm. She lives there alone during the summer months in a cabin built by her own hands, and asks no odds from the opposite sex in developing her land.—[Greeley correspondence Denver Post.

God and Marriage.

"THE WAY OF GOD IN MARRIAGE" is the title of a book of 300 pages by Mrs. Mary E. Teats. (Published by the author, No. 464 Bowen avenue, Chicago; price $1.10.) Mrs. Teats is the national purity evangelist of the W.C.T.U. and lecturer for their National Purity Association.

This book is a plea for marital continence, except for the purpose of procreation. The author believes that the breaking of this law is the sin told of in Genesis, for which our first parents are said to have been expelled from the Garden of Eden. To the breaking of this law Mrs. Teats attributes many of the ills which afflicts poor humanity, such as sickness, crime, the craving for alcohol, sore eyes, blindness of new-born children, and death of the mother during confinement.

The author justly castigates the false modesty that would forbid teaching important facts in regard to the sexual functions. She quotes a minister of the gospel in Los Angeles who said to a friend of hers: "I would as soon a daughter of mine would go to a third-rate vaudeville theater as to have her go to one of these purity meetings."

Following quotation is given from "Martial Purity" by Miss Belle Mix:

"In New York City not long ago, before a large gathering of ministers and missionaries, J. Hudson Taylor, a missionary from China, said: 'I know of one of our missionaries who has six wives lying in a cemetery in China, with yet another in a churchyard at home. A large number of our missionaries are living with their third wife. At our missions we buried young wives until we were compelled to make a rule that missionary women must live three years in the country before marrying. Twice as many of our married missionaries have to take furloughs as those unmarried. Single men and women do not break down in China, and I want to emphasize that fact. It has been our experience that those who went out married have not acquired the language as easily as single missionaries. Indeed the married workers, desirous of learning rapidly, have separated for a season, that they might study more advantageously."

The author properly condemns what is known as "male continence" as taught by some writers. She also produces some strong and well-founded arguments against the race-suicide teachings of ex-President Roosevelt. Here is an extract:

"May the great God forgive those who would prostitute the holy and sacred office of motherhood to the low level of merchandise by offering medals or rewards for large families. Such a procedure is an insult to every true American woman. No woman, worthy the name of mother, in the highest sense of that sacred word, but would scorn to accept a 'medal,' no matter what its intrinsic value, for the privilege (and it is a privilege under the right conditions) of wearing the priceless diadem of motherhood. . . .

"Justice, love, and reason, the laws of life, and the higher interpretation of Christ's teachings, give ground for the statement that the child life cannot come into the home oftener than once in three years without doing violence to Nature's laws."

As the title indicates, Mrs. Teats's arguments are almost entirely founded on the Bible. It would have been more convincing had she based her arguments on scientific grounds, for you may prove almost anything by the Bible, including some things that are by no means scientific.

In this book, as in almost all others that the editor has read on the subject, the all-important question of the chief cause of sexual excesses is entirely ignored. This cause is wrong diet—the overeating of foods that contain an excess of phosphates, that over-stimulate the nerves, especially the sexual organs. To expect a young man in vigorous health to be chaste, while feeding in this manner, is as absurd as it would be to expect a stove not to burn while you are continually adding fuel to it. Writers do not touch on this subject, because they do not understand it. They need education just as much as those whom they undertake to teach.

Children are infected with gluttony and sensualism before they are born. The mothers are taught by physicians to overeat during pregnancy. Then, after it is born, the infant is constantly fed too much, and in early life children are given eggs and meat, and other foods which over-excite the sexual functions. How exceedingly absurd to expect chastity under such conditions as these.

It is true that Mrs. Teats refers briefly to the food of a mother during pregnancy. Following, she writes, 's "said to be" very important in the dietary. "Albumen, or some equivalent proteid such as gluten, is perhaps the most essential element." Now, the fact is that almost all the severe ailments from which so-called "civilized" people suffer are due to the overconsumption of proteid foods. The main thing to be considered in this, as in other cases, is a free consumption of foods rich in the organic salts, such as fresh fruits and raw green leaves.

Mrs. Teats devotes much space to the subject of the liquor question. It is true that liquor inflames the blood, but it does not do one-tenth part of the harm in over-stimulating the sexual functions done by improper foods.

The author refers to the American Indians, among whom the women are—or were—set apart at certain periods of their life. It is true that many races to whom we contemptuously refer as "savages" or "heathen" respect their wives during the time of pregnancy, and sometimes during lactation, as also, with rare exceptions, do the animals. It should be remembered, however, that, first, these people lead natural lives, eating to live, and not living to eat, and secondly, that most of them are polygamous, which makes quite a decided difference.

The author refers to two booklets on this subject that may be helpful to the mother in teaching important knowledge to her children. These are "Teaching the Truth," by Dr. Mary Wood Allen, and "The False Delicacy of Parents and What it Costs," by Mrs. Teats. Either of these little volumes may be secured at the headquarters of the National Purity Association, No. 81 Fifth avenue, Chicago. The latter costs 10 cents, the former 50 cents.

Mrs. Teats recently informed the editor of the Care of the Body that she expected to visit Los Angeles about the end of June, on a lecturing trip.

Street Noises.

ONE of the penalties which we city dwellers pay for what we call "civilization" is the abominable raucous noise that assails us on every hand. It seems as if every one in a city was trying to make as much noise as he could. Much of this noise is unnecessary, and should be abolished.

Of late another excruciating noise has added to our misery in Los Angeles in the shape of the shrill whistles of policemen at the crossings. Why can't the traffic be regulated as it is in England by the mere raising of the policeman's hand? The police and the public are alike revolting at this new nuisance. In St. Louis it has been abolished.

Some people may not notice these noises, others may be only slightly disturbed thereby, but to those whose nerves are "on edge," a condition unfortunately too common in the city, such noises are absolute torture. Even those who do not appear to notice them are gradually affected thereby, just as a sleeping man is disturbed by sounds, although he does not hear them.

Care of the Feet.

IN the closing days of May the Sunset Club spent one of its annual summer outings at Squirrel Inn, on the summit of the San Bernardino Mountains, a mile above the sea, where they enjoyed the hospitality of Sunsetter Fishburn and courtesies from absent members of the Squirrel Inn Club. As usual, the occasion was a most interesting "feast of reason and flow of soul." Louis Vetter, the perennial treasurer of the Sunset Club, got out for the occasion a special paper called the "Squirrel Inn Ooze"—"guaranteed circulation seventy, no more, no less." Here is an extract:

"'Care of the Feet' is a new book by Dr. H. Ellington Brook, companion work to 'Care of the Body,' by the same eminent authority. The doctor suggests that, to give the feet a complete rest, people should walk on their hands. Huh!"

This may be one good method of relieving the feet, but there are others. Before long we will have something to say on the subject.

The Fasting Cure.

A RECENT dispatch from Seattle told how a prominent attorney died of paralysis after a fast, in which he reduced his weight from 250 to 140 pounds.

The papers do not say so much about the thousands of cases in which people have cured themselves of chronic disease by a long fast. It might also be mildly suggested that people have even been known to die after a "successful operation."

In many cases a protracted fast is the best method of treating a chronic disease, and sometimes it is the only way. The editor of the Care of the Body has made a special study of fasting for many years. In the near future, as soon as space permits, he will write something at greater length on this subject.

Infantile Paralysis.

AN Associated Press dispatch from Washington quoted Dr. Simon Flexner of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research as saying before the National Academy of Science: "The control of infantile paralysis today must be by prevention, since no specific remedy or cure is known."

And then Dr. Flexner had the assurance to add:

"No more convincing and impressive example of the value of the employment of animals in the elucidation of a serious and baffling disease could be cited than the experiments from which accurate knowledge of infantile paralysis had been obtained."

That is to say, thousands upon thousands of unfortunate animals have been horribly tortured that the doctors may find out they are utterly unable to cure this disease, and that the only remedy lies in prevention—that is to say, in hygienic measures.

Was ever a greater instance of medical folly?

Nor will the doctor ever succeed in preventing infantile paralysis, or any other disease by means of experiments conducted upon animals. Here is a letter from Charles E. Page, M.D., of Boston, published in Life:

"Dr. Simon Flexner's statement that 'through animal experimentation we have already discovered how to prevent infantile paralysis' has not a shred of truth to back it up, and it is morally certain that he is equally at fault when he says that 'the achievement of a cure is now not far distant, provided'—well, if they are allowed to continue their animal experiments without interference. The fact of the matter is that man is the only animal that sits, or stands on his hind legs, completely erect; and he is, therefore, the only animal that has 'infantile paralysis.' The tendency of this abnormal position is to paralyze. The editor of Life will, I feel sure, admit that after bearing the weight of his body on the tip end of his spine for an hour or so, he is, on rising, conscious of a sort of stiffness of the hind quarters rather suggestive of paralysis. The writer has put this question up to many persons, including trained athletes, and they have invariably agreed to his claim as indicated in the foregoing."

Infantile paralysis, like most other diseases, is due mainly to wrong diet, especially to the feeding of children large amounts of cane sugar and starch, sterilized milk and many of the milk substitutes. The disease, like other diseases, will frequently be epidemic, when atmospheric conditions are favorable.

Some have expressed the belief that the use of roller coasters may sometimes be the cause of this ailment among older children, through shocks administered to the end of the spine.

Infantile paralysis is just as "infectious" as a broken leg—or red hair.

Astrology.

MARIE G. HERRERA of Hollywood sends the Care of the Body a copy of a sixteen-page thumb-nail publication called the National Astrological Journal. It is published in Los Angeles by the "First Temple and College of the National Astrological Society," James G. Stafford, editor.

The correspondent refers to astrology as a "science." Astronomy is a science. Astrology is a dream. We know, of course, that the sun and to some extent the moon, influence atmospheric conditions upon the earth, and therefore to some extent influence all things that inhabit the earth, but to imagine that the remoter planets billions of miles away, and still less the fixed stars, some of which are thousands of billions of miles away, can have the slightest influence upon this little pin point we call the earth and the microscopic creatures crawling about on its surface, is as absurd as to suppose that you can ward off evil spirits by nailing a horseshoe on the door.

Much of the foolishness promulgated by astrologers is based upon the names that ancient people happened to give to the planets. Thus Mars is supposed to exert one kind of influence, because it is named Mars, while Venus will produce quite another effect. If Venus had been called "Bull Frog" and Mars had been dubbed "Lily," all the horological tables would have had to be entirely revised. Oh piffle!

The correspondent thinks astrology should be taught in the schools. Heaven forbid! There's far too much superfluous stuff taught there already.

Queer "Divinity."

F. A. BINNEY of San Diego writes as follows:

"The papers recently contained another example (one sees them every week) of the terrible consequences of the criminal neglect of the Boards of Education of America to teach their pupils the laws of sex and the functions of their own bodies in regard to reproduction. It is the old story: A 'divinity' student is accused of murdering his sweetheart who had undergone an operation and subsequently died of being poisoned by mercurial tablets administered by this 'divinity' student. This case suggests a score of questions. As for instance.

"Why is not the sale of these poisonous tablets made a penitentiary offense? Why was this ignorant youth, who probably never intended to murder the girl, able to buy these murderous tablets from any licensed druggist in the land? Yet we hear nothing about the arrest of this druggist who was just as much a criminal as the youth.

"What sort of 'divinity' is it that is taught in the college where this student who was about to preach

CARE OF THE EYES.

BY DR. M. M. RING.

KRYPTOK

TRADE MARK

Kryptok Means "Hidden Eye"

KRYPTOKS are the "PEARLS" of the optical world. They are a beautiful creation—gems beyond value and beyond price.

KRYPTOKS are the strong lever that lifts your appearance above the average level.

KRYPTOKS are fitted by us under conditions that insure your enthusiastic satisfaction.

Kryptok Bi-focals are made by fusing together two pieces of glass having different refractive power. The reading part being flint glass with high refractive power, and the distance part being crown glass with low refractive power. This enables us to grind both sides of a Kryptok lens of any desired curve and still have two refractive powers in the same lens. This also explains why Kryptok bi-focals are invisible.

You have seen dignified people duck their heads and roll their eyes upward to peer over their eyeglass lenses at things too far away to focus through them.

Clergymen read from manuscript, duck and peer at the congregation. Lawyers read impressive sections from the code, duck and peer at the jury. Business men engaged with correspondence, duck and peer at entering visitors. It is a solemnly ridiculous habit, practiced unconsciously.

KRYPTOKS cure it.

You have seen people wearing a very conspicuous sort of bifocal glasses—the kind with divided lenses for near and far vision.

These glasses do not cause amusement, but they do provoke sympathetic curiosity. They give the impression that there is something the matter with the wearer's eyes—something uncommon.

KRYPTOKS cure that.

Kryptoks are bifocal glasses without the objectionable appearance commonly associated with bifocals.

In the common bifocal a full size lens is ground for distant vision, another thin segment is prepared for near vision and cemented to the outside surface of the first. There is an exposed edge to the attached wafer that chips and collects dirt, the outline becoming always more and more pronounced; and there is softening cement to cloud the lens and gradually detach the two parts. There can be no clear vision with such lenses, no permanent satisfaction with them.

Kryptoks are light, solid lenses, with perfectly even, unbroken surfaces. They are absolutely indestructible except by breakage, and present no hard "lines" obstructive to sight and destructive to nerves.

As a matter of course there are imitations, but no imitation of anything ever equals the genuine article, and it is generally conceded that no one who practices the art of living upon other people's genius is entitled to public encouragement.

"Practically the same," "Just as good," "Made on the same principle," etc., etc., are the quibbling terms you may hear applied to imitations. Don't take them.

Kryptoks are made to fit the near and far vision requirements of any individual. They are by far the most elegant in appearance, the most serviceable, and the only perfect bifocal lenses.

Many people think to themselves: "I do not wish to wear glasses because they make me look old," or "I will not wear Bifocal glasses because they are so conspicuous," etc.

One who thinks this now is thinking in terms of several years ago. All this has been overcome in the recent invention of the KRYPTOK and the TORIC form of lens.

QUALITY AHEAD OF PRICE.

Do you not prefer to have your eyes examined and your glasses fitted by an acknowledged specialist who makes QUALITY the first consideration rather than price?

And when this specialist, by virtue of his long experience as a professor in optical and other colleges, and by virtue of the perfection of his optical manufacturing equipment, and by virtue of the fact that every detail of the manufacturing is done under his immediate supervision by expert workmen, and by virtue of his being a licensed and practicing physician in the State of California is able to combine the very highest possible quality with prices that are far below the average you are certainly acting wisely when you go to him for your glasses and advise your friends to do the same.

BRING US THE PIECES

When you break a lens in that high priced pair of glasses you are wearing, just bring us the pieces, for we can make an absolutely exact duplicate and you will be surprised to learn how little it will cost you. No need to bring the prescription—just bring the pieces.

ADVANTAGES OF TORIC LENSES

They may be set closer to the eyes without touching the lashes.

They conform to the natural curve of the eye.

They permit a wider field of vision and allow you to see through them in all directions with equal distinctness—a decided improvement.

They eliminate annoying reflections from back of lenses.

They are the result of modern skill and methods and are a great improvement over the old style.

They can be ground lighter and prettier in every way.

They are especially desirable in Bifocals because they give a much more direct focus through the segment, and besides they are much more elegant in appearance.

THE PRICE WILL PLEASE.
THE QUALITY WILL ENTHUSE.

Obey that insistent impulse and do as Painless Parker says: "See Dr. Ring first."

a 'sermon!') graduated? What college is it that is responsible for the education of this young hypocrite? What blasphemy to use the words 'divinity student' in connection with a youth who commits murder, who degrades the holiness and purity of love and persuades his poor, ignorant girl victim to murder the young life God intended her to be a mother to and him to be a father to!

"Can any one question the criminal neglect of these college professors intending to teach 'divinity' (?) and not having the manliness and consistency to explain to this young man the meaning of the text, 'Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are.'

"It isn't the fault of St. Paul if the facts about purity and chastity are not taught in all our Sunday-schools, and it is the cowardly neglect of duty of these 'divinity' professors that is responsible for this young man's ignorance. Is it conceivable that any young man or any young woman would throw away their health and their life's happiness for a momentary gratification, still less, face shame and disgrace, and be guilty of the foul crime of murdering their child, if their parents first and foremost and their school teachers had done their duty?

"The books are there. If a mother or father is too shamefaced to mention the subject all they have to do is to keep such books in the house.

"Every word of this applies also to the school authorities. It is through their criminal neglect that these tragedies occur."

In a subsequent communication Mr. Binney adds:

"Since writing the above, the prisoner has been discharged. Here are four criminals and not one punished. The druggist who sold a deadly poison, a doctor who performed an operation for abortion on a young girl, and lastly she and her 'lover' (?) who conspired to destroy their offspring. The girl is dead. Who killed her? It is a pitiful and disgraceful story."

Look Within.

ON account of the number of cases of typhoid fever, the City Health Department of Tacoma recently advised the people of that city to boil the water before drinking it.

In Washington, D. C., they spent an immense amount of money in filtering the drinking water, but typhoid continued to prevail. Then they regulated the milk, but it made no difference.

The trouble is that the medical fraternity is always looking outside instead of inside for the causes of disease. If a person lives right—especially eats right—it is impossible for that person to acquire typhoid fever, or indeed any other disease.

"Making Good" and "Being Good."

LITTLE do ye know your own blessedness; for to travel hopefully is a better thing than to arrive, and the true success is to labor.—[Robert Louis Stevenson.

Of late years Americans have been taught to worship success. It has been held up to the growing generation as the highest ideal of life. A flourishing monthly magazine bears that title.

Now, there are worse things than to be unsuccessful, as, for instance, to be heartless, and selfish, and cruel. Many of the best men who ever lived were unsuccessful in the eyes of the world—that is to say, they did not achieve great wealth or power.

This worship of success, as success, may easily be carried to extremes. It may even result in encouraging immorality and crime. Of late there has been noticeably a slight tendency toward a reversion from this worship of success. For instance, there was recently reported in The Times an eloquent and forceful appeal delivered at a meeting of the Los Angeles Baptist Mission Society in this city by Dr. W. H. Geistweit, pastor of the First Baptist Church of San Diego. Among other things he said:

"There is one thing I want to rebuke this Pacific Coast for. I have heard it morning, noon and night, until it has almost made my blood freeze. It is the endless talk of 'making good.' It comes to me when I open my eyes in the morning and all day long I hear it.

"What do you mean by 'making good?' These words will send more young men to the penitentiary than anything I know of. It is not the first thing in this world to make good. It is the first thing to be good. I have a boy of my own who I would like to see become a preacher. But I am afraid to urge him to do so, because the first test to which a preacher is put today is to 'make good.'"

Again, on the same day a Los Angeles weekly publication had an editorial on Ibsen's phrase, "Nothing is impossible that one desires with an indomitable will." Here is an extract:

"As conditions now are, there are entirely too many persons with indomitable wills. There are entirely too many persons bent on 'getting there,' no matter how and no matter what becomes of the others. There are entirely too many persons who view life from the purely personal standpoint and are willing to accept, even to grab and to hold, comforts and luxuries that the remainder of the population cannot have. It is not true that all are free to achieve. Everything worth while in all civilized life is in a measure, monopolized and held so that only a few can achieve. The world needs a different kind of morality from that of the indomitable will. One who lives for only his personal success will find the same but dead-sea fruit, while they who give of their energies, to the end that all may be free to become 'successful,' will win though they die paupers."

Death of Dr. Latson.

ON May 12 a brief dispatch in a local paper told of the finding at his home of the dead body of Dr. W. R. C. Latson, editor of Health Culture. It was stated that he had been shot, and the cause of the death was given as suicide.

A day later a longer dispatch from New York contained further particulars, and suggested that it may not have been suicide, but that he may have been killed by a young woman who was his secretary, and with whom he had been in the habit of studying occult subjects. She tried to kill herself soon after his death.

Dr. Latson was one of the sanest and best writers on hygienic subjects. He was also a very hard worker. Besides editing Health Culture he had a large practice, and wrote a number of books. A few months ago in a letter to the editor of the Care of the Body Dr. Latson wrote:

"I am much gratified to learn that you are licensed to practice under the laws of your State, and have no doubt, judging from the very sane and competent utterances of the 'Care of the Body' column, that your advice must prove inspiring and helpful to the many who call upon you. 'The Catechism of Health" will be sent you as soon as it is received from the printers.

"As you suggest, I am a very busy man. During the last year, in addition to my sanatorium and office practice, my general magazine articles and frequent consultations, I have found time to get out material for thirteen books, nine 50-cent books similar to 'Catarrh,' just now on the market, and four $1 books, such as 'Efficiency' and 'The Enlightened Life.' It keeps me busy, but I love my work.

"I trust you will let me hear from you whenever you have an opportunity."

Dr. Latson was one of the last men whom the editor would have suspected of dabbling in the occult. This is another evidence of the danger which attaches to attempts to learn the unknowable and to solve the insoluble. Better keep away from it.

The editor wrote for particulars to Albert Turner, publisher of Health Culture, and received from him the following reply, dated May 27:

"There has been some question as to whether this was really suicide or the result of foul play. Person-

A Day of Rest.

THE Special Committee on Sabbath Observance of the Presbyterian General Assembly at Atlantic City, in its report, said:

"The sentiment that laboring men should strike for a six-day week as well as an eight-hour day is growing and meets the approval of the labor leaders."

This may be all right, but when it comes to fixing a certain day as the day of rest, that is quite another question. In various parts of the world every day of the week is kept by some people as a day of rest, or holy day. In this country there are several millions of people, including Jews and Seventh Day Adventists, who keep the seventh day of the week as a rest day. To force them to close their business for two days in the week would be tyrannical and unjust.

RAISES FISH ON HIS FARM

A KANSAN THE MOST SUCCESSFUL FISH CULTURIST IN AMERICA.

[Kansas City Star:] Eugene Catte of Langdon, Reno county, Kansas, is the most successful fish culturist in America, yet he probably could not tell the scientific name of any one of the varieties of fish he grows. He has mastered secrets of nature that still are puzzling all the experts in the employ of the States and the national government, yet he would have difficulty in setting down on paper a list of the insect and vegetable foods on which his fish subsist.

While there are half a dozen government and State fish hatcheries in Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma, extensively equipped for the propagation of fish, State and government agents on occasion have been compelled to visit the Langdon farmer to purchase fish for distribution.

The presence of several small springs on his farm first suggested to Catte, seventeen years ago, that he might build one or more ponds and take up fish breeding as a side line to the business of agriculture. His original plan was to grow food fish for market, and for three years he tried to make that enterprise pay. He grew the fish all right, but found that shipping charges and middlemen's commissions ate up all the profits.

Then, fourteen years ago, he conceived the idea of growing game fish and other varieties such as commonly were in demand for stocking preserves for angling. Ignorant of the difficulties ahead of him he set about the propagation of black bass, the most difficult of all game varieties to rear by artificial means. He had had no training for the work and he knew nothing of the experiences of others.

His method of feeding is the one bit of fish knowledge that Catte keeps strictly to himself, and employees from State and government hatcheries have visited him for days without finding out how he provides the menu or what its items are.

"Providing proper food is the one important secret of rearing black bass successfully," Catte said to a visitor. "Meat and vegetable preparations on which trout and other varieties of fish, may be reared are not suited to bass; they demand the foods they instinctively devour in a wild state. It is not especially difficult to propagate bass in captivity; the problem is to rear the fish in large numbers until they have reached a size to take care of themselves when distributed to strange waters containing larger fish of cannibalistic tendencies. The fry of an inch or so in length has many enemies, and I doubt if one in a hundred of that size survives when taken from the breeding pond and placed in an environment where there is no special protection."

Catte seldom sells fish from his hatchery that are less than six months old. From the time they are hatched in the spring until they are shipped in the fall he watches over them and feeds them. Each year he plants in the breeding ponds moss and other vegetable growth and the insects on which the young fish subsist. He may not be able to tell the names of the vegetable growths or the insects, but he knows from experience that they are necessary to the welfare of the baby bass.

"A bass six months old that has been properly fed is of a size to take care of itself in strange waters," he says, "and there is no reason why practically all such should not grow to maturity."

In spite of his success as a breeder Catte is not growing rich on his fish farm. Probably one reason he sticks to the odd industry is that he gets a lot of enjoyment along with the hard work. He grows about eighty thousand young fish annually, of which by far the greater number are black bass. Other varieties in his chain of ten breeding ponds are strawberry bass or giant crappie, yellow perch, rock bass and goldfish
